We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery
Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Okland, Md.

Spread of Truth and Justice Will Stop War

By REV. E. S. ROBERTS,
Master of Gonville and Caius College and Vice Chancellor University of Cambridge, England.

EDUCATION, in a broader and deeper sense than ever before is the real problem for the twentieth century. It is not merely the teaching of a few facts or a few languages, it is the education of the classes and the masses at the same time. It must be an education that means development of character, broadening and enlightening at the same time.

True education inevitably abhors all narrow distinctions of any sort. It works toward broader and more universal aims. The truly cultured man is at home all the world over and is interested in the progress of man as man.

The task, then, is one of education, not merely of the people of a single nation, but of all the nations, and not of the nations separately, but of the leading thinkers of these nations together. The mutual interchange of professors and students between the several civilized nations must not be spasmodic and occasional, but systematic and general. And, more than this, it must be an education of character, so that the lines of demarcation between the different countries will be geographic but not intellectual. The boundaries of the mind are above and beyond mountain ranges, rivers, even oceans. These must be overleaped and set aside by the intellectual sympathy of the scholars of all nations, who in their turn will plant the same seed in the minds and hearts of the masses of the peoples. National jealousy will be put aside, the interest of one nation will be recognized as the interest of all, and the basis of perpetual peace will be laid past any power of chicanery to upset.

Personal ambitions and petty desire for national aggrandizement must fall to the ground before the power of general culture and the universal recognition of truth and justice as the only real arbiters between the peoples of the earth. This is the solution of the problem of the twentieth century.

Art of Scandal-Mongery

By MRS. HARRY S. ABBOT.

A word of scandal makes the whole drawing-room kin.

However disagreeable the implication of that paraphrase, and notwithstanding the smug assumption of indignation with which we must needs one and all rush to protest against the charge, or at least repudiate any possibility of the shoe's fitting our own equitable selves, nevertheless the fact remains, staring us in the face, willy-nilly, that the real cohesive principle of society—society in its restricted, vernacular meaning—is to-day, as it has always been, scandal.

To say that scandal does not run rife in "our best society" is but idle talk. And it is likewise idle for society people to disclaim any complicity in scandal-mongery. It is all very well to impute the manufacture and circulation of scandal solely to the rapacity of the blackmailing publications and to the individual iniquities of their proprietors and correspondents. The fact remains that scandal and the making thereof is to-day, as always, the life-force of so-called social life, whether the gyrations of that life be performed in the servants' hall or in the drawing-rooms of the elect.

But it is not with abstract scandal that we have to wrestle; it is with the concrete, common garden variety, such as grows like a bad weed, sooner or later, where two or more people whom we know personally, or whom a friend of a friend of ours knows, congregate together in a set, a clique, a contingent or a society—call it what you will. It is when the breath of scandal blows upon our friend or our neighbor, upon our clergyman, or our cook, upon the woman who models our gowns or our dearest enemy with whom we exchange grimaces and play bridge—when, in short, it blows upon some one within our own social orbit, however indifferent that some one may have heretofore appeared, we must needs bend the ear to hear, and hearing, pass the evil word along.

And right here, in this manner of passing it along, does the fine art of scandal-mongery consist. It is not too much to say that one of the very hall marks of social preeminence to-day is the ability to listen to a piece of scandal with just enough, but not too evident display of interest, to add one's own contribution to the mess, not too much and not too little, and always exercising the artistic principle of restraint, and then to toss it along as lightly and as gracefully, and one might almost say as harmlessly, as a tennis ball. For such indeed, does scandal-mongery seem when it has been reduced to the principles of a fine art—harmless.

And for that very reason, perhaps because it seems so light and so graceful and so very harmless, the fine art of scandal-mongery is the deadliest of all arts, so who will doubt who has followed the tragic fortunes of its great modern victim, Lily Bart, late tenant of "The House of Mirth."

The American Girl's Training

By Viscountess Maitland.

The English girl is brought up to play and to sing and to paint, while the American girls in society, the daughters of the affluent, are brought up to observe rather than to do those things. An American girl says: "Oh, I dislike amateur playing and painting; there are so many people who do those things well, and why not hear people sing and play who are professionals, and who can make music worth while?" I have often heard your girls express themselves that way, and no doubt the professionally paid artists who entertain the guests at American social functions are better to hear than the guests.

On the other hand, I contend that we have a better system of bringing up our girls, for if a girl only plays or paints indifferently well she has a better understanding of these things and is better able to judge than the girl who only hears professionals, and who has no technical knowledge of these things.

Another advantage is that in the event of any financial misfortune we can put those accomplishments to some practical use, as I have done with my miniature painting, for instance. Why, whatever in the world should I have done when I found myself practically without any money at all, if I had not had my music or my painting? American girls, instead, must go into office work, become typewriters, clerks, etc., which is so much harder and so much less pleasant a way of earning a living.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00
The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.
SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell Real Estate Agt and Surveyor Oakland, Md.

A Vacation Adventure

By ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The touring car dashed over the crest of the hill, down a bit of steep grade that to any but two imperturbable youths would have been alarming, and sped smoothly out on a long, apparently endless plain.

Night was coming on and the clouds which had been gathering for some time began to shed their contents.

The two of them—George Holland and Christopher Dill—were college fellows out on a vacation jaunt. They had left the beaten paths they both knew and were "discovering Nature," as Kit said.

They shot on over the level roadway, searching some place of promise, to stop for the night. The rain slanted steadily into their faces.

Finally they found a barn with its doors hospitably wide open, and with small ceremony entered in. After rubbing the Old Girl down with solicitous tenderness, they stood in the great doorway and gazed gloomily into the rain. The prospect was not cheerful. Night was coming on, the storm was getting under headway and bade fair to become a tempest; they were in an undiscovered country—wet, famished, uncomfortable aliens.

"I'm going to tackle the house. May be some nice Christian bedridden party left at home who'd let us go in and camp down somewhere till the clouds roll by," said Kit.

It was a little, rather battered old house, with a tiny front porch as the sole ornamental feature. No signs of life were anywhere visible to the naked eye. Kit with his great strides got ahead and reconnoitered the tiny porch.

"Hullo!" he exclaimed; then, "Well, the dickens!" then in climax, "By thunder!"

"What's up?" queried George Holland coming up with his usual leisure.

"Come along and read this, will you? It's regularly spooky!"

"This," proving to be a large card tacked to the little battered door, read in this wise:

"You dear George and Kit, walk right in and make yourselves comfortable. Shall be back to-morrow—too bad but unavoidable. The house is yours meanwhile."

"I told you it was spooky," remarked Kit, in an appropriate undertone.

Inside, the battered little house held further surprises—further miracles. For one thing, there had been nothing outside to suggest luxury or daintiness or, as Kit put it, a soul. But here there were all three! Here were gay cushions thrown about apparently at random, dainty draperies at windows and doors, bits of rather good sketches and altogether bad watercolors, and one or two rare prints, pinned to the walls on all sides. Here was a banjo, there was a violin; here a chafing dish had a small shelf to itself, there some one had draped a college flag over an unsightly blotch in the wall paper. The effect of all things as a whole was surprisingly harmonious and pleasant. To come, wet, hungry, disgruntled, out of the storm into such a place, was a thing as agreeable as it was miraculous.

"It's Regularly Spooky!"

"We've died and gone to Heaven," rumbled Kit, solemnly. "But where are the angels? I always supposed we should find no end of ang—"

"Kit, will you read this?" There was startled awe in the other's voice. He was pointing dramatically to another placard on the wall, that they had mistaken at first for some sort of a poster. It had the ear-marks of a poster. A raggedly-sketched herald flaunted a ragged banner, on which appeared these mystic words:

"Ye hungry, listen! A mince pie waiteth! — doughnuts! — tarts that your mother used to make! Take your first door and go straight ahead. Don't stop till you get to the last crumb!"

"Spooks!" ejaculated George Holland.

"Angels!" murmured Kit.

A hearty meal and a thorough drying by the little well-polished kitchen stove, and the two collegians felt refreshed indeed. With true philosophy they had settled down into calm acceptance of their good fortune—"theirs not to question why." The embarrassing possibility of the angels' return at any moment was spared them, since the angels had so explicitly stated that they would not be back until to-morrow. Between now and then stretched a comfortable interval of rest and luxury.

The question of sleeping had hitherto not troubled them in anywise; but the matter was brought into sudden prominence by a new discovery, and, as it proved, the last one to be made. Kit had been pacing the queer, bright little room, when his big strides were arrested at a door that might—and did!—lead upstairs. It was in the shadow a little, which was doubtless the reason of the discovery not having been made much earlier. Because they were by this time wonder-proof, they read it with stolid calm:

"To whom it may concern—and you needn't pretend it doesn't concern you both!—the bed in the right-hand front chamber is the softest, also the springiest, also the conducivest to sound and refreshing slumber. Kit always did want a feather bed. Better choose the right-hand front!"

They faced each other with fine imperturbability, but each was distinctly conscious of the other's lurking amazement.

"Well?" muttered Kit.

"Let's go to bed," George said; "why not? in the right-hand front. No use refusing a good thing when it's offered to you as polite as that!"

It may have been midnight—may have been later—when sundry noises below-stairs woke George Holland and sent him up on his elbow in haste. He listened intently, dismally. For sure, Voices were down there, and if Voices, then—angels! The angels had got home!

"Kit—Kit, you!" he whispered in sudden panic, "wake up; I tell you they've got back! 'Sh, for the Lord's sake!"

The Voices were by now distinctly audible. The stairway door must have been left ajar. With a jerk Kit came upon consciousness and the Voices.

"My uncle, they've lit!" he groaned. "We're in for it ,old man!"

From below: "Georgy, where are you? Why don't you do something?"

"Great heavens, Kit, haven't I barked both shins, put out both eyes, run a violin bow into both ears—always had an ear for music—and stepped on a pin cushion."

"Did you hear what they called each other?" lisped George. "Kit,' 'Georgy'—oh, my uncle!"

"Your uncle?—mine, too!"

And down below: "Why don't they wake up, Georgy? Did you ever see such sleepers?"

"The poor things are probably all done up getting ready for us. All those things we spoke for, you know—I say, Kit, did you mention tarts, the kind that—"

"The very kind! Georgy, you think of it, at this minute whilst we famish and die, there are tarts somewhere near us!"

It may have been 15 minutes when the Voices came back. They were now much more subtle and the lapses into silence were suggestive of tarts and strawberry jam.

"Oh, Georgy, aren't we having a lovely time! Aren't you glad you married me?"

Strange there was no answer! Strange how breathless the soft Voice sounded next time!

"But I don't understand about the crumbiness and those crusts of pie—and the pies all cut into. Oh, Georgy, wouldn't it have been dreadful if there'd been tramps here and they'd eaten it all."

"They should have hung for it!" the big Voice growled.

"Well, they left us half, so I almost love 'em!" laughed softly the soft Voice. It was the soft voice that did most of the speaking.

"Isn't this a lovely room?—if we only had a little better light to see by! College girls are such fun—I'm going 'round to-morrow and read all those posters we found stuck up 'round."

In the silence that followed, two long, shadowy figures slid noiselessly across the floor overhead and, one at a time, slipped over the window sill and dropped to the ground beneath. The rain-soaked earth stood them in good stead, muffling the fall and easing the jar of it. Utterly ashamed of themselves, they crept away toward the Old Girl.

"We ought to be sent up for this," mumbled Kit.

"Oh, sure—sure!" groaned the other, "for six months' hard labor! I never sneaked before—it's a nasty feeling! But how were we to help hearing, I'd like to know? And wouldn't we have lighted out long ago, if it hadn't been for our confounded togs down there? Nice pickle we'd be in if we hadn't brought some old hunting things along—shooting the country in our shirt sleeves, bareheaded!"

Kit's thoughts harked back dismally to the abandoned "togs." Think of leaving 'em behind, will you!" he groaned. "There's circumstantial evidence enough in my overcoat pocket to hang me! If they get on our track—"

"They won't—trust the Old Girl for that. We'll make a record run first. It's jolly good luck the moon's turned on."

It was now faint daylight. The east flamed with rosy outrunners of day, and things hitherto invested with the mystery of night, stool revealed in their own nakedness or prosaic ugliness—or their beauty. The tourists were in the midst of a houseless plain; there seemed no sign of life anywhere. Yet, surely—what were those moving specks? One speck was red.

The Old Girl shot nearer—the specks were human beings. Nearer still—they were women. Kit uttered an exclamation softly.

"Girls for sure!" he breathed. "I believe they're in some kind of trouble."

The red speck resolved itself into a young person in something red and summery and gay, her face white in startling contrast. She was crouching beside the road, nursing her foot. The other speck proved white all over.

The Old Girl came to an abrupt stop and both young men leaped out.

"Is there any trouble?—is anyone hurt?" they chorused.

"Oh, dear, yes!" the White Speck cried. "I'm so thankful you've come—I mean somebody has! We're lost and she's sprained her ankle.

"We're awfully ashamed of ourselves—it's too silly to get lost in a place you've camped out in all summer! But it was the dark did it. We got turned 'round."

The young women had started out to walk across country from the railway station in the darkness of very early morning.

"We were so anxious to get home," explained one of them, rather pathetically. "We were so perfectly delighted when we found there was that early train! They couldn't scare us telling us we'd have to walk; but we didn't plan to get lost!"

"Is Anyone Hurt?"

"Or to step on rolling stones. That was such a mistake! When we wanted so much to get—and now it doesn't seem as if we'd ever—"

"There is room in the tonneau; we can easily stow the luggage," eagerly interrupted one of the strangers. "If you'll give us the pleasure of assisting—I'm George Holland; this is Kit—or, I would say Christopher—Dill. If you are equal to being jolted a little, Miss—"

"Warren—Margaret Warren. This is my chum, Jessica Hoyt."

They were presently all bestowed snugly in the Old Girl's lap, and the man at the wheel turned the Old Girl about.

The Old Girl did her best and in the end crept slowly to victory.

"Why! Why, here we are! This is home!" ejaculated Jessica, suddenly.

The two young men had exchanged startled glances as the motor rounded a corner suddenly and brought them in sight of the house they had fled from a few hours previously. Then had come the "Mig," the "Georgy" and the "Kit," till nothing more was needed to make the denouement more tragic and convincing. Thus was their downfall to be celebrated; thus were they to be confronted with their ignominy!

"Georgy, Kit, you dears! Is it you! Have you come? Did you find our notices and the jam and things? Oh, Georgy, wait, I'm mortally wounded! Don't touch me! This is Mr.—Mr. Holland, and this is Mr. Hill—"

"Dill," corrected Kit, softly.

"They've saved our live—"

"By George, Dillie, how are you?"

"What! You, Campbell? Not you?"

"The very same, old man! Well, if this isn't—Kit, do you hear, this is my old chum in the academy at home! This is my wife, Dillie. We're on our wedding trip. Well, if this isn't great!"

Explanations and introductions trod upon each other's heels. There were merriment and laughter enough to set the echoes a-ring.

"It's such fun being a chaperone!" the little bride confided to her husband that night when the summer 'camp' had settled down to quiet and rest. "I guess it paid to marry you, Georgy; I couldn't have been a chaperone if I hadn't, could I? Makes me feel so dignified and old and grandmothery!"

"And me grandfathery."

"You! Georgy, you're not in it. I'm chaperoning you, too! But, Georgy—"

"What say?"

"Of course I don't know yet, but I'm not sure but what I've found the best man in the world for Mig."

"You found—hear her!"

"The only trouble is, there are two of 'em, Georgy. I can't make up my mind which one—"

"Might leave it to Mig."

"Mercy, why so I might!" laughed the little bride. "Georgy, what a smart boy you are!"

So, as in the end turned out to be wise, the matter was left to Mig—and Jessica.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The regular annual meetin' of the stockholders of the First National Bank of Kitzmillerville, Maryland, will be held at its banking house on from 1 to 2 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing a board of directors for the ensuing year and for the transaction of any other business that may be brought before them.

Tuesday, January 14, 1908,

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The regular meeting of the stockholders of the Garrett National Bank of Oakland, Maryland, will be held at its banking house on at 2 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing a board of directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before them.

Tuesday, January 14, 1908,

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Pursuant to the required legal notice a meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank of Friendsville, Maryland, will be held at its banking house on at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a board of directors for the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business that may lawfully be done.

Tuesday, January 14, 1908,

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on the 31st day of January, '08,

FRIDAY,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SIXTEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY AND FOURTEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO, CONTAINING FOR THE WHOLE TWO HUNDRED ACRES, MORE OR LESS. Said land is located in Election Eistrict No. 1 of said Garrett county and is particularly described in a deed for the same from Joshua Ritchie and others to Louis Ritchie, said deed being recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 8, folio 415, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1904 and 1905 as it is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the names of Thomas A. and William M. Ritchie, who acquired title thereto as devisees under the last will of the late Louis Ritchie, dated the 31st day of August, 1901, whice was probated in the District of Columbia and is of record in the office of the Register of Wills for Garrett county.

No. 2. A TRACT OF LAND CONTAINING SIXTY-TWO ACRES, GENERALLY KNOWN AS THE "JOHNSON FARM," located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett County, Md., adjoining the lands of Mary Patton, Wm. Lakel, Frank Caton and Orville Hileman, and being the same body of land which was conveyed by W. H. Rupple to Isabelle Patton et al., by deed dated the 6th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 280, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the names of Isabelle Patton, Bertha May Patton, Anna Louisa Patton and Dolly Wilt.

No. 3. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING NINE ACRES AND TWENTY-FOUR PERCHES, KNOWN AS "MILLER'S ADDITION," and located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett County, Maryland, which was conveyed by S. A. Kendall and wife to Mary E. Morgan by deed dated the 27th day of November, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 31, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Mary E. Morgan.

No. 4. SIXTY-FOUR ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," being the same land which was conveyed to Annie Charity Broadwater by Lloyd Wiland and wife by deed dated the 27th day as May, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 47, folio 185, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of said Annie Charity Broadwater.

No. 5. ALL THAT PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING FIFTY-SEVEN ACRES, located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning for the same at two small maple trees and running thence South 87 degrees East, 98 perches to a stone on the outlines of the whole tract, thence North 113 perches to the State line, thence with the State line West 66 perches to a stone, thence leaving said State line South 16½ degrees West, 112 perches to the beginning, and being the same land which was conveyed to Mary M. Patton by William R. Getty and wife by deed dated the 23rd day of November, 1894, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 238, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett County. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Mary M. Patton.

No. 6. FIFTY-ONE ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett County, and particularly described in a deed for the same from Charles M. Miller and wife to Elizabeth M. Breadwater, dated the 1st day of January, 1898, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 34, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake and stone pile standing at the beginning of a tract of land conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Peter J. Stephen, and running thence with the seventh line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Elizabeth Stephen South 57½ degrees West, 7 perches, thence with the third and fourth lines of a tract called "Goochland" South 77 degrees East, 68½ perches, South 7 degrees East, 54 perches, thence with part of the first line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Jefferson Broadwater South 58 degrees East, 56½ perches, thence reversing the first and last lines of one tract and the third and second lines of another tract, both conveyed by said Anderson and wife to Hiram Duckworth North 70½ degrees East, 46½ perches, North 43 degrees West, 46 perches to a stake, North 32½ degrees West, 27½ perches, thence with part of the sixth and the whole of the seventh lines of a tract conveyed by said Anderson and wife to George W. Broadwater South 76 degrees West, 5 perches to a stake and stone pile on the west side of Elk Lick Run North 15½ degrees West, 82 perches to a stake and stone pile on the first line of a tract of land conveyed to Peter J. Stephen and with it reversed to its beginning South 86 degrees West, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Elizabeth M. Broadwater.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,

General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO,
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

If Santa Claus was Greedy

he would eat every bit of cake in this bakery, it is so delicious. But as he is a generous old chap he has left enough to supply you with the most delicious cake you ever tasted. Better order your share early, though.

SUCH BEAUTIFUL CAKE

is apt to make other people want your share as well as their own. We warn you that the longer you delay ordering the more you run a chance of being disappointed.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery,
HY. LAUER, Prop.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

Administrator's Notice.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

BENJAMIN F. SHAFFER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of May next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of November, 1907.

JOHN A. SHAFFER,
Administrator.
Oakland, Md., R. F. D. No. 2.

Administrator's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

NANCY J. MAYLE,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of May, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of November 1907.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Administrator,
Oakland, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of May next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

LEWIS J. MILLER,

Given under my hand this 27th day of November, 1907.

MARY A. MILLER,
Administratrix,
Grantsville, Md.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Agnes Whelen vs Ralph M. Casteel, et ux. No. 1499 Equity in the Circuit Court of Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered, this 9th day of December in the year nineteen hundred and seven, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindsey Sloan and Edward H. Sincell, attorneys for the Mortgagee in said cause, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 10th day of January, 1908; provideda copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 3rd day of January, 1907.

The report states the amount of sale to be $700.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1908. NUMBER 46

DANIEL ANNAN, President

W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Vice President

D. F. KUYKENDALL, Cashier

No. 1519.

The SECOND NATIONAL BANK

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND.

United States Depository State Depository.

CAPITAL $100,000 SURPLUS $300,000.

Statement of the Second National Bank, Cumberland,

As Submitted to its Stockholders at its Annual Meeting Held At its Banking House on the Fourteenth Day of January, 1908:

Capital Stock	$ 100,000.00	Loans	$1,342,159.06
Surplus	300,000.00	U. S. and other Bonds	817,455.76
Circulation	99,150.00	Banking House and Real Estate	51,500.00
Profit and Loss	33,812.35	Cash on hand and in Banks	494,462.55
Deposits	2,177,615.02	Redemption Fund	5,000.00
	$2,710,577.37		$2,710,577.37

We, the undersigned Directors of the Second National Bank, of Cumberland, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the condition of the Bank, as shown by its books January 8th, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN, President of Second National Bank.
L. M. SHEPHERD, President Cumberland Dry Goods & Notion Co.
O. C. GEPHART, Retired Capitalist
ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Associate Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.
LLOYD LOWNDES, Lawyer, Banker, Farmer.
VAN LEAR BLACK, Director of the Consolidation Coal Co., the Potomac Coal Co.
W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Gen. Mgr. Union Mining Co., Prest. First National Bank of Mt. Savage.

This bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits. The Most Liberal Terms Granted Consistent With Safe Banking. Safe Deposit Vaults and Storage for the Benefit of Our Customers.

DIXON & KELSO

In taking our inventory we find that we have too much money invested in Overcoats, and in order to reduce this stock, we are going to give you some exceptionally low prices, as follows:

Men's Rain Coats in Black, Grey and Grey Stripes, worth $12.00 to $15.00. Your Choice, $8.99.

Men's Fine Broadcloth Overcoats, in Black and Blue, worth $12.50, now $8.99

Men's Black and Grey Mixture Overcoats that sold for $9.00, now $7.25.

Men's Overcoats, in all colors, that you always pay $8.00 for, now $5.49.

Men's Black Cloth Dress Coat, Extra Bargains, was $6.50, oow only $4.49.

Youths' Overcoats from $2.25 to $4.49, reduced to 8.99 and $3.25.

A few Ladies' Coats left that we will sell at your price.

Wishing one and all a Happy 1908.

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Tuesday at Midnight John Collins' "Mansion" Burned.

Shortly after midnight Tuesday the fire whistle at the electric lighting plant sounded an alarm, and judging by the incessant blowing, one would have supposed that a fire of more than ordinary magnitude had broken out. The effect of the alarm, however, brought every able bodied man and a large number of ladies to the streets and the site of the fire, it being an old one and a-half story dwelling on Lower Oak street, adjacent to the Little Yough, and occupied by John Collins as a place of abode.

The fire had evidently been of an incendiary origin, indications pointing to the fact that it had its inception on the outer portion of the building. The fire had gained considerable headway when the chemical engine arrived and no effort was made to subdue the flames, the work of the firemen being directed toward saving adjacent structures.

The building was owned by Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill and was insured.

FIKE.

The snow at this writing is two feet deep, and the drifts are very bad.

Mr. I. M. Umbel has been sick for the last week. We hope that he will soon be well and able to be out.

Mr. F. J. Bowser last week made his first shipment of furs for this season.

Mr. Lucian Frazee, of Frazee Ridge, was seen taking a lot of poultry to market one day last week.

Mr. J. A. Fike, was a caller on L. C. Fike's one day last week.

Miss Mary Frazee was visiting at F. T. and W. L. Umbel's last week.

CARTER.

Subscribe for The Republican.

MAIL POUCH CUT TO PIECES.

Patrons of Mt. Lake Park Office Without Their Mail Friday Morning.

The letter pouch on train No. 3 last Friday morning intended for the Mountain Lake Park postoffice was cut to pieces by the wheels of that train and the contents of the bag scattered along the track from the Park to Oakland, as was discovered by the station master at Oakland after the train had pulled out of the station here and the remains of the pouch found lying between the rails in front of the depot.

It is presumed that the pouch was thrown from the moving train at the Park but that it struck some obstruction and bounced back under the wheels, catching in the brake rigging of one of the cars after having been run over, and remained in that position until the station here was reached, when it dropped to the ground.

We have been unable to learn whether or not the pouch contained anything of value.

Would Be State Fish Commisioner.

Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, has filed with Governor Crothers his application for the position of State Fish Commissioner, which office is an appointive one by the Governor.

Mr. John L. Casey, of Garrett, has applied for the position of Mine Inspector.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

—OF—

CLOTHING

I have several hundred suits of Clothing for Men and Boys that I wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

TO PURIFY ELECTIONS.

The corrupt practice bill that has been prepared by Attorney General Straus, and has received the approval of Governor Crothers and of other leading Democrats, leaves nothing to be desired in point of thorough-going character. It limits the expenditures of a candidate for any office to $25 for each 100 registered voters qualified to vote for that office. It prescribes that all the campaign expenses of a party be made through regularly appointed treasurers or agents. It defines the objects for which, and for which alone, these treasurers and agents may expend money: those objects are such as hiring halls, advertising meetings, defraying the expenses of public speakers and party committeemen, printing and circulating docnments, etc. It requires "full itemized and detailed statements of all expenditures, receipts, promises and liabilities, etc.," to be sworn to and filed so as to be open to public inspection. It declares any false statement or false entry in the above to be perjury.

In addition to these vital and searching requirements in regard to receipts and expenditures, the bill specifies a long list of acts which are to be punishable as corrupt practices. This part of the bill subjects to heavy penalties the giving or offering or promising of "any money, gift, advantage, preferment, entertainment, aid, emolument or any valuable thing whatever to induce anyone to vote or refrain from voting at any election, primary election or political convention or caucus," and includes others provisions of like nature. and it prohibits in the most positive manner the making of political contributions, directly or indirectly, by any corporation.

The most radical feature of the bill, however, is the reference of all questions of contested elections to the courts, and above all the invalidation of the election on proof of violation of the provisions of the law. This is an essential feature in the English law, and is believed to be the most effective element in its composition. If embodied in the law here, and vigorously sustained by our courts, this power of judicial annulment of elections on the ground of improper campaign practices will evidently be the most effective possible deterrent of that corruption of our politics which habit has caused us so long to tolerate but which ought to be recognized as unendurable.

The only doubt that can be entertained regarding the bill is as to whether, in the light of experience elsewhere, it is the kind of bill which is most likely to be carried into actual practical effect. This is a subject upon which inquiry and discussion will be useful; for it would be folly to act on the assumption that the putting of a law on the statue books is an all-sufficient remedy for a long-standing and deep-seated political evil. But the purposes of the bill are admirable, and its provisions clear and thorough-going; and, provided there is practical assurance that the law will be enforced, its enactment would be one of the greatest forward steps that any State in the Union has ever taken.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14, 1908.—The tactics of some of the friends of Senator Foraker are greatly deplored by his friends in Washington, as well as by all Republicans, Their latest manoeuver is the circulation of the report, chiefly among Masonic orders, and that includes a large per cent of the politicans of the country, Democrats as well as Republicans, that Mrs. Taft is a Catholic. Mrs. Taft nor her family has ever had any affiliation with the Catholic church. She is an Episcopalian as everybody known, and the Secretary is an Unitarian. The inference from the circulation of this falsehood is obvious that the friends of the Senator feel obliged to resort to any measure, however, pusillanimous, to boost their candidate for the Presidency.

Comments were heard on every hand among Republicans upon the recent developments in New York in connection with the Hughes boom. The two events of interest were the appointment of a committee of the Republican Club of New York city, comprising some of the best known members of that organization, to push the Hughes boom; and the Governor's message to the Legislature. It is declared that the first practical effort of the committee will be to induce the Republican County Committee at its meeting January 16, to put through the resolution endorsing Gov. Hughes proposed at the last meeting but which went over.

Much dissappointment was expressed over the Governor's message to the Legislature. The natural expectation had been that he would have something to say about some at least of the many national questions which are absorbing the minds of the country, and there was much criticism heard on every hand that he should have confined himself so exclusively to State affairs.

There has been a deal of speculation in political circles recently as to the possibility of a combination of which Hughes might take the Vice-Presidency, with Secretary Taft at the head of the ticket. This would be a great thing for Hughes who is only a tyro in national politics, it is pointed out by some. Other politicians, however, claim that this arrangement would have the question unsettled of "who's who" in New York politics, as either Roosevelt or Hughes will have to be supreme in the State. This is not a question among the politicians who have access to the innercircle however.

As was predicted in these letters weeks ago, the financial relief bill, the greatest necessity for which is admitted by both parties in the two branches of the national legislature, will orginate in the Senate. Senators Aldrich of Rhode Island, Allison, of Iowa, and Hale, of Maine, the big three of the Senate finance committee and the leaders o he Senate have been intrusted with the task of preparing a financial bill designed to prevent a recurrence of national money disturbances of the nature of the recent stringency, and already good progress has been made. The general plan has been mapped out, but of course there are yet many essential details to be decided upon. None of the senators named will discuss the pending bill for publication, but one of them said recently that the main idea followed in framing the relief legislation would be to provide for some emergency relief in which the people as a whole would have confidence and could resort to where then was any necessity.

It is not anticipated that there will be much opposition to the bill when it comes over from the Senate. Of course there will be some to whatever measure may be presented, but such opposition will be taken care of by the operation of the committee on rules.

Political Methods in Japan.

Lafcadio Hearn through his wife and a few pupils had access to the intimacies and courtesies, the customs and legends and superstitions of the past, which made his happiness. But the necessities of his livelihood brought him into contact with a colder world of polite, practical persons, whose habits of mind jarred at every point on his more wayward and emotional spirit. Writing on behalf of a western friend, whom he considered to have been harshly treated by oriental employers, he said bitterly: "Japanese officialdom is not lovable, and it is oriental when unpleasant. It does not say, 'Here, if you don't like things, get out; here's your salary!' On the contrary, it suddenly becames coaxing, caressing, infinitely sweet, and invites you out for multitudinous insult. Then you are suddenly surrounded by smiling combinations unimagined and unimaginable and softly struck in a hundred ways. A knockdown blow is nothing to it. I pity a man of letters in the government service in Tokyo."—Craftsman.

THE REPUBLICAN CALENDAR

FOR 1908.

JANUARY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30	31

FEBRUARY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
						1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	21	25	26	27	28	29

MARCH.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30	31

APRIL.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30

MAY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
					1	2
3	4	5	6	7	8	9
10	11	12	13	14	15	16
17	18	19	20	21	22	23
24	25	26	27	28	29	30
31

JUNE.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
	1	2	3	4	5	6
7	8	9	10	11	12	13
14	15	16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25	26	27
28	29	30

JULY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30	31

AUGUST.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
						1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31

SEPTEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
		1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30

OCTOBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31

NOVEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30

DECEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
		1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	31

AUSTRALIA.

Gray and Monotonous, But Vast, Patient and Fascinating.

Australia is in itself a monstrous continent. It is as large as the United States; its 4,000,000 of people are scattered in a narrow fringe along the streams and shores of the southern and eastern seaboard. The vast interior—"the dead heart of Australia"—a region as large as the Mississippi valley, is a trackless, rainless waste of sand and alkali, while the intervening hills, the bush and scrub, are scantily occupied by sheep stations and by mining camps. The vast north of Australia is in part a tropical jungle, in part a blistering Sahara. The fates denied to Australia the gift of high mountains to catch the snow and hold the water; hence her rivers are few and precarious; hence at too frequent intervals the great drought comes, and the desert spreads its smothering arms crowding man and his dependents backward toward the sea. It is a monotonous country in its physical aspects. The forests on hill, valley, rock and swamp are all of one pattern—eucalyptus, eucalyptus, the gray trunks of the gum trees of many species—as far as the eye can see. Without mountains and streams there is little room for variety. It is monotonous in its industries—cattle, sheep, horses—its one fine art the breeding of the perfect Merino sheep. It is monotonous in its towns. One story, light brown with unpainted roof of corrugated iron is the description of nine-tenths of the Australian homes. Corrugated iron means clean rain water, and Australia can afford to waste none of it. It is monotonous as to population. The Englishmen came first to Australia, and they are still holding it against all comers. The way is made rough for immigrants who do not speak English and for well or ill—in many ways for each —the ruling minority, the labor vote, is sternly set on "white Australia," with all which it implies. The history of Australia is monotonous. It contains the story of hard struggles of bitter sufferings, deserved and undeserved; of lawless courage and reckless bravery, but the causes served were individual. Australians never had a common enemy, and their records show no glorious war and no uprising of common feeling. The achievements of Australia belongs to the category of individual deeds of peace.

With all this the color of Australia is gray; the land, the towns, the spirit of her people. Her literature has a sober touch, and this difference in tone shows itself in its way in the life of the universities. In America, as in Browning's verse, "the flower of life is red." The American student knows that "the world is his oyster." He knows that "he can get what is coming to him;" that in proportion to his talents, his training, his sobriety and persistency of purpose will be his success in any affairs he undertakes.

But though Australia may be gray and monotenous she is vast, patient, fascinating. The mightiness of the land to be conquered, the huge roominess of the continent, the vistas of future national greatness, all these grow on one, and all these find their reflex in the student life and in the rising literature of the commonwealth. That Australia will be the birthplace of great men in the future no one can doubt. Their coming will not be due to the lopsided political administration nor to state ownership nor to the coddling of the laborer, but to the persistence of her fine old English stock under man making and man inspiring conditions.—David Starr Jordan in Appleton's.

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Watch the details.

Don't drive the cows faster than a walk.

Regret follows on the heels of neglect.

It is a fatal mistake to attempt to winter more stock than you can feed comfortably.

Why not have a horse the wife and daughter can drive? It would please them, and you, too.

Keep the boys interested in the farm by making them your junior partners in the farming business.

Cold rains of autumn are more trying on stock than the colder weather of winter. See that they are sheltered in some way.

About the only way to clean a plat of ground of blue joint or bromus is to plow it under, pull out the turf and rake the roots out of the soil.

No danger that you will keep the stables and the dairy room too clean. Be on the alert that the dirt does not creep in on you unawares.

Did poor seed corn spoil your crop for you this year? See that you provide this fall against the possibility of such a sad experience next season.

Turn about is fair play—the horse does work for you you cannot do for yourself, now do the work for him which he cannot do for himself, namely, brush and curry him.

In killing milkweed a thorough job can be done only as the roots are grubbed out. Of course if the shoots are kept cut the roots will die in time, but that is a tedious process.

Of the two ways of blanching celery, namely by earth and by boards, the latter is to be preferred, because the use of the boards keeps the celery cleaner and makes it less liable to be affected by rust or rot, and is ready for use or the market at least two weeks earlier than when earth is used. In both processes the work must be done when the soil and celery plants are perfectly dry, as handling in a moist condition produces rust or rot, or both.

Nineteen trials with separator skim milk, fed in conjunction with cornmeal at the Wisconsin experiment station, show that where not over three pounds of skim milk are fed, with each pound of cornmeal, that 327 pounds skim milk are equal in feeding value to 100 pounds of cornmeal. When feeding one pound of cornmeal with three to five pounds separator skim milk, 446 pounds skim milk saved 100 pounds cornmeal. When feeding as much as seven to nine pounds skim milk with each pound cornmeal it required 552 pounds skim milk to equal 100 pounds cornmeal.

Keep more livestock and produce more manure. Give careful attention to the use of absorbents so that the liquid as well as the solid excrements may be saved. Keep a box of dust in the stable and sprinkle where it will catch the liquids. Cut the straw up small and use it in the same way. Upon many farms there is a large amount of straw which should be turned into manure. Too frequently this is allowed to waste and much fertility is thus lost. It is a crime against agriculture to burn straw, as is so frequently done in many parts of the west. With the burning of the straw a large amount of the fertility which should be added to the land is destroyed.

With reference to dry and wet feeding of poultry, A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says: The beginner is advised to adopt the method he thinks he would prefer or would find more convenient and follow it until he has a good reason for modifying or changing it. Choose the one or the combination of the two most suited to your circumstances. There are various methods of dry feeding, just as there are various methods of feeding rations composed in whole or in part of moistened mashes or cakes. The grains may be fed whole or cracked, or a part ground and mixed together, making what is called a "dry mash." The feed may be kept before the chicks all the time in hoppers or troughs, or a part of it may be scattered in litter to induce them to take exercise. Beginners are usually more successful with dry grain chick feed, for the reason that moistened mashes are thrown down carelessly in considerable quantities and soon become soiled with the droppings and begin to ferment.

It is generally the bad manager that complains of bad luck.

See that the sheep are so fed that they will go into winter quarters in prime condition.

The community which is long on dog is apt to be short on sheep. It is also apt to be short on cash as well.

In breeding your mare find a sire of similar type, for the get from an animal of entirely different type is more than apt to be unsatisfactory.

There's a value on your cow, is there on your wife? Do you seek to make her lot as easy as possible by providing labor saving devices?

Put your heart into your work, and ten chances to one your farm will give you good returns. It's the half-hearted effort which brings failure.

No hoof, no horse, is an old adage. For this reason it is well to look to this part of the animal, and see that it is kept sound and in prime condition.

President Roosevelt hits the nail on the head again when he says: "In the uplift of the tiller of the soil lies the main hope of the uplift of the United States as a nation."

Milk through a sterilized cheese cloth and see how much dirt falls from the udder during milking even after the udder has been carefully washed and dried with a clean cloth.

An excellent borax solution for mosquito bites is made by dissolving one ounce of the borax in one pint of water that has been boiled and allowed to cool. Bathe the bites in the solution.

Better look around and see how many weeds you have been letting draw nourishment from the soil which rightfully belongs to the crops. And remember the weed allowed to go to seed means a multitude of weeds next season.

Before buying commercial fertilizers in large quantities for your farm be sure that you know exactly what your land needs. It is a useless expenditure of money to put on the land plant food which is not needed. Try by experimentation to find just what the soil needs and in just what quantities. Such intelligent fertilization will pay, but haphazard methods will not.

Plenty of money in farming. Are you getting your share of it? If not why not? Ever give the matter thought? Are your farmer methods at fault? Are you worrying along with poor to indifferent live stock? Do you fall down when it comes to marketing your farm products? Study the matter out and then plan to make more money out of the farm another season than you have this.

Here are some facts which are worth thinking about. The damage done by insect and other pests causes losses annually to the American farmer as follows: Forest and forest products, $100,000,000; animal products, $175,000,000; farm forests, $11,000,000; fruits, $27,000,000; truck crops, $53,000,000; grains, $200,000,000; tobacco, $5,300,000; cotton, $60,000,000; hay, $53,000,000; miscellaneous crops, $5,800,000.

Do not pasture your alfalfa field the first season and even the second year it perhaps will be better to mow it rather than to let the cattle tramp over it. But never let it be pastured closely as close pasturing injures the crowns of the plants. Horses and sheep are more likely to do damage in this way than are cattle or hogs. Alfalfa makes excellent pasture for all kinds of live stock and it is especially desirable for hogs during hot weather. With cattle and sheep care must be exercised to avoid bloating. At first the animals should be turned in for only a short time each day, until they become accustomed to it, and when the alfalfa is wet, as after a rain, there is still greater need of care. It is wise to be a little more careful than with clover.

It is reported that the teaching of agriculture in the public schools of Kansas is a decided success. This work is carried on mainly through the medium of lectures delivered by the faculty of the state agricultural college. So popular is this work that J. H. Miller, superintendent of agricultural college extension, proposes to enlarge this work by sending monthly pamphlets to teachers. These will cover all branches of agriculture and domestic economy, and will enable the teachers to supplement effectively the work of the college lecturer. Thus does the work of introducing agriculture into the public schools progress. Ten years ago this was considered an impossibility. Now most of the common schools in the middle west are teaching the elements of agriculture. The first great difficulty was to secure teachers capable of teaching agriculture. Many of them didn't know how, and what was more, didn't want to know. County superintendents took up this problem and found that it was no impossible task to properly instruct teachers. With this difficulty removed, the remainder is comparatively easy. Many mistakes will be made, but on the whole, the sum total of the results from year to year will be satisfactory, and the benefits will become cumulative. It looks now as though this agricultural work will be more fruitful than any ever undertaken.

TARIFF FOR REVENUE ONLY.

Phrase Cannot Be Accepted at Its Face Value.

Senator Hemenway of Indiana is quoted as follows on the subject of next year's campaign:

"For the first time in sixteen years the tariff will be the main issue, in my opinion. The corporation problems have been mostly attended to now, and, unless some big new issue should crop up as the result of the next session of congress, the tariff will be the principal topic on the stump. The Republicans will contend that the tariff should be revised after the inauguration of the next President in the interests of protection and by the friends of protection.

The Democrats will contend that the tariff should be revised with the idea of tariff for revenue only in view. On that issue I have not the slightest doubt that the Republicans will be returned to power. This is a protectionist country."

"A tariff for revenue only," has in times past led to a good deal of discussion. Until 1894 the phrase was accepted at its face value. It meant the levying of no more duties on importations than necessary to carry on the government economically administered. Such was the explanation offered by men of the Carlisle-Morrison, Watterson-Mills school of tariff reformers, who for years had made the land resound with the issue.

But when the Democratic party, with Mr. Cleveland in the white house, was called upon to put the issue into legislative shape it "fell down" with the task distressingly, and to its own loss and humiliation. The Gorman-Wilson measure proved to be anything but "a tariff for revenue only," being stuffed full of duties designed expressly for protection. Even the bill that Mr. Cleveland wanted would have carried a large amount of calculated protection.

As the government must have money for its support—no party would dare put the United States on short commons—much importance attaches to the proposition that the government be "economically administered." Our expenses at present are not what they were in 1884, when Mr. Cleveland was first elected, nor what they were in 1892, when he was the second time elected, on a platform carrying a demand for "a tariff for revenue only." Now, what is economy? If we are spending too much money, where shall retrenchment begin? How, and to what extent, should the pruning knife be applied?

Mr. Hemenway is justified in his statement that this is "a protectionist country." The truth of that will readily appear if the "tariff for revenue only" men take the ground next year that the English of their issue means the challenge of protection to a duel to the death.

A Midsummer Night's Dream.

It is difficult to sufficiently admire the cheerful optimism of the new tariff editor of American Industries. Mr. Miles has got it all settled. The tariff is to be taken out of politics, he says, before the Sixtieth congress assembles on the first Monday in December, a little more than 90 days hence. This is quick work indeed. Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" declared

"I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes."

The Miles midsummer night's night's dream is even swifter and more difficult of realization. Puck's promise has been verified by electricity and a telegraph wire. The Racine (Wis.) Puck will need a larger dose of electricity to help him take the tariff out of politics in 90 days. He will have to kill off some 16,000,000 voters arrayed on one side or the other of the question, "Protection or Free Trade?" and bring into being before the first Monday in December 16,000,000 new voters, including about 500 senators and representatives in congress who have absolutely no views on this question. It will be a great man who can take the tariff out of politics in 90 years. Let alone 90 days.

Tariff Ripping Reasons.

The fact of an $87,000,000 surplus suggests to the New York Tribune the conclusion that "the Dingley schedules have done their work in certain lines and need revision." By a similar process of reasoning the same conclusion might be reached regarding other facts and conditions. The country is more prosperous than ever before; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. Labor is employed to an extent and at a rate of wages hitherto unknown; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. Our foreign trade has been doubled in ten years; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. We have a yearly trade balance of about half a billion dollars, which enables us to keep out of debt to foreign countries; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. In its search for tariff ripping reasons the Tribune ought not to overlook these things.

More, Too.

Considering the fact that in the first month of our new system of making competition easier by the reduction of tariff duties through undervaluation, imports of competitive articles have increased nearly $12,000,000, is there any real necessity for either tariff reduction or reciprocity by act of congress? Is it not a fact that when we were scared into allowing foreigners to appraise their own merchandise we revised and reciprocated about all we can stand? And more, too, it will probably turn out.

Nellie's Lesson

By Vivian Claude

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

She gets up that morning with a dull headache, a miserable sense of heaviness and nervous unrest, common enough, doubtless, to young mothers who have not yet succeeded in adjusting their endurance to the various burdens of life.

She goes out into the pleasant, cozy kitchen; Charley has already built the fire in the range, and has gone on into the large shed room they call his "work-shop," where he is occupying his spare hours in constructing a set of furniture, from original patterns, for a spare bedroom Nellie is planning to arrange.

"Well, he may feel fresh and lively and like working," thinks Nellie, half-sullenly, as she listens to the cheerful, mellow whistle with which he keeps time to the music of his tools. "He slept like a rock all night. I don't suppose he ever guesses how little sleep or rest I got—or cares, either, maybe."

Which last is clearly unjust; and Charley Burt is one of the best husbands in the whole world, as Nellie herself is often heard to say.

She goes mechanically about her morning duties, preparing the breakfast she knows Charley likes best, and putting up a dainty dinner in his neat lunch-basket—for he does not come home till night—all the time hoping against hope that baby will not waken till she gets some of the most needful work done.

The very sunshine fails to cheer her with its brightness.

Breakfast over, he says cheerfully: "Nell, I wish you'd sew a button or two on my coat: I've missed some this day or so."

His tone is the furthest possible from a hint of fault-finding.

She says: "Yes, Charley," very quietly; but lifts the offending garment with a spiteful jerk; and goes into the bedroom to select from their box on her work-table some suitable buttons and the wherewithal to apply them. But just as she turns away with full hands, those wicked buttons escape from her hold, and with the natural perversity that animates all things some days, they cease not their rolling till they have bestowed themselves far under the dressing-case, quite beyond reach. A hasty exclamation springs to her lips, but is bravely repressed, while the vexed frown deepens. Losing temper and patience together, she puts forth all her strength and lifts the dressing-case clear away from the wall, rolling it aside while she picks up the fugitive buttons.

Sees Them Bring in the Man She Loves.

"Say, Nell, hold on there," calls Charley, observing this exploit through the open door. "Why don't you let me help you? You ought not to do such things; you know you'll hurt yourself."

"Oh, well, it doesn't matter," she returns, desperately, "I'm sure to be worked to death, somehow; it may as well be one thing as another."

For a moment honest Charley looks at his young wife with eyes and mouth open; never has he heard such words from her before. In that moment it seems to dawn upon him for the first time how much sharper is the outline of the still pretty face, how pale the once pink cheeks, what dark lines under the blue eyes, how tired a look about the child-like mouth. He sits down suddenly, in the completeness of the shock.

"Nell," he says, presently, "if you are working too hard, why don't you have a young girl to help, or put out something—the washing, for instance? It isn't absolutely necessary that you should do everything; you mustn't overwork, if we don't make up that last payment this year."

"I shall do all my own work—unless I'm sick—until we are quite out of debt and have laid something by," is the firm reply—she is somewhat calmer now. "Didn't I agree to, when we laid our plans at first?"

"But not unless you are able, Nell; I won't have you over-work; you are not looking very well, it seems to me."

"Of course I am able," stubbornly, yet struggling to keep back the weak tears at these words of sympathy. "Of course I am well; what should ail me? And as for what I do, you never see me doing much, do you?" with somewhat bitter emphasis.

She gives him the coat, proceeds to clear away the breakfast things, but just then baby Carl's shrill notes ascend.

"That baby!" she exclaims, with no very tender inflection; and dropping cups and saucers, she hastens to relieve his sufferings. Charley has his coat on by this time, and is about to start: he has a 15-minutes' ride to his work. He steps into the bedroom and stoops over little Carl.

"Come, Nell, my girl," he calls, cheerily, "fetch us the good-by kiss."

"Oh, I'm busy," replies Nell, tartly, from the depths of the closet where she is selecting baby's clothes, "kiss Carl instead, that will do as well. I don't doubt you think a good deal more of him than you do of me anyway," with perversely bitter intonation.

If she thinks he will hasten to her and coax her out of her pet, she is greatly mistaken; he is not used to any such moods in his bright little helpmate, so does not know how to take them. There is a sudden silence, then she faces round just in time to see him give baby Carl one long kiss, and he turns away mute and hurt, and is gone. She hesitates a moment, too proud to call to him even then, till at last her heart conquers and she runs after him; but it is too late; he has passed out of the side-door, gone down the walk and is just stepping on board the waiting horse-car.

How heavily the day passes after this, only a tender-hearted woman mastered by the same failing can know. Never before has she spoken such words to the husband she loves so dearly; never before since their wedding-day have they parted for even a few hours without a kiss and a loving word.

Theirs has been a very happy marriage, too, having in it all the elements of prosperity and content. Charley Burt is a house-carpenter by trade, a first-rate mechanic, sober, industrious, earning good wages and constantly advancing at his work. They have a cozy little home, a pretty cottage in the suburbs, all their own when this last small payment is made, and furnished comfortably in every respect, indeed, almost luxuriously, thanks to Charley's skill with his tools and Nellie's taste and ingenuity. This pretty young wife is thrifty, capable, and skillful to contrive—almost a model—but of late her health and strength have been so sorely taxed that she is becoming subject to fits of gloom and even irritation, failing to appreciate her many blessings.

To-day she goes about the pretty rooms tidying everything as usual, and for the first time takes no pride or pleasure in them.

She gets through her routine-work somehow, doing all she thinks of or finds time for, because to leave anything undone would only add to the suffering of a mind ill at ease; but there is a heavy weight of misery at her heart; the slow hours drag, spite of her countless tasks, and this luckless day seems the very unhappiest of her life.

Will night ever come—and bring her Charley home? At last everything is done; she has prepared a most inviting supper for her "good man," saying to herself:

"I'll take baby Carl and run down to the gate and meet him when he comes—then we'll kiss and make up."

Still he does not come, and it is quite past his usual hour. She sits patiently holding her boy, her face growing all the time more white and drawn and anxious.

"Oh, how I wish I had said good-by just as ever to-day!" she whispers for the twentieth time; then as the slow minutes creep along, "I am afraid—oh, so afraid something has happened," for though he is sometimes a little late, it is very seldom that his time of coming varies a half-hour—and now it is two hours, and her vague presentiments of evil are growing to a dreadful certainty.

She gets up and walks the floor, tired out as she is; another hour passes, and in the extremity of her distress and terror she is about to run across to her nearest neighbor, when a muffled tramping approaches and stops—"the feet of them that bear him are at his gates."

It seems to Nellie Burt that she dies a dozen deaths in that moment, while she stands rooted to the spot and sees them bring in the man she loves, senseless, bleeding, broken; then she rouses herself, and it is her ready hand that arranges the bed and smooths the pillow under the poor unconscious head.

Not dead—no—that would have been a punishment greater than poor Nellie deserves, and more than she could bear; but there has been an accident—a scaffolding has fallen, and among the half-dozen men killed or injured Charley Burt has fared best of any—only a broken arm, a dislocated shoulder, and some cuts and bruises. He has been well cared for, too, and only conveyed to his home when the attending surgeon has decided that there are no internal injuries, and that he can safely be moved.

But the dread "might have been" stands out before her then so clear and plain that it leaves its impress on her very soul; and in all the rest of her life it helps to teach her the great lesson of patience and self-control.

So matters might have been much worse, after all; as it is, Nellie Burt's bad day ends with a perfect reconciliation between husband and wife, and a most grateful thanksgiving to God from one tender heart that she has been spared that sharpest pang of all—the utter misery of knowing that for this world her penitence has come too late.

NATION'S LONG DRINK.

Amounted to 1,800,000,000 Gallons of Alcoholic Beverages In 1906.

An editorial on "The Nation's Drink Bill," in the current number of the American Grocer, says the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the United States reached high-water mark last year, amounting to over 1,800,000,000 gallons, or about 22 gallons for each person, including the babies. The consumption of beer alone was nearly 1,700,000,000 gallons, or 20 gallons per capita.

"As all of the population are not users of beer," says the editorial, "it is probable that those who consume malt liquor each use every year from 75 to 100 gallons."

The cost to the people of the beverages used is said to have been $1,667,083,610 last year. Commenting on the cost the editorial says:

"The country was amazed when the Fifty-eighth congress appropriated nearly $1,000,000,000 for the various branches of the United States government, while the people do not wince at spending nearly $1,500,000,000 every year for alcoholic beverages.

"That sum is one-fifth the total value of all of the farm products of the nation, estimated by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson at $7,000,000,000.

"The nation's liquor bill is $1,450,000,000; its corn crop of 3,000,000,000 bushels is valued at $1,167,000,000.

"The liquor bill is double the value of the wheat crop; more than twice the value of the yield of cotton, or more than the combined value of all the wheat and cotton grown in the United States.

"The liquor bill is two and one-half times greater than the value of the hay crop."

Regarding the steady increase in the consumption of alcoholic beverages in this country in recent years, the writer of the editorial asks:

"Is this gain in the use of alcoholic stimulants due to a stronger national appetite for strong drink, or does the absorption of 1,000,000 foreigners into the population every year tend to enhance the demand for spirituous liquors?

"And might not we ask if the increasing agitation on the lines of socialism, anarchy and labor disputes be not in a measure due to the character of the nation's beverages?"

HOW THE STATES STAND.

Survey of the Temperance Movement In the United States.

The following survey of the results of temperance agitation throughout the union will be of great interest. The impetus of the movement is now almost irresistible:

Alabama—Two-thirds under prohibition.

Arkansas—Fifty-seven counties under prohibition.

Connecticut—Fifty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Florida—Twenty-one counties under prohibition.

Georgia—One hundred and twenty counties under prohibition.

Indiana—Sixty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Kentucky—Ninety-five counties under prohibition.

Louisiana—Eighty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Maryland—Sixty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Massachusetts—Two hundred and forty towns to 100 with saloons.

Missouri—Forty-one counties under prohibition.

Mississippi—Sixty-five counties under prohibition.

Minnesota—One county and 123 villages under prohibition.

Nebraska—Forty per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Ohio—Eighty per cent. of territory under prohibition; 68 per cent. of the municipalities.

Rhode Island—Forty per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Tennessee—Only 14 towns and cities have saloons.

Texas—One hundred and fifty-seven counties under prohibition.

Vermont—Ninety per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Virginia—Seventy-three counties under prohibition.

West Virginia—Thirty-two counties under prohibition.

Watch prohibition grow!

Alcohol and Workhouses.

Although the number of workhouses where intoxicating liquors are served to inmates is gradually decreasing in Great Britain, no less than $40,000 a year is being spent by poor law authorities on beer, wines and spirits for inmates. Only £2,300 of that amount was spent on stimulants as "medical necessities." When masters of workhouses assert that drink accounts for from 50 to 70 per cent. of the inmates, it seems ridiculous, says a leading London paper, to ply them with more liquor at the expense of the rate-payers.

Would Provide Wine.

A new mayor was recently chosen for the city of Leeds, England, and he accepted the office. Being a total abstainer, instead of providing the city's guests with wine, he donated what he probably would have spent for that purpose—$2,500—to feed half-starved children of the city.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1908.

LEGISLATIVE WORK THAT IS WORTH WHILE.

Governor Crothers could not possibly have chosen a better subject to put to the front at Annapolis than that of providing the State with a system of good roads. The time is ripe for making a new step forward in this direction. Men of intelligence and public spirit, in every part of the State, have become familiar with the fundamental ideas of the subject, and are ready to follow them up. These fundamental ideas are, first, that good roads are not a matter of minor importance, but are essential to the welfare and progress of a civilized community; and secondly, that good roads cannot be obtained by any haphazard and patchwork method, but only as the result of systematic work, planned and carefully executed under expert direction. It was in recognition of these things that the Shoemaker bill was passed, providing for State aid to counties in the making of good roads, subject to the approval and supervision of the Highways Division of the State Geological Survey; and what Governor Crothers now contemplates, and the resolution brought forward by Messrs. Benson and Williams seeks to promote, is greatly to enlarge the scope of the State's good roads work, and, in particular, to provide for the construction of main arteries of travel at the expense of the State without co-operation of the counties.

The only difficulty about the good-roads proposition is that of getting unimaginative people to realize how much it means to the community. The making of a fine, smooth road—one that remains a fine, smooth road in rainy weather and in a drought, instead of alternating between mud and dust—is missionary work of the highest order. That is makes locomotion and transportation easier and cheaper, that it saves wear and tear of vehicles and horseflesh, is only its first and not its most important effect. It is a moral and physical tonic to the whole population of the country-side. It turns sloth and untidiness into activity and neatness. It stimulates people to care for the appearance of their fences and their front yards, and even their houses, who cared nothing about these things when the road in front of their places was unkempt and hopeless-looking, a mudhole after every rain and a breeder of cyclones of dust during every drought. And the beauty of it is that this change of spirit is contagious. Not everybody is converted at once, but some one person in a neighborhood has his ambition stirred by the improved look and feel of the road, and mends his fences and paints his house and improves his grounds; and then another and another and another follows his example. The movement to convert the main roads of Maryland into fine modern highways is a movement to put new blood, new life, new prosperity, into the whole population of the State.

It is a most encouraging sign of the times to find this sort of thing coming to the front at Annapolis. It is beginning to look as if we were outgrowing the idea that the machinery of government is chiefly a means of grinding out favors for some man or clique or party. We are very far from the millennium still, no noubt; and there will be developments in the Legislature of a very different kind. The hunger and thirst of the professional politicians and their hangers-on is not a thing that can be disposed of in the turning of a hand.

But nothing is better calculated to keep all that sort of thing within bounds than the spectacle of other work going on that the people will realize as being the real work that Legislatures and Governors and Mayors and City Councils are created to do. People will be less likely to tolerate the degrading squabbles of spoilsmen when they are reminded by concrete examples of the kind of thing that they have a right to look for, the kind of thing which really touches their interests.

THE GOSPEL IN HEATHEN LANDS.

The church may soon be confronted by a perplexing problem.

The newly aroused patriotism of the Chinese and the natives of India promises great changes in those countries. Almost countless millions of dollars have been spent to Christianize those races. Some progress has been made, but as compared with the numbers of the people and the vastness of the territory it is as a molehill to a mountain. Christ said preach the gospel to all people, and it is, of course, the duty of the church to comply; but He also said you must love your neighbor as yourself, and if a man steals one's cloak you must give him your coat also, and if you are smitten on one cheek you must turn the other. It is not apparent that any of these commands are complied with literally. The hyperbole of the East may be reasonably cited to modify some of the scriptual injunctions, while civilization has not yet reached the point where they can be literally obeyed.

Revelation is an evolution. Great races of people lived and flourished and passed away before the tablets were confided to Moses amid the lightnings and thunders of Mount Sinai. At that very moment there were races of men far more numerous than the Jews, which had their civilization and their systems of government, and of whom records are preserved antedating this event thousands of years. These races were not selected as custodians of the truth, it is reasonable to assume, simply because they had not reached that degree of development which justified the divine confidence. They had religion suitable to their capacity, and it would have been idle to undertake a system of proselyting. There is no more striking example in the records of time that the Almighty adapts the divine truth to the capacity of His creatures than the selection of a single race of people for its repository which is fitted to receive it.

Before the advent of Jesus there were great races enjoying a degree of civilization more or less advanced, which in some mysterious way had become possessed of great religions. Their religions contained many of the truths of revelation, and were singularly well adapted to the character and temperament of these races. It would be arrogant to assert that the Almighty had not in His own way revealed to these people more or less of divine truth. In fact, so admirably were these religions fitted to these peoples it is scarcely presumption to say that God had revealed to them as much as was good for them. These races exist to the present moment. They have multiplied tremendously, until today they number eight hundred million souls—fully as much as the inhabitants of all Christendom.

When Jesus said preach the gospel to them it is natural to infer that He included them along with all mankind. It is on this account that the Christian church has spent so many millions of dollars—a sum in the aggregate which would civilize every man, woman and child in Europe and America. These peoples cling to their own religions, and as they have developed through the centuries they have undoubtedly purified those religions, but as compared with Christianity they are "seeing through a glass darkly." Unfortunately, the great bulk of them—so many of them, in fact, as to suggest practical unanimity—do not care to see any clearer. They resent the efforts to convert them. The resentment is passive and exhibited only by dislike at ordinary times and under ordinary conditions, but as soon as there is a momentary flare of patriotism their resentment becomes active. In the few spots where the missionaries have gained a foothold they rise up and burn churches and schools, and those who have taken it upon themselves to convey to them God's word are compelled to flee for refuge to some friendly official.

It cannot be said that the action of these heathen is unnatural. Parallel instances of resentment can be cited in America, but when these attacks are made they necessarily involve the government. The United States cannot see its citizens maltreated without interference. Heretofore such interference has been simple and bereft of embarrassment. The conditions have become such in the East very recently that interference in the affairs of these countries may be attended with the gravest consequences. It would, therefore, seem wise for the church, through its agents, to consider the situation in all its bearings and make ample preparation for aiding the government by confining the activities of the missionaries strictly to the voluntary propagation of the gospel.

One of the most fruitful sources of trouble with these heathen is the suspicion engendered in their minds that the missionaries are in some way mixing up with the local or national politics of the country. On general principles, it is not probable that they would feel such resentment simply because of the spread of the divine word of Jesus. Their suspicion may be altogether uncalled for, but when newly aroused patriotism is abroad and passions are rampant it is common prudence to place the work of the missionaries absolutely above suspicion. Christ's kingdom is not temporal, but eternal, and the church should never be compelled to evoke the weapons of war.

How Much Could You Get For Your Farm?

You are a farmer. You live near this town. You own land. Let us say that you own more than you need and would like to sell a hundred acres.

How much could you get per acre?

Land values have risen lately. But has the value of your land risen as you think it should?

Your land is good land. You think it is worth considerably more than anybody has offered you. Well, let us see.

A man buying farm land naturally prefers to locate near a thriving, up to date town. He wants good home markets for his crops. He wants good schools.

Let us say your land is three miles from town. A farm that looks very much like yours is three miles from a town twice as big and twice as prosperous as this town.

If you were going to buy a farm for your own occupancy, wouldn't you pay a whole lot more for land near the town that is twice as large and twice as lively?

Of course you would. It would be good business.

Now, what makes a town big and bustling? Money. Money in circulation. Not in circulation in Chicago, for instance, but right in the town that wants to grow.

How much money have you sent to the big Mail Order houses in the city the past ten years? How much have your neighbors sent? How much have all of you together put out of circulation here at home?

It is probably beyond calculation. If all that money had been spent in your own home town, isn't it reasonable to assume that the town would have grown more than it has grown?

Wouldn't this town be a bigger and better town?

Wouldn't it have more stores to buy your produce?

Wouldn't it have more public improvements to make it more attractive to outsiders who might come here to live, to go into business, or buy your surplus land at a good figure?

TO TRADE AT HOME MEANS TO HELP THE TOWN AND THE NEIGHBORHOOD. TO HELP THE TOWN AND THE NEIGHBORHOOD MEANS TO HELP YOURSELF.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. James Beard is visiting relatives at Winchester, Va.

Miss Pleasant Howard, after spending the Christmas vacation with her mother at Winchester, Va., returned last week to her post of duty as assistant teacher in the public school.

Mr. Grant Harshbarger, a well known Buxton miner, and prominently identified with the Republican party in this district, has been appointed boss miner for the Marsteller Coal Co., at Hampshire.

Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, of Oakland, one of Garrett county's most prominent and talented attorneys, lectured on temperence in the M. E. church Friday night.

The full dinner pail and prosperity have gone on a vacation and left no definite information as to their return. Rumor has it that the mines in this vicinity will be cut to three days a week, followed in the near future if times do not brighten up, by a cut in wages.

A tarnation shame, after all the teams, sleighs, cutters, sleds, etc., had been hired, leased and otherwise provided for a big time on last Snnday, the rain came on Shturday night and beat upon that snow and it was not fit for sleighing.

Mrs. Lotta Bonner, who has been visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Kemp, for the past few weeks, returned to her home at Pennsboro, W. Va., on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grant, Jr., of Elk Garden, are visiting relatives in town.

The post office at this place was transferred to the new post master, Mr. Jacob Stump, during the past week.

Miss Jennie Kight, of Cross, and Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, were entertained by friends during the week.

Mrs. John Wolf, of this place, and her daughter, Mrs. Bessie Burleigh, of Baltimore, are visiting relatives at Kitzmillerville.

Miss Alma Kemp is a guest of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kight of Cross.

The report of a terrible gas explosion in Mine No. 20 at Blaine, under the management of the Davis Coal and Coke Co., early on last Tuesday morning, in which five or six miners had lost their lives, caused considerable excitement and apprehension in this place. A number of miners, formerly residents of this town, had lately moved to Blaine and secured employment in the mine reported blown to pieces. Fortunately, when the truth was known it was found only one heading in the mine had been slightly damaged and no one hurt.

The extensive lumber plant at Bond, which had been closed down shortly before the holidays for repairs and a general overhauling, which is always customary at this time of the year, expects to resume manufacturing lumber this week.

The "wets" and the "drys" are having a stiff fight for supremacy in this district and no one knows positively just what the result may be. The drys met with a temporary set back a few days ago when their petition fell in the hands of the enemy. They have rallied their forces, however, and claim they are stronger than ever. The fight is a good natured one and both sides are claiming victory in the end.

TO PREACH ON LOCAL OPTION.

Pastors Throughout Maryland Will Discuss it January 26th.

The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland is planning for a "Concerted Discussion" on Jan. 26. The Ministerial Union of Baltimore issued a call to all the pastors of the State to join on that date in discussing the local option issue, the Anti-Saloon League as an agency of the federated churches in securing a state-wide local option law, and the necessity of informing the members of the Legislature of the desire for such legislation.

It is conceded that local option will be one of the most important questions before the Legislature and will probably develop the hardest fight of the session.

A desperate attempt is being made to unite all enemies of local option in favor of high license. The League is not opposing high license, but refuses absolutely to accept it as a substitute for local option, and expects this concerted movement to crystallize the sentiment here as it has done in other States. Enough responses from pastors all over the State have been received to assure the success of the plan.

Superintendent Anderson of the League announces the receipt from Cardinal Gibbons of a statement in which he heartily approves the present movement in Maryland to secure a local option law by which the people of wards of cities, or of rural counties may vote upon the question of closing saloons, and further states that where the people do not vote out saloons he favors high license, but not as a substitute for, nor in opposition to such local option.

The League has rented Room 106, at Carvel Hall Hotel, Annapolis, as Legislative Headquarters and has a competent stenographer and assistant constantly on hand. The Superintendent and other workers will be there during the most of the session.

The day after the Legislature convened, the League wrote President Seth of the Senate and Speaker Ray of the House, asking the appointment of Temperance Committees with a majority of temperance men. The League leaders expect some of the politicians friendly to the liquor interests to try to get committees appointed which will smother the bill in committee.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Preparations are about complete to harvest our ice crop by the use of the latest machinery for cutting and hoisting ice into cars and into the ice house. The snow, as usual, is much in the way but with the kind of weather we are now having the crop will likely be good. We understand that Superintendant Davis has made contracts for several thousand tons.

We were pained to hear of the death of Mrs. Hubbard, sister of Mrs. L. A. Rudisill and Mr. C. W. Hopkins, which occurred in Cincinnati last week. Mrs. Rudisill left for Cincinnati Saturday last. Mr. Hopkins had been there for several weeks.

Our people are afflicted with the grip and measels, both of which, however, in a mild form.

Mr. John Wilt, who was seriously injured several weeks since by the falling of a tree, was taken to the Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore last week to be operated on. The Red Men's Lodge of this place are caring for him. He was accompanied to the Hospital by Mr. George Hipsley, a member of the Lodge.

Rev. Preston, who had charge of the Allegany House last season, seems to be wanted in West Virginia, where he is charged with obtaining money in an irregular way. Everything he left here has been seized for rent, store bills, etc., but there is not enough to meet these local claims. One merchant was caught for nearly two hundred dollars and merchants and others in smaller sums. The goods will be sold in a few days.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

Tne New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

A special meeting of the Stockholders of the Penn Garrett Coal Mining Company will be held at the office of the Company in Friendsville, Garrett county, Maryland, on Monday, January 27th, 1908,

at 12 M., for the purpose of taking action in regard to the sale of the Company's property.

C. L. PULLEN, Stockholder.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

February 4th and 5th, 1908,

for the purpose among other business of hearing appeals on assessments and making transfers.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

STRAYED OR STOLEN—On December 24th, a female beagle hound (straight legged) white, with brown markings, long brown ears. Reward for her return to Bowie Johnson, office First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.
Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. Offutt, John M. Davis, G. S. Hamill.
George W. Legge, John T. Mitchell, S. T. Jones.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

G.S.HA... ...ASHIER
G... ...IER

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

The only baking powder made with Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

No Alum, No Lime Phosphate

Mr. E. G. Wilson of Mountain Lake Park, was in the city yesterday on business.

The average country newspaper comes out in a new dress about as seldom as the editor's wife.

Miss Zella Shaffer, of Carmel, West Va., is in Oakland visiting her aunt, Mrs. Louis Bush.

Mr. Ed. Helbig, who spent a week or two in Philadelphia, returned to his home in Oakland last week.

Miss Elizabeth Weber, who has been visiting her home near Oakland for a short time, left yesterday afternoon for Piedmont and Elkins, West Va.

Mr. Bowie Johnson, who spent two or three weeks with his mother and sister at Green Cove Springs, Florida, returned to his home in Oakland last Thursday night

Much of our space today is given to the publication of the names of the road supervisors appointed by the Board of County Commissioners at the recent meeting of the Board.

Ex-Senator R. T. Browning, of Thayerville, was in Oakland yesterday. He will probably visit Annapolis next week in the interest of some friends who are aspirants for office.

On another page of today's REPUBLICAN will be found printed the calendar for the present year. Our readers may cut this from the body of the paper and thus be supplied with a calendar.

Mr. Thomas Little, who has been employed for several months at a point along the Western Maryland Railroad, arrived in Oakland yesterday afternoon to remain a few days visiting relatives.

Dr. Benj. F. Selby, who went down to his old home in Howard county one day last week to visit his father, E. Green Selby, Esq., who has been quite ill for some time, returned to his home in Oakland yesterday morning

Honest poverty should be respected and not scorned. It was in the homes of the lowly that we oftenest find Christ when upon the earth and in our day it can be truthfully said that we meet Him there oftener than elsewhere.

Orders have been issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company to close the block signal office at Mountain Lake Park on February 1st. With the closing of this office the people of the Park will be without telegraphic facilities.

Dr. W. W. Davis, superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association, who spent a few days in Oakland and at the Park last week, left Oakland Thursday evening for New York City where he preached on Sunday morning in the church of the Redeemer. On next Sunday Dr. Davis will preach in the First M. E. church at Fairmont, West Va.

A. E. Rambeau, Jr., of Mountain Lake Park, at present assistant bookkeeper of the Mississippi Glass Company at Morgantown, West Va., has just received a communication from the Civil Service Bureau at Washington to the effect that he is fifteenth on the list of eligibles for the revenue service, having taken the examination at Cumberland last September.

Messrs. John W. Davis and G. A. Fraley, of Oakland, went to Parkersburg, W. Va., yesterday morning to attend Federal Court as witnesses in the counterfeiting case of the Government against William Hauger, who was arrested some years ago charged with issuing spurious coin. The case has been called for trial a number of times in the Federal Court, but continued from time to time.

The special services being held this week in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church when Rev. Manges. the pastor, discourses upon topics selected for the occasion by Evangelical Association, are being well attended by not only the members of his own congregation but by those belonging to other churches. The meetings will be continued every night this week, to which all are cordially invited and will receive a hearty welcome.

A man to be a success in life must be of sound character, good mind, truly honest, and with clean, sober habits. We would like to see every boy in this town straighten up, quit the whiskey, the cards, the cigarettes and tobacco, and start out on manhood's journey good, clean men, and their character would be complete. Show us a boy in town that has none of these habits, and we will show you one who will make the model man of our city.

The ethics of home correspond in a large measure with ethics of society. All these virtues which are crowned jewels of the highest civilization have their inception in the home. The glory and charm of womanhood and manhood, the niceties of character which give distinctiveness and beauty to childhood and youth, the adjustments of personal and domestic relations within the home, the education of the impulses budding susceptibilities and growing powers of children all fall within the powers of home ethics.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidney nerves get weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is simply makeshift. Get a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for these weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly help will come. Free sample test sent on request by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Your health is surely worth this simple test. Sold by all dealers

Bill Nye had the truth well told when he said: "A man may use a wart on the back of his neck for a collar button; ride on the back coach of a railroad train to save interest on his money till the conductor gets around; stop his watch at night to save wear and tear; leave his 'i' or 't' without a dot or cross to save ink; pasture his mother's grave to save corn; but a man of this sort is a gentleman and a scholar compared to the fellow that will take a newspaper two or three years and when asked to pay for it puts it into the office and has it marked "refused."

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation even to very young babes. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung-healing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal aching lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor uses, "The Sacred Herb." Always demand Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time ...sits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

BITTINGER.

The past week has been a season of mingled snow, rain, clouds and sunshine. Snow fell on Tuesday of last week to a depth of about twenty inches and a subsequent storm increased the depth to two feet or more. On last Saturday night rain fell in torrents for several hours and as a result of the rain and melting snow the streams in this section are considerably swollen.

Messrs. Mason and Sons, who have a saw mill near here, have shut down their plant indefinitely.

Amos H. Reckner, who with a party of friends, went south early last November and who has been picking ora near Crown Point, Florida, since that time, returned to his home at this place last Saturday.

Messrs. William and Calvin Sechler, of Keim, Pa., were visiting their brother, Charles Sechler, of this place, last Sunday.

Mrs. Earle Stanton, who has been ill for some time, is still confined to her bed.

Misses Myrtle and Bessie Wiley spent last Saturday evening and Sunday at Jennings.

W. H. Engle, of Frostburg, was visiting in this neighborhood last week.

At a joint meeting of the Bittinger and Meadow Mountain councils of the Lutheran congregations, which was held here last week, a call was extended to Rev. Alvin Jugel, of Selins Grove, Pa.

Notice of the Public.

This is to give notice to the public generally that my wife, Ora B. Frazee, and my daughter, Olive Frazee, have left their home in District No. 5 of Garrett county, without just cause or provocation and that I will not be responsible for any debts that they may contract in my name. I also warn all persons not to harbor my said daughter Olive Frazee, as she is a minor under age, and justly under my charge.

WILLIAM FRAZEE.

Hoyes, Md., Dec. 30, 1907.

Call for Your Letters.

Mattie Davis, M. E. Browning, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Lillicotch.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

NATIONAL BANKS ELECT OFFICERS

Practically No Change Made in the Directorate of the Banks in Garrett.

Pursuant to the National banking laws the National banks of the United States held their annual stockholders' meetings Tuesday of this week for the election of boards of directors for the ensuing year.

In Garrett county there are five National banks located as follows: Oakland, the Garrett National and First National; Friendsville, the First National; Grantsville, the First National, and Kitzmillerville, the First National. The results of the stockholders' and directors' meetings are presented below:

Garrett National of Oakland—Daniel E. Offutt, president; Gilmor S. Hamill, vice president; Scott T. Jones, cashier, G. A. Fraley, assistant cashier; directors, Daniel E. Offutt, George W. Legge, Gilmor S. Hamill, John M. Davis, John T. Mitchell, Scott T. Jones.

First National of Oakland—Fred. A. Thayer, president; M. N. Wilson, vice president; R. E. Sliger, cashier, M. R. Hamill, assistant cashier; directors, Fred. A. Thayer, M. N. Wilson, N. U. Bond, A. G. Sturgiss, E. E. Sollars, W. A. Smith, R. A. Ravenscroft, Owen Treacy, C. E. Ellithorp, C. E. Hilleary, E. H. Sincell, D. M. Dixon.

First National of Friendsville—L. E. Friend, president; John W. McCullough, vice president; R. C. McCandlish, cashier; directors, L. E. Friend, J. W. McCullough, W. W. Savage, D. S. Custer, H. M. Rumbaugh, W. H. H. Friend, H. R. DeWitt, R. C. McCandlish.

First National of Kitzmillerville—R. A. Smith, president; C. E. Hilleary, vice president; E. J. Hamill, cashier; directors, R. A. Smith, C. E. Hilleary, R. A. Ravenscroft, F. A. Thayer, E. E. Clark, John M. Davis, A. C. Smith, C. M. Wilson, Dr. H. P. Copeland, Wade Sapp, L. C. Bray, L. C. Hamill, W. G. Drinkwater, S. F. Bender, J. F. Bishop.

First National of Grantsville—C. H. Jennings, president; U. M. Stanton, vice president; J. O. Getty, cashier; directors, C. H. Jennings, G. C. Keller, W. A. Hitchens, U. M. Stanton, Eli Stanton, Frank Watts, J. O. Getty.

These banks are all prosperous and the gentlemen having their management in charge are sterling business men, progressive and are zealous in safeguarding the interests of the depositors generally.

Church Services.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Preaching at Pleasant Valley next Sunday at 3 p. m.; and Loch Lynn at 7 p. m.; and Lyndale at 10:30 a. m.

Cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Deer Park at 11 a. m.; Loch Lynn at 3 p. m. and at Ferndale at 7 p. m. Sunday School at Ferndale every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Prayer meeting every Thursday night.

Everybody invited to be be present.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Class meeting, at Mt. Lake Park at 10 a. m.; Preaching at 11 a. m.; Sunday school, 2.30; Junior League, 3.30; Epworth League, 6.30.

Revival services begin at Deer Park tonight, preaching every night this week. All are cordial invited to attend.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

Preparatory service, receptions of new members and communion at 10:30 a. m.

Catechise Saturday at 2 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

Preaching at Crellin Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

Prices of Beef Reduced.

To the People of Oakland and Vicinity:

Western Beef has not fallen in price, but Garrett county beef has, which I will sell at the prices following:

Porterhouse Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Tenderloin Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Round Steak, 10 to 12 cents; Roast, 7 to 10 cents; Boiling Beef, 5 to 7 cents. A poor man's dollar looks as big to me as a rich man's. If your are too poor to buy I will give it to you.

Yours to stay,
H. CREUTZTURG,
Meat Dealer and Grocer.

TRACK MEN CUT DOWN TO A PITTANCE.

Orders From B. & O. Headquarters Working Hardship With Employes.

A recent order from the headquarters of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, effective on last Saturday, placed the trackmen employed by that road on an eight-hour schedule and reduced their time to a miximum about seventeen days a month, which will net the men less than $20 each per month, with the exception of the foreman and trackwalkers, who will make straight time.

The men are complaining bitterly of the treatment accorded them by their employers, but they are unable to better their condition at this season of the year.

THE DEATH RECORD.

JOHN JOHNS.

Died, on Monday, at the residence of his son in Massillon, Ohio, after a brief illness, John Johns, aged nearly seventy-five years. Mr. Johns was well and quite favorably known by nearly every resident of this section of Garrett county, first having been a farmer near Oakland, but in recent years a resident of Mountain Lake Park where he conducted a summer boarding house, spending his winters, with his wife, with their sons and daughters in Brooklyn, N. Y., Cleveland and Massillon, Ohio, to which latter place Mr and Mrs. Johns went early in the fall. Mr. Johns was born in England, and came to this country many years ago and settled in Frostburg, where he reared a large family of interesting and intelligent sons and daughters, later coming to Garrett county. He was a member of the Mountain Lake Park M. E. church and also of the Grand Army of the Republic, having been engaged on the Union side in the War of the Rebellion. He was a thorough Christion gentlemen. His funeral will occur in Massillon today.

JOSEPH WARNICK.

One of the best known residents of Garrett county was laid at rest in the family cemetery at Elbow, Tuesday afternoon. Joseph Warnick, popularly known ns "Elbow Joe" was found dead in bed last Sunday morning. He was 86 years of age and had resided all his life within four miles of where he was born. His wife died about eight years ago and he is survived by four sons: John, David, Walter and Samuel—the latter blind. He leaves a small regiment of grand and greatgrand children. There are two daughters living: Mrs. Gustavus Custer, whose husband was killed several years ago while logging. Another married daughter resides in West Virginia. Two of Mr. Warnick's brothers went into the Union Army but Joseph's sympathies were with the South. One of his brothers, William, died in Barton a few months ago. The other brother, James, died on the home farm several years ago.

Deceased was a wagoner on the old national pike, in his young days, and later cleared a hundred acres of land at Elbow, and became a prosperous farmer. For many years his residence has been the polling place for the voters of election district No. 11.

Mr. Warnick was a good citizen. He lived a peaceful, useful life, and died as he had lived. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. John Greene, a neighbor of the deceased.

ROBERT CARROLL.

News has reached here today of the death of Conductor Robert Carroll, who passed away at his home in Cumberland last night after a very short illness. Capt. Carroll ran through here on train 55, west, and 12, east, for many years and he had a large circle of acquaintances who were deeply grieved to learn of his very sudden death. He went through here Saturday evening on train No. 12, east bound, and when he arrived at his home in Cumberland he was feeling ill and after going to bed he rapidly developed pneumonia which resulted in his death. Capt. Carroll was a man of about 50 years of age and was well known in this city as well as at other points along the line of his run. The funeral has not yet been announced.

SHORT RUN.

As I have not seen any items from our little village for awhile, will pen a few.

The farmers are busy hauling their hay, coal, mine timbers, etc.

Mr. James Wilson was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Zock Moon, a few days last week.

Mr. Geo. Harvey was a pleasant caller at Mr. Wallace Junkin's Sunday.

Miss Jane Wilson returned home Saturday from a week's visit in Keyser.

Mrs. Hetty Harvey of Ryans Glade, was visiting Messrs. David and James Wilson Sunday.

We are sorry to note that business around here is very dull. The coal mines run only about two days a week.

Mr. John Moore is working for the Dodson Coal company now.

Ex-Judge Dan Wilson was in Oakland Monday.

We are glad to say Milo Wilson is getting along nicely with his poultry business. He has recently enlarged his chicken house. It certainly is a fine place for preachers to stop.

Our Grange is progressing nicely. We meet twice a month.

Mr. Bert Wilson is home for the winter. He has purchased a new sleigh and expects to show some of our Short Run beauties that he is game.

Milo and Tom are still running the race, with Bert in the lead.

Appreciation.

We wish to make public acknowledgment of the tokens of kindness, respect and esteem manifested by the members of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church toward their pastor and family on Christmas eve. We thank you, kind friends, for the gifts of money, groceries, vegetables, meats and for the fine large turkey from P. Lohr, Esq., of Deer Park. Again, we say, thank you.

E. MANGES AND FAMILY.

MINISTER OF THE GOSPEL FELL FROM HIGH CALLING

Rev. E. J. Preston, Formerly Of West Va., Recently Of The Park.

The following story regarding the actions of a minister of the gospel who is well known at Mt. Lake Park, where he conducted the Allegany House last summer, appeared Monday morning in the Clarksburg Daily News:

The old saying that "the devil like the poor is always with us" has again been proven true by a report which comes from Enterprise. A minister of the Southern Methodist church, who preached there and at Glen Falls has gone and with him went considerable money not his. The only thing he left behind is some very bad debts and his creditors would enjoy the opportunity of having a settlement.

Rev. E. J. Preston last year was on the Boothsville circuit. His churches were Glen Falls, Enterprise, this county; Boothsville, Marion county; and Tappan, Lawler Chapel and Rose Hill, Taylor county. He was a very pleasing and affable man. He made friends among all classes of people and was considered one of the most brilliant ministers of the church. He was well educated and took high ranks in the denomination.

But he fell. He listened to th tempter. He partook of the forbidden fruit. He tasted sin and liked it. Then he wronged his friends and went away, carrying their money under false pretenses. When he arrived upon his new field this patron saint, by his pleasing manner and seeming devotion to the cause of christianity, soon won the hearts of his people. They trusted him and believed he was a man who was deeply interested in their spiritual welfare.

After he had thoroughly intrenched himself he began his crooked work. At Enterprise he represented to Mrs. Sturm, widow, and John Hardesty that he needed money to purchase a home at Mt. Lake Park; that he decided not to accept work for 1908, but would purchase this home and spend the year writing books on christianity. Mrs. Sturm, the report goes, loaned him $1,200, believing that only a short time would elapse until he would pay the debt. John Hardesty made him a loan of $600 and James Lawlis became his suretv.

Not satisfied with these loans he went do Tappan to further prosecute his work. He approached Rev. W. W. Janes of that church and secured his endorsement on a note of $100 given to Nathan McDonald, of near Bridgeport. In negotiating this loan he told a pitiful story of his father losing much valuable property during the Civil war and to present the matter to the government he needed another $100. After securing these loans he notified his churches that he would not accept a charge this year, but would devote his time to writing books. At the expiration of the year he left and his whereabouts were unknown for several weeks. His creditors became uneasy and began an investigation. Finally he was located in New York city preaching for another denomination. Whether or not any efforts will be made to bring him to justice is unknown so far, but it is believed that some action will be taken. This affair is deeply regretted by the church at large, as everybody had implicit confidence in the impostor.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Allegany County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles E. A. Reichelt, late of Allegany County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof dully authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 6th day of June, 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1907.

MARY A. HETZ,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

ORDER NISI.

J. B. Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure vs Jacob Fazenbaker.

No. 1502 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Marpland.

Ordered this 8th day of January, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by J. B. Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 6th day of February, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three sucessive weeks before the 31st day of January, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $100.

E. Z TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

WHAT THE NEW GOVERNOR WOULD DO.

Extract From Governor Crothers Inaugural Address.

The evil of bribery in its various forms at elections are in my judgment, the most serious with which we have to deal. No effort should be spared to stamp out this species of corruption. Let us cut this evil practice up by the very roots and cast it out wholly and forever from our Commonwealth, so that our elections shall be unblemished and pure. To accomplish this, I respectfully urge upon the members of the General Assembly with all the earnestness in my power the enactment of the effective anti-bribery and corrupt-practices legislation which experience and reflection have developed up to the present time.

The sentiment and demand which exist throughout the State for honest and fair primary elections . . . can no longer and ought not to be ignored, and . . . I assume that none of us can fail to feel it to be his bounden duty to co-operate in the enactment of a primary election law for the whole State, which shall provide that aspirants for elective offices shall have the right to submit their respective candidacies to the direct vote of the people, and which shall provide that candidates for the United States Senate may submit their claim to the people of the State at primary elections, and that all such elections shall be surrounded by every legal safeguard which can contribute to make them thoroughly free, fair, honest and trustworthy.

Let us execute unflinching the purpose of the Democratic pledge by all lawful and constitutional means to maintain the political supremacy of the white race in Maryland. . . . Let it be carried firmly and fearlessly into effect, so our State may be rid of the negro voter as a political factor and an element of power within our borders. . . . It is my confident belief that if an amendment is framed as proposed, in accordance with the terms of our pledge as above indicated, it will be triumphantly approved by an overwhelming majority of our people at the polls.

The provision that a slight extension of the cross-mark beyond the side of the square upon the ballot shall invalidate the ballot should be modified so as to prevent the rejection of ballots in the count to the extent which has existed in the recent elections. In Baltimore city better conveniences should be provided for marking the ballot than now exist and other modifications indicated as desirable by public opinion through the enlightened press of the State might be safely made at this juncture.

I shall heartily approve of an amendment to the State Constitution providing for a conservative, yet substantial, increase in the number of Senators and Delegates for Baltimore city in the respective branches of the General Assembly.

I am also earnestly in accord with the opinion expressed by the Democracy in its recent platform, that the fullest opportunity should be given for putting the oyster-culture law of 1906 into complete, practical operation, and that there should be no attempt of any sort to destroy or weaken its efficiency.

I reassert here and now these purposes,and, as the first and most important step in their accomplishment, a system of good roads, ramifying uniformly through every section of the State, should be established. We should take this up as a prime object of our policy and we should consummate it as thoroughly and expeditiously as possible. The Court of Appeals of the State has decided that such a work is constitutionally feasibly, and that the State may pledge its credit to effect it. . . . There is no reason why the State, which is now out of debt, should not issue bonds to defray the immediate expenses of such a scheme of public improvements. This has been done in other States with the most beneficial and satisfactory results. . . . The issuance of such bonds would not really impose any substantial burden of taxation upon the people, because the improvement themselves, traversing every part of the State, would so enhance the value of property that there would practically be no additional burden by way of taxes upon anybody

BLOOMINGTON.

A farewell social and stag banquet was tendered Mr. Malcolm McFarlane, by his friends and acquaintances at Barnum, on last Tuesday night on the eve of his departure for Shenoa, Ky., where he goes to take charge of extensive mining interests located in that vicinity. Mr. Fred B. Hartman was toast mater, while Mr. Casper Kight presided over the menu and saw that the courses followed in regular order. Blue ribbon was the color and the decorations were fine and handsome. Smoke from Havana heavily laden with delicious fragrance was turned loose on the crowd of merry makers and added to their enjoyment.

Dr. Brown Kalbaugh, a young and prominent Medico of Caps, has opened up offices for the practice of his profession at Blaine, W. Va.

During the absence of Miss Florence Howard, assistant teacher of the Bloomington school, who was unavoidly detained at her home in Winchester a few days beyond the allotted time allowed for Christmas vacation, Miss Pearl Wolf was detailed as substitute teacher.

Mr. Daniel Moran, an employe of the Mastellar Coal Company, and Miss Mary Hileman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Hileman, of Barnum, were married at the residence of the officiating minister. Rev. A. L. Cook at Barnum last Saturday night.

Work at the mines in this vicinity and up the W. M. R. R. has about turned turtle.

Roosevelt's Guide In Louisiana.

(Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's Magazine)

The morning after we reached camp we were joined by "Ben" Lilley, the hunter, a spare, full-bearded man, with mild, gentle blue eyes and a frame of steel and whipcord. I never met any other man so indifferent to fatigue and hardship. He equaled Cooper's Deerslayer in woodcraft, in hardihood, in simplicity—and also in loquacity. The morning he joined us in camp, he had come on foot through the thick woods, followed by his two dogs, and had neither eaten nor drunk for 24 hours; for he did not like to drink the swamp water. It had rained hard throughout the night and he had no shelter, no rubber coat, nothing but the clothes he was wearing, and the ground was too wet for him to lie on; so he perched in a crooked tree in the beating rain, much as if he had been a wild turkey. But he was not in the least tired when he struck camp; and though he slept an hour after breakfast, it was chiefly because he had nothing else to do, inasmuch as it was Sunday on which day he never hunted nor labored. He could run through the woods like a buck, was far more enduring, and quite as indifferent to weather, though he was over 50 years old. He had trapped and hunted throughout almost all the half century of his life, and on trail of game he was as sure as his own hounds. His observations on wild creatures were singularly closed and accurate. He was particularly fond of the chase of the bear, which he followed by himself, with one or two dogs; often he would be on the trail of his quarry for days at a time, lying down to sleep wherever night overtook him; and he had killed over 120 bears.

The finest Coffee Substitute ever made has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. You don't have to boil it twenty or thirty minutes. "Made in a minute," says the doctor. "Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee Imitation is made from pure toasted cereals or grains, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—were he to unknowingly drink it for Coffee. Sold by all dealers.

GERMAN M. O. THEORY

Public Utilities Operated by Cities Must Pay Their Way.

They Don't Always Do This However Because Not Enough Is Charged Off to Depreciation and the Plants Don't Have to Pay Taxes—"Undertakings" Limited to Localities Where the Patronage Will Be Large.

In theory public utilities operated by German cities must pay their own way. This theory is not, however, fully borne out in practice, because the allowance for depreciation is frequently inadequate, and the plants are not required to make good the taxes formerly paid by the companies they superseded. But the effort to put these services on a paying basis has resulted in limiting the various undertakings to districts where they are sure to pay. On the other hand, when these utilities are operated by companies the same restrictive results are noticed, because almost without exception the franchises are so weighted down with provisions for payments to the city and are at the same time of such short duration that the companies would not be warranted in extending the service beyond the districts in which they are sure to pay at once.

Professor Hugo R. Meyer in recent articles in the Electrical Railway Review and the Journal of Political Economy describes the results of this restrictive policy on street railways and electric lighting, and the following facts are taken from his articles:

The cities that went into the street railway business adopted a uniform fare of 2.5 cents, but with two exceptions abandoned this after short trials. The experience of two typical German cities will prove of interest as showing what high rates are charged when cities attempt to operate utilities on a paying basis.

When the city of Cologne took over the street railways the fares charged were 2.5 cents for distances up to 1.5 miles and 3.75 cents for the maximum distance, 6.9 miles. After operating them awhile the city authorities raised the fare materially while extending slightly the minimum stage. The present charges are 2.5 cents for 1.9 miles, 3.75 cents for 3.75 miles, 5 cents for 5.63 miles and 6.25 cents for distances over 5.63 miles.

The city of Dusseldorf, which acquired its street railways in 1900, attempted to operate them at the uniform fare of 2.5 cents, which had been charged by the street railway company, but soon found that it was losing money and limited the 2.5 cent fare to 2.44 miles, charging 3.75 cents for distances between that and 4.25 miles. After increasing the track mileage the city again raised the fare considerably, reducing the minimum stage. The prices now charged are 2.5 cents for 1.56 miles, 3.75 cents for 3.19 miles, 5 cents for 4 miles, 6.25 cents for 4.75 miles, 7.5 cents for 6.38 miles, 8.75 cents for 7.19 miles and 10 cents for 7.94 miles.

It should be borne in mind that these prices are really very much higher than corresponding rates would be in this country, because wages in Germany are much lower than in the United States. The exorbitance of these charges is shown by the fact that in Minneapolis, a city of the same size as Dusseldorf, a passenger can ride thirteen miles for 5 cents, while in Buffalo, which has a population about equal to that of Cologne, the passenger gets fourteen miles for a nickel.

The desire of the cities to make all possible profits out of franchises and to limit them to short terms has resulted in greatly delaying the development of public electric lighting, although the people were anxious to have the new lights installed. This is shown by the fact that in 1894-95 there were in operation in factories, stores, etc., more than 4,776 private electric light plants, although two years later there were only a little more than 300 central electric lighting stations in the whole of Germany. As the private or isolated plant, as it is called in this country, is far less economical than the central station, this restrictive action of the German cities has thrown a great burden of cost on its progressive citizens. The situation is the more remarkable because at the time of the introduction of electricity for lighting and traction purposes Germany was far better equipped to perfect and develop these systems than was the United States, yet it has been completely outstripped by our own country, chiefly if not solely because here private enterprise has been given a comparatively free hand.

In closing one of his articles Professor Meyer says:

"The unwillingness of the cities to suffer financial losses on behalf of the congested city populations after those cities had denied those congested populations relief at the hands of profit seeking companies is in instructive contrast to the eloquence with which the advocates of purchase by the cities had denounced the dividend seeking companies."

Purchased Current More Economical.

An electric light plant was installed at Santa Clara, Cal., in 1896 at a cost of $15,000. The generating plant has been shut down, as, according to the president of the board of trustees, it was found to be more economical to purchase the current.

Tipton's Unprofitable Plant.

The municipal lighting plant of Tipton, Ia., proved unsuccessful. When it burned down, causing a heavy loss, it was not rebuilt, and a contract was made with a private company.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

Death Losses of Civil War Compared with Those of Other Wars.

The titanic nature of the struggle between the states from 1861 to 1865 is slowly dawning upon the world. In the annals of warfare it was the most deadly conflict ever known.

Self-preservation, the first law of nature, compelled the north to put forth its strength to the limit of possibilities, while the south once committed to the dream of successful rebellion, fought with the mad courage of desperate resolve.

For four years the warfare was unceasing. The northern soldiers suffered severely from the southern climate and the diseases engendered in an unaccustomed way of life as well, while the killed and wounded numbered, in the union army alone, 385,245. Of these, 109,893 were killed outright on the field of battle; 199,720 died from diseases while the war was going on. A death roll of 319,613.

Comparing the two great battles, Waterloo and Gettysburg, a military writer draws attention to the fact that, while the same number of men were on the field in these battles, 152,000 all told, the losses at Gettysburg exceeded the losses at Waterloo, considering the casualties to the troops actually engaged. At Waterloo the losses were 49,485, and at Gettysburg 50,528. It is remembered that 14,000 men (the Sixth corps) were not engaged at Gettysburg except for a short time, early on the morning of July 2. This runs up the percentage of losses in the American battle, considering the number of men engaged.

Throughout the civil war the loss of life on both sides was frightful, writes Ada C. Sweet, in Chicago Journal. Looked at even now, after the lapse of years, the record is dreadful to contemplate. In the union army there were 75 regiments whose losses ran from 50 to 85 per cent.

The First Minnesota went into action at Gettysburg with 262 officers and men. It lost 224 killed and wounded. The Twentieth Massachusetts, at Fredericksburg, lost over 68 per cent. of its membership, and came out of the fight commanded by a captain who was, in years, a mere boy.

Pickett, the confederate general, led 5,000 brave men in his great charge at Gettysburg, and in 30 minutes lost in killed, wounded and prisoners, 3,000.

The bloodiest battle of the civil war was Antietam, and the losses were the most appalling in a short space of time unless we except Cold Harbor, where the union forces lost 4,000 men in eight minutes.

When we see the veterans in their parades, or engaged in their work along the ordinary ways of life, distinguished only by the bronze buttons that some of them wear, we do not realize what these men have gone through.

We have all been taught to respect and honor them, but it is only when we look at the records of death and devotion which are written in the books of the nation, but left, for the most part unread, that we realize what it meant to be one of Uncle Sam's soldiers in the years from 1861 to 1865.

It is well to take thought, occasionally, of all the sacrifices that were made that the country might live and that we might exist in peace and prosperity, a free people upon the face of the earth.

THE ARMY MULE.

His Faithful Services Should Call Forth Feeling of Gratitude.

"The thought of the service the mule rendered in' the civil war ought to endear him to every lover of our country. The great-hearted Lincoln understood his value. (A good mule was worth $400 then) and the good president asked, when told of the fearful slaughter at Antietam: 'How many mules were lost? We can get more men, but the mules' places can't be supplied.'

"All honor to the mule, 'for the sake of his noble qualities, for the sake of this glorious country which he helped to save, for the sake of the 4,000,000 slaves whose shackles he helped to kick loose, and that have since been melted into plowshares that he has patiently drawn all over the south, pulling along with him the black man holding to the handles behind—for all these and other reasons let the mule stand as our national emblem in place of the discredited and predatory eagle. And perish the man who shall attempt to pull him down—as he certainly will unless he stands afar off.'

"The immortal Garfield once said: 'I never meet a boy in the street without feeling like lifting my hat to him, so great are the wonderful possibilities wrapped up under his ragged coat.'

"In common with millions of others, I feel the same way about the mule. I never meet one in the road or pasture without raising my hat—if I don't he'll raise it for me, so great are the possibilities tied up in his wonderfully constructed hind legs."

Unconscious Labor.

"Did you ever notice these people who work their faces every sort of way when they are cutting a piece of meat?" he asked. "Now just look across there at the man at that table there."

"Yes," said she, as she looked across, "but they are not a patching to the old women who open and shut their mouths as they cut something or other with their long scissors."

Attributes of a Good Critic.

A wise skepticism is the first attribute of a good critic.—Lowell.

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD

FOUNDER OF THE BARACAS.

What Has Come of the Initial Work of Marshall A. Hudson.

In 1890, Mr. Marshall A. Hudson, a business man of Syracuse, saw a big opportunity and a heavy responsibility, and started a young man's Baraca Bible class. He felt that the love and enthusiasm of young men was being lost to the church and that by organizing them into a class in which they would have a feeling of proprietorship, he could best win them to Christ and the church. He has seen the Divine approval in the conversion in that first class of 250 young men of whom 200 have joined the church. It was not originally intended, he says, as a world-wide Baraca; but God meant it so. Many evangelical denominations are now forming these classes and the world-wide Baraca, as the National Union is called, is now found in every section of the United States and Canada. Over 200,000 members are enrolled, and Mr. Hudson, the busy merchant, is president without salary or worldly reward.

MARSHALL A. HUDSON.

Young men wish to do things. They do not care so much to have things done for them, as to do for some one else. The Baraca idea originated with Mr. Hudson and 18 young men of his city to help other young men into the higher life. They elected their own officers and teachers, and in the by-laws adopted appears the following sentiment, which has been adopted as the platform of the National Union: "Young men at work for young men: all standing by the Bible and the Bible school." With the Bible as its book, the class makes the Sabbath school hour its rallying time, and all the work radiates from this center. The full control of the class is in the hands of the members, under the sanction of the superintendent. They elect a president, secretary and treasurer, and appoint committees for looking up new members, visiting the sick and finding employment for the idle.

Third Year Added to Bible School.

The Bible Teachers' Training school, New York city, of which Dr. Wilbert W. White is president and guiding spirit, has enlarged its curriculum to include a third year of study, which will be designated as the graduate year. With no less emphasis on the English Bible, opportunity will henceforth be given for very thorough study in the original languages of the Scriptures. Dr. James Wallace, formerly president of Macalester college, has been made a permanent member of the faculty, and will offer courses in Greek language and exegesis, and Dr. R. W. Rogers, of Drew Theological seminary, will present Hebrew language and exegesis.

New Method in Philippines.

Some interesting new methods and agencies are noticed in the Baptist Missionary Magazine as having been introduced into the missionary church at Sinwangan, Philippine islands. A church society has been formed to receive contributions of rice which will be kept to serve as a reserve fund for members in need. When misfortune befalls a member he may, on approval by the trustees, draw upon it to repay on easy terms of interest when his trouble is over. The privilege of this borrowing is to be extended to other churches.

Keeping Track of Members.

The Protestant pastors in several large cities have recently sent out a general request that clergymen in other towns report the names and addresses of members of churches coming to these cities, leaving their own home church, to a given Christian agency in the new place of residence, so that the wanderers may be looked up and invited into a church home of their own denomination. Among these cities are Washington, D. C., Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Denver and El Paso.

Brotherhood Among Baptist Men.

A specially interesting and promising meeting in connection with the Baptist anniversaries at Washington was a gathering called to consider the organization of a Baptist brotherhood. The plan submitted for the consideration of the meeting was identical with the plan on which the movement is proceeding in the Presbyterian church—the federation of all forms of existing men's work and the stimulation of new work according to local needs with no general model imposed upon the churches.

Big Victory in Texas.

Moral reform has won a remarkable victory in Texas. Gambling is now a felony in that state. Convicted gamblers go to the penitentiary; the owners of the buildings where gambling goes on are liable to 30 days' imprisonment.

Laymen's Conference.

At the Laymen's Union conference, held at North Adams, Mass., July 19 and 20, some of the topics emphasized were "General Missions," "Work by Laymen," "The Children," and "The Immigrant."

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneezing stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 5... Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,

Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.

Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.

Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

Office in Garrett National Bank Building

Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; 825).

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907. Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SYLVESTER, Pres't.
College Park Md.

22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, seven other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others."

J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1908. NUMBER 46

DANIEL ANNAN, President

W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Vice President

D. F. KUYKENDALL, Cashier

No. 1519.

The SECOND NATIONAL BANK

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND.

United States Depository — State Depository.

CAPITAL $100,000 — SURPLUS $300,000.

Statement of the Second National Bank, Cumberland,

As Submitted to its Stockholders at its Annual Meeting Held At its Banking House on the Fourteenth Day of January, 1908:

Capital Stock	$ 100,000.00	Loans	$1,342,159.06
Surplus	300,000.00	U. S. and other Bonds	817,455.76
Circulation	99,150.00	Banking House and Real Estate	51,500.00
Profit and Loss	33,812.35	Cash on hand and in Banks	494,462.55
Deposits	2,177,615.02	Redemption Fund	5,000.00
	$2,710,577.37		$2,710,577.37

We, the undersigned Directors of the Second National Bank, of Cumberland, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the condition of the Bank, as shown by its books January 8th, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN, President of Second National Bank.
L. M. SHEPHERD, President Cumberland Dry Goods & Notion Co.
O. C. GEPHART, Retired Capitalist
ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Associate Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.
LLOYD LOWNDES, Lawyer, Banker, Farmer.
VAN LEAR BLACK, Director of the Consolidation Coal Co., the Potomac Coal Co.
W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Gen. Mgr. Union Mining Co., Prest. First National Bank of Mt. Savage.

This bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits. The Most Liberal Terms Granted Consistent With Safe Banking. Safe Deposit Vaults and Storage for the Benefit of Our Customers.

DIXON & KELSO

In taking our inventory we find that we have too much money invested in Overcoats, and in order to reduce this stock, we are going to give you some exceptionally low prices, as follows:

Men's Rain Coats in Black, Grey and Grey Stripes, worth $12.00 to $15.00, Your Choice $8.99.

Men's Fine Broadcloth Overcoats, in Black and Blue, worth $12.50, now $8.99

Men's Black and Grey Mixture Overcoats that sold for $9.00, now $7.25.

Men's Overcoats, in all colors, that you always pay $8.00 for, now $5.49.

Men's Black Cloth Dress Coat, Extra Bargains, was $6.50, oow only $4.49.

Youths' Overcoats from $2.25 to $4.49, reduced to $.99 and $3.25.

A few Ladies' Coats left that we will sell at your price.

Wishing one and all a Happy 1908.

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Tuesday at Midnight John Collins' "Mansion" Burned.

Shortly after midnight Tuesday the fire whistle at the electric lighting plant sounded an alarm, and judging by the incessant blowing, one would have supposed that a fire of more than ordinary magnitude had broken out. The effect of the alarm, however, brought every able bodied man and a large number of ladies to the streets and the site of the fire, it being an old one and a-half story dwelling on Lower Oak street, adjacent to the Little Yough, and occupied by John Collins as a place of abode.

The fire had evidently been of an incendiary origin, indications pointing to the fact that it had its inception on the outer portion of the building. The fire had gained considerable headway when the chemical engine arrived and no effort was made to subdue the flames, the work of the firemen being directed toward saving adjacent structures.

The building was owned by Mr. Gilmor S. Hamfil and was insured.

FIKE.

The snow at this writing is two feet deep, and the drifts are very bad.

Mr. I. M. Umbel has been sick for the last week. We hope that he will soon be well and able to be out.

Mr. F. J. Bowser last week made his first shipment of furs for this season.

Mr. Lucian Frazee, of Frazee Ridge, was seen taking a lot of poultry to market one day last week.

Mr. J. A. Fike, was a caller on L. C. Fike's one day last week.

Miss Mary Frazee was visiting at F. T. and W. L. Umbel's last week.

CARTER.

Subscribe for The Republican.

MAIL POUCH CUT TO PIECES.

Patrons of Mt. Lake Park Office Without Their Mail Friday Morning.

The letter pouch on train No. 3 last Friday morning intended for the Mountain Lake Park postoffice was cut to pieces by the wheels of that train and the contents of the bag scattered along the track from the Park to Oakland, as was discovered by the station master at Oakland after the train had pulled out of the station here and the remains of the pouch found lying between the rails in front of the depot.

It is presumed that the pouch was thrown from the moving train at the Park but that it struck some obstruction and bounced back under the wheels, catching in the brake rigging of one of the cars after having been run over, and remained in that position until the station here was reached when it dropped to the ground.

We have been unable to learn whether or not the pouch contained anything of value.

Would Be State Fish Commisioner.

Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, has filed with Goverror Crothers his application for the position of State Fish Commissioner, which office is an appointive one by the Governor.

Mr. John L. Casey, of Garrett, has applied for the position of Mine Inspector.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

— OF —

CLOTHING

I have several hundred suits of Clothing for Men and Boys that I wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE — OAKLAND, MD

TO PURIFY ELECTIONS.

The corrupt practice bill that has been prepared by Attorney General Straus, and has received the approval of Governor Crothers and of other leading Democrats, leaves nothing to be desired in point of thorough-going character. It limits the expenditures of a candidate for any office to $25 for each 100 registered voters qualified to vote for that office. It prescribes that all the campaign expenses of a party be made through regularly appointed treasurers or agents. It defines the objects for which, and for which alone, these treasurers and agents may expend money: those objects are such as hiring halls, advertising meetings, defraying the expenses of public speakers and party committeemen, printing and circulating docnments, etc. It requires "full itemized and detailed statements of all expenditures, receipts, promises and liabilities, etc.," to be sworn to and filed so as to be open to public inspection. It declares any false statement or false entry in the above to be perjury.

In addition to these vital and searching requirements in regard to receipts and expenditures, the bill specifies a long list of acts which are to be punishable as corrupt practices. This part of the bill subjects to heavy penalties the giving or offering or promising of "any money, gift, advantage, preferment, entertainment, aid, emolument or any valuable thing whatever to induce anyone to vote or refrain from voting at any election, primary election or political convention or caucus," and includes others provisions of like nature. and it prohibits in the most positive manner the making of political contributions, directly or indirectly, by any corporation.

The most radical feature of the bill, however, is the reference of all questions of contested elections to the courts, and above all the invalidation of the election on proof of violation of the provisions of the law. This is an essential feature in the English law, and is believed to be the most effective element in its composition. If embodied in the law here, and vigorously sustained by our courts, this power of judicial annulment of elections on the ground of improper campaign practices will evidently be the most effective possible deterrent of that corruption of our politics which habit has caused us so long to tolerate but which ought to be recognized as unendurable.

The only doubt that can be entertained regarding the bill is as to whether, in the light of experience elsewhere, it is the kind of bill which is most likely to be carried into actual practical effect. This is a subject upon which inquiry and discussion will be useful; for it would be folly to act on the assumption that the puttiug of a law on the statue books is an all-sufficient remedy for a long-standing and deep-seated political evil. But the purposes of the bill are admirable, and its provisions clear and thorough-going; and, provided there is practical assurance that the law will be enforced, its enactment would be one of the greatest forward steps that any State in the Union has ever taken.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14, 1908.—The tactics of some of the friends of Senator Foraker are greatly deplored by his friends in Washington, as well as by all Republicans. Their latest manoeuver is the circulation of the report, chiefly among Masonic orders, and that includes a large per cent of the politicans of the country, Democrats as well as Republicans, that Mrs. Taft is a Catholic. Mrs. Taft nor her family has ever had any affiliation with the Catholic church. She is an Episcopalian as everybody known, and the Secretary is an Unitarian. The inference from the circulation of this falsehood is obvious that the friends of the Senator feel obliged to resort to any measure, however, pusillanimous, to boost their candidate for the Presidency.

Comments were heard on every hand among Republicans upon the recent developments in New York in connection with the Hughes boom. The two events of interest were the appointment of a committee of the Republican Club of New York city, comprising some of the best known members of that organization, to push the Hughes boom; and the Governor's message to the Legislature. It is declared that the first practical effort of the committee will be to induce the Republican County Committee at its meeting January 16, to put through the resolution endorsing Gov. Hughes proposed at the last meeting but which went over.

Much dissappointment was expressed over the Governor's message to the Legislature. The natural expectation had been that he would have something to say about some at least of the many national questions which are absorbing the minds of the country, and there was much criticism heard on every hand that he should have confined himself so exclusively to State affairs.

There has been a deal of speculation in political circles recently as to the possibility of a combination of which Hughes might take the Vice-Presidency, with Secretary Taft at the head of the ticket. This would be a great thing for Hughes who is only a tyro in national politics, it is pointed out by some. Other politicians, however, claim that this arrangement would have the question unsettled of "who's who" in New York politics, as either Roosevelt or Hughes will have to be supreme in the State. This is not a question among the politicians who have access to the innercircle however.

As was predicted in these letters weeks ago, the financial relief bill, the greatest necessity for which is admitted by both parties in the two branches of the national legislature, will orginate in the Senate. Senators Aldrich of Rhode Island, Allison, of Iowa, and Hale, of Maine, the big three of the Senate finance committee and the leaders o he Senate have been intrusted with the task of preparing a financial bill designed to prevent a recurrence of national money disturbances of the nature of the recent stringency, and already good progress has been made. The general plan has been mapped out, but of course there are yet many essential details to be decided upon. None of the senators named will discuss the pending bill for publication, but one of them said recently that the main idea followed in framing the relief legislation would be to provide for some emergency relief in which the people as a whole would have confidence and could resort to where then was any necessity.

It is not anticipated that there will be much opposition to the bill when it comes over from the Senate. Of course there will be some to whatever measure may be presented, but such opposition will be taken care of by the operation of the committee on rules.

Political Methods in Japan.

Lafcadio Hearn through his wife and a few pupils had access to the intimacies and courtesies, the customs and legends and superstitions of the past, which made his happiness. But the necessities of his livelihood brought him into contact with a colder world of polite, practical persons, whose habits of mind jarred at every point on his more wayward and emotional spirit. Writing on behalf of a western friend, whom he considered to have been harshly treated by oriental employers, he said bitterly: "Japanese officialdom is not lovable, and it is oriental when unpleasant. It does not say, 'Here, if you don't like things, get out; here's your salary!' On the contrary, it suddenly becames coaxing, caressing, infinitely sweet, and invites you out for multitudinous insult. Then you are suddenly surrounded by smiling combinations unimagined and unimaginable and softly struck in a hundred ways. A knockdown blow is nothing to it. I pity a man of letters in the government service in Tokyo."—Craftsman.

THE REPUBLICAN CALENDAR

FOR 1908.

JANUARY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30	31

FEBRUARY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
						1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29

MARCH.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30	31

APRIL.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30

MAY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
					1	2
3	4	5	6	7	8	9
10	11	12	13	14	15	16
17	18	19	20	21	22	23
24	25	26	27	28	29	30
31

JUNE.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
	1	2	3	4	5	6
7	8	9	10	11	12	13
14	15	16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25	26	27
28	29	30

JULY.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30	31

AUGUST.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
						1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31

SEPTEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
		1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30

OCTOBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31

NOVEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30

DECEMBER.

Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.
		1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	31

AUSTRALIA.

Gray and Monotonous, But Vast, Patient and Fascinating.

Australia is in itself a monstrous continent. It is as large as the United States; its 4,000,000 of people are scattered in a narrow fringe along the streams and shores of the southern and eastern seaboard. The vast interior—"the dead heart of Australia"—a region as large as the Mississippi valley, is a trackless, rainless waste of sand and alkali, while the intervening hills, the bush and scrub, are scantily occupied by sheep stations and by mining camps. The vast north of Australia is in part a tropical jungle, in part a blistering Sahara. The fates denied to Australia the gift of high mountains to catch the snow and hold the water; hence her rivers are few and precarious; hence at too frequent intervals the great drought comes, and the desert spreads its smothering arms crowding man and his dependents backward toward the sea. It is a monotonous country in its physical aspects. The forests on hill, valley, rock and swamp are all of one pattern—eucalyptus, eucalyptus, the gray trunks of the gum trees of many species—as far as the eye can see. Without mountains and streams there is little room for variety. It is monotonous in its industries—cattle, sheep, horses—its one fine art the breeding of the perfect Merino sheep. It is monotonous in its towns. One story, light brown with unpainted roof of corrugated iron is the description of nine-tenths of the Australian homes. Corrugated iron means clean rain water, and Australia can afford to waste none of it. It is monotonous as to population. The Englishmen came first to Australia, and they are still holding it against all comers. The way is made rough for immigrants who do not speak English and for well or ill—in many ways for each —the ruling minority, the labor vote, is sternly set on "white Australia," with all which it implies. The history of Australia is monotonous. It contains the story of hard struggles of bitter sufferings, deserved and undeserved; of lawless courage and reckless bravery, but the causes served were individual. Australians never had a common enemy, and their records show no glorious war and no uprising of common feeling. The achievements of Australia belongs to the category of individual deeds of peace.

With all this the color of Australia is gray; the land, the towns, the spirit of her people. Her literature has a sober touch, and this difference in tone shows itself in its way in the life of the universities. In America, as in Browning's verse, "the flower of life is red." The American student knows that "the world is his oyster." He knows that "he can get what is coming to him;" that in proportion to his talents, his training, his sobriety and persistency of purpose will be his success in any affairs he undertakes.

But though Australia may be gray and monotenous she is vast, patient, fascinating. The mightiness of the land to be conquered, the huge roominess of the continent, the vistas of future national greatness, all these grow on one, and all these find their reflex in the student life and in the rising literature of the commonwealth. That Australia will be the birthplace of great men in the future no one can doubt. Their coming will not be due to the lopsided political administration nor to state ownership nor to the coddling of the laborer, but to the persistence of her fine old English stock under man making and man inspiring conditions.—David Starr Jordan in Appleton's.

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Watch the details.

Don't drive the cows faster than a walk.

Regret follows on the heels of neglect.

It is a fatal mistake to attempt to winter more stock than you can feed comfortably.

Why not have a horse the wife and daughter can drive? It would please them, and you, too.

Keep the boys interested in the farm by making them your junior partners in the farming business.

Cold rains of autumn are more trying on stock than the colder weather of winter. See that they are sheltered in some way.

About the only way to clean a plat of ground of blue joint or bromus is to plow it under, pull out the turf and rake the roots out of the soil.

No danger that you will keep the stables and the dairy room too clean. Be on the alert that the dirt does not creep in on you unawares.

Did poor seed corn spoil your crop for you this year? See that you provide this fall against the possibility of such a sad experience next season.

Turn about is fair play—the horse does work for you you cannot do for yourself, now do the work for him which he cannot do for himself, namely, brush and curry him.

In killing milkweed a thorough job can be done only as the roots are grubbed out. Of course if the shoots are kept cut the roots will die in time, but that is a tedious process.

Of the two ways of blanching celery, namely by earth and by boards, the latter is to be preferred, because the use of the boards keeps the celery cleaner and makes it less liable to be affected by rust or rot, and is ready for use or the market at least two weeks earlier than when earth is used. In both processes the work must be done when the soil and celery plants are perfectly dry, as handling in a moist condition produces rust or rot, or both.

Nineteen trials with separator skim milk, fed in conjunction with cornmeal at the Wisconsin experiment station, show that where not over three pounds of skim milk are fed, with each pound of cornmeal, that 327 pounds skim milk are equal in feeding value to 100 pounds of cornmeal. When feeding one pound of cornmeal with three to five pounds separator skim milk, 416 pounds skim milk saved 100 pounds cornmeal. When feeding as much as seven to nine pounds skim milk with each pound cornmeal it required 552 pounds skim milk to equal 100 pounds cornmeal.

Keep more livestock and produce more manure. Give careful attention to the use of absorbents so that the liquid as well as the solid excrements may be saved. Keep a box of dust in the stable and sprinkle where it will catch the liquids. Cut the straw up small and use it in the same way. Upon many farms there is a large amount of straw which should be turned into manure. Too frequently this is allowed to waste and much fertility is thus lost. It is a crime against agriculture to burn straw, as is so frequently done in many parts of the west. With the burning of the straw a large amount of the fertility which should be added to the land is destroyed.

With reference to dry and wet feeding of poultry, A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says: The beginner is advised to adopt the method he thinks he would prefer or would find more convenient and follow it until he has a good reason for modifying or changing it. Choose the one or the combination of the two most suited to your circumstances. There are various methods of dry feeding, just as there are various methods of feeding rations composed in whole or in part of moistened mashes or cakes. The grains may be fed whole or cracked, or a part ground and mixed together, making what is called a "dry mash." The feed may be kept before the chicks all the time in hoppers or troughs, or a part of it may be scattered in litter to induce them to take exercise. Beginners are usually more successful with dry grain chick feed, for the reason that moistened mashes are thrown down carelessly in considerable quantities and soon become soiled with the droppings and begin to ferment.

It is generally the bad manager that complains of bad luck.

See that the sheep are so fed that they will go into winter quarters in prime condition.

The community which is long on dog is apt to be short on sheep. It is also apt to be short on cash as well.

In breeding your mare find a sire of similar type, for the get from an animal of entirely different type is more than apt to be unsatisfactory.

There's a value on your cow, is there on your wife? Do you seek to make her lot as easy as possible by providing labor saving devices?

Put your heart into your work, and ten chances to one your farm will give you good returns. It's the half-hearted effort which brings failure.

No hoof, no horse, is an old adage. For this reason it is well to look to this part of the animal, and see that it is kept sound and in prime condition.

President Roosevelt hits the nail on the head again when he says: "In the uplift of the tiller of the soil lies the main hope of the uplift of the United States as a nation."

Milk through a sterilized cheese cloth and see how much dirt falls from the udder during milking even after the udder has been carefully washed and dried with a clean cloth.

An excellent borax solution for mosquito bites is made by dissolving one ounce of the borax in one pint of water that has been boiled and allowed to cool. Bathe the bites in the solution.

Better look around and see how many weeds you have been letting draw nourishment from the soil which rightfully belongs to the crops. And remember the weed allowed to go to seed means a multitude of weeds next season.

Before buying commercial fertilizers in large quantities for your farm be sure that you know exactly what your land needs. It is a useless expenditure of money to put on the land plant food which is not needed. Try by experimentation to find just what the soil needs and in just what quantities. Such intelligent fertilization will pay, but haphazard methods will not.

Plenty of money in farming. Are you getting your share of it? If not why not? Ever give the matter thought? Are your farmer methods at fault? Are you worrying along with poor to indifferent live stock? Do you fall down when it comes to marketing your farm products? Study the matter out and then plan to make more money out of the farm another season than you have this.

Here are some facts which are worth thinking about. The damage done by insect and other pests causes losses annually to the American farmer as follows: Forest and forest products, $100,000,000; animal products, $175,000,000; farm forests, $11,000,000; fruits, $27,000,000; truck crops, $33,000,000; grains, $200,000,000; tobacco, $5,300,000; cotton, $60,000,000; hay, $53,000,000; miscellaneous crops, $5,800,000.

Do not pasture your alfalfa field the first season and even the second year it perhaps will be better to mow it rather than to let the cattle tramp over it. But never let it be pastured closely as close pasturing injures the crowns of the plants. Horses and sheep are more likely to do damage in this way than are cattle or hogs. Alfalfa makes excellent pasture for all kinds of live stock and it is especially desirable for hogs during hot weather. With cattle and sheep care must be exercised to avoid bloating. At first the animals should be turned in for only a short time each day, until they become accustomed to it, and when the alfalfa is wet, as after a rain, there is still greater need of care. It is wise to be a little more careful than with clover.

It is reported that the teaching of agriculture in the public schools of Kansas is a decided success. This work is carried on mainly through the medium of lectures delivered by the faculty of the state agricultural college. So popular is this work that J. H. Miller, superintendent of agricultural college extension, proposes to enlarge this work by sending monthly pamphlets to teachers. These will cover all branches of agriculture and domestic economy, and will enable the teachers to supplement effectively the work of the college lecturer. Thus does the work of introducing agriculture into the public schools progress. Ten years ago this was considered an impossibility. Now most of the common schools in the middle west are teaching the elements of agriculture. The first great difficulty was to secure teachers capable of teaching agriculture. Many of them didn't know how, and what was more, didn't want to know. County superintendents took up this problem and found that it was no impossible task to properly instruct teachers. With this difficulty removed, the remainder is comparatively easy. Many mistakes will be made, but on the whole, the sum total of the results from year to year will be satisfactory, and the benefits will become cumulative. It looks now as though this agricultural work will be more fruitful than any ever undertaken.

TARIFF FOR REVENUE ONLY.

Phrase Cannot Be Accepted at Its Face Value.

Senator Hemenway of Indiana is quoted as follows on the subject of next year's campaign:

"For the first time in sixteen years the tariff will be the main issue, in my opinion. The corporation problems have been mostly attended to now, and, unless some big new issue should crop up as the result of the next session of congress, the tariff will be the principal topic on the stump. The Republicans will contend that the tariff should be revised after the inauguration of the next President in the interests of protection and by the friends of protection.

The Democrats will contend that the tariff should be revised with the idea of tariff for revenue only in view. On that issue I have not the slightest doubt that the Republicans will be returned to power. This is a protectionist country."

"A tariff for revenue only," has in times past led to a good deal of discussion. Until 1894 the phrase was accepted at its face value. It meant the levying of no more duties on importations than necessary to carry on the government economically administered. Such was the explanation offered by men of the Carlisle-Morrison, Watterson-Mills school of tariff reformers, who for years had made the land resound with the issue.

But when the Democratic party, with Mr. Cleveland in the white house, was called upon to put the issue into legislative shape it "fell down" with the task distressingly, and to its own loss and humiliation. The Gorman-Wilson measure proved to be anything but "a tariff for revenue only," being stuffed full of duties designed expressly for protection. Even the bill that Mr. Cleveland wanted would have carried a large amount of calculated protection.

As the government must have money for its support—no party would dare put the United States on short commons—much importance attaches to the proposition that the government be "economically administered." Our expenses at present are not what they were in 1884, when Mr. Cleveland was first elected, nor what they were in 1892, when he was the second time elected, on a platform carrying a demand for "a tariff for revenue only." Now, what is economy? If we are spending too much money, where shall retrenchment begin? How, and to what extent, should the pruning knife be applied?

Mr. Hemenway is justified in his statement that this is "a protectionist country." The truth of that will readily appear if the "tariff for revenue only" men take the ground next year that the English of their issue means the challenge of protection to a duel to the death.

A Midsummer Night's Dream.

It is difficult to sufficiently admire the cheerful optimism of the new tariff editor of American Industries. Mr. Miles has got it all settled. The tariff is to be taken out of politics, he says, before the Sixtieth congress assembles on the first Monday in December, a little more than 90 days hence. This is quick work indeed. Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" declared

"I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes."

The Miles midsummer night's night's dream is even swifter and more difficult of realization. Puck's promise has been verified by electricity and a telegraph wire. The Racine (Wis.) Puck will need a larger dose of electricity to help him take the tariff out of politics in 90 days. He will have to kill off some 16,000,000 voters arrayed on one side or the other of the question, "Protection or Free Trade?" and bring into being before the first Monday in December 16,000,000 new voters, including about 500 senators and representatives in congress who have absolutely no views on this question. It will be a great man who can take the tariff out of politics in 90 years. Let alone 90 days.

Tariff Ripping Reasons.

The fact of an $87,000,000 surplus suggests to the New York Tribune the conclusion that "the Dingley schedules have done their work in certain lines and need revision." By a similar process of reasoning the same conclusion might be reached regarding other facts and conditions. The country is more prosperous than ever before; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. Labor is employed to an extent and at a rate of wages hitherto unknown; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. Our foreign trade has been doubled in ten years; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. We have a yearly trade balance of about half a billion dollars, which enables us to keep out of debt to foreign countries; the Dingley schedules have done their work and need revision. In its search for tariff ripping reasons the Tribune ought not to overlook these things.

More, Too.

Considering the fact that in the first month of our new system of making competition easier by the reduction of tariff duties through undervaluation, imports of competitive articles have increased nearly $12,000,000, is there any real necessity for either tariff reduction or reciprocity by act of congress? Is it not a fact that when we were scared into allowing foreigners to appraise their own merchandise we revised and reciprocated about all we can stand? And more, too, it will probably turn out.

Nellie's Lesson

By Vivian Claude

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

She gets up that morning with a dull headache, a miserable sense of heaviness and nervous unrest, common enough, doubtless, to young mothers who have not yet succeeded in adjusting their endurance to the various burdens of life.

She goes out into the pleasant, cozy kitchen; Charley has already built the fire in the range, and has gone on into the large shed room they call his "work-shop," where he is occupying his spare hours in constructing a set of furniture, from original patterns, for a spare bedroom Nellie is planning to arrange.

"Well, he may feel fresh and lively and like working," thinks Nellie, half-sullenly, as she listens to the cheerful, mellow whistle with which he keeps time to the music of his tools. "He slept like a rock all night. I don't suppose he ever guesses how little sleep or rest I got—or cares, either, maybe."

Which last is clearly unjust; and Charley Burt is one of the best husbands in the whole world, as Nellie herself is often heard to say.

She goes mechanically about her morning duties, preparing the breakfast she knows Charley likes best, and putting up a dainty dinner in his neat lunch-basket—for he does not come home till night—all the time hoping against hope that baby will not waken till she gets some of the most needful work done.

The very sunshine fails to cheer her with its brightness.

Breakfast over, he says cheerfully: "Nell, I wish you'd sew a button or two on my coat; I've missed some this day or so."

His tone is the furthest possible from a hint of fault-finding.

She says: "Yes, Charley," very quietly; but lifts the offending garment with a spiteful jerk; and goes into the bedroom to select from their box on her work-table some suitable buttons and the wherewithal to apply them. But just as she turns away with full hands, those wicked buttons escape from her hold, and with the natural perversity that animates all things some days, they cease not their rolling till they have bestowed themselves far under the dressing-case, quite beyond reach. A hasty exclamation springs to her lips, but is bravely repressed, while the vexed frown deepens. Losing temper and patience together, she puts forth all her strength and lifts the dressing-case clear away from the wall, rolling it aside while she picks up the fugitive buttons.

Sees Them Bring in the Man She Loves.

"Say, Nell, hold on there," calls Charley, observing this exploit through the open door. "Why don't you let me help you? You ought not to do such things; you know you'll hurt yourself."

"Oh, well, it doesn't matter," she returns, desperately, "I'm sure to be worked to death, somehow; it may as well be one thing as another."

For a moment honest Charley looks at his young wife with eyes and mouth open; never has he heard such words from her before. In that moment it seems to dawn upon him for the first time how much sharper is the outline of the still pretty face, how pale the once pink cheeks, what dark lines under the blue eyes, how tired a look about the child-like mouth. He sits down suddenly, in the completeness of the shock.

"Nell," he says, presently, "if you are working too hard, why don't you have a young girl to help, or put out something—the washing, for instance? It isn't absolutely necessary that you should do everything; you mustn't overwork, if we don't make up that last payment this year."

"I shall do all my own work—unless I'm sick—until we are quite out of debt and have laid something by," is the firm reply—she is somewhat calmer now. "Didn't I agree to, when we laid our plans at first?"

"But not unless you are able, Nell; I won't have you over-work; you are not looking very well, it seems to me."

"Of course I am able," stubbornly, yet struggling to keep back the weak tears at these words of sympathy. Of course I am well; what should ail me? And as for what I do, you never see me doing much, do you?" with somewhat bitter emphasis.

She gives him the coat, proceeds to clear away the breakfast things, but just then baby Carl's shrill notes ascend.

"That baby!" she exclaims, with no very tender inflection; and dropping cups and saucers, she hastens to relieve his sufferings. Charley has his coat on by this time, and is about to start; he has a 15-minutes' ride to his work. He steps into the bedroom and stoops over little Carl.

"Come, Nell, my girl," he calls, cheerily, "fetch us the good-by kiss."

"Oh, I'm busy," replies Nell, tartly, from the depths of the closet where she is selecting baby's clothes, "kiss Carl instead, that will do as well. I don't doubt you think a good deal more of him than you do of me anyway," with perversely bitter intonation.

If she thinks he will hasten to her and coax her out of her pet, she is greatly mistaken; he is not used to any such moods in his bright little helpmate, so does not know how to take them. There is a sudden silence, then she faces round just in time to see him give baby Carl one long kiss, and he turns away mute and hurt, and is gone. She hesitates a moment, too proud to call to him even then, till at last her heart conquers and she runs after him; but it is too late; he has passed out of the side-door, gone down the walk and is just stepping on board the waiting horse-car.

How heavily the day passes after this, only a tender-hearted woman mastered by the same failing can know. Never before has she spoken such words to the husband she loves so dearly; never before since their wedding-day have they parted for even a few hours without a kiss and a loving word.

Theirs has been a very happy marriage, too, having in it all the elements of prosperity and content. Charley Burt is a house-carpenter by trade, a first-rate mechanic, sober, industrious, earning good wages and constantly advancing at his work. They have a cozy little home, a pretty cottage in the suburbs, all their own when this last small payment is made, and furnished comfortably in every respect, indeed, almost luxuriously, thanks to Charley's skill with his tools and Nellie's taste and ingenuity. This pretty young wife is thrifty, capable, and skillful to contrive—almost a model—but of late her health and strength have been so sorely taxed that she is becoming subject to fits of gloom and even irritation, failing to appreciate her many blessings.

To-day she goes about the pretty rooms tidying everything as usual, and for the first time takes no pride or pleasure in them.

She gets through her routine-work somehow, doing all she thinks of or finds time for, because to leave anything undone would only add to the suffering of a mind ill at ease; but there is a heavy weight of misery at her heart; the slow hours drag, spite of her countless tasks, and this luckless day seems the very unhappiest of her life.

Will night ever come—and bring her Charley home? At last everything is done; she has prepared a most inviting supper for her "good man," saying to herself:

"I'll take baby Carl and run down to the gate and meet him when he comes—then we'll kiss and make up."

Still he does not come, and it is quite past his usual hour. She sits patiently holding her boy, her face growing all the time more white and drawn and anxious.

"Oh, how I wish I had said good-by just as ever to-day!" she whispers for the twentieth time; then as the slow minutes creep along, "I am afraid—oh, so afraid something has happened," for though he is sometimes a little late, it is very seldom that his time of coming varies a half-hour—and now it is two hours, and her vague presentiments of evil are growing to a dreadful certainty.

She gets up and walks the floor, tired out as she is; another hour passes, and in the extremity of her distress and terror she is about to run across to her nearest neighbor, when a muffled tramping approaches and stops—"the feet of them that bear him are at his gates."

It seems to Nellie Burt that she dies a dozen deaths in that moment, while she stands rooted to the spot and sees them bring in the man she loves, senseless, bleeding, broken; then she rouses herself, and it is her ready hand that arranges the bed and smooths the pillow under the poor unconscious head.

Not dead—no—that would have been a punishment greater than poor Nellie deserves, and more than she could bear; but there has been an accident—a scaffolding has fallen, and among the half-dozen men killed or injured Charley Burt has fared best of any—only a broken arm, a dislocated shoulder, and some cuts and bruises. He has been well cared for, too, and only conveyed to his home when the attending surgeon has decided that there are no internal injuries, and that he can safely be moved.

But the dread "might have been" stands out before her then so clear and plain that it leaves its impress on her very soul; and in all the rest of her life it helps to teach her the great lesson of patience and self-control.

So matters might have been much worse, after all; as it is, Nellie Burt's bad day ends with a perfect reconciliation between husband and wife, and a most grateful thanksgiving to God from one tender heart that she has been spared that sharpest pang of all—the utter misery of knowing that for this world her penitence has come too late.

NATION'S LONG DRINK.

Amounted to 1,800,000,000 Gallons of Alcoholic Beverages In 1906.

An editorial on "The Nation's Drink Bill," in the current number of the American Grocer, says the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the United States reached high-water mark last year, amounting to over 1,800,000,000 gallons, or about 22 gallons for each person, including the babies. The consumption of beer alone was nearly 1,700,000,000 gallons, or 20 gallons per capita.

"As all of the population are not users of beer," says the editorial, "it is probable that those who consume malt liquor each use every year from 75 to 100 gallons."

The cost to the people of the beverages used is said to have been $1,667,083,610 last year. Commenting on the cost the editorial says:

"The country was amazed when the Fifty-eighth congress appropriated nearly $1,000,000,000 for the various branches of the United States government, while the people do not wince at spending nearly $1,500,000,000 every year for alcoholic beverages.

"That sum is one-fifth the total value of all of the farm products of the nation, estimated by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson at $7,000,000,000.

"The nation's liquor bill is $1,450,000,000; its corn crop of 3,000,000,000 bushels is valued at $1,167,000,000.

"The liquor bill is double the value of the wheat crop; more than twice the value of the yield of cotton, or more than the combined value of all the wheat and cotton grown in the United States.

"The liquor bill is two and one-half times greater than the value of the hay crop."

Regarding the steady increase in the consumption of alcoholic beverages in this country in recent years, the writer of the editorial asks:

"Is this gain in the use of alcoholic stimulants due to a stronger national appetite for strong drink, or does the absorption of 1,000,000 foreigners into the population every year tend to enhance the demand for spirituous liquors?

"And might not we ask if the increasing agitation on the lines of socialism, anarchy and labor disputes be not in a measure due to the character of the nation's beverages?"

HOW THE STATES STAND.

Survey of the Temperance Movement In the United States.

The following survey of the results of temperance agitation throughout the union will be of great interest. The impetus of the movement is now almost irresistible:

Alabama—Two-thirds under prohibition.

Arkansas—Fifty-seven counties under prohibition.

Connecticut—Fifty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Florida—Twenty-one counties under prohibition.

Georgia—One hundred and twenty counties under prohibition.

Indiana—Sixty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Kentucky—Ninety-five counties under prohibition.

Louisiana—Eighty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Maryland—Sixty-five per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Massachusetts—Two hundred and forty towns to 100 with saloons.

Missouri—Forty-one counties under prohibition.

Mississippi—Sixty-five counties under prohibition.

Minnesota—One county and 123 villages under prohibition.

Nebraska—Forty per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Ohio—Eighty per cent. of territory under prohibition; 68 per cent. of the municipalities.

Rhode Island—Forty per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Tennessee—Only 14 towns and cities have saloons.

Texas—One hundred and fifty-seven counties under prohibition.

Vermont—Ninety per cent. of territory under prohibition.

Virginia—Seventy-three counties under prohibition.

West Virginia—Thirty-two counties under prohibition.

Watch prohibition grow!

Alcohol and Workhouses.

Although the number of workhouses where intoxicating liquors are served to inmates is gradually decreasing in Great Britain, no less than $10,000 a year is being spent by poor law authorities on beer, wines and spirits for inmates. Only £2,300 of that amount was spent on stimulants as "medical necessities." When masters of workhouses assert that drink accounts for from 50 to 70 per cent. of the inmates, it seems ridiculous, says a leading London paper, to ply them with more liquor at the expense of the rate-payers.

Would Provide Wine.

A new mayor was recently chosen for the city of Leeds, England, and he accepted the office. Being a total abstainer, instead of providing the city's guests with wine, he donated what he probably would have spent for that purpose—$2,500—to feed half-starved children of the city.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1908.

LEGISLATIVE WORK THAT IS WORTH WHILE.

Governor Crothers could not possibly have chosen a better subject to put to the front at Annapolis than that of providing the State with a system of good roads. The time is ripe for making a new step forward in this direction. Men of intelligence and public spirit, in every part of the State, have become familiar with the fundamental ideas of the subject, and are ready to follow them up. These fundamental ideas are, first, that good roads are not a matter of minor importance, but are essential to the welfare and progress of a civilized community; and secondly, that good roads cannot be obtained by any haphazard and patchwork method, but only as the result of systematic work, planned and carefully executed under expert direction. It was in recognition of these things that the Shoemaker bill was passed, providing for State aid to counties in the making of good roads, subject to the approval and supervision of the Highways Division of the State Geological Survey; and what Governor Crothers now contemplates, and the resolution brought forward by Messrs. Benson and Williams seeks to promote, is greatly to enlarge the scope of the State's good roads work, and, in particular, to provide for the construction of main arteries of travel at the expense of the State without co-operation of the counties.

The only difficulty about the good-roads proposition is that of getting unimaginative people to realize how much it means to the community. The making of a fine, smooth road—one that remains a fine, smooth road in rainy weather and in a drought, instead of alternating between mud and dust—is missionary work of the highest order. That is makes locomotion and transportation easier and cheaper, that it saves wear and tear of vehicles and horseflesh, is only its first and not its most important effect. It is a moral and physical tonic to the whole population of the country-side. It turns sloth and untidiness into activity and neatness. It stimulates people to care for the appearance of their fences and their front yards, and even their houses, who cared nothing about these things when the road in front of their places was unkempt and hopeless-looking, a mudhole after every rain and a breeder of cyclones of dust during every drought. And the beauty of it is that this change of spirit is contagious. Not everybody is converted at once, but some one person in a neighborhood has his ambition stirred by the improved look and feel of the road, and mends his fences and paints his house and improves his grounds; and then another and another and another follows his example. The movement to convert the main roads of Maryland into fine modern highways is a movement to put new blood, new life, new prosperity, into the whole population of the State.

It is a most encouraging sign of the times to find this sort of thing coming to the front at Annapolis. It is beginning to look as if we were outgrowing the idea that the machinery of government is chiefly a means of grinding out favors for some man or clique or party. We are very far from the millennium still, no noubt; and there will be developments in the Legislature of a very different kind. The hunger and thirst of the professional politicians and their hangers-on is not a thing that can be disposed of in the turning of a hand.

But nothing is better calculated to keep all that sort of thing within bounds than the spectacle of other work going on that the people will realize as being the real work that Legislatures and Governors and Mayors and City Councils are created to do. People will be less likely to tolerate the degrading squabbles of spoilsmen when they are reminded by concrete examples of the kind of thing that they have a right to look for, the kind of thing which really touches their interests.

THE GOSPEL IN HEATHEN LANDS.

The church may soon be confronted by a perplexing problem.

The newly aroused patriotism of the Chinese and the natives of India promises great changes in those countries. Almost countless millions of dollars have been spent to Christianize those races. Some progress has been made, but as compared with the numbers of the people and the vastness of the territory it is as a molehill to a mountain. Christ said preach the gospel to all people, and it is, of course, the duty of the church to comply; but He also said you must love your neighbor as yourself, and if a man steals one's cloak you must give him your coat also, and if you are smitten on one cheek you must turn the other. It is not apparent that any of these commands are complied with literally. The hyperbole of the East may be reasonably cited to modify some of the scriptual injunctions, while civilization has not yet reached the point where they can be literally obeyed.

Revelation is an evolution. Great races of people lived and flourished and passed away before the tablets were confided to Moses amid the lightnings and thunders of Mount Sinai. At that very moment there were races of men far more numerous than the Jews, which had their civilization and their systems of government, and of whom records are preserved antedating this event thousands of years. These races were not selected as custodians of the truth, it is reasonable to assume, simply because they had not reached that degree of development which justified the divine confidence. They had religion suitable to their capacity, and it would have been idle to undertake a system of proselyting. There is no more striking example in the records of time that the Almighty adapts the divine truth to the capacity of His creatures than the selection of a single race of people for its repository which is fitted to receive it.

Before the advent of Jesus there were great races enjoying a degree of civilization more or less advanced, which in some mysterious way had become possessed of great religions. Their religions contained many of the truths of revelation, and were singularly well adapted to the character and temperament of these races. It would be arrogant to assert that the Almighty had not in His own way revealed to these people more or less of divine truth. In fact, so admirably were these religions fitted to these peoples it is scarcely presumption to say that God had revealed to them as much as was good for them. These races exist to the present moment. They have multiplied tremendously, until today they number eight hundred million souls—fully as much as the inhabitants of all Christendom.

When Jesus said preach the gospel to them it is natural to infer that He included them along with all mankind. It is on this account that the Christian church has spent so many millions of dollars—a sum in the aggregate which would civilize every man, woman and child in Europe and America. These peoples cling to their own religions, and as they have developed through the centuries they have undoubtedly purified those religions, but as compared with Christianity they are "seeing through a glass darkly." Unfortunately, the great bulk of them—so many of them, in fact, as to suggest practical unanimity—do not care to see any clearer. They resent the efforts to convert them. The resentment is passive and exhibited only by dislike at ordinary times and under ordinary conditions, but as soon as there is a momentary flare of patriotism their resentment becomes active. In the few spots where the missionaries have gained a foothold they rise up and burn churches and schools, and those who have taken it upon themselves to convey to them God's word are compelled to flee for refuge to some friendly official.

It cannot be said that the action of these heathen is unnatural. Parallel instances of resentment can be cited in America, but when these attacks are made they necessarily involve the government. The United States cannot see its citizens maltreated without interference. Heretofore such interference has been simple and bereft of embarrassment. The conditions have become such in the East very recently that interference in the affairs of these countries may be attended with the gravest consequences. It would, therefore, seem wise for the church, through its agents, to consider the situation in all its bearings and make ample preparation for aiding the government by confining the activities of the missionaries strictly to the voluntary propagation of the gospel.

One of the most fruitful sources of trouble with these heathen is the suspicion engendered in their minds that the missionaries are in some way mixing up with the local or national politics of the country. On general principles, it is not probable that they would feel such resentment simply because of the spread of the divine word of Jesus. Their suspicion may be altogether uncalled for, but when newly aroused patriotism is abroad and passions are rampant it is common prudence to place the work of the missionaries absolutely above suspicion. Christ's kingdom is not temporal, but eternal, and the church should never be compelled to evoke the weapons of war.

How Much Could You Get For Your Farm?

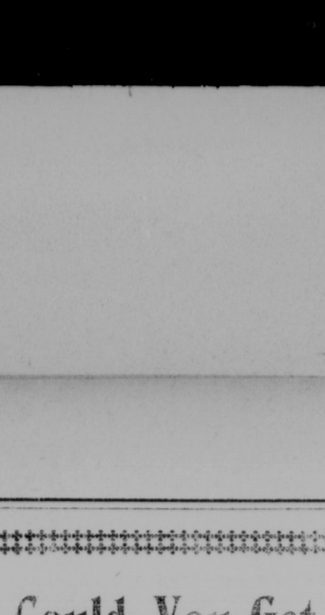
You are a farmer. You live near this town. You own land. Let us say that you own more than you need and would like to sell a hundred acres.

How much could you get per acre?

Land values have risen lately. But has the value of your land risen as you think it should?

Your land is good land. You think it is worth considerably more than anybody has offered you. Well, let us see.

A man buying farm land naturally prefers to locate near a thriving, up to date town. He wants good home markets for his crops. He wants good schools.



Let us say your land is three miles from town. A farm that looks very much like yours is three miles from a town twice as big and twice as prosperous as this town.

If you were going to buy a farm for your own occupancy, wouldn't you pay a whole lot more for land near the town that is twice as large and twice as lively?

Of course you would. It would be good business.

Now, what makes a town big and bustling? Money. Money in circulation. Not in circulation in Chicago, for instance, but right in the town that wants to grow.

How much money have you sent to the big Mail Order houses in the city the past ten years? How much have your neighbors sent? How much have all of you together put out of circulation here at home?

It is probably beyond calculation. If all that money had been spent in your own home town, isn't it reasonable to assume that the town would have grown more than it has grown?

Wouldn't this town be a bigger and better town?

Wouldn't it have more stores to buy your produce?

Wouldn't it have more public improvements to make it more attractive to outsiders who might come here to live, to go into business, or buy your surplus land at a good figure?

TO TRADE AT HOME MEANS TO HELP THE TOWN AND THE NEIGHBORHOOD. TO HELP THE TOWN AND THE NEIGHBORHOOD MEANS TO HELP YOURSELF.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. James Beard is visiting relatives at Winchester, Va.

Miss Pleasant Howard, after spending the Christmas vacation with her mother at Winchester, Va., returned last week to her post of duty as assistant teacher in the public school.

Mr. Grant Harshbarger, a well known Buxton miner, and prominently identified with the Republican party in this district, has been appointed boss miner for the Marsteller Coal Co., at Hampshire.

Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, of Oakland, one of Garrett county's most prominent and talented attorneys, lectured on temperence in the M. E. church Friday night.

The full dinner pail and prosperity have gone on a vacation and left no definite information as to their return. Rumor has it that the mines in this vicinity will be cut to three days a week, followed in the near future if times do not brighten up, by a cut in wages.

A tarnation shame, after all the teams, sleighs, cutters, sleds, etc., had been hired, leased and otherwise provided for a big time on last Snnday, the rain came on Shturday night and beat upon that snow and it was not fit for sleighing.

Mrs. Lotta Bonner, who has been visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Kemp, for the past few weeks, returned to her home at Pennsboro, W. Va., on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grant, Jr., of Elk Garden, are visiting relatives in town.

The post office at this place was transferred to the new post master, Mr. Jacob Stump, during the past week.

Miss Jennie Kight, of Cross, and Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, were entertained by friends during the week.

Mrs. John Wolf, of this place, and her daughter, Mrs. Bessie Burleigh, of Baltimore, are visiting relatives at Kitzmillerville.

Miss Alma Kemp is a guest of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kight of Cross.

The report of a terrible gas explosion in Mine No. 20 at Blaine, under the management of the Davis Coal and Coke Co., early on last Tuesday morning, in which five or six miners had lost their lives, caused considerable excitement and apprehension in this place. A number of miners, formerly residents of this town, had lately moved to Blaine and secured employment in the mine reported blown to pieces. Fortunately, when the truth was known it was found only one heading in the mine had been slightly damaged and no one hurt.

The extensive lumber plant at Bond, which had been closed down shortly before the holidays for repairs and a general overhauling, which is always customary at this time of the year, expects to resume manufacturing lumber this week.

The "wets" and the "drys" are having a stiff fight for supremacy in this district and no one knows positively just what the result may be. The drys met with a temporary set back a few days ago when their petition fell in the hands of the enemy. They have rallied their forces, however, and claim they are stronger than ever. The fight is a good natured one and both sides are claiming victory in the end.

TO PREACH ON LOCAL OPTION.

Pastors Throughout Maryland Will Discuss it January 26th.

The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland is planning for a "Concerted Discussion" on Jan. 26. The Ministerial Union of Baltimore issued a call to all the pastors of the State to join on that date in discussing the local option issue, the Anti-Saloon League as an agency of the federated churches in securing a state-wide local option law, and the necessity of informing the members of the Legislature of the desire for such legislation.

It is conceded that local option will be one of the most important questions before the Legislature and will probably develop the hardest fight of the session.

A desperate attempt is being made to unite all enemies of local option in favor of high license. The League is not opposing high license, but refuses absolutely to accept it as a substitute for local option, and expects this concerted movement to crystallize the sentiment here as it has done in other States. Enough responses from pastors all over the State have been received to assure the success of the plan.

Superintendent Anderson of the League announces the receipt from Cardinal Gibbons of a statement in which he heartily approves the present movement in Maryland to secure a local option law by which the people of wards of cities, or of rural counties may vote upon the question of closing saloons, and further states that where the people do not vote out saloons he favors high license, but not as a substitute for, nor in opposition to such local option.

The League has rented Room 106, at Carvel Hall Hotel, Annapolis, as Legislative Headquarters and has a competent stenographer and assistant constantly on hand. The Superintendent and other workers will be there during the most of the session.

The day after the Legislature convened, the League wrote President Seth of the Senate and Speaker Ray of the House, asking the appointment of Temperance Committees with a majority of temperance men. The League leaders expect some of the politicians friendly to the liquor interests to try to get committees appointed which will smother the bill in committee.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Preparations are about complete to harvest our ice crop by the use of the latest machinery for cutting and hoisting ice into cars and into the ice house. The snow, as usual, is much in the way but with the kind of weather we are now having the crop will likely be good. We understand that Superintendant Davis has made contracts for several thousand tons.

We were pained to hear of the death of Mrs. Hubbard, sister of Mrs. L. A. Rudisill and Mr. C. W. Hopkins, which occurred in Cincinnati last week. Mrs. Rudisill left for Cincinnati Saturday last. Mr. Hopkins had been there for several weeks.

Our people are afflicted with the grip and measels, both of which, however, in a mild form.

Mr. John Wilt, who was seriously injured several weeks since by the falling of a tree, was taken to the Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore last week to be operated on. The Red Men's Lodge of this place are caring for him. He was accompanied to the Hospital by Mr. George Hipsley, a member of the Lodge.

Rev. Preston, who had charge of the Allegany House last season, seems to be wanted in West Virginia, where he is charged with obtaining money in an irregular way. Everything he left here has been seized for rent, store bills, etc., but there is not enough to meet these local claims. One merchant was caught for nearly two hundred dollars and merchants and others in smaller sums. The goods will be sold in a few days.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

A special meeting of the Stockholders of the Penn Garrett Coal Mining Company, will be held at the office of the Company in Friendsville, Garrett county, Maryland, on

Monday, January 27th, 1908,

at 12 M., for the purpose of taking action in regard to the sale of the Company's property.

C. L. PULLEN, Stockholder.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

February 4th and 5th, 1908,

for the purpose among other business of hearing appeals on assessments and making transfers.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

STRAYED OR STOLEN—On December 24th, a female beagle hound (straight legged) white, with brown markings, long brown ears. Reward for her return to Bowie Johnson, office First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indiam Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.
Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.
Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS; 50c. AND $1.00.

WHAT THE NEW GOVERNOR WOULD DO.

Extract From Governor Crothers Inaugural Address.

The evil of bribery in its various forms at elections are in my judgment, the most serious with which we have to deal. No effort should be spared to stamp out this species of corruption. Let us cut this evil practice up by the very roots and cast it out wholly and forever from our Commonwealth, so that our elections shall be unblemished and pure. To accomplish this, I respectfully urge upon the members of the General Assembly with all the earnestness in my power the enactment of the effective anti-bribery and corrupt-practices legislation which experience and reflection have developed up to the present time.

The sentiment and demand which exist throughout the State for honest and fair primary elections . . . can no longer and ought not to be ignored, and . . . I assume that none of us can fail to feel it to be his bounden duty to co-operate in the enactment of a primary election law for the whole State, which shall provide that aspirants for elective offices shall have the right to submit their respective candidacies to the direct vote of the people, and which shall provide that candidates for the United States Senate may submit their claim to the people of the State at primary elections, and that all such elections shall be surrounded by every legal safeguard which can contribute to make them thoroughly free, fair, honest and trustworthy.

Let us execute unflinching the purpose of the Democratic pledge by all lawful and constitutional means to maintain the political supremacy of the white race in Maryland. . . . Let it be carried firmly and fearlessly into effect, so our State may be rid of the negro voter as a political factor and an element of power within our borders. . . . It is my confident belief that if an amendment is framed as proposed, in accordance with the terms of our pledge as above indicated, it will be triumphantly approved by an overwhelming majority of our people at the polls.

The provision that a slight extension of the cross-mark beyond the side of the square upon the ballot shall invalidate the ballot should be modified so as to prevent the rejection of ballots in the count to the extent which has existed in the recent elections. In Baltimore city better conveniences should be provided for marking the ballot than now exist and other modifications indicated as desirable by public opinion through the enlightened press of the State might be safely made at this juncture.

I shall heartily approve of an amendment to the State Constitution providing for a conservative, yet substantial, increase in the number of Senators and Delegates for Baltimore city in the respective branches of the General Assembly.

I am also earnestly in accord with the opinion expressed by the Democracy in its recent platform, that the fullest opportunity should be given for putting the oyster-culture law of 1906 into complete, practical operation, and that there should be no attempt of any sort to destroy or weaken its efficiency.

I reassert here and now these purposes, and, as the first and most important step in their accomplishment, a system of good roads, ramifying uniformly through every section of the State, should be established. We should take this up as a prime object of our policy and we should consummate it as thoroughly and expeditiously as possible. The Court of Appeals of the State has decided that such a work is constitutionally feasibly, and that the State may pledge its credit to effect it. . . . There is no reason why the State, which is now out of debt, should not issue bonds to defray the immediate expenses of such a scheme of public improvements. This has been done in other States with the most beneficial and satisfactory results. . . . The issuance of such bonds would not really impose any substantial burden of taxation upon the people, because the improvement themselves, traversing every part of the State, would so enhance the value of property that there would practically be no additional burden by way of taxes upon anybody

BLOOMINGTON.

A farewell social and stag banquet was tendered Mr. Malcolm McFarlane, by his friends and acquaintances at Barnum, on last Tuesday night on the eve of his departure for Shenoa, Ky., where he goes to take charge of extensive mining interests located in that vicinity. Mr. Fred B. Hartman was toast mater, while Mr. Casper Kight presided over the menu and saw that the courses followed in regular order. Blue ribbon was the color and the decorations were fine and handsome. Smoke from Havana heavily laden with delicious fragrance was turned loose on the crowd of merry makers and added to their enjoyment.

Dr. Brown Kalbaugh, a young and prominent Medico of Caps, has opened up offices for the practice of his profession at Blaine, W. Va.

During the absence of Miss Florence Howard, assistant teacher of the Bloomington school, who was unavoidly detained at her home in Winchester a few days beyond the allotted time allowed for Christmas vacation, Miss Pearl Wolf was detailed as substitute teacher.

Mr. Daniel Moran, an employe of the Mastellar Coal Company, and Miss Mary Hileman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Hileman, of Barnum, were married at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. A. L. Cook at Barnum last Saturday night.

Work at the mines in this vicinity and up the W. M. R. R. has about turned turtle.

Roosevelt's Guide In Louisiana.

(Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's Magazine)

The morning after we reached camp we were joined by "Ben" Lilley, the hunter, a spare, full-bearded man, with mild, gentle blue eyes and a frame of steel and whipcord. I never met any other man so indifferent to fatigue and hardship. He equaled Cooper's Deerslayer in woodcraft, in hardihood, in simplicity—and also in loquacity. The morning he joined us in camp, he had come on foot through the thick woods, followed by his two dogs, and had neither eaten nor drunk for 24 hours; for he did not like to drink the swamp water. It had rained hard throughout the night and he had no shelter, no rubber coat, nothing but the clothes he was wearing, and the ground was too wet for him to lie on; so he perched in a crooked tree in the beating rain, much as if he had been a wild turkey. But he was not in the least tired when he struck camp; and though he slept an hour after breakfast, it was chiefly because he had nothing else to do, inasmuch as it was Sunday on which day he never hunted nor labored. He could run through the woods like a buck, was far more enduring, and quite as indifferent to weather, though he was over 50 years old. He had trapped and hunted throughout almost all the half century of his life, and on trail of game he was as sure as his own hounds. His observations on wild creatures were singularly closed and accurate. He was particularly fond of the chase of the bear, which he followed by himself, with one or two dogs; often he would be on the trail of his quarry for days at a time, lying down to sleep wherever night overtook him; and he had killed over 120 bears.

The finest Coffee Substitute ever made has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. You don't have to boil it twenty or thirty minutes. "Made in a minute," says the doctor. "Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee Imitation is made from pure toasted cereals or grains, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—were he to unknowingly drink it for Coffee. Sold by all dealers.

GERMAN M. O. THEORY

Public Utilities Operated by Cities Must Pay Their Way.

They Don't Always Do This However Because Not Enough Is Charged Off to Depreciation and the Plants Don't Have to Pay Taxes—"Undertakings" Limited to Localities Where the Patronage Will Be Large.

In theory public utilities operated by German cities must pay their own way. This theory is not, however, fully borne out in practice, because the allowance for depreciation is frequently inadequate, and the plants are not required to make good the taxes formerly paid by the companies they superseded. But the effort to put these services on a paying basis has resulted in limiting the various undertakings to districts where they are sure to pay. On the other hand, when these utilities are operated by companies the same restrictive results are noticed, because almost without exception the franchises are so weighted down with provisions for payments to the city and are at the same time of such short duration that the companies would not be warranted in extending the service beyond the districts in which they are sure to pay at once.

Professor Hugo R. Meyer in recent articles in the Electrical Railway Review and the Journal of Political Economy describes the results of this restrictive policy on street railways and electric lighting, and the following facts are taken from his articles:

The cities that went into the street railway business adopted a uniform fare of 2.5 cents, but with two exceptions abandoned this after short trials. The experience of two typical German cities will prove of interest as showing what high rates are charged when cities attempt to operate utilities on a paying basis.

When the city of Cologne took over the street railways the fares charged were 2.5 cents for distances up to 1.5 miles and 3.75 cents for the maximum distance, 6.9 miles. After operating them awhile the city authorities raised the fare materially while extending slightly the minimum stage. The present charges are 2.5 cents for 1.9 miles, 3.75 cents for 3.75 miles, 5 cents for 5.63 miles and 6.25 cents for distances over 5.63 miles.

The city of Dusseldorf, which acquired its street railways in 1900, attempted to operate them at the uniform fare of 2.5 cents, which had been charged by the street railway company, but soon found that it was losing money and limited the 2.5 cent fare to 2.44 miles, charging 3.75 cents for distances between that and 4.25 miles. After increasing the track mileage the city again raised the fare considerably, reducing the minimum stage. The prices now charged are 2.5 cents for 1.56 miles, 3.75 cents for 3.19 miles, 5 cents for 4 miles, 6.25 cents for 4.75 miles, 7.5 cents for 6.58 miles, 8.75 cents for 7.19 miles and 10 cents for 7.94 miles.

It should be borne in mind that these prices are really very much higher than corresponding rates would be in this country, because wages in Germany are much lower than in the United States. The exorbitance of these charges is shown by the fact that in Minneapolis, a city of the same size as Dusseldorf, a passenger can ride thirteen miles for 5 cents, while in Buffalo, which has a population about equal to that of Cologne, the passenger gets fourteen miles for a nickel.

The desire of the cities to make all possible profits out of franchises and to limit them to short terms has resulted in greatly delaying the development of public electric lighting, although the people were anxious to have the new lights installed. This is shown by the fact that in 1894-95 there were in operation in factories, stores, etc., more than 4,776 private electric light plants, although two years later there were only a little more than 300 central electric lighting stations in the whole of Germany. As the private or isolated plant, as it is called in this country, is far less economical than the central station, this restrictive action of the German cities has thrown a great burden of cost on its progressive citizens. The situation is the more remarkable because at the time of the introduction of electricity for lighting and traction purposes Germany was far better equipped to perfect and develop these systems than was the United States, yet it has been completely outstripped by our own country, chiefly if not solely because here private enterprise has been given a comparatively free hand.

In closing one of his articles Professor Meyer says:

"The unwillingness of the cities to suffer financial losses on behalf of the congested city populations after those cities had denied those congested populations relief at the hands of profit seeking companies is in instructive contrast to the eloquence with which the advocates of purchase by the cities had denounced the dividend seeking companies."

Purchased Current More Economical.

An electric light plant was installed at Santa Clara, Cal., in 1896 at a cost of $15,000. The generating plant has been shut down, as, according to the president of the board of trustees, it was found to be more economical to purchase the current.

Tipton's Unprofitable Plant.

The municipal lighting plant of Tipton, Ia., proved unsuccessful. When it burned down, causing a heavy loss, it was not rebuilt, and a contract was made with a private company.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

Death Losses of Civil War Compared with Those of Other Wars.

The titanic nature of the struggle between the states from 1861 to 1865 is slowly dawning upon the world. In the annals of warfare it was the most deadly conflict ever known.

Self-preservation, the first law of nature, compelled the north to put forth its strength to the limit of possibilities, while the south once committed to the dream of successful rebellion, fought with the mad courage of desperate resolve.

For four years the warfare was unceasing. The northern soldiers suffered severely from the southern climate and the diseases engendered in an unaccustomed way of life as well, while the killed and wounded numbered, in the union army alone, 385,245. Of these, 109,893 were killed outright on the field of battle; 199,720 died from diseases while the war was going on. A death roll of 319,613.

Comparing the two great battles, Waterloo and Gettysburg, a military writer draws attention to the fact that, while the same number of men were on the field in these battles, 152,000 all told, the losses at Gettysburg exceeded the losses at Waterloo, considering the casualties to the troops actually engaged. At Waterloo the losses were 49,485, and at Gettysburg 50,528. It is remembered that 14,000 men (the Sixth corps) were not engaged at Gettysburg except for a short time, early on the morning of July 2. This runs up the percentage of losses in the American battle, considering the number of men engaged.

Throughout the civil war the loss of life on both sides was frightful, writes Ada C. Sweet, in Chicago Journal. Looked at even now, after the lapse of years, the record is dreadful to contemplate. In the union army there were 75 regiments whose losses ran from 50 to 85 per cent.

The First Minnesota went into action at Gettysburg with 262 officers and men. It lost 224 killed and wounded. The Twentieth Massachusetts, at Fredericksburg, lost over 68 per cent. of its membership, and came out of the fight commanded by a captain who was, in years, a mere boy.

Pickett, the confederate general, led 5,000 brave men in his great charge at Gettysburg, and in 30 minutes lost in killed, wounded and prisoners, 3,000.

The bloodiest battle of the civil war was Antietam, and the losses were the most appalling in a short space of time unless we except Cold Harbor, where the union forces lost 4,000 men in eight minutes.

When we see the veterans in their parades, or engaged in their work along the ordinary ways of life, distinguished only by the bronze buttons that some of them wear, we do not realize what these men have gone through.

We have all been taught to respect and honor them, but it is only when we look at the records of death and devotion which are written in the books of the nation, but left, for the most part unread, that we realize what it meant to be one of Uncle Sam's soldiers in the years from 1861 to 1865.

It is well to take thought, occasionally, of all the sacrifices that were made that the country might live and that we might exist in peace and prosperity, a free people upon the face of the earth.

THE ARMY MULE.

His Faithful Services Should Call Forth Feeling of Gratitude.

"The thought of the service the mule rendered in the civil war ought to endear him to every lover of our country. The great-hearted Lincoln understood his value. (A good mule was worth $400 then) and the good president asked, when told of the fearful slaughter at Antietam: 'How many mules were lost? We can get more men, but the mules' places can't be supplied.'

"All honor to the mule, 'for the sake of his noble qualities, for the sake of this glorious country which he helped to save, for the sake of the 4,000,000 slaves whose shackles he helped to kick loose, and that have since been melted into plowshares that he has patiently drawn all over the south, pulling along with him the black man holding to the handles behind—for all these and other reasons let the mule stand as our national emblem in place of the discredited and predatory eagle. And perish the man who shall attempt to pull him down—as he certainly will unless he stands afar off.

"The immortal Garfield once said: 'I never meet a boy in the street without feeling like lifting my hat to him, so great are the wonderful possibilities wrapped up under his ragged coat.'

"In common with millions of others, I feel the same way about the mule. I never meet one in the road or pasture without raising my hat—if I don't he'll raise it for me, so great are the possibilities tied up in his wonderfully constructed hind legs."

Unconscious Labor.

"Did you ever notice these people who work their faces every sort of way when they are cutting a piece of meat?" he asked. "Now just look across there at the man at that table there."

"Yes," said she, as she looked across, "but they are not a patching to the old women who open and shut their mouths as they cut something or other with their long scissors."

Attributes of a Good Critic.

A wise skepticism is the first attribute of a good critic.—Lowell.

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD

FOUNDER OF THE BARACAS.

What Has Come of the Initial Work of Marshall A. Hudson.

In 1890, Mr. Marshall A. Hudson, a business man of Syracuse, saw a big opportunity and a heavy responsibility, and started a young man's Baraca Bible class. He felt that the love and enthusiasm of young men was being lost to the church and that by organizing them into a class in which they would have a feeling of proprietorship, he could best win them to Christ and the church. He has seen the Divine approval in the conversion in that first class of 250 young men of whom 200 have joined the church. It was not originally intended, he says, as a world-wide Baraca; but God meant it so. Many evangelical denominations are now forming these classes and the world-wide Baraca, as the National Union is called, is now found in every section of the United States and Canada. Over 200,000 members are enrolled, and Mr. Hudson, the busy merchant, is president without salary or worldly reward.

MARSHALL A. HUDSON.

Young men wish to do things. They do not care so much to have things done for them, as to do for some one else. The Baraca idea originated with Mr. Hudson and 18 young men of his city to help other young men into the higher life. They elected their own officers and teachers, and in the by-laws adopted appears the following sentiment, which has been adopted as the platform of the National Union: "Young men at work for young men; all standing by the Bible and the Bible school." With the Bible as its book, the class makes the Sabbath school hour its rallying time, and all the work radiates from this center. The full control of the class is in the hands of the members, under the sanction of the superintendent. They elect a president, secretary and treasurer, and appoint committees for looking up new members, visiting the sick and finding employment for the idle.

Third Year Added to Bible School.

The Bible Teachers' Training school New York city, of which Dr. Wilbert W. White is president and guiding spirit, has enlarged its curriculum to include a third year of study, which will be designated as the graduate year. With no less emphasis on the English Bible, opportunity will henceforth be given for very thorough study in the original languages of the Scriptures. Dr. James Wallace, formerly president of Macalester college, has been made a permanent member of the faculty, and will offer courses in Greek language and exegesis, and Dr. R. W. Rogers, of Drew Theological seminary, will present Hebrew language and exegesis.

New Method in Philippines.

Some interesting new methods and agencies are noticed in the Baptist Missionary Magazine as having been introduced into the missionary church at Sinwaugan, Philippine islands. A church society has been formed to receive contributions of rice which will be kept to serve as a reserve fund for members in need. When misfortune befalls a member he may, on approval by the trustees, draw upon it to repay on easy terms of interest when his trouble is over. The privilege of this borrowing is to be extended to other churches.

Keeping Track of Members.

The Protestant pastors in several large cities have recently sent out a general request that clergymen in other towns report the names and addresses of members of churches coming to these cities, leaving their own home church, to a given Christian agency in the new place of residence, so that the wanderers may be looked up and invited into a church home of their own denomination. Among these cities are Washington, D. C., Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Denver and El Paso.

Brotherhood Among Baptist Men.

A specially interesting and promising meeting in connection with the Baptist anniversaries at Washington was a gathering called to consider the organization of a Baptist brotherhood. The plan submitted for the consideration of the meeting was identical with the plan on which the movement is proceeding in the Presbyterian church—the federation of all forms of existing men's work and the stimulation of new work according to local needs with no general model imposed upon the churches.

Big Victory in Texas.

Moral reform has won a remarkable victory in Texas. Gambling is now a felony in that state. Convicted gamblers go to the penitentiary; the owners of the buildings where gambling goes on are liable to 30 days' imprisonment.

Laymen's Conference.

At the Laymen's Union conference, held at North Adams, Mass., July 19 and 20, some of the topics emphasized were "General Missions," "Work by Laymen," "The Children," and "The Immigrant."

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneezing stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes or 5 for 25c. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST,
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *8.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart †10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive †9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart †9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart †9.26 a. m. (local), *8.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive †10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *8.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.
Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.
Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.
New Buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees. All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.
Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.
Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.
Write for particulars.
Term commences September 19th, 1907.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
College Park, Md.
22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, seven other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others."
J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery
Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Okland, Md.

EDWIN WARFIELD PRIVATE CITIZEN

Nothing to Regret in His Administration and Bears Malice Towards None.

Thursday's Baltimore American says:

Former Governor Edwin Warfield left Annapolis yesterday afternoon, and, upon his arrival in Baltimore, went immedtately to his office in the Fidelity building. He was accompanied by his faithful and courteous secretary, Mr. Robert S. Hart, and drove up to his office in a cab which was well laden with suit cases, hand-bags and other articles. The call at the Fidelity building was a mere stop in transit, for the ex-Governor was in somewhat of a hurry to go on to the Belvedere Hotel, whither he was preceded by his family, and get settled, as he expreseed it. He remained at his office, however, sufficiently long to transact some business, which necsitated several conferences and consultations with his subordinates in the Fidelity and Deposit Company.

During the few moments which Mr. Warfield spent at his office he was warmly greeted by his associates in the Fidelity company and by a few personal friends who chanced to come in. They found him looking exceedingly well and in the best of spirits. The act of relinquishing the reins of office had apparently occasioned no depression, and his manner was characterized by the urbanity and nonchalance which have become so familiar to the people of this city during the four years of his incumbency of the gubernatorial chair.

The ex-governor really seemed glad to be a private cftizen once more, and some of his callers appeared to entertain the same feeling. One gentleman who greeted him at the entrance to his office remarked that he had not shaken hands with so much pleasure during the past four years. "Yes," replied Mr. Warfield, "we are now upon the same level as private citizens." And he seemed to relish the thought.

When asked with what feelings he returned to private life the ex-governor said.

"I am happy as a boy just out of school. There is certainly an analogy between his situation and mine, for we both had trying tasks to perform before we gained our freedom. While the office of governor was one affording me numerous pleasures and genuine gratification, it has attached to it onerous duties and burdensome responsibilities. I lay down the cares of the office with relief and satisfaction, and gladly contemplate devoting my energies to my business affairs. Looking back over my administration, I have nothing to regret. I have done my duty as I saw it, and I ask nothing more than to be fairly judged upon my record."

Mr. Warfield was next called upon to answer an inquiry as to his future activity in politics and the attitude towards him of the various elements of his party.

"It is entirely too early," he replied, 'to say what part I may take in politics in the future. I shall certainly, however, continue to take a deep interest in public questions and in all that concerns the welfare of the state. I do not know what may be the attitude of the various factions in the Democratic party towards myself, but my own attitude is this—that I return to private life with malice towards none, but charity for all."

After remaining a short time at his office, Governor Warfield left for the Belvedere Hotel, where, with his family, he will be domiciled for several weeks.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people — without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

THE LIMITATIONS OF AGE.

When Military and Other Official Duties Usually Cease.

A lively discussion concerning the period of a man's usefulness was started three or four years ago by a startling statement by a Baltimore college professor—a professor of medicine, too. He remarked that few people were good forty years old, and he advised chloroforming the majority of mankind when they reached that age. Subsequently, he insisted that he had been joking but itwas generally believed that he was really in earnest although he was himself nearly or quite forty-five years old. It is extremely probable that what this physician (Dr. Osler) intended to suggest was that few men originate important advances in science when past the age he mentioned. The opinion may not be correct, but it is held by others than Dr. Osler.

However, human usefulness is many sided. There's a proverb which teaches that ripe age fits men for council, while young men are best suited to war. For the former duty the wisdom which comes from experience is required, whereas for successful fighting the chief essential is the energy of middle age or youth. To direct the work of fighting is somewhat different from fighting itself. The rank and file of an army might well range from twenty to forty years of age, but for strategy and the handling of troops an officer's qualification would continue to improve until he was much older. It is customary, if not obligatory, to retire officers of the army and navy when they are a little beyond the limit of sixty. That however, was Dewey's age when he fought the battle of Manila, and another man who is sixty-three or sixty-four years old has recently filled a position of the utmost importance in the Navy Department. The duties of the chief of the bureau of navigation are in some respects more difficult and those of higher talent and more experience than those of the Secretary of the Navy. The man who has just resigned from that post was regarded as exceptionally competent.

In nearly every state of the Union the laws prescribe that the judges shall retire from the bench when they reach the age of seventy. Even before getting to that point some magistrates doubtless begin to feel unequal to their work, while others appear to be in the enjoyment of the fullest mental and physical vigor when their service is thus forcibly terminated. In exceptional cases, too, statesmen have displayed remarkable energy and wisdom when fully eighty years old. Health, inherited stamina and other influences play a large part in such matters, and there can be no universal rule, but it is unquestionable that some forms of usefulness continue long past the Scriptural limit of a lifetime, threescore years and ten.

His Turn to Criticise.

Little John, who at the mature age of four has learned the Lord's Prayer, is often criticised by his sister, two years older, for slight mistakes which he cannot always avoid in offering the petition. A few Sundays ago he was taken to church for the first time. When the moment for the prayer arrived and the congregation bowed their heads John's mother took the precaution to whisper to him that he must be very quiet. "Listen," she said, "and you will hear the minister pray." This interested John at once, and his little face took on a look of serious attention, but his mother, watching him covertly, saw his expression change presently to one of surprise and disapproval. A few minutes more, and he could stand it no longer. What could this man be saying? Not a word of the prayer did he recognize as the only formula he had ever heard called by that name.

"Why, mother," he exclaimed in a tone audible over nearly half the church, "do you hear? He isn't saying it right at all!"—New York Times.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department
Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
C. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell Real Estate Agt and Surveyor Sincell Building, OAKLAND MD.

ROAD SUPERVISORS FOR 1908.

List of Those Appointed By the Board of Commissioners.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

John A. Beckman, road from Bond's R. R. to Custer's corner; $55.

Charles T. Beckman, road from Murrey's to Swanton; $45.

Irvin Custer, road from Meadow Mountain road to Murrey's road; $30.

A. H. Beckman, road from narrows of Deep Creek to Harmon Bittinger's; $40.

J. L. Fitzwater, road from Beckman's gate to Meadow Mountain road near George O'Brian's; $30

Frank Brobst, road from Anderson's Chapel to Edmond's road; $37

George W Bray, old State road from river road near Joseph Paugh's; $45

W T Nine, road from old State road to Kitzmiller's, Altamont road, and Kitzmillers to Swanton; $30

William Hamill, road from Glendale church to Altamont road; $33.

J A Wright, road from Swanton road to Wilson's store; $30

Jacob R Lee, road from B & O crossing in Swanton to Altamont road; $55

Richard Bray, road from top of mountain to mountain ridge road at Kitzmiller's; $90

Frank Dewitt, road from Sell's to Wilson's fields; $57

William Harvey, Kitzmiller road to Chafee; $30

Solomon Tasker, new road from Chaffee to Mt. Zion; $25

Henry Bernard, Dodson road; $25

Bradley Bray, road from Swanton road near Jack Rhodes to the Wilson and Blaine road at top of mountain, $20; road from Swanton to old State or Barnum road, $24; $44

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Silas Teats, road from R R crossing at Kolb's to District No. 3, by old furnace; $70

John Shaffer, road from school house to line of District No. 5, road from school house via Zadoc Green's to State line, road from Neil's mill to district line No. 5, $38; Cove road from Neil's mill to District line No. 5, $10; Mineral Spring road, $20; $68

J B Bowser, road from M E church at Selbysport to Guard's bridge, $17; road from M E church to Mill run by James Guard's, $39; Morgantown road from west end of Selbysport to line of District No. 5 on Winding ridge, $85; $132

Wm Steel, road from Selbysport bridge to Bear Creek bridge at E Friend's; $50

B F Schroyer, road from R R crossing by Kolb's in Friendsville to line of District No. 5, by Elder Hill; $180

Walter Lowdermilk, road from Kim. Frazee's to Pa. line by Ridge school house and by Jeff. Lowdermilk's to Glade road, $60; road from S K Frazee's, $55; $110

George W Frazee, road from Selbysport bridge to Hiram Humberson's, $35; road from covered bridge to Morgantown road at Frey farm, $10; $45

Jefferson Frazee, road from S K Frazee's to Pa. line at Daniel Umbel's house; $40

Elijah F Myers, road from east end of Friendsville bridge to Reckner's lane by J H Rushes; $50

Charles T Hoff, road from Reckner's lane to W. Va. line, from A Thomas to W. Va. line; $65

Lieutellus Frazee, road from Rushes watering trough to Buffalo run; $15

J M Fike, road from Ira E Friend's to Sand Springs road at Jefferson Schroyer's, $25; road from Jefferson Schroyer's to W. Va. line, $60; $85

Taylor Friend, road from Sand Springs to Blooming Rose church; $65

G W Fike, road from Jeff Frazee's to McDermott farm, $30; Glade road to W. Va. line, $20; $50

Isaac Savage, road from Sand Spring to I M Umbel's; $35

William Meyers, road from Reckner's farm to Sand Spring road; $35

Newton Savage, road from L H Johnson's to Ira E Friend's $30; road from L H Johnson's to White Kock run, $30; road from White Rock run to John H Friend's, $30; $90

Melvy G Friend, road from cross road's at Ira E Friends to W. Va. line, road by Falkner's saw mill to W. Va. line, by Falkner's to W. Va. line; $75

Edward Schroyer, road from Friendsville bridge to gate at Hook farm; $65

C W Friend, road from gate at Hook farm to line leading from Blooming Rose church, $25; road from Morgantown road by Blooming Rose church to Friendsville road, $35; road from line leading from Blooming Rose church to cross road's at Ira E Friend's, $25; $85

Melville Coddington, road from Guard's bridge via. Swalp's to State line, Mill Run road to school house, Melville Coddington and Bowser road's; $45

William M Fike, road from Sang Run road near C F Fike's to intersect Morgantown road near Franklin Humberson's; $25

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Peter Reichenbecker, road from Keysey's ridge to line of District No. 5, $10; and road from Keyser's ridge to Weller's gate, $15; $25

Z Sibert, Negro Mountain road from National road to Amish road; $55

Harvey H Miller, Negro Mountain road to Pa. line, and road from H Miller's to State line at Wm. Wright's; $35

Perry Durst, Amish road from Pike to District line No. 12; $30

H S Yoder, road from Aaron Beachy's to Pa. line; $25

Noah Hershberger, road from S. Beachy's to Pa. line; $40

E S Miller, Neiverton road from Grantsville to Pa. line; $40

S C Loechel, river road from National road to Pa. line; $40

Fearson Maust, road from pike near stone house to Pa. line; $40

Charles Poleman, Red run road from National to Pa. line, $40

George Garlitz, Avilton road from Bepler farm to line of District No. 11; $50

Wesley Durst, Pope road from Hetz's lane to C L McKenzie's; $20

William Hetz, road from National road, by Coleman's to Avilton; $35

Christopher Miller, road from Chas. L. McKenzie's store to McKenzie's saw mill; $15

Arnold Jenkins, Boucher road from D Enlow's to National road; $30

G J Gnagey, from National road to cross road's, and little glade road; $30

C C Durst, Grantsville road from D Enlow's by A Warnick's to National road; $60

J L Fresh, Bluelick road from Dorsey's school house to Brown's lane; $35

John Stark, road from Swauger's mill by S Wiland's to M E church; $27

George W Broadwater, Elk run road from Stark's gate to line of District No. 11; $30

F J Folk, Oakland road from east end of covered bridge to line of District No. 12, $55; Manadier road from Ridgley's school house to railroad crossing, $25; road from J L Durst's to Oakland road near Beachy's farm, $15; river road from covered bridge to Grantsville, $55; $150

Hampton Butler, road from railroad crossing by M Custer's to Meadow Mountain road near widow Bittinger's; $40

William H Durst, Engle road from cross road's to L Yommer's, $45; and road from covered bridge to Engle's school house, $15; $60

Josiah W Durst, Shade Hollow road from National road to Widow Miller's; $20

Fred Otto, road from Swauger's mil; race to corner of Widow Bittinger's field; $40

S P Broadwater, road from C J Otto's mill by Swauger's mill to cross roads at M E church; $23

C J Otto, New Germany road from D Enlow's to cross roads at M E church, $50; road from M E church to Bepler farm, $50; $100

Archie Warnick, road from Bancord's to north end of Dorsey's lane; $35

Jacob S Miller, road from Yoder's school house by J D Brenneman's to Niverton road; $20

DISTRICT NO. 4.

H B Warnick, road from Frankville road to Folly Run and from Folly Run to Barnum road; $25

Henry Bernard, road from Watson's wheel house to Chestnut Grove, $35; and road from Frankville to Chestnut Grove, $35; $70

Thomas A Michael, road from Westernport by Firm Rock church to line of District No. 11; $40

George L Michael, new road from Savage river bridge to Westernport road, $30; and road from Phil Michael's to Firm Rock church, $10; $40

F Broadwater, road from Bond's R R bridge to line of District No. 12, $50; road from mouth of Dry Run to ford of Savage, $20; $70

Lee Fazenbaker, road from Garrett county line to Chas Michael's road; $60

S A Duckworth, road from Charles Michael's to S A Duckworth's; $25

P R Titchinell, road from Bloomington to Folly Run, $55, and from Folly Run to new road, $5; $60

James Davis, Titchinell road from river road to Frankville road; $25

Joseph Meyers, Bloomington road from Allegany county line near mountain to Folly Run, $65; road from Deveckman's farm to north end of Crabtree bridge, $25; $90

Ezra Michael, Mill Run road; $15

DISTRICT NO. 5.

Adam Hetrick, Smearman road to top of mountain, $15; and road from Boger's to George's, $10; road from Accident to Bear Creek and from Accident by George's to Bear Creek, $65; $90

Eli Brown, road from William Fisher's to Morgantown road by Samuel Hileman's and from Caroline Frazee's to Pike road and from Morgantown road to Bear Creek bridge; $60

J M Fisher, Morgantown road from line of District No. 2, to Cove road and from Cove road to National road, Lewis Harmon road, $40; road from Cove church by A Fisher's to Morgantown road, road from church by William Fisher's to Wesley Hileman's, road from Krouse's shop to old school house, and road from Wm. H. Lohr's to Morgantown road, $55; road from Bear Creek (south side) to Cove church, and from Brethern church to District line, $55; $150

F D Dewitt, road from Matthew Frazee's by Solomon Boyer's to Accident road at Rock Lick, road from Ode DeWitt's, and from Solomon Boyer's to Weller's mill; $33

Perry Frazee, Cove road by Jerry Strawn's to National road, Spruce Hollow road, Mill road to District line No. 2, $30; James Paul road, $20; $50

Joseph Bowman, road from Engles mill's to Mud Pike, and from Engle's mill to line of District at Charles Hetrick's; $30

Christian Schrock, road from Grantsville road to Amish church, road from Grantsville road to Bear Creek; $40

James Knox, road from line of District No. 12 to Joel Bender's, thence the Bender road through to line of District No. 7; $55

Charles Guthrie, road from Accident to line of District No. 2, and from Zehner's gate to Bear Creek bridge; $80

Fred Hoffman, road from Accident to District line at Bethel church, from M J Miller's bridge to line at Samuel Mosser's; $75

George Miller, road from Wm. Hartman's to the Shartzer farm, and from Miller's distillery to cross road's at William Englehart's, thence to Mud Pike on Boger's hill; $30

Reuben Enlow, Legislative road from Ode Dewitt's to line of District No. 2, and from Legislative at Flat Rock's to Bishoff's school house, and by school house to Legislative road by Brison Welch farm; $50

John J Weber, road from Horse Shoe bend to Kasey's mill, $45; and from Horse shoe bend to finger board, $25; $70

DISTRICT NO. 6.

T C Friend, road from Cranesville road to the W. Va. line, $15; road from Crane's lane at the Black house to forks of road at J E Elsey's, $35; road from coal bank to W. Va. line, $45; $95

C L Falkenstine, road from Crane's lane to White Rock run, $40; road from C L Falkenstine's to the Hichler line at Fike hill, $25; $65

Eugene Teats, Cranesville road from Swallow Falls by J E Elsey's to the W. Va. line; $60

Homer Custer, road from Wm Lowdermilk's to Elijah Friend's (on the mountain) $40

Milton Lytle, road from coal bank to Joseph Frantz's; $60

Richard Friend, road from Sang Run to Hoyes Run; $40.

Robert Friese, road from Hoye's Run to Deep Creek; $40

Dougald McLain, road from McHenry to line of District No. 5; $50

Samuel Glotfelty, road from Benders' place to McHenry road; $40

Thomas Bishoff, road from Jos Frantz to Johnstown, $35, road from Seabold's to Ed Bishoff's school house by Casteel farm, $20; $55

Stephen Friend, road from Hoyes run to Seabold's; $20

Meshach Mattingly, road from Ode Dewitt's to McHenry, $50; road from Joseph Frantz's to Glotfelty's fields at McHenry, $20; $70

James Wilburn, road from Johnstown to District line No. 5, $15; road from McHenry to District line No. 5, $20; $35

John Weimer, road from Deep Creek to McHenry, $40; road from finger board to Glendale church, $20; $60

Daniel Bender, Grantsville road from Sand hole to Bear Creek bridge, and road from Mud Pike by Jonas Hostedler to intersect county road; $30

DISTRICT NO. 7.

J L Bernard, road from bridge near Alex. Lower's to Lewis Thompson's, $10; Beckman road, $60; road from Alex Lower's to Glendale school house, $10; $80

G B M Friend, road from Gortner's mill to corporation line of Oakland, $80; White and Bernard road, $25; $105

Jacob Echard, Gordon road, $50; road from Shaffer's to Mountain Lake Park, $25; road from Oakland to Mountain Lake Park, from same road at Oak Hall to Mt. Lake Park corporation line, $25; road from Oakland at end of Green Street to Mt. Lake Park corporation line near Dennett Hotel, road from Deer Park road near Lambert's to Dennett road, $20; $120

Andrew Shartzer, road from King's run to Broadford, $20; and from Broadford to Maddigan's, $15; road from Broadford to corporation Oakland on 4th street, $45; $80

I C Kitzmlller, road from West Union road at Totten farm by White's to Crellin road at Glotfelty's farm; $50

P H Rodeheaver, road from King's run to Sang Run road near Isaac Male's, $15; road from Schooley's fence to corporation line Oakland on Crook street, $80; Terra Alta road to Cranesville road by Davises, $45; road from finger board to West Virginia line, and from same road to Hutton Switch, $45; and new road from Hutton Switch road to West Virginia line, $10; $195

J L Brenneman, road from corporation line Oakland to White road and from same road to Crellin by Stephen Browning's; $70

H B Sines, new road from Hoop pole to Sang Run road, $25; and road from Henry Jordon's and to Dodge school house, $20; $45

Christopher Koch, road from Oakland to Hinebaugh's mill road by William Hall's; $80

Newton Reams, road from Cranesville road to Sang Run road by the river; $30

E W Kelso, Baker road from R. R. at Mt. Lake Park to District line No. 8; $60

M J Hughes, Ashby and Hutton Switch road; $30

Frank Graham, road from Crellin to Glotfelty's farm, road from Crellin to W. Va. line; $30

J W Markley, road from Deep Creek to Bray's school house, $25; road from Oakland to Bray's school house, $100; $120

James Dodge, road from Narrows of Deep Creek to Legislative road, $10; Altamont road to J Sell's, $20; road from Schooley's fence to Deep Creek bridge (north end) and to Delawder's, $70; $100

J C Uppole, Perry road, $10; road from corporation line of Loch Lynn to bridge near Alex Lower's gate, and to Ryan's Glade road vin Foglepole's, $30; $40

Samuel Rodeheaver, Luke Male road from Fundenberg farm to Dodge school house; $20

DISTRICT NO. 8.

Joe Conneway, North Western Pike from top of mountain to Gorman; $75

Jame Aaronhalt, Bayard county road; $40

A D Harvey, Wilson road to Wilson; $70

J W Biggs, Wilson and Cooper road, $45; and road from Wood place to Dobbin, $65; $110

James Moreland, road from pike to M White's house by B F Harvey's, $20; road from Gorman to Kearney, $60; King and Wilderson road from King's to Gorman, $25; $105

John H Sanders, Mansfield road; $25

David Ridder, road from West Union road to Gortner's mill by Mason's to top of mountain; $45

Frank H Harvey, Abernathy road from top of mountain at pike to Wilson road; $55

Silas Arnold, Shaffer road, $55

John A Kitzmiller, Mason road from Clement's to Henry road; $50

Elias Mosser, road from Henry to Patrick Flynn's; $50

Samuel Steyer, road from Kearney to top of mountain and road from White Church to Davis saw mill road; $45

Calvin Fowler, Miller and Gauer road from Red House to West Virginia line; $40

P F Nine, Sunny Side road, $25; and road from Glotfelty's farm to West Virginia line, $15; $40

John Kimble, Beckman and Pope road; $25

V O Bowman, road from Mason's school house to Bowman's, Pike from top of mountain to West Virginia line at Chisholm's mill; $60

E Harvey, King and Wilderson road to King's; $25

Jonas Yutzy, road from Gortner's mill to Chisholm's mill, and from Marion Houser's to Red House; $90

Jacob Sanders, The Parker Ashby and Thomas Dewitt road; $30

J W White, the T K Harvey road; $40

DISTRICT NO. 9.

Adam Werner, Finzill road from National road to Pa. line; $50

John Nedrow, Wilhelm road from National road to Pa. line; $60

Henry Finzell, Pocahontas road from National road to Pa. line; $60

Calvin Wilson, Frostburg road from Wilson's lane to National road; $50

George S Bittinger, Bowery road to Pa. line; $35

William Hager, Frostburg road from Wilson's land to District No. 11; $30

DISTRICT NO. 10.

Dr John K Mitchell, road from Broadford by Perry farm to Pysel's, $20; road from Hooppole to Deer Park, $50; road from Wilson's to Riley's farm and Kimmill road from Delawder's school house to Deer Park, $50; road from Boiling Springs road to Ryan's Glade road at Loch Lynn, $55; road from Deer Park to Boiling Springs, $10; road from Boiling Springs road to Altamont road at Eagle Rock road, $20; road from Truesdell to Altamont, $15; $220

James L Harvey, road from Jerry Tasker's to river; $40

James Lish, road from Boiling Springs to line of District No. 8, $60; road from Upper Potomac mine to G V Moon's lane, $35; road from Jerry Taskers's by Paugh's school house to Eagle Rock $25; $155

Milo Wilson, road from Kitzmiller's to Paugh's school house, and from Bush farm to Ryan's Glade road, $70; road from Geo W Moon's to Lost land run, $25; $95

C A Miller, Paradise road, and road from Charles Miller's to U. B. Church; $30

Frank McRobie, road from Altamont to top of mountain by Wilson's store; $50

Alph McRobie, road from Wilson's store to Deer Park road, and mountain P. O. road; $35

Jesse White, Buzzard road; $55

DISTRICT NO. 11.

W F Custer, Lonaconing road from Brown's lane to little Savage bridge; $60

Lewis Broadwater, road from Brown's lane by Lancaster's to Wilhelm's; $25

H H Robeson, ridge road from Lancaster's lane to Merrill P. O., $40; road from E O Robeson to Garlitz's grist mill, $10;

J O Wilhelm, Frostburg road to District No. 9; $30

Frank Green, Westernport and Barton road from Jesse Michael's to Lonaconing road near Layton's; $55

Jonas Weitzell, Point road from Poplar Lick bridge to Fairview church; $40

Levi Bittinger, Barton road from Allegany County line to A Fazenbaker's; $55

David Warnick, road from J Warnick to Layton's hill; $20

Cornelius Smith, Lonaconing road from Layton's hill to Strickland's; $60

George W Broadwater, Lonaconing road from line of District No. 3 to J Warnick's; $50

John Merrill, road from J Warnick's by Gregg's to Merrill bridge, and road from Gregg's school house to Poplar lick bridge; $35

T J Broadwater, road from lower ford of Savage to Poplar lick run bridge; $45

C A Green, Lonaconing road from Allegany county line to Strickland's lane; $30

Ulysses S. Jackson, Lonaconing road from little Savage bridge to Barton road; $60

Jacob Strickland, Lonaconing road from Barton road to Allegany County line; $30

DISTRICT NO. 12.

D J Brenneman, Manadier ridge road from mountain road to Bender's farm, $30; and road from Custer's lane to Widow Bittinger's lane (east end), $15; $45

Christian Klotz, Amish road from Widow Hetrick's to top of mountain; $30

James P Wiley, Accident road from Lohr's to line of District No. 5, $45; and from M Lageer's to District No. 3, $15; and from Orendorf's to cross roads, $15; $75

S J Brenneman, road from Lutheran Church to Swanton road, $30; New Germany road from Bittinger to Backwood's road, $50; from Bittinger to mill road near Widow Hetrick's, Beitzell road from Bittinger to Amish road (new road, $50; Oakland road from Bittinger to Eli Lohr's land, $30; Oakland road from Bittinger to line of District No. 3, $65; $265

J. M Durst, Backwood's road from Widow Otto's lane to Fairview Church; $40

Ira Durst, mountain road from C Beachy's to Harmon Bittinger's, $30; Soelder's road, $10; $40

Jas. Bowser, road from Lohr's lane to line of District No. 3; $30

F M Green, road from E Raley's to District No. 4; $25

John Green, Meadow Mountain road from Herman Bittinger's to Bittinger road at Burkey's; $55

NATIONAL ROAD.

Henry Knapp, National road from County line to 2nd mile stone west; $80

J Opel, 2nd mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Geo W Blocher, 3rd and 4th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

David Pope, 5th and 6th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

Charles Hetz, 7th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

George Turner, 8th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Floyd Poleman, 9th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

A Jinkins, 10th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Louis H Deffenbaugh, 11th and 12th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

Joel A Beachy, 13th and 14th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

M J Folk, 15th and 16th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

George Kolbfleish, 17th and 18th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

C Speicher, 19th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Jonas Platter, 20th and 21st miles and to the State line; $80

The following constables were appointed:

District No. 1, Joseph R Glass; No. 2, Patrick Doolan; No. 4, Grant Hershberger; No. 5, Silas Teats; No. 6, Homer D Custer; No. 7, William A Maffett; No. 8, Andrew J Miller; No. 9, Albert Bolden; No. 10, E G Miller; No. 11, D W Crowe; No. 12, Peter Bigford; No. 13, A G Barrick.

The appointees named in the aforegoing list are requested to promptly execute and return to the clerk of the Board the bonds furnished them.

A. G. Ross, Clerk.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 31st day of January, '08,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SIXTEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY AND FOURTEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO, CONTAINING FOR THE WHOLE TWO HUNDRED ACRES, MORE OR LESS. Said land is located in Election Eistrict No. 1 of said Garrett county and is particularly described in a deed for the same from Joshua Ritchie and others to Louis Ritchie, said deed being recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 8, folio 415, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1904 and 1905 as it is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the names of Thomas A. and William M. Ritchie, who acquired title thereto as devisees under the last will of the late Louis Ritchie, dated the 31st day of August, 1901, whice was probated in the District of Columbia and is of record in the office of the Register of Wills for Garrett county.

No. 2. A TRACT OF LAND CONTAINING SIXTY-TWO ACRES, GENERALLY KNOWN AS THE "JOHNSON FARM," located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett County, Md., adjoining the lands of Mary Patton, Wm. Lakel, Frank Caton and Orville Hileman, and being the same body of land which was conveyed by W. H. Rupple to Isabelle Patton et al., by deed dated the 6th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 35, folio 280, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the assessment books of said Garrett county in the names of Isabelle Patton, Bertha May Patton, Anna Louisa Patton and Dolly Wilt.

No. 4. SIXTY-FOUR ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," being the same land which was conveyed to Annie Charity Broadwater by Lloyd Wiland and wife by deed dated the 27th day as May, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 47, folio 185, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of said Annie Charity Broadwater.

No. 5. ALL THAT PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING FIFTY-SEVEN ACRES, located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning for the same at two small maple trees and running thence South 87 degrees East, 98 perches to a stone on the outlines of the whole tract, thence North 113 perches to the State line, thence with the State line West 66 perches to a stone, thence leaving said State line South 16½ degrees West, 112 perches to the beginning, and being the same land which was conveyed to Mary M. Patton by William R. Getty and wife by deed dated the 23rd day of November, 1894, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 238, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett County. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Mary M. Patton.

No. 6. FIFTY-ONE ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett County, and particularly described in a deed for the same from Charles M. Miller and wife to Elizabeth M. Breadwater, dated the 1st day of January, 1898, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 34, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake and stone pile standing at the beginning of a tract of land conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Peter J. Stephen, and running thence with the seventh line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Elizabeth Stephen South 57¾ degrees West, 7 perches, thence with the third and fourth lines of a tract called "Goochland" South 77 degrees East, 68¼ perches, South 7 degrees East, 54 perches, thence with part of the first line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Jefferson Broadwater South 58 degrees East, 56¼ perches, thence reversing the first and last lines of one tract and the third and second lines of another tract, both conveyed by said Anderson and wife to Hiram Duckworth North 70½ degrees East, 46½ perches, North 43 degrees West, 46 perches to a stake, North 32½ degrees West, 27½ perches, thence with part of the sixth and the whole of the seventh lines of a tract conveyed by said Anderson and wife to George W. Broadwater South 76 degrees West, 5 perches to a stake and stone pile on the west side of Elk Lick Run North 15½ degrees West, 82 perches to a stake and stone pile on the first line of a tract of land conveyed to Peter J. Stephen and with it reversed to its beginning South 86 degrees West, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Elizabeth M. Broadwater.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.
We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:
One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.
Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.
Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.
For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.
We offer the best possible protection.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JANUARY 23, 1908. NUMBER 47

DANIEL ANNAN, President

W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Vice President

D. F. KUYKENDALL, Cashier

No. 1519.

The SECOND NATIONAL BANK

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND.

United States Depository — State Depository.

CAPITAL $100,000 SURPLUS $300,000.

Statement of the Second National Bank, Cumberland,

As Submitted to its Stockholders at its Annual Meeting Held At its Banking House on the Fourteenth Day of January, 1908:

Capital Stock	$ 100,000.00	Loans	$1,342,159.06
Surplus	300,000.00	U. S. and other Bonds	817,455.76
Circulation	99,150.00	Banking House and Real Estate	51,500.00
Profit and Loss	33,812.35	Cash on hand and in Banks	494,462.55
Deposits	2,177,615.02	Redemption Fund	5,000.00
	$2,710,577.37		$2,710,577.37

We, the undersigned Directors of the Second National Bank, of Cumberland, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the condition of the Bank, as shown by its books January 8th, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN, President of Second National Bank.
L. M. SHEPHERD, President Cumberland Dry Goods & Notion Co.
O. C. GEPHART, Retired Capitalist
ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Associate Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.
LLOYD LOWNDES, Lawyer, Banker, Farmer.
VAN LEAR BLACK, Director of the Consolidation Coal Co., the Potomac Coal Co.
W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Gen. Mgr. Union Mining Co., Prest. First National Bank of Mt. Savage.

This bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits. The Most Liberal Terms Granted Consistent with Safe Banking. Investment Securities for sale, including Allegany County 3½ per cent. and Garrett County 4 per cent. Bonds. The Garrett County Bonds are the only debt of the County and are free of taxation.

DIXON & KELSO

Will pay 60c. for No. 1 Oak Ties.

And 45c. for No. 2 Oak Ties

Delivered anywhere along line of the Railroad.

We can also handle 9 and 10 foot

MINE PROPS

at 1c. per foot, delivered at our yard

We have a big stock of all kinds of

Feed and Grain

Received 5 cars in the last ten days

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

PAMPHLET FOR PASTORS.

The Anti-Saloon League Sends Out Information

The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland is sending out a 40-page pamphlet to the pastors throughout Maryland for use in preparing their sermons for next Sunday, which date the Ministerial Union has agreed upon for a concerted discussion of the local-option bill. Several hundred ministers have already agreed in writing to join in the movement. The pamphlet contains a full text of the local-option bill, an analysis of its provisions, an outline of the methods of the members of the Legislature, and information concerning the League itself.

The pamphlet attacks the methods used in 1906 by which, it claims, the local-option bill at that time was killed. It claims that the bill was referred to the Finance Committee, of which Senator Gorman was chairman, for the purpose of burying it for that term, and that the interment was complete. Further, the pamphlet goes on to say, there is evidence that the same methods will be tried this session. It says:

"If the bill is held in committee, we shall tell the people that fact and who is responsible. If it is kept down on the calendar, we shall tell why and who does it. If 'influence' is used, we shall state the facts. We do not wish the measure to become a party question. If the bill is refered to a fair committee, reported promptly, acted upon without delay, with a roll-call upon every important question and put upon its final passage, there will be no disposition on the part of the League to hold the party in power responsible, as a party, even if the bill should be beaten, unless it is made a party measure in order to defeat it. But if the party in power fails or refuses to give such fair treatment, we shall not hesitate to take the facts to the people of the State. Since refusal to recognize the temperance sentiment is the surest method of political suicide nowadays, and as the leaders of the dominant party of Maryland are recognized as astute politicians, we confidently expect fair treatment."

Institute at Friendsville.

Program for the local institute to be held a Friendsville Jan. 25, 1908, to convene at 9.30 a. m.

Opening address—Rev. Wolf.

History in fourth and fifth grades—Miss Riley.

Primary reading—Miss Elizabeth Welch.

English—Mr. H. W. Browning.

Primary Geography Mr. J. C. Beahm.

Progress with schools of Garrett county—Supt. E. A Browning.

The institute will be interspersed with music by those present.

This will be the third institute held in the county this school year under the auspices of the Garrett County Teacher's Association and all teachers are requested to attend. An invitation to the general public is also extended.

By order of the Pres. of the Association.

Recommended for Appointment.

Yesterday the County Republican Committee forwarded to Governor Crothers at Annapolis, the names of four Republicans from which the Executive is to choose one for appointment as the minority member of the Board of Election Supervisors. The names forwarded by the Committee were: Messrs. Edward E. Sollars, Samuel Lawton, Charles A. Ashby and George Geissman. The Democratic Committee has also forwarded a list of names and it is probable that Mr. F. C. Ries, of Accident, and Mr. Edmund Jamison, of Crellin, will be named as members of the Board to succeed Messrs. James E. McGettigau and Peter A. Chisholm, present incumbents of the office.

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

—OF—

CLOTHING

I have several hundred suits of Clothing for Men and Boys that I wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

ROAD SUPERVISORS FOR 1908.

List of Those Appointed By the Board of Commissioners.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

John A. Beckman, road from Bond's R. R. to Custer's corner; $55.

Charles T. Beckman, road from Murrey's to Swanton; $45.

Irvin Custer, road from Meadow Mountain road to Murrey's road; $30.

A. H. Beckman, road from narrows of Deep Creek to Harmon Bittinger's; $40.

J. L. Fitzwater, road from Beckman's gate to Meadow Mountain road near George O'Brian's; $30

Frank Brobst, road from Anderson's Chapel to Edmond's road; $37

George W Bray, old State road from river road near Joseph Paugh's; $45

W T Nine, road from old State road to Kitzmiller's, Altamont road, and Kitzmillers to Swanton; $30

William Hamill, road from Glendale church to Altamont road; $33.

J A Wright, road from Swanton road to Wilson's store; $30

Jacob R Lee, road from B & O crossing in Swanton to Altamont road; $55

Richard Bray, road from top of mountain to mountain ridge road at Kitzmiller's; $90

Frank Dewitt, road from Sell's to Wilson's fields; $57

William Harvey, Kitzmiller road to Chafee; $30

Solomon Tasker, new road from Chaffee to Mt. Zion; $25

Henry Bernard, Dodson road; $25

Bradley Bray, road from Swanton road near Jack Rhodes to the Wilson and Blaine road at top of mountain, $20; road from Swanton to old State or Barnum road, $24; $44

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Silas Teats, road from R R crossing at Kolb's to District No. 3, by old furnace; $70

John Shaffer, road from school house to line of District No. 5, road from school house via Zadoc Green's to State line, road from Neil's mill to district line No. 5, $38; Cove road from Neil's mill to District line No. 5, $10; Mineral Spring road, $20; $68

J B Bowser, road from M E church at Selbysport to Guard's bridge, $17; road from M E church to Mill run by James Guard's, $30; Morgantown road from west end of Selbysport to line of District No. 5 on Winding ridge, $85; $132

Wm Steel, road from Selbysport bridge to Bear Creek bridge at E Friend's; $50

B F Schroyer, road from R R crossing by Kolb's in Friendsville to line of District No. 5, by Elder Hill; $180

Walter Lowdermilk, road from Kim. Frazee's to Pa. line by Ridge school house and by Jeff. Lowdermilk's to Glade road, $60; road from S K Frazee's, $55; $110

George W Frazee, road from Selbysport bridge to Hiram Humberson's, $95; road from covered bridge to Morgantown road at Frey farm, $10; $45

Jefferson Frazee, road from S K Frazee's to Pa. line at Daniel Umbel's house; $40

Elijah F Myers, road from east end of Friendsville bridge to Reckner's lane by J H Rushes; $50

Charles T Hoff, road from Reckner's lane to W. Va. line, from A Thomas to W. Va. line; $65

Lieutellus Frazee, road from Rushes watering trough to Buffalo run; $15

J M Fike, road from Ira E Friend's to Sand Springs road at Jefferson Schroyer's, $25; road from Jefferson Schroyer's to W. Va. line, $60; $85

Taylor Friend, road from Sand Springs to Blooming Rose church; $65

G W Fike, road from Jeff Frazee's to McDermott farm, $30; Glade road to W. Va. line, $20; $50

Isaac Savage, road from Sand Spring to I M Umbel's; $35

William Meyers, road from Reckner's farm to Sand Spring road; $35

Newton Savage, road from L H Johnson's to Ira E Friend's $30; road from L H Johnson's to White Kock run, $30; road from White Rock run to John H Friend's, $30; $90

Melvy G Friend, road from cross road's at Ira E Friends to W. Va. line, road by Falkner's saw mill to W. Va. line, by Falkner's to W. Va. line; $75

Edward Schroyer, road from Friendsville bridge to gate at Hook farm; $65

C W Friend, road from gate at Hook farm to line leading from Blooming Rose church, $25; road from Morgantown road by Blooming Rose church to Friendsville road, $35; road from line leading from Blooming Rose church to cross road's at Ira E Friend's, $25; $85

Melville Coddington, road from Guard's bridge via. Swalp's to State line, Mill Run road to school house, Melville Coddington and Bowser road's; $45

William M Fike, road from Sang Run road near C F Fike's to intersect Morgantown road near Franklin Humberson's; $25

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Peter Reichenbecker, road from Keysey's ridge to line of District No. 5, $10; and road from Keyser's ridge to Weller's gate, $15; $25

Z Sibert, Negro Mountain road from National road to Amish road; $55

Harvey H Miller, Negro Mountain road to Pa. line, and road from H Miller's to State line at Wm. Wright's; $35

Perry Durst, Amish road from Pike to District line No. 12; $30

H S Yoder, road from Aaron Beachy's to Pa. line; $25

Noah Hershberger, road from S. Beachy's to Pa. line; $40

E S Miller, Neiverton road from Grantsville to Pa. line; $40

S C Loechel, river road from National road to Pa. line; $40

Fearson Maust, road from pike near stone house to Pa. line; $40

Charles Poleman, Red run road from National to Pa. line, $40

George Garlitz, Avilton road from Bepler farm to line of District No. 11; $50

Wesley Durst, Pope road from Hetz's lane to C L McKenzie's; $20

William Hetz, road from National road, by Coleman's to Avilton; $35

Christopher Miller, road from Chas. L. McKenzie's store to McKenzie's saw mill; $15

Arnold Jenkins, Boucher road from D Enlow's to National road; $30

G J Gnagey, from National road to cross road's, and little glade road; $30

C C Durst, Grantsville road from D Enlow's by A Warnick's to National road; $60

J L Fresh, Bluelick road from Dorsey's school house to Brown's lane; $35

John Stark, road from Swauger's mill by S Wiland's to M E church; $27

George W Broadwater, Elk run road from Stark's gate to line of District No. 11; $30

F J Folk, Oakland road from east end of covered bridge to line of District No. 12, $55; Manadier road from Ridgley's school house to railroad crossing, $25; road from J L Durst's to Oakland road near Beachy's farm, $15; river road from covered bridge to Grantsville, $55; $150

Hampton Butler, road from railroad crossing by M Custer's to Meadow Mountain road near widow Bittinger's; $40

William H Durst, Engle road from cross road's to L Yommer's, $45; and road from covered bridge to Engle's school house, $15; $60

Josiah W Durst, Shade Hollow road from National road to Widow Miller's; $20

Fred Otto, road from Swauger's mil; race to corner of Widow Bittinger's field; $40

S P Broadwater, road from C J Otto's mill by Swauger's mill to cross roads at M E church; $23

C J Otto, New Germany road from D Enlow's to cross roads at M E church, $50; road from M E church to Bepler farm, $50; $100

Archie Warnick, road from Bancord's to north end of Dorsey's lane; $35

Jacob S Miller, road from Yoder's school house by J D Brenneman's to Niverton road; $20

DISTRICT NO. 4.

H B Warnick, road from Frankville road to Folly Run and from Folly Run to Barnum road; $25

Henry Bernard, road from Watson's wheel house to Chestnut Grove, $35; and road from Frankville to Chestnut Grove, $35; $70

Thomas A Michael, road from Westernport by Firm Rock church to line of District No. 11; $40

George L Michael, new road from Savage river bridge to Westernport road, $30; and road from Phil Michael's to Firm Rock church, $10; $40

F Broadwater, road from Bond's R R bridge to line of District No. 12, $50; road from mouth of Dry Run to ford of Savage, $20; $70

Lee Fazenbaker, road from Garrett county line to Chas Michael's road; $60

S A Duckworth, road from Charles Michael's to S A Duckworth's; $25

P R Titchinell, road from Bloomington to Folly Run, $55, and from Folly Run to new road, $5; $60

James Davis, Titchinell road from river road to Frankville road; $25

Joseph Meyers, Bloomington road from Allegany county line near mountain to Folly Run, $65; road from Deveckman's farm to north end of Crabtree bridge, $25; $90

Ezra Michael, Mill Run road; $15

DISTRICT NO. 5.

Adam Hetrick, Smearman road to top of mountain, $15; and road from Boger's to George's, $10; road from Accident to Bear Creek and from Accident by George's to Bear Creek, $65; $90

Eli Brown, road from William Fisher's to Morgantown road by Samuel Hileman's and from Caroline Frazee's to Pike road and from Morgantown road to Bear Creek bridge; $60

J M Fisher, Morgantown road from line of District No. 2, to Cove road and from Cove road to National road, Lewis Harmon road, $40; road from Cove church by A Fisher's to Morgantown road, road from church by William Fisher's to Wesley Hileman's, road from Krouse's shop to old school house, and road from Wm. H. Lohr's to Morgantown road, $55; road from Bear Creek (south side) to Cove church, and from Brethern church to District line, $55; $150

F D Dewitt, road from Matthew Frazee's by Solomon Boyer's to Accident road at Rock Lick, road from Ode DeWitt's, and from Solomon Boyer's to Weller's mill; $33

Perry Frazee, Cove road by Jerry Strawn's to National road, Spruce Hollow road, Mill road to District line No. 2, $30; James Paul road, $20; $50

Joseph Bowman, road from Engles mill's to Mud Pike, and from Engle's mill to line of District at Charles Hetrick's; $30

Christian Schrock, road from Grantsville road to Amish church, road from Grantsville road to Bear Creek; $40

James Knox, road from line of District No. 12 to Joel Bender's, thence the Bender road through to line of District No. 7; $55

Charles Guthrie, road from Accident to line of District No. 2, and from Zehner's gate to Bear Creek bridge; $80

Fred Hoffman, road from Accident to District line at Bethel church, from M J Miller's bridge to line at Samuel Mosser's; $75

George Miller, road from Wm. Hartman's to the Shartzer farm, and from Miller's distillery to cross road's at William Englehart's, thence to Mud Pike on Boger's hill; $30

Reuben Enlow, Legislative road from Ode Dewitt's to line of District No. 2, and from Legislative at Flat Rock's to Bishoff's school house, and by school house to Legislative road by Brison Welch farm; $50

John J Weber, road from Horse Shoe bend to Kasey's mill, $45; and from Horse shoe bend to finger board, $25; $70

DISTRICT NO. 6.

T C Friend, road from Cranesville road to the W. Va. line, $15; road from Crane's lane at the Black house to forks of road at J E Elsey's, $35; road from coal bank to W. Va. line, $45; $95

C L Falkenstine, road from Crane's lane to White Rock run, $40; road from C L Falkenstine's to the Hichler line at Fike hill, $25; $65

Eugene Teats, Cranesville road from Swallow Falls by J E Elsey's to the W. Va. line; $60

Homer Custer, road from Wm Lowdermilk's to Elijah Friend's (on the mountain) $40

Milton Lytle, road from coal bank to Joseph Frantz's; $60

Richard Friend, road from Sang Run to Hoyes Run; $40.

Robert Friese, road from Hoye's Run to Deep Creek; $40

Dougald McLain, road from McHenry to line of District No. 5; $50

Samuel Glotfelty, road from Benders' place to McHenry road; $40

Thomas Bishoff, road from Jos Frantz to Johnstown, $35, road from Seabold's to Ed Bishoff's school house by Casteel farm, $20; $55

Stephen Friend, road from Hoyes run to Seabold's; $30

Meshach Mattingly, road from Ode Dewitt's to McHenry, $50; road from Joseph Frantz's to Glotfelty's fields at McHenry, $20; $70

James Wilburn, road from Johnstown to District line No. 5, $15; road from McHenry to District line No. 5, $20; $35

John Weimer, road from Deep Creek to McHenry, $40; road from finger board to Glendale church, $20; $60

Daniel Bender, Grantsville road from Sand hole to Bear Creek bridge, and road from Mud Pike by Jonas Hosteller to intersect county road; $30

DISTRICT NO. 7.

J L Bernard, road from bridge near Alex. Lower's to Lewis Thompson's, $10; Beckman road, $60; road from Alex Lower's to Glendale school house, $10; $80

G B M Friend, road from Gortner's mill to corporation line of Oakland, $80; White and Bernard road, $25; $105

Jacob Echard, Gordon road, $50; road from Shaffer's to Mountain Lake Park, $25; road from Oakland to Mountain Lake Park, from same road at Oak Hall to Mt. Lake Park corporation line, $25; road from Oakland at end of Green Street to Mt. Lake Park corporation line near Dennett Hotel, road from Deer Park road near Lambert's to Dennett road, $20; $120

Andrew Shartzer, road from King's run to Broadford, $20; and from Broadford to Maddigan's, $15; road from Broadford to corporation Oakland on 4th street, $45; $80

I C Kitzmiller, road from West Union road at Totten farm by White's to Crellin road at Glotfelty's farm; $50

P H Rodeheaver, road from King's run to Sang Run road near Isaac Male's, $15; road from Schooley's fence to corporation line Oakland on Crook street, $80; Terra Alta road to Cranesville road by Davises, $45; road from finger board to West Virginia line, and from same road to Hutton Switch, $45; and new road from Hutton Switch road to West Virginia line, $10; $195

J L Brenneman, road from corporation line Oakland to White road and from same road to Crellin by Stephen Browning's; $70

H B Sines, new road from Hoop pole to Sang Run road, $25; and road from Henry Jordon's and to Dodge school house, $20; $45

Christopher Koch, road from Oakland to Hinebaugh's mill road by William Hall's; $80

Newton Reams, road from Cranesville road to Sang Run road by the river; $30

E W Kelso, Baker road from R. R. at Mt. Lake Park to District line No. 8; $60

M J Hughes, Ashby and Hutton Switch road; $30

Frank Graham, road from Crellin to Glotfelty's farm, road from Crellin to W. Va. line; $30

J W Markley, road from Deep Creek to Bray's school house, $25; road from Oakland to Bray's school house, $100; $120

James Dodge, road from Narrows of Deep Creek to Legislative road, $10; Altamont road to J Sell's, $20; road from Schooley's fence to Deep Creek bridge (north end) and to Delawder's, $70; $100

J C Uppole, Perry road, $10; road from corporation line of Loch Lynn to bridge near Alex Lower's gate, and to Ryan's Glade road vin Foglepole's, $30; $40

Samuel Rodeheaver, Luke Male road from Fundenberg farm to Dodge school house; $20

DISTRICT NO. 8.

Joe Conneway, North Western Pike from top of mountain to Gorman; $75

Jame Aaronhalt, Bayard county road; $40

A D Harvey, Wilson road to Wilson; $70

J W Biggs, Wilson and Cooper road, $45; and road from Wood place to Dobbin, $65; $110

James Moreland, road from pike to M White's house by B F Harvey's, $20; road from Gorman to Kearney, $60; King and Wilderson road from King's to Gorman, $25; $105

John H Sanders, Mansfield road; $25

David Ridder, road from West Union road to Gortner's mill by Mason's to top of mountain; $45

Frank H Harvey, Abernathy road from top of mountain at pike to Wilson road; $55

Silas Arnold, Shaffer road; $55

John A Kitzmiller, Mason road from Clement's to Henry road; $50

Elias Mosser, road from Henry to Patrick Flynn's; $50

Samuel Steyer, road from Kearney to top of mountain and road from White Church to Davis saw mill road; $45

Calvin Fowler, Miller and Gauer road from Red House to West Virginia line; $40

P F Nine, Sunny Side road, $25; and road from Glotfelty's farm to West Virginia line, $15; $40

John Kimble, Beckman and Pope road; $25

V O Bowman, road from Mason's school house to Bowman's, Pike from top of mountain to West Virginia line at Chisholm's mill; $60

E Harvey, King and Wilderson road to King's; $25

Jonas Yutzy, road from Gortner's mill to Chisholm's mill, and from Marion Houser's to Red House; $90

Jacob Sanders, The Parker Ashby and Thomas Dewitt road; $30

J W White, the T K Harvey road; $40

DISTRICT NO. 9.

Adam Werner, Finzill road from National road to Pa. line; $50

John Nedrow, Wilhelm road from National road to Pa. line; $60

Henry Finzell, Pocahontas road from National road to Pa. line; $60

Calvin Wilson, Frostburg road from Wilson's lane to National road; $50

George S Bittinger, Bowery road to Pa. line; $35

William Hager, Frostburg road from Wilson's land to District No. 11; $30

DISTRICT NO. 10.

Dr John K Mitchell, road from Broadford by Perry farm to Pysel's, $20; road from Hooppole to Deer Park, $50; road from Wilson's to Riley's farm and Kimmill road from Delawder's school house to Deer Park, $50; road from Boiling Springs road to Ryan's Glade road at Loch Lynn, $55; road from Deer Park to Boiling Springs, $10; road from Boiling Springs road to Altamont road at Eagle Rock road, $20; road from Truesdell to Altamont, $15; $220

James L Harvey, road from Jerry Tasker's to river; $40

James Lish, road from Boiling Springs to line of District No. 8, $60; road from Upper Potomac mine to G V Moon's lane, $35; road from Jerry Taskers's by Paugh's school house to Eagle Rock, $25; $155

Milo Wilson, road from Kitzmiller's to Paugh's school house, and from Bush farm to Ryan's Glade road, $70; road from Geo W Moon's to Lost land run, $25; $95

C A Miller, Paradise road, and road from Charles Miller's to U. B. Church; $30

Frank McRobie, road from Altamont to top of mountain by Wilson's store; $50

Alph McRobie, road from Wilson's store to Deer Park road, and mountain P. O. road; $35

Jesse White, Buzzard road; $55

DISTRICT NO. 11.

W F Custer, Lonaconing road from Brown's lane to little Savage bridge; $60

Lewis Broadwater, road from Brown's lane by Lancaster's to Wilhelm's; $25

H H Robeson, ridge road from Lancaster's lane to Merrill P. O., $40; road from E O Robeson to Garlitz's grist mill, $10;

J O Wilhelm, Frostburg road to District No. 9; $30

Frank Green, Westernport and Barton road from Jesse Michael's to Lonaconing road near Layton's; $55

Jonas Weitzell, Point road from Poplar Lick bridge to Fairview church; $40

Levi Bittinger, Barton road from Allegany County line to A Fazenbaker's; $55

David Warnick, road from J Warnick to Layton's hill; $20

Cornelius Smith, Lonaconing road from Layton's hill to Strickland's; $60

George W Broadwater, Lonaconing road from line of District No. 3 to J Warnick's; $50

John Merrill, road from J Warnick's by Gregg's to Merrill bridge, and road from Gregg's school house to Poplar lick bridge; $35

T J Broadwater, road from lower ford of Savage to Poplar lick run bridge; $45

C A Green, Lonaconing road from Allegany county line to Strickland's lane; $30

Ulysses S. Jackson, Lonaconing road from little Savage bridge to Barton road; $60

Jacob Strickland, Lonaconing road from Barton road to Allegany County line; $30

DISTRICT NO. 12.

D J Brenneman, Manadier ridge road from mountain road to Bender's farm, $30; and road from Custer's lane to Widow Bittinger's lane (east end), $15; $45

Christian Klotz, Amish road from Widow Hetrick's to top of mountain; $30

James P Wiley, Accident road from Lohr's to line of District No. 5, $45; and from M Lageer's to District No. 3, $15; and from Orendorf's to cross roads, $15; $75

S J Brenneman, road from Lutheran Church to Swanton road, $30; New Germany road from Bittinger to Backwood's road, $50; from Bittinger to mill road near Widow Hetrick's, Beitzell road from Bittinger to Amish road (new road, $50; Oakland road from Bittinger to Eli Lohr's land, $30; Oakland road from Bittinger to line of District No. 3, $65; $265

J. M Durst, Backwood's road from Widow Otto's lane to Fairview Church; $40

Ira Durst, mountain road from C Beachy's to Harmon Bittinger's, $30; Soelder's road, $10; $40

Jas. Bowser, road from Lohr's lane to line of District No. 3; $30

F M Green, road from E Raley's to District No. 4; $25

John Green, Meadow Mountain road from Herman Bittinger's to Bittinger road at Burkey's; $55

NATIONAL ROAD.

Henry Knapp, National road from County line to 2nd mile stone west; $80

J Opel, 2nd mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Geo W Blocher, 3rd and 4th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

David Pope, 5th and 6th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

Charles Hetz, 7th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

George Turner, 8th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Floyd Poleman, 9th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

A Jinkins, 10th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Louis H Deffenbaugh, 11th and 12th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

Joel A Beachy, 13th and 14th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

M J Folk, 15th and 16th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

George Kolbfleish, 17th and 18th miles west of Allegany County line; $80

C Speicher, 19th mile west of Allegany County line; $40

Jonas Platter, 20th and 21st miles and to the State line; $80

The following constables were appointed:

District No. 1, Joseph R Glass; No. 2, Patrick Doolan; No. 4, Grant Hershberger; No. 5, Silas Teats; No. 6, Homer D Custer; No. 7, William A Maffett; No. 8, Andrew J Miller; No. 9, Albert Bolden; No. 10, E G Miller; No. 11, D W Crowe; No. 12, Peter Bigford; No. 13, A G Barrick.

The appointees named in the aforegoing list are requested to promptly execute and return to the clerk of the Board the bonds furnished them.

A. G. Ross, Clerk.

ARE EATING FOR OTHERS' GOOD

A Peanut Eater Says That He'll Live Longer on Supply Water Alone.

Beef eater, sit up and take notice, disgraced, discarded. Four noble sons of Illinois are proving this for the good humanity and the downfall of the food trusts. One is living exclusively on peanuts and maintains that on the festive goober he lives well—too well sometimes, he says. But lo! there are others. Here is a list of the participants in the combat:

Peanut eater—Dr. Thomas J. Allen, food specialist, aged forty-two years, exclusively peanut diet for sixteen days; has lost 7 pounds complains of overfeeding on nitrogen side and is fasting for two weeks.

Bean eater—Edgar Brobst, foundryman, aged sixty-five years; exclusive diet on navy beans for twelve consecutive days; has gained two pounds; does hard physical work, may switch to lima beans for variety.

Sauer kraut eater—Harry Spoden, machinist, aged forty years, fourteen days on sauerkraut, nothing else, feels all right, but is annoyed by misgiving of scientists, who says he's ruining his stomach.

Onion eater—James Purcell, boiler maker, aged thirty-five years; flunked after six meals on onions exclusively; other men refused to work on same boiler with him.

Milk eater—Thomas Allen, milkman, aged fifty years, has lived for years on malted milk and little else.

Out in the Aurora little is discussed save the endurance contest of the various vegetarians.

There has been a great falling off in the trade of groceries in everything but those articles of diet; but that is not all.

"I have been for some time," said Allen, "a student of the nutrative values of different foods, and when it was announced in the papers that a girl had died in Morris, Ill., from eating peanut candy, I was sure it was a mistake. I offered to live on peanuts alone for sixty days to prove their harmlessness. Since then I have had nothing but peanuts and lemonade.

"I admit it has been somewhat tiresome—so much so that I recently decided to vary it by eating nothing for a while, and have been fasting for the last two days."

There were a good many who thought the vegetarian looked hungry notwithstanding his boast that he has regained three pounds of his lost ten pounds weight.

"What do you think of the sauerkraut eater in your town?" was asked.

"Nothing to it," said the peanut eater; "nothing to it. Onions are good in their place; but a man could live on onions better alone than he could in company with some one else.

"I will agree to live on water alone longer than any man of my power of endurance can live on sauerkraut and water.

"I found a milkman yesterday who was living almost exclusively on milk. We want the bean eaters and the peanut eaters and the popcorn eaters and the green onion eaters to add their experience to the meeting we intended to hold next week in Aurora. We are having some fun, but the real benefit is to be derived in the experimentation of various articles testing their food value."—Chicago News.

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation even to very young babes. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung-healing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal aching lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor uses, "The Sacred Herb." Always demand Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.20 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.09 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *4.07 a. m., 4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.09 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive 10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.20 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare:

Hamiltonian; 25%.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SYLVESTER, Pres't.,
College Park Md.
22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others." J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron. ¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,

Okland, Md.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

The orchard is an ideal pig pasture.

The brood sows should not be too fat.

Sweet apples are a good fattener for the pigs.

Clean off the hog feed floor every day, if possible.

No farm but should have its small fruits for home consumption, at least.

The ridges left by the disk harrow can be removed by letting the harrow lap one half.

A separate pen for the hoggish hog and more clover, middlings and milk for the chicken eating hog.

The hog has earned the reputation of being dirty because man has provided dirty quarters for him.

In building the buildings for the live-stock and poultry, have them open to the south or east, if possible.

Haven't you noticed that good fruit always sells well? Resolve that that is the only kind of fruit you will put out.

The continual planting of orchards in the opinion of some threatens an overproduction of fruit, but such fears are groundless.

Keep the grounds about the house and farm buildings tidy. It is so easy for the rubbish to accumulate. Take time to clean it up.

No one realizes more forcibly the misfortune of the lost opportunity, than does the farmer, for the out of season crop seldom brings a profit.

The rich barnyard has given place to the rich field on the progressive farm where the manure spreader distributes the manure as rapidly as made.

Many a man finds it as easy to lie about the age of his cow as his wife does about her age. Funny how they always want to count less years than they have lived.

Too many sheep in the cattle pasture is not a good thing, for the reason that the sheep graze close and soon make it so that the cattle cannot get a good cropping.

And now during the height of the harvesting season take time to consider that the agricultural fair season is upon you, and plan to attend either county or state show, or both if you can.

The feeding value of beet pulp may be judged from the fact that it contains nearly 90 per cent. of water, less than one per cent. nitrogenous matter, and about six and one-half per cent. of digestible carbohydrates, and less than one-tenth of one per cent. of fat.

Verily there is a cow conscience and a horse conscience. They are made of India rubber, and are capable of stretching around all manner of glowing testimonials concerning the animal which it is sought to sell. Don't believe your own father in the cow or the horse trade.

A Canadian agricultural experiment station has found a new and pleasanter method of making kerosene emulsion. It has discovered that eight ounces of flour will hold one quart of kerosene in suspension. If the flour is first scalded two ounces will be sufficient to make an emulsion which will remain in suspension for three days.

The two general qualities of stock feed are fat-producing properties, known as carbohydrates, and muscle-forming materials, known as the protein. In providing a ration for one's stock it is well to know the relative quantities of each in the different kinds of feed, and the following table gives some of the more important foods together with the digestible protein supplied by them:

Corn (for comparison)	7.9
Corn stover (for comparison)	1.7
Cottonseed meal	27.2
Linseed meal—old process	29.3
Linseed meal—new process	28.2
Glucose meal	30.2
Grano gluten	26.7
Gluten meal	25.8
Sugar meal	18.7
Wheat middlings	12.8
Wheat bran	12.2
Dark feeding flour	11.5
Buckwheat middlings	22.0
Oat feed or shorts	12.5
Malt sprouts—dried	18.6
Brewers' grain—dried	15.7
Soy bean grain	21.6
Horse bean	22.4
Cowpea grain	18.2
Field peas—grain	16.8
Alfalfa hay	11.0
Cowpea hay	10.8
Crimson clover hay	10.5
Red clover hay	6.8
Skim milk	3.0

Salt and charcoal for the hogs—don't forget it.

Use land plaster on the stable floors to absorb ammonia and odors.

Hogs reared on clover pasturage make better and cheaper pork.

A manure pile around the barn door increases the fly pest many fold.

Feed the ewes and the sires so that they will be in vigorous condition for breeding.

If you sin against your stock, be sure your sin will find you out in reduced profits.

By their deeds ye shall know men, and by the weeds on his farm is a farmer known likewise.

Feed all your clover hay to the stock as it is worth nearly as much for fertilizer as for feed.

Extremes are always hurtful in agriculture. Too much water is just about as bad as too little water.

The demand is ever on the increase for fruits of all kinds, and for this reason the fruit growing interests are bound to grow.

The better the ground preparation the faster will the plant growth be, and this holds good of the newly-planted shade or fruit trees.

The early maturing character of winter barley it is said works the advantage that the crop may be harvested before the wheat harvest begins.

What man planting an orchard does not first take thought as to the market for the fruit he would grow and the help which he will need in harvesting the crop?

To kill quack grass run the spring-tooth harrow through the infested field during a dry time. For late fall treatment plow so that the roots will be exposed to the freezing of winter.

Large seeds have been shown by experiments to germinate more quickly than small ones of the same variety, and to make better plants. Remember this in saving your seeds for next year's planting.

Time was when any old place was good enough as a shelter for the live stock, but the farmer has come to realize that for the stock to do well it must be housed in light, dry and well-ventilated buildings.

The three essentials of plant growth are air, heat and available plant food. It is up to the farmer to see how perfectly he can obtain and control these conditions, and the farmer who does it the most successfully is the most successful farmer.

The state fair is one of the educational factors in the development of progressive agriculture which cannot be overlooked. And the management of such fairs must ever keep before them the high ideals and purposes which the fair is designed to serve.

If you have not screened the stable do it now. Hang some bagging over the doorway so that the stock in entering will brush their backs upon it. This will go a long ways towards keeping the troublesome flies and mosquitoes out and will give greater comfort to your stock.

Cross breeding of domestic animals is very objectionable, except in the hands of the expert. In the opinion of W. D. Hoard it is impossible to improve on the best types of thoroughbred animals existing at present, except by careful selection and mating of the best individuals. Crossing, as it is generally practiced, results only in producing inferior animals. For some unaccountable reason the habit of crossing has taken possession of a good many farmers. Some of them, I believe, have the crossing fever so bad that they would cross with a saw-buck if they could.

The International Livestock exposition has created a class to be known as "Short Fed Specials," with prizes as follows: Carload of 15 head, one year and under two, first prize, $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25. Carload of 15 head, two years and under three, first prize, $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25. Champion carload of these class, cup. The object of this special class is for the purpose of determining the best and most economical method of feeding cattle. Full information concerning the contest can of course be obtained by addressing the exposition authorities at Chicago.

The propagation of gooseberries, currants and other small berry bushes is one of the simplest agricultural propositions. You just cut off sound limbs, cut them in pieces six or eight inches long and put the pieces in moist earth, but a better way is to layer some of the lower branches. This may be done any time during the summer, during the month of July is a good time, then next spring dig them up and cut into pieces as required. Sometimes in layering it is an advantage to break the branches slightly, as this gives an opportunity for the cambium to start out roots. Sometimes the lower limbs have a good many branches. If carefully managed, each branch will make a setting, and you can cut them apart in such a way as to leave plenty of roots on each bush.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods.

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest. Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell Real Estate Agt and Surveyor [illegible]

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY , 1908.

TIME TO STOP THE GRAFT.

There can be no question where responsibility will in the end be placed for the doings of the 1908 legislature. The Democratic party has complete swing in the branches of the legislative body. The Democratic majority in either branch is so large that the minority can scarcely be expected to exert the modifying and restraining influence which has been exerciseed in other legislative years, when Democratic control in one or the other branch of the legislature has been by a narrow margin. What the representatives of the people who were chosen under the standards of the Republican party can do during the present session is to fearlessly and persistently oppose such legislative measures as in their honest judgment are not conducive to a wise and business-like handling of public funds or conduct of public affairs. This much responsibility rests upon the minority, and if this watchful service is faithfully performed, the minority party in the General Assembly will have accomplished all that it is empowered to accomplish.

The Governor who has just retired from executive control exposed in message to the legislatures of 1904 and 1906 the profligate and wasteful methods operative during those sessions under expenditures for legislative purposes. The itemized facts which Governor Warfield brought to public attention demonstrated beyond a doubt to any reasonable mind that the legislative payrolls during the two sessions immediately preceding the current one were padded—the state paid out money for services that were not performed. There would be no excuse for paying out even a single dollar in reward for a personal service to some politician or private individual, but according to the open charge made in Governor Warfield's message as much as $150,000 of the so-called legislative-expense accounts of the two sessions of the legislature to which he refers represented no equivalent services to the state. Whether the diverting of this money to the purposes to which it was diverted be called graft or be called by some other name, the ugliness of the facts in the case will not be altered.

The Warfield charges are not lovely stated generalties—not a mere suggestion of hints and suspicions—but are backed by a mass of circumstantial details which it is impossible to interpret otherwise than as he interpreted them. The loose methods which he exposed were rendered possible by the passing of a lump-sum appropriation far in excess of the specifically appropriated $79,405 to defray the costs of legislative sessions. At the beginning of the present session the fund to be drawn upon for legislative expenses has been raised from $150,000 to $200,000, which seems to indidate an intent upon the part of those who are pushing the measure to have it provided again to meet the demands of the padded payrolls. Public sympathy is not going to be touched by any dolorous plea concerning the small pay which is constitutionally provided as remunerative for legislative service. The amount of the pay is not the only consideration which leads honorable men to desire to serve the state in legislative capacity, and if it were so the time for considering the inadequate pay was when the proffer of the nomination as a legislative delegate was made.

Public attention will not be diverted from the doings of the 1908 session of the legislature by any sophisticated explanations or excuses. If the state's lawmakers are really an overworked, underpaid body, the simple way out is to so amend the constitutional clause regulating the pay as to make the reward in proportion to the high importance of the service performed. The people of Maryland are fair-minded; they will willingly accede to a proposition to raise the pay of the legislative members if it is shown that the pay is now too small. But public sentiment will never excuse the looseness and profligacy that is made operative under the method of the large lump-sum appropriation for legislative expenses and the padded payroll as a means of using up this appropriation. It matters not that this grafting system may have its roots in a custom that dates far back, It is a custom which should be immediately honored by the breaking of it, rather than by its continued observance.

THE BATTLE OF 1896 TO BE FOUGHT OVER IN 1908.

Events of the past few days have cleared the political atmosphere to a remarkable degree and set the people to thinking along new lines. There is scarcely a doubt now that the mighty battle for supremacy between the two great parties in 1908 will be fought out on lines very similar to those of 1896. It is practically conceded that the candidates will be Taft and Bryan, the former representing in a somewhat more conservative way than Roosevelf the policies of the Republican party which have given this country a period of the greatest prosperity in its history and the latter representing the elements of discontent, the short-sighted socialist, the harum-scarum spendthrift, what there is left of the remnant of frazzle bearded populism, some well meaning and conscientious Democrats, who are sorry the party has wandered so long in by and forbidden paths, and a few politicians who think sooner or later things must take a turn and it might be this year, hence they stand by Bryan. That is a motley crowd, but who says we overdraw the picture? It seems probable from the actions of some more or less venal and thickheaded labor leaders that they will be silly enough to wander off after strange gods and support a candidate who never has done anything but "talk" for the laboring man and who voted against his interests when he was a member of Congress years ago. Mr. Bryan opposed the policy of protection under which the American laboring man gets better wages than the wage earners in any other land. If labor organizations want to follow such a loud mouthed pretender as Bryan in preference to their real friends, the line of battle had just as well be drawn one time as another. Labor organizations are all right when correctly led and conservatively run and they do much good for the workingman, but when leaders of questionable integrity get hold of the reins and run the unions into politics then the good accomplished by many years of effort is placed in jeodardy. Such men cannot run the politics nor the business of this country. The business men of the land won't stand for it and when the fact becomes known that the malcontents and discontents, the populists, the socialists, and the ne'er do wells of every sort are lending their aid to the Bryan cause, the conservative, sane men of both the Democratic and Republican parties will rise in their might and smite the rabble as they did in 1896. The wildeyed, ranting element will never gain control in this country. The people are too intelligent for that and it may take only one more drubbing of William Jennings Bryan to prove that fact to the satisfaction of his class of Democrats. The time is fast coming for a conflict of class against class, section against section, with the Democrats led by a desperate third-time runner, so it is no use to longer counsel peace. Let us get ready for the fray.

THE work of the school teacher in showing the evil effects of alcohol on the human system is evidently beginning to tell on the liquor business. A Pittsburg paper yesterday ran a three column advertisement of a brewing company, the purpose of which was to belittle the "twaddle" taught by the school master. The school master reaches more people than that Pittsburg paper does and at a time when what he says makes an impression, so it is up to the school teacher to keep on showing the evil effects of alcohol on the brain and heart of the people who use it.

POOR MR. BRYAN!

The following are several choice sentences from the speech of Senator Davis of Arkansas in Cooper Union Thursday night:

"The old ship of state is on the verge of sinking."

"There are 51 magnates is this country who own over 1-35 of all the wealth in the country. How did these men get such vast fortunes? By robbery and thievery."

"A trust is a combination of crooks."

"Down in my state you could not convict a nigger crapshooter on the testimony of an editor."

"I can't believe that any man ever made a million dollars honestly."

And then this:

"William J. Bryan is the greatest man this country has ever produced."

And yet Mr. Bryan is an editor and is rapidly getting rich.

WANT ORDER REVOKED.

The country newspaper publishers of the country have taken up the cudgel and are protesting vigorously against a recent order of the Post Office Department which they claim is a direct slap at their business. Through their Senators and Congressmen they are demanding its repeal and the result is a rush of these officials to the Department entering protests against the obnoxious order and demanding its setting aside. While Third Assistant Postmaster General Lawshe claims that the order is simply a good business proposition, it is bound to work against the interests of the country newspaper publisher.

Under the regulations of the Department prior to the issuance of the order in question newspapers were carried through the mails at the rate of one cent per pound. The order of General Lawshe, which we publish in full in another column, prescribes a time limit in which a subscriber can receive his paper at the one cent per pound rate, and after that time if the publisher desires to send the paper he must pay postage at the rate of one cent per paper, which would be an average advance of 800 per cent. Gen. Lawshe stands upon the principle that a subscriber who does not pay is of no use to the publisher. This is very true, but at the same time the average country publisher will consider his order ill-advised and a blow at the root of a struggling industry.

SMOKING—WOMANLY BLOOM IS LOST.

The thing seems to be spreading like a fad into all ranks.

Many women, proud of their culture and refinement, but prouder of their "liberality," defiantly ask, "Well, what of it? Hasn't a woman as much right to smoke as a man? If it is a sin or a vulgar habit—or a pleasurable vice!—is it any worse for her than for him?"

Perhaps the answer to all these questions is—no. Morally and ethically considered, a woman doubtless has as much right as a man to smoke in public, if her sense of propriety and her tastes permit her to do so. If there is any vice in it, any sin, the man cannot excuse himself of it because he is born to the masculine persuasion. No, a woman may smoke in public with the same ethical, moral, and legal propriety, perhaps, as a man. But there are certain consequences!

Nature has so constituted man of the civilized world that he, of his own accord, has brought himself to look upon woman as a creature a little higher than angels. In the abstract ideal at least, she is to him radiant, pure, and untainted by corrosive contact with certain of humanity's weaknesses. To every man filled with manhood's fine, honest sentiment a living, breathing woman is the embodiment of this ideal creature of his fancy until she has shown herself to his own eyes as something less. A glance may suffice for this revelation—a gesture even, or some more overt act. Now, the sight of tobocco smoke issuing from a woman's fair lips is something incongrous with the man's ideal woman. It is an incongruity that shocks him. And no matter how much he may applaud it as cute, as proper, or as clever and right, a bit of the fine sentiment in him dies at the moment of the birth of the smoke rings.

Woman may not believe it, but it is, indeed, true that no woman ever puffed a cigarette without losing some part, just a little perhaps, of her delicate womanly bloom in the eyes of the loving musculine admirer who sat applauding it.

Waste in Lumbering Southern Appalachian Forests.

The forests of the Southern Appalachian Mountains have been cut so eagerly for the valuable hardwoods they contain that very little virgin timber is left and about 85 per cent. of the area is second growth.

The drain on these forests by many industries is immense. The lumbermen are going over the land for the third time. First they took only the prime oak and poplar saw timber. Next they took the oaks that were suited for barrel staves. Now they are after whatever merchantable trees are left, such as birch, chestnut and gum.

Moreover, these forests have been, and still are, logged very wastefully. Nearly three-quarters of the timber cut for ties is wasted. Double or even treble the number of ties now cut could readily be secured from the same area without injury to the forest. By simply taking all the suitable trees, 125 ties could be cut from an acre which now yields only 60, and if all of the wood in the trees were fully utilized 170 additional ties per acre could be secured.

With mine timbers the story is the same. Fully 40 per cent of the timber handled in procuring them is entirely wasted.

Finally, fires are injuring the productiveness of the Appalachian forests by running over the ground and killing young growth.

Circular 118, just published by the Forest Service, discusses the whole question of managing to better advantage the second growth forests of the Appalachian region. This publication can be obtained of the Forester at Washington.

BITTINGER.

This week began with clear skies and bright sunshine and all conditions most favorable for the full enjoyment of the splendid sleighing snow.

Harry Paugh, a laborer employed on Silas C. Beachy's saw mill near this place, had his hand cut off by a circular saw on the mill last Friday morning about nine o'clock. Dr. McComas of Oakland, dressed the injured member and at last report the unfortunate man was resting comfortably.

Christian Klotz, an aged and highly respected citizen of this district, died at his home near this village on last Sunday morning, after a protracted and painful illness as the result of partial paralysis.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Bittinger returned to their home at this place last week after a two weeks' visit to Braddock and Pittsburg, Pa.

Miss Ruth Stark, of Jennings, was the guest of Misses Myrtle and Bessie Wiley last week.

Squire Wade H. Lohr, of Swanton, was seen in this village last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp were calling in Oakland early this week.

Miss Lizzie Orendorf, who has charge of the Red Hill school, was visiting her parents at this place last Sunday.

Mrs. Ida Yommer and little son, of Grantsville, was visiting relatives here last Sunday.

JUST A LITTLE MORE THAN IS NECESSARY

Democratic Senators Agree to Cut Gorman's Appropriation Bill to $170,000.

VERY BUSY PLACE HUNTERS

Mr. Jasper N. Willison Wants to be Commissioner of the Land Office Mr. Browning Would Like to Be Fish Commissioner.

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 21.—The Democratic Senators after a long conference this afternoon agreed to cut Senator Gorman's appropriation bill to $170,000.

The Senators were closeted for two hours with Governor Crothers, who advocated a reduction from the original amount. Senator Linthicum spoke for an extreme reduction, while Senator Gorman advocated the original $200,000 on the view of the Finance Committee.

The first move to put an end to the endless stream of proposed legislation relating to the real and special subjects was made today by Mr. Girdwood, who offered an order providing as follows:

"The Speaker shall be authorized to appoint a committee of nine, with himself as ex-officio member, to consider the number of special and local bills and devise means to limit the number. The committee will also report why much of the legislation of this kind should not be made general."

During the last 10 years the laws or a local nature have amounted to 6,398, and during the last session there were 826 of these measures put on the statute books.

The Court of Appeals was, Mr. Girdwood said, grinding out decisions at the rate of 250 a year on the mass of legislation that is constantly increasing. Baltimore city was, he said, as much of an offender in this respect as any of the counties, and if the grind continued the statute books would be swamped with it. He advocated the adoption of some plan whereby a stop could be put to it.

The laws of Maryland were, he said, four times as voluminous as those adopted for Illinois, a State many times as large. Much of the legislation should, he said, be made general.

Among those who called in person at the executive office today to apply for appointment was Oregon Milton Dennis of Baltimore, who wants to serve the State for another term as State Game Warden. He presented a long list of indorsements. This office and that of State Fire Marshal are the two places that are most sought after, judging by the number of applications.

Jasper N. Willison of Cumberland, has applied for appointment as Commissioner of the Land Office. This place is now held by E. Stanley Toadvine of Wicomico county.

James S. Keagle of Baltimore has applied for appointment as Inspector of Hay and Straw and Dr John Aikenhead of Easton, wants to be a member of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board.

Richard T. Browning of Garrett county, and J. Lee Simmons of Frederick county, are candidates for the Fish Commissionership of the Western Shore.

I. Dorsey Jones of Frederick county has filed application for appointment as a tobacco inspector.

In the debate in the Legislature late this afternoon, the president of the Senate, Gen. J. B. Seth, by a series of questions, in effect charged that in the campaign of 1903 Hon. Edwin Warfield, in return for financial support, made certain pledges to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and to other corporations.

General Seth charged by inuendo that the governor had misapplied the public funds and had used the state's money to pay for flowers at his daughter's party. He also charged that the ex-Governor had endeavored to sell state securities for less than their value, and that he had used his influence to keep a relative on the state's payroll, who performed no service.

General Seth used the most insulting language with regard to the ex-Governor, comparing him to "a Percheron stallion with a red bridle at a county fair."

Ex-Governor Warfield, when told of the charges said that they were too preposterous to merit any reply. Nevertheless, he refuted them, and Mr. Hugh L. Bond, president and general counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, made denial of the statements which had reference to his company.

Prices of Beef Reduced.

To the People of Oakland and Vicinity:

Western Beef has not fallen in price, but Garrett county beef has, which I will sell at the prices following:

Porterhouse Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Tenderloin Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Round Steak, 10 to 12 cents; Roast, 7 to 10 cents; Boiling Beef, 5 to 7 cents. A poor man's dollar looks as big to me as a rich man's. If your are too poor to buy I will give it to you.

Yours to stay,
H. CREUTZTURG,
Meat Dealer and Grocer.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

LOST HAND IN ACCIDENT ON A SAW MILL

Harry Paugh, Son of Allen J. Paugh, Maimed For Life.

SLIPPED AND FELL AGAINST SAW.

An Extremely Unfortunate Mishap Accident Occurred on Saw Mill Operated Near Silas J. Beachy's Residence in Bittinger District.

Last Frinay morning on the saw mill operated near the home of Mr. Silas C. Beachy, in Bittinger District, occurred one of those unfortunate and unforseen accidents with which saw milling at all times is fraught, resulting in the maiming for life of one of Garrett county's best specimens of young manhood, the victim being Mr. Harry Paugh, aged nineteen years, son of Mr. Allen J. Paugh, of near Thayerville.

From what can be learned concerning the accident it appears that Mr. Paugh was employed in the capacity of offbearer on the mill and was in the act of carrying a piece of lumber from the saw when he slipped and throwing out his right hand in an effort to catch himself from falling to the floor of the mill his hand came in contact with the revolving edging saw, severing it at the wrist in the twinkling of an eye.

As soon as was possible word was telephoned to Oakland of the accident and Dr. McComas summoned to render surgical aid. The physician responded and drove down to the mill where he dressed the young man's arm.

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

NOT PRESTON'S FIRST OFFENSE.

Huntington Paper Recalls Escapade of Talented And Handsome Preacher.

The Huntington Herald has the following lines of considerable interest here:

"Rev. South G. Preston, formerly one of the leading divines of the Western Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, but who was deposed from the conference several years ago after succeeding in defrauding several people of money and living the life of one adapted to the "Great White Way" for months is again in the limelight.

"It will be remembered that at the conference session at Barboursville three years ago, Rev. Preston was reinstated into the conference and was given an appointment on the Boothsville circuit in the Fairmont district. On this circuit, it seems that he succeeded in gaining the confidence of many people of the rural section, who wondered in amazement at Preston who is a man of fine personality and wonderful ability.

"It will be remembered that one of Preston's former victims was Mrs. Taylor, an aged widow lady of Barboursville, from whom he succeeded in getting over $1,000.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 98 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

Mr. Fred Burkhardt, of Accident, was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY [illegible], 1908.

TIME TO STOP THE GRAFT.

There can be no question where responsibility will in the end be placed for the doings of the 1908 legislature. The Democratic party has complete swing in the branches of the legislative body. The Democratic majority in either branch is so large that the minority can scarcely be expected to exert the modifying and restraining influence which has been exercised in other legislative years, when Democratic control in one or the other branch of the legislature has been by a narrow margin. What the representatives of the people who were chosen under the standards of the Republican party can do during the present session is to fearlessly and persistently oppose such legislative measures as in their honest judgment are not conducive to a wise and business-like handling of public funds or conduct of public affairs. This much responsibility rests upon the minority, and if this watchful service is faithfully performed, the minority party in the General Assembly will have accomplished all that it is empowered to accomplish.

The Governor who has just retired from executive control exposed in message to the legislatures of 1904 and 1906 the profligate and wasteful methods operative during those sessions under expenditures for legislative purposes. The itemized facts which Governor Warfield brought to public attention demonstrated beyond a doubt to any reasonable mind that the legislative payrolls during the two sessions immediately preceding the current one were padded—the state paid out money for services that were not performed. There would be no excuse for paying out even a single dollar in reward for a personal service to some politician or private individual, but according to the open charge made in Governor Warfield's message as much as $150,000 of the so-called legislative-expense accounts of the two sessions of the legislature to which he refers represented no equivalent services to the state. Whether the diverting of this money to the purposes to which it was diverted be called graft or be called by some other name, the ugliness of the facts in the case will not be altered.

The Warfield charges are not lovely stated generalties—not a mere suggestion of hints and suspicions—but are backed by a mass of circumstantial details which it is impossible to interpret otherwise than as he interpreted them. The loose methods which he exposed were rendered possible by the passing of a lump-sum appropriation far in excess of the specifically appropriated $79,405 to defray the costs of legislative sessions. At the beginning of the present session the fund to be drawn upon for legislative expenses has been raised from $150,000 to $200,000, which seems to indidate an intent upon the part of those who are pushing the measure to have it provided again to meet the demands of the padded payrolls. Public sympathy is not going to be touched by any dolorous plea concerning the small pay which is constitutionally provided as remunerative for legislative service. The amount of the pay is not the only consideration which leads honorable men to desire to serve the state in legislative capacity, and if it were so the time for considering the inadequate pay was when the proffer of the nomination as a legislative delegate was made.

Public attention will not be diverted from the doings of the 1908 session of the legislature by any sophisticated explanations or excuses. If the state's lawmakers are really an overworked, underpaid body, the simple way out is to so amend the constitutional clause regulating the pay as to make the reward in proportion to the high importance of the service performed. The people of Maryland are fair-minded; they will willingly accede to a proposition to raise the pay of the legislative members if it is shown that the pay is now too small. But public sentiment will never excuse the looseness and profligacy that is made operative under the method of the large lump-sum appropriation for legislative expenses and the padded payroll as a means of using up this appropriation. It matters not that this grafting system may have its roots in a custom that dates far back, It is a custom which should be immediately honored by the breaking of it, rather than by its continued observance.

THE BATTLE OF 1896 TO BE FOUGHT OVER IN 1908.

Events of the past few days have cleared the political atmosphere to a remarkable degree and set the people to thinking along new lines. There is scarcely a doubt now that the mighty battle for supremacy between the two great parties in 1908 will be fought out on lines very similar to those of 1896. It is practically conceded that the candidates will be Taft and Bryan, the former representing in a somewhat more conservative way than Roosevelf the policies of the Republican party which have given this country a period of the greatest prosperity in its history and the latter representing the elements of discontent, the short-sighted socialist, the harum-scarum spendthrift, what there is left of the remnant of frazzle bearded populism, some well meaning and conscientious Democrats, who are sorry the party has wandered so long in by and forbidden paths, and a few politicians who think sooner or later things must take a turn and it might be this year, hence they stand by Bryan. That is a motley crowd, but who says we overdraw the picture? It seems probable from the actions of some more or less venal and thickheaded labor leaders that they will be silly enough to wander off after strange gods and support a candidate who never has done anything but "talk" for the laboring man and who voted against his interests when he was a member of Congress years ago. Mr. Bryan opposed the policy of protection under which the American laboring man gets better wages than the wage earners in any other land. If labor organizations want to follow such a loud mouthed pretender as Bryan in preference to their real friends, the line of battle had just as well be drawn one time as another. Labor organizations are all right when correctly led and conservatively run and they do much good for the workingman, but when leaders of questionable integrity get hold of the reins and run the unions into politics then the good accomplished by many years of effort is placed in jeodardy. Such men cannot run the politics nor the business of this country. The business men of the land won't stand for it and when the fact becomes known that the malcontents and discontents, the populists, the socialists, and the ne'er do wells of every sort are lending their aid to the Bryan cause, the conservative, sane men of both the Democratic and Republican parties will rise in their might and smite the rabble as they did in 1896. The wildeyed, ranting element will never gain control in this country. The people are too intelligent for that and it may take only one more drubbing of William Jennings Bryan to prove that fact to the satisfaction of his class of Democrats. The time is fast coming for a conflict of class against class, section against section, with the Democrats led by a desperate third-time runner, so it is no use to longer counsel peace. Let us get ready for the fray.

THE work of the school teacher in showing the evil effects of alcohol on the human system is evidently beginning to tell on the liquor business. A Pittsburg paper yesterday ran a three column advertisement of a brewing company, the purpose of which was to belittle the "twaddle" taught by the school master. The school master reaches more people than that Pittsburg paper does and at a time when what he says makes an impression, so it is up to the school teacher to keep on showing the evil effects of alcohol on the brain and heart of the people who use it.

POOR MR. BRYAN!

The following are several choice sentences from the speech of Senator Davis of Arkansas in Cooper Union Thursday night:

"The old ship of state is on the verge of sinking."

"There are 51 magnates is this country who own over 1-35 of all the wealth in the country. How did these men get such vast fortunes? By robbery and thievery."

"A trust is a combination of crooks."

"Down in my state you could not convict a nigger crapshooter on the testimony of an editor."

"I can't believe that any man ever made a million dollars honestly."

And then this:

"William J. Bryan is the greatest man this country has ever produced."

And yet Mr. Bryan is an editor and is rapidly getting rich.

WANT ORDER REVOKED.

The country newspaper publishers of the country have taken up the cudgel and are protesting vigorously against a recent order of the Post Office Department which they claim is a direct slap at their business. Through their Senators and Congressmen they are demanding its repeal and the result is a rush of these officials to the Department entering protests against the obnoxious order and demanding its setting aside. While Third Assistant Postmaster General Lawshe claims that the order is simply a good business proposition, it is bound to work against the interests of the country newspaper publisher.

Under the regulations of the Department prior to the issuance of the order in question newspapers were carried through the mails at the rate of one cent per pound. The order of General Lawshe, which we publish in full in another column, prescribes a time limit in which a subscriber can receive his paper at the one cent per pound rate, and after that time if the publisher desires to send the paper he must pay postage at the rate of one cent per paper, which would be an average advance of 800 per cent. Gen. Lawshe stands upon the principle that a subscriber who does not pay is of no use to the publisher. This is very true, but at the same time the average country publisher will consider his order ill-advised and a blow at the root of a struggling industry.

SMOKING—WOMANLY BLOOM IS LOST.

The thing seems to be spreading like a fad into all ranks.

Many women, proud of their culture and refinement, but prouder of their "liberality," defiantly ask, "Well, what of it? Hasn't a woman as much right to smoke as a man? If it is a sin or a vulgar habit—or a pleasurable vice!—is it any worse for her than for him?"

Perhaps the answer to all these questions is—no. Morally and ethically considered, a woman doubtless has as much right as a man to smoke in public, if her sense of propriety and her tastes permit her to do so. If there is any vice in it, any sin, the man cannot excuse himself of it because he is born to the masculine persuasion. No, a woman may smoke in public with the same ethical, moral, and legal propriety, perhaps, as a man. But there are certain consequences!

Nature has so constituted man of the civilized world that he, of his own accord, has brought himself to look upon woman as a creature a little higher than angels. In the abstract ideal at least, she is to him radiant, pure, and untainted by corrosive contact with certain of humanity's weaknesses. To every man filled with manhood's fine, honest sentiment a living, breathing woman is the embodiment of this ideal creature of his fancy until she has shown herself to his own eyes as something less. A glance may suffice for this revelation—a gesture even, or some more overt act. Now, the sight of tobocco smoke issuing from a woman's fair lips is something incongrous with the man's ideal woman. It is an incongruity that shocks him. And no matter how much he may applaud it as cute, as proper, or as clever and right, a bit of the fine sentiment in him dies at the moment of the birth of the smoke rings.

Woman may not believe it, but it is, indeed, true that no woman ever puffed a cigarette without losing some part, just a little perhaps, of her delicate womanly bloom in the eyes of the loving musculine admirer who sat applauding it.

Waste in Lumbering Southern Appalachian Forests.

The forests of the Southern Appalachian Mountains have been cut so eagerly for the valuable hardwoods they contain that very little virgin timber is left and about 85 per cent. of the area is second growth.

The drain on these forests by many industries is immense. The lumbermen are going over the land for the third time. First they took only the prime oak and poplar saw timber. Next they took the oaks that were suited for barrel staves. Now they are after whatever merchantable trees are left, such as birch, chestnut and gum.

Moreover, these forests have been, and still are, logged very wastefully. Nearly three-quarters of the timber cut for ties is wasted. Double or even treble the number of ties now cut could readily be secured from the same area without injury to the forest. By simply taking all the suitable trees, 125 ties could be cut from an acre which now yields only 60, and if all of the wood in the trees were fully utilized 170 additional ties per acre could be secured.

With mine timbers the story is the same. Fully 40 per cent of the timber handled in procuring them is entirely wasted.

Finally, fires are injuring the productiveness of the Appalachian forests by running over the ground and killing young growth.

Circular 118, just published by the Forest Service, discusses the whole question of managing to better advantage the second growth forests of the Appalachian region. This publication can be obtained of the Forester at Washington.

BITTINGER.

This week began with clear skies and bright sunshine and all conditions most favorable for the full enjoyment of the splendid sleighing snow.

Harry Paugh, a laborer employed on Silas C. Beachy's saw mill near this place, had his hand cut off by a circular saw on the mill last Friday morning about nine o'clock. Dr. McComas of Oakland, dressed the injured member and at last report the unfortunate man was resting comfortably.

Christian Klotz, an aged and highly respected citizen of this district, died at his home near this village on last Sunday morning, after a protracted and painful illness as the result of partial paralysis.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Bittinger returned to their home at this place last week after a two weeks' visit to Braddock and Pittsburg, Pa.

Miss Ruth Stark, of Jennings, was the guest of Misses Myrtle and Bessie Wiley last week.

Squire Wade H. Lohr, of Swanton, was seen in this village last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp were calling in Oakland early this week.

Miss Lizzie Orendorf, who has charge of the Red Hill school, was visiting her parents at this place last Sunday.

Mrs. Ida Yommer and little son, of Grantsville, was visiting relatives here last Sunday.

JUST A LITTLE MORE THAN IS NECESSARY

Democratic Senators Agree to Cut Gorman's Appropriation Bill to $170,000.

VERY BUSY PLACE HUNTERS

Mr. Jasper N. Willison Wants to be Commissioner of the Land Office Mr. Browning Would Like to Be Fish Commissioner.

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 21.—The Democratic Senators after a long conference this afternoon agreed to cut Senator Gorman's appropriation bill to $170,000.

The Senators were closeted for two hours with Governor Crothers, who advocated a reduction from the original amount. Senator Linthicum spoke for an extreme reduction, while Senator Gorman advocated the original $200,000 on the view of the Finance Committee.

The first move to put an end to the endless stream of proposed legislation relating to the real and special subjects was made today by Mr. Girdwood, who offered an order providing as follows:

"The Speaker shall be authorized to appoint a committee of nine, with himself as ex-officio member, to consider the number of special and local bills and devise means to limit the number. The committee will also report why much of the legislation of this kind should not be made general."

During the last 10 years the laws or a local nature have amounted to 6,398, and during the last session there were 826 of these measures put on the statute books.

The Court of Appeals was, Mr. Girdwood said, grinding out decisions at the rate of 250 a year on the mass of legislation that is constantly increasing. Baltimore city was, he said, as much of an offender in this respect as any of the counties, and if the grind continued the statute books would be swamped with it. He advocated the adoption of some plan whereby a stop could be put to it.

The laws of Maryland were, he said, four times as voluminous as those adopted for Illinois, a State many times as large. Much of the legislation should, he said, be made general.

Among those who called in person at the executive office today to apply for appointment was Oregon Milton Dennis of Baltimore, who wants to serve the State for another term as State Game Warden. He presented a long list of indorsements. This office and that of State Fire Marshal are the two places that are most sought after, judging by the number of applications.

Jasper N. Willison of Cumberland, has applied for appointment as Commissioner of the Land Office. This place is now held by E. Stanley Toadvine of Wicomico county.

James S. Keagle of Baltimore has applied for appointment as Inspector of Hay and Straw and Dr John Aikenhead of Easton, wants to be a member of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board.

Richard T. Browning of Garrett county, and J. Lee Simmons of Frederick county, are candidates for the Fish Commissionership of the Western Shore.

I. Dorsey Jones of Frederick county has filed application for appointment as a tobacco inspector.

In the debate in the Legislature late this afternoon, the president of the Senate, Gen. J. B. Seth, by a series of questions, in effect charged that in the campaign of 1903 Hon. Edwin Warfield, in return for financial support, made certain pledges to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and to other corporations.

General Seth charged by inuendo that the governor had misapplied the public funds and had used the state's money to pay for flowers at his daughter's party. He also charged that the ex-Governor had endeavored to sell state securities for less than their value, and that he had used his influence to keep a relative on the state's payroll, who performed no service.

General Seth used the most insulting language with regard to the ex-Governor, comparing him to "a Percheron stallion with a red bridle at a county fair."

Ex-Governor Warfield, when told of the charges said that they were too preposterous to merit any reply. Nevertheless, he refuted them, and Mr. Hugh L. Bond, president and general counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, made denial of the statements which had reference to his company.

Prices of Beef Reduced.

To the People of Oakland and Vicinity:

Western Beef has not fallen in price, but Garrett county beef has, which I will sell at the prices following:

Porterhouse Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Tenderloin Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Round Steak, 10 to 12 cents; Roast, 7 to 10 cents; Boiling Beef, 5 to 7 cents. A poor man's dollar looks as big to me as a rich man's. If your are too poor to buy I will give it to you.

Yours to stay,
H. CREUTZTURG,
Meat Dealer and Grocer.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

LOST HAND IN ACCIDENT ON A SAW MILL

Harry Paugh, Son of Allen J. Paugh, Maimed For Life.

SLIPPED AND FELL AGAINST SAW.

An Extremely Unfortunate Mishap Accident Occurred on Saw Mill Operated Near Silas J. Beachy's Residence in Bittinger District.

Last Frinay morning on the saw mill operated near the home of Mr. Silas C. Beachy, in Bittinger District, occurred one of those unfortunate and unforseen accidents with which saw milling at all times is fraught, resulting in the maiming for life of one of Garrett county's best specimens of young manhood, the victim being Mr. Harry Paugh, aged nineteen years, son of Mr. Allen J. Paugh, of near Thayerville.

From what can be learned concerning the accident it appears that Mr. Paugh was employed in the capacity of off-bearer on the mill and was in the act of carrying a piece of lumber from the saw when he slipped and throwing out his right hand in an effort to catch himself from falling to the floor of the mill his hand came in contact with the revolving edging saw, severing it at the wrist in the twinkling of an eye.

As soon as was possible word was telephoned to Oakland of the accident and Dr. McComas summoned to render surgical aid. The physician responded and drove down to the mill where he dressed the young man's arm.

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

NOT PRESTON'S FIRST OFFENSE.

Huntington Paper Recalls Escapade of Talented And Handsome Preacher.

The Huntington Herald has the following lines of considerable interest here:

"Rev. South G. Preston, formerly one of the leading divines of the Western Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, but who was deposed from the conference several years ago after succeeding in defrauding several people of money and living the life of one adapted to the "Great White Way" for months is again in the limelight.

"It will be remembered that at the conference session at Barboursville three years ago, Rev. Preston was reinstated into the conference and was given an appointment on the Boothsville circuit in the Fairmont district. On this circuit, it seems that he succeeded in gaining the confidence of many people of the rural section, who wondered in amazement at Preston who is a man of fine personality and wonderful ability.

"It will be remembered that one of Preston's former victims was Mrs. Taylor, an aged widow lady of Barboursville, from whom he succeeded in getting over $1,000.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 98 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

Mr. Fred Burkhardt, of Accident, was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS; 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE-P'T. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER.

Economizes the use of flour, butter and eggs; makes the biscuit, cake and pastry more appetizing, nutritious and wholesome.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

This is the only baking powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar.

It Has No Substitute

There are Alum and Phosphate of Lime powders sold at a lower price, but no housekeeper regarding the health of her family can afford to use them.

Mr. N. U. Bond was in the city last Saturday on business.

Dr. Joseph Lee, of Mountain Lake Park, visited Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. D. E. Offutt, Jr., went to Fairmont Tuesday afternoon on a business mission.

Mr. James M. Litzinger, of Grafton, was in Oakland yesterday evening on business.

School Commissioner C. E. Ellithorpe, of Bittinger, was in the city Monday and Tuesday on business.

Mr. P. C. Barnes, attorney, of Cumberland, was in the city on professional business Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Charles B. Cropp, of Richwood, West Va., spent several days in Oakland with his family, returned to Richwood Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Earle C. Ashby is preparing to open a meat and grocery store in the old postoffice building opposite the First National Bank on Alder street.

Mr. D. Y. Morris, of Kingwood, who spent ten days in Oakland with his daughter, Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, returned to his home Monday morning.

Mrs. William R. Offutt and little daughter, who were guests of relatives in Cumberland for several weeks, returned to their home in Oakland last Thursday evening.

Mr. Roy H. Hamill, superintendent of the Upper Potomac Coal Company, located near Schell, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill.

Rev. L. T. Wideman, D. D., of Baltimore, will preach in St. Paul's M. E. church Sunday evening at 7:30. Dr. Wideman is the official representative of the American Bible Society.

WANTED:—A responsible man to inspect orchards, &c., next summer in Garrett county. Write at once, State Horticultural Department, College Park, Maryland, for particulars.

Mr. George T. Porter, of near Oakland, who visited Baltimore and Annapolis last week, in the latter city calling upon his cousin, Governor Crothers, returned to Oakland Thursday evening.

Miss Mame Hart, accompanied by her little nieces, Mary and Marcella Nelson, left Oakland last Friday for Pittsburg, Pa., where they will be guests for a few weeks of Mrs. Annie Nelson and family.

Misses Catharine and Corinne Manges, daughters of Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges, left Oakland Monday night for a visit of two weeks to relatives in Philadelphia and other Pennsylvania cities.

Mr. Sol Stern, the Baltimore tobacconist, highly esteemed for his pleasant manners and jovialty, brought sunshine with him yesterday upon his somewhat regular visits to Oakland in the interests of his well known brand of cigars The William Pinkney. May his shadow never grow less nor his visits to our little mountain city cease.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 THE SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

RESIGNED AFTER 41 YEARS' SERVICE.

Rev. John M. Davis, Superintendent of Paul's Sunday School, Wants to Quit.

Rev. John M. Davis, of Oakland, for forty-one consecutive years superintendent of the Sunday school attached to St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church in Oakland, on last Sunday tendered his resignation as an official of the school. In tendering his resignation Rev. Davis stated that his love for the work in which he has so diligently been employed for upwards of a half a century, is as ardent as when he first entered into it, but that owing to the condition of his own health and that of members of his family he was compelled to take the step, much as he was disinclined to do so.

During these forty-one years while Mr. Davis was the head of the school many changes have been witnessed. The older members have of course died or moved to other fields, generations have been born, reared and passed away, but Mr. Davis stood as a bulwark, nobly and grandly at his post, and now in his declining years, feeling that he has labored long and earnestly, but not without reward, he is forced to lay aside his burdens to be taken up and carried on upon younger shoulders.

Rev. Davis' successor as superintendent has not yet been elected, but the selection will be made on next Sunday at the session of the school. Upon whom his toga will fall is but a matter of speculation.

The most disgraceful sight one ever sees in this town is a number of young boys, not yet in their teens, with cigarettes in their mouths. A boy behind a cigarette is a fit subject for the reform school.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer was housed up several days this week with an attack of the grip. This malady has had numberless victims during the past few weeks in Oakland, but all seem to be on the way toward recovery.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the First National Bank of Friendsville, which will be found on another page of the paper today. The gentlemen composing its directorate are all well known, substantial business men of the county.

Mrs. Mary Loewenstein went to Johnstown, Pa., last Saturday to attend the funeral of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Fredericka Loewenstein, which took place in that city Monday of this week, a notice of whose death will be found elsewhere in this paper today.

Ex-Senator R. T. Browning and Mr. William Miller, of Accident, two of the members of the Democratic State Committee for this county, went to Annapolis Monday night, where, in all probability, they will participate in the shaking of the political plum tree.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidney nerves get weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is simply makeshift. Get a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for these weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly help will come. Free sample test sent on request by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Your health is surely worth this simple test. Sold by all dealers

Mr. Daniel Hinebaugh, who left Oakland with Mrs. Hinebaugh early in the fall to spend the winter months with their children at various points in West Virginia and Maryland, visited relatives in Oakland last week, leaving here on Monday for Morgantown, West Va.

Report all items of interest to this office. They will be appreciated and each item will help to make the paper that much more interesting. We can not get all the news but by your help we can get the lion's share and that is what we wish to do. We want all the news that's news.

Capt. James A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, was at Bond, this county, Monday and Tuesday of this week where he took part in a religious revival being conducted there by the Methodist pastor. The interest manifested in the meeting is immense, everyone attending being imbued with the Spirit.

Mr. Emanuel Hershberger, of Grantsville, as executor of the personal estate of the late Barbara Yoder, whose death occurred at Grantsville several weeks ago, gives the required legal notice to creditors in this paper today. Mr. Hershberger was in Oakland last Tuesday when he qualified as executor before the Orphans' Court.

Mr. James W. Friend, who was for a number of years secretary and treasurer of the Garrett County Telephone Company, but later manager of the Kendall Store Company at Kendall, is having a mercantile building erected at Friendsville and will embark in the general merchandise business as soon as the work is completed.

Men have various ways of carrying money. Grocers, butchers and millers carry it in a wad. Bankers in clean bills, laid full length in a pocketbook. Brokers only fold the bill once, doubling the money as it were. The young business man carries it in his vest pocket. Farmers and drovers in their inside pockets, whether it is $50 or 15 cents.

TWO ALLEGED SMOKE HOUSE THIEVES ARRESTED

John Collins and "Bill" Purnell in Jail Charged With Robbery.

STOLEN MEAT FOUND ON PREMISES

It Was Fully Identified as Having Been Taken From Mrs. Browning's Smoke House Last Thursday Night—One Ham Missing.

Last Thursday night the smoke house on the premises belonging to Mrs. Nancy J. Whetsell, on Oak street, was entered and three hams, the property of her daughter, Mrs. Browning, which were in course of curing, were taken therefrom and carried away.

The following morning the theft was discovered and suspicion for the crime was directed toward John Collins and "Bill" Purnell, the latter residing on Water street, in the rear and adjoining Mrs. Whetsell's property, with an alley intervening, with whom Collins, since the house in which he presumably lived burned last Tuesday night, has been staying. As soon as the State's officers were made acquainted with the facts concerning the theft a search warrant was issued by Justice Teats directing that Purnell's house be searched for the hams. Constable Maffett, accompanied by Ches. Browning, went to Purnell's house and after considerable work located two of the hams in a closet beneath a stairway leading to the second floor of the house. The meat was encased in a burlap sack upon which was piled a considerable quantity of coal, which leads one to believe that the parties expected a visit from the officers.

After the meat had been recovered the alleged thieves, Collins and Purnell, were taken into custody, and given a preliminary hearing before Justice Teats. Both men were vehement in their statements, saying they were unaware that the meat was in the house and how it got there was a mystery to them. What became of the third ham is the only mystery, so the State officers claim, in connection with the case, and an effort has been made to locate it. From one of the hams several pieces had been cut, which no doubt furnished breakfast for those who had the meat in charge.

Justice Teats after hearing the evidence in the case, remanded both parties to jail in default of $300 bail, to await the action of the June grand jury.

Since Collins and Purnell have been in jail both have made statements in which each has endeavored to put the crime upon the other. Purnell says that Collins, the night before the fire occurred which burned the house above referred to, came to this house and said that he intended to burn Hamill (meaning Mr. G. S. Hamill, who owned the burned building and who had issued a landlord's writ against his household effects) out of everything. On the other hand Collins strenuously denies. He declares that Purnell stole he hams; that he also stole meat from the cellar of Charles B. Cropp's residence and chickens from several parties living in Oakland.

Whether or not any dependence is to be placed in the statements of either of the men is an open question. Neither have sterling characters, and it is the general belief that Oakland and the community is better off with both of them in jail, where they will probably remain until they are tried at the June Term of the Circuit Court.

Since the incarceration of Collins he has been very ill and has required the attention nearly every day of the county physician. His ailment is an affection of the kidneys which may terminate fatally within a short time.

Superstition and distrust, with which all societies known as secret orders were at one time viewed by a large number of people, was, happily long ago dispelled, and today the lodge stands as one of the champions of the home and family. Wherever society has reached a high state of development, secret and fraternal orders have their greatest stronghold.

Rev. E. Manges, of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, was called to Accident Monday afternoon to officiate on Tuesday morning at the funeral of Christian Klotz, a well known and highly respected resident of that section of Garrett county, a notice of whose death appears elsewhere in this paper today. Mr. Manges returned to Oakland Tuesday afternoon.

James R. Randall, who died on Tuesday at Augusta, Ga., in his seventieth year, sprang into fame through a single lyric, "Maryland, My Maryland," which he produced in the stress of excitement caused by reading about the Baltimore riot of April 1861, when a Massachusetts regiment on its way to Washington was attacked by an anti-Union mob," says the New York Tribune. "It is curious coincidence that "Dixie" was written in New York by a professional negro minstrel, "My Old Kentucky Home" by a Pennsylvanian, and "Maryland, My Maryland," the South's best war song, by a native of Maryland, a state which never seceded from the Union.

THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN JOHNS.

Expired Suddenly of Heart Disease at Home of Son in Massillon.

Last week this paper made mention of the sudden death of Mr. John Johns, of Mountain Lake Park, which occurred at the home of his son at Massillon, Ohio, on Monday of last week. Since the publication in THE REPUBLICAN was made the following relative to Mr. Johns was received from Massillon, being taken from the Gleaner, a morning newspaper published in that city:

John Johns, aged 74 years, died suddenly at the home of his son, John F. Johns, on Cherry street, at 10:15 o'clock Monday morning, the immediate cause of death being due to heart failure. Mr. Johns had only been confined to his bed for the past two weeks with pneumonia and had expected to be able to sit up Monday. For the past week he had been steadily improving and Sunday passed a comfortable day. Monday morning he felt greatly improved in health and ate a good breakfast. Shortly afterward, he arose in bed, and at this moment was seized with an attack of heart failure, from the effects of which he died about fifteen minutes later. He was conscious to the end and was able to recognize all around him, but his advanced age made it evident it would be impossible for him to recover.

Mr. Johns was born in Cornwall, England, January 29, 1834. He came to this country when he was twenty years old, and settled at Frostburg, Md. On January 30, 1856, he married Miss Harriet Waite, at Frostburg, Md., where their union was blessed with ten children. On January 30, 1906, Mr. and Mrs. Johns celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their son, John E. Johns, in this city. All the children, grandchildren and many friends were present to extend their congratulations. About twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Johns moved to Mountain Lake Park, Md., which has been their home ever since. For the past few winters the aged couple have been spending the chilly months with their children in New York, Cleveland, and this city, they having arrived in Massillon last October. Mr. Johns enlisted in the Union army before he became an American citizen, and served three years during the civil war. The deceased was a life long member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

He is survived by his wife, seven sons, William and John E. Johns, of this city; Samuel B. Johns, of New York; Herbert S., Walter G., and Oscar U. Johns, of Cleveland; and Joseph L. Johns, of Wheeling, W. Va., and three daughters, Mrs. John A. Wagner, of Cleveland; Mrs. Harriet J. Chenowith, of Huntington, Ind., and Mrs Charles Yost, of Massilon.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon from the residence of his son, John E. Johns, on Cherry street, the Rev. J. R. Jacob, officiating

In the statement published in the Baltimore Sun of last Saturday Mr. Murray Vandiver, treasurer of the Senatorial primaries committee, sets forth the amount expended in each of the counties covering the expenses incident to the primaries held on election day. Of the total amount expended in the State Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, chairman of the Democratic committee for this county, received $420 to cover the expenses incurred by him.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co., of Oakland, have contracted with Mr. Joseph M. Conneway, owner of the Mountain View Home, near Fort Pendleton, for the installation of a complete heating and sewerage system of his premises. Water will be derived from a never failing spring and will be rammed into a concrete reservoir to be located on the mountain above Mr. Conneway's house. The volume of water will be considerable and the pressure will be sufficient to force the water to all portions of the farm.

The rural routes were established for the benefit of rural homes, or in other words the farmers. They have proven a greater benefit and blessing to the farmers than was anticipated by the most sanguine. A farmer who has once enjoyed the advantages of the rural mail service hardly knows how to live without it. It did not come to the farmer, however, until he had many times earned it. The farmers are our heaviest taxpayers. What property they have is in plain sight and is taxed, while the city gent, at least many of them, who deals in notes and bonds is enabled to hide his wealth from the assessors. For a quarter of a century the mail has been carried to the city home, not once but many times each day. Finally the big heart of Uncle Sam has reached out to the men who feed the world.

Has Joined The Army.

A report reached Oakland, via Huntington, West Va., yesterday morning, that Mr. H. Byrne Hamill, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hamill, had left that city one day last week for Columbus, Ohio, with the intention of entering the regular army.

TEN ITALIANS AND TWO GIRLS ARRESTED.

The Party Taken Into Custody Yesterday By Sheriff Brown at Bloomington.

MEN WERE LIVING IN CAMP CARS.

They Were Until Recently Employed By The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, And Were Arrested On The Charge of Enticing The Girls.

Yesterday evening's accommodation brought to Oakland the largest bunch of prisoners ever coralled by an officer in Garrett county, the party being made up of ten Italians and two young girls. The men were arrested at Bloomington by Sheriff Brown and the girls at their homes near Frankville.

The warrant for the arrest of the men charged them with having enticed the girls who are 13 and 15 years of age, respectively, from their homes, for immoral purposes.

Sheriff Brown went to Bloomington on an early train yesterday morning and after seeing that all the men were in the cars, which they occupied while working for the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company as trackmen, placed them under arrest, handcuffing them one to the other until his supply of bracelets was exhausted. Leaving the men in charge of the constable at Bloomington he walked to Frankville and there arrested the girls, bringing the twelve prisoners to Oakland on the evening train.

The girls, who are yet children, are named Wilson and Howdershell, and it has been alleged that for several weeks they have been making almost daily visits to the cars occupied by the Italians.

The hearing of the prisoners will be held either today or tomorrow before Justice Gonder.

Married.

PALMER—VEITCH.—Miss Margaret Veitch, daughter of the late Col. John W. Veitch, of Oakland, and of Mrs Annie Howard Veitch, of Washington, D. C., was married on Wednesday, January 15th, in New Orleans, La., to Mr. George Henry Palmer, of New York City.

Convenience, Protection, Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Allegany County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles F. A. Reichelt, late of Allegany County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 6th day of June, 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1907.

MARY A. HETZ,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

ORDER NISI.

J. B. Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure vs Jacob Fazenbaker.

No. 1562 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 8th day of January, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by J. B. Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 6th day of February, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of January, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $100.

E. Z TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

A special meeting of the Stockholders of the Penn Garrett Coal Mining Company, will be held at the office of the Company in Friendsville, Garrett county, Maryland, on

Monday, January 27th, 1908,

at 12 M., for the purpose of taking action in regard to the sale of the Company's property.

C. L. PULLEN, Stockholder.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

February 4th and 5th, 1908,

for the purpose among other business of hearing appeals on assessments and making transfers.

By order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Interesting Incidents In Maryland History.

The General Assembly of Maryland had its origin in the English system of legislative gatherings. The Magna Charta was the foundation stone of English liberties, was the parent of the representation of the people in their law-making bodies. Provision for the General Assembly of the Maryland province was made with the following clause of the charter granted by Charles I. to Cecilus Calvert: "With the advice, assent and approbation of the Free Men of the Same Province, or of the Greater part of them, or of their delegates, or of the great part of them, whom we will, shall be called together for the forming of laws, when, as often as need shall require, by the aforesaid Baron of Baltimore, and his heirs, and in form which shall seem best to him or them."

While the Virginia Assembly initiated government by the people in the New World in 1619, yet to the sturdy English settlers of Maryland is due the credit of bringing to life an independent legislative body of the people far in advance of their times, just as the Maryland Religious Toleration Act was far ahead of the prevailing civilization of the Old World.

The first Lord Proprietor died before the charter was delivered to him, but the great document was delivered to his son, Cecilus Calvert, second Lord Baltimore. The proprietor reserved to himself the right to frame laws for the government of the province. It was provided that such laws should be approved by the people, except in cases of emergency, when the authority vested in the Lord Proprietor was almost absolute.

Under the provisions of the charter the freemen of the province were convened at St. Marys in the early part of 1635. Little is known of the legislation of the body, the records having been destroyed, because the legislative acts were declared to be illegal. Lord Baltimore was still in England fostering emigration, when he received certain laws which had been sent to him for his approval. As this was a reversal of the provisions of the charter, Lord Baltimore vetoed the laws. He then set to work to frame a complete code for the government of the province and directed that the legislature be convened January 25, 1638.

When the legislature met at that time the laws digested by Calvert, were presented to it for its approval in the place of those which he vetoed. But the people, determined that the time to strike for absolute freedom had arrived, charter or no charter, Lord Baltimore's code was rejected in its entirety, and the legislature began to frame its own system of laws.

Forty-one bills were adopted by this legislature, and Calvert, acting under the authority of the charter, vetoed them all. The controversy was not long. Calvert was too wise and just a man to permit a point like this to interfere with the prosperity and welfare of the Marylanders, and he concluded that his power to veto any bill of which he disapproved was sufficient to protect his rights, so he gracefully submitted to the will of the people.

The laws enacted by Maryland's first legislature show that this body possessed a remarkable adaptability for judicious legislation and speaks volumes for the inherent quality of "home rule" of the first settlers of Maryland.

The earliest assemblies were primary affairs. The governor of the province issued writs of summons to the members of the Council, as the legislative assembly was then called, and to a few others as often as he thought wise. Some of those thus summoned in person, such as commanders of hundreds, were directed to encourage the attendance of such persons as they saw fit, and to give all other freemen of the hundred the privilege to attend in person or to choose delegates. As a result many proxies were given, and complaint arose that the governor and secretary were able to control the assembly. Until 1650 the proprietary claimed the sole right of directing how the Assembly should be constituted, but in that year and ever afterward each of the hundreds elected from one to three delegates. Thus the representative system was inaugurated.

In the early years all freemen as well as freeholders, were not only entitled to a seat in the Assembly, but were liable to fine for failure to attend in person or by proxy. A property qualification was imposed in 1670 and was required under the Constitution of 1776. It was removed by an amendment to the Constitution.

By the Acts of 1650 the Assembly was divided into two houses—the upper house to stand for the rights and interests of the proprietary, while the lower house stood for the rights and interests of the people.

The local unit of representation was the hundred until 1654, when the county became the unit and the writs of election summoned from one to four delegates from each county.

The last meeting of the General Assembly under the proprietary government was held on March 23, 1774. On June 13, 1776, Governor Eden issued writs for a new assembly to be held on July 25. It was his last official act, and the convention resolved that the writs be not obeyed.

The provincial convention met June 24, 1774, and under its authority the Constitutional Convention met on August 14, 1776. The Declaration of Rights was agreed to by the convention on November 2, 1776, and the Constitution on November 8, 1776.

The first General Assembly, under the authority of the state, was convened by the Council of Safety, February, 1777. The Constitution of 1776 provided that the Assembly should meet annually on the first Monday of November, and, if necessary, oftener.

The Geneaal Assembly of 1658 may be said to be the first which made its impress upon the times and upon Maryland history. To Mr. E. S. Riley, of Annapolis, is due the credit of rescuing from oblivion the proceedings of the early sessions of the assemblies of the province. The first Afsembly—that of 1635, as stated as declared to be illegal. The acts of the next Assembly, which was convened in 1637, were declared by the lord proprietor to be invalid. In other words, he wielded his power of veto with vehemence. Twelve members were sufficient to transact business at the session in 1638. The representation was by act defined to be as follows: "Everyone being of the Council of this Province and any other Gentlemen of able judgment and quality Summoned by writ, and the Lord of Every Manor within this Province after Manor be Erected, and Every Hundred was to elect and Choose someone, two or more able and sufficient men for the hundred to come to the General Assembly."

One of the important acts of this assembly allowed books to contain "felonies, provided that the offender in these felonies shall suffer death unless the offender can read clerke like in the judgment of the court, and then the offender lose his hand, or be burned in the hand or forehead with a hot iron, and shall forfeit all his or her lands at the time of the offence committed (save to his wife or widow her dower and to his heirs his or her inheritance)."

At the same sessions the rights of the churches in the province were confirmed and the time of indentured servants was limited. The Assembly met at St. John's instead of St. Marys City, where the first session was held. The next session was held in St. Marys City.

The next General Assembly convened was in 1640. It was in session from October 12 until October 30. Its most important acts were those prohibiting the exportation of corn and defining what clothing shall be given servants at the expiration of their terms of indenture.

In the early sessions there was but one Assembly. The governor, the councilors and freemen met together, with the governor presiding. In his absence a lieutenant governor presided. In 1642 an effort was made to provide for two houses of the Assembly, but it was not successful. Acts were passed at this session for the punishment of drunkenness and swearing.

Proceedings of the session of 1642 are noteworthy because they reveal the odd character of the oath and of the rules under which the Assembly worked. The oath follows:

"You shall swear that you will be true and faithful to the right honorable Cecilius, Lord and Proprietor of this Province of Maryland, and that you will defend and maintain to the utmost of your Power all his rights, Interests and Royal Jurisdictions and Seignory into and over the said Province and the Islands thereunto belonging, according to his Lordship's charter of the said Province, under the Great seal of England, and shall faithfully serve him as his Lieutenant General of the said Province, and in all other Offices committed to your charge by his Lordship's Commission to them; you shall also swear that you will do equal right and Justice to the poor and to the rich within the said Province after your cunning wit, and power, and according to the Laws and Ordinances of the said Province; you shall not for fear, favour or Affection, or any Cause let hinder justice; but shall truly execute the said Office according to your Commission, and you shall not know of any attempt against his Lordship's right and Dominion into or over the said Province and the People therein, but you shall resist and Oppose it with the utmost of your power and make the same known with Convenient speed to his Lordship, and you shall in all things faithfully counsell and advise his Lordship according to your heart and Conscience; so help you God and the contents of this Book."

The following were the rules:

Any one of the house not appearing after the third beating of the drum shall forfeit 20 l. of tobacco.

For the morning the drum is to beat as near as may be to sunrising, and an hour's distance between each beating. In the afternoon the first beating is to be at one of the clock, and then an hour's distance between each beating.

None are to speak above once in one day to any several matter or clause of any bill without leave of the house. If two or more rise together the lieutenant general is to determine who shall speak first.

None are to use any undecent, taunting or reviling words to the naming or personating of any member in the house or any other misbehave himself in his speech upon pain of censure by the house.

Every bill is to be read twice before it be engrossed, and after engrossment to be put to the vote at a third reading.

In 1647 these rules were amended and enlarged. They were as follows:

That noe one of the howse shall use any revyling speeches or name any one by name but by another signification Viz. the Gent. that spoke last or the like.

That noe one of the howse shall use att one reading to any Bill wth lycence of the Gour. And if 2 psnons rise up together, the Gour, shall appoynt who shall speake first. And no one shall interrupt another, or speake till the other hath ended.

That noe one shall deliur his opinion or speake to any bill sitting. But shall stand up reuerently and bareheaded directing his speech to the Gour.

That every Bill proposed to the howse shall be read 3 several dayes before it shall be uoted to engrosmt. And that betwixt euery such reading one day shall be intermitted unless wth special lycence of the Gour.

That before the grall day of Sessions for the enacting of all the Lawes, notice shall bee gyuen 3 dayes before, att the least to all the County of St. Maries to make their personall appearance, if they shall like thereof.

That noe one shall come into the howse of Assembly (whilst the howse it sett), with any weapon uppon perill of such fine or censure as the howse thinke fit.

Any of the 16 members bowned to attend the Assembly tht shall be absent from the howse att the hower & place appointed, shall be fyned (after the number of Ten of them shall be put with the Gour. & the Clerk), in the Summe of 50 l Tob. unless lawful excuse shall be shewen; to be imployed in defraying the charges of this pnt Assembly.

All misdemeaners wch shall happen in the howse shall be censured & fyned by the howse. To be employed as afore.

Any one of the sixteen members tht shall not attend the house, eyther through sickness or other occasion, shall have power to constitute another Proxie in his roome during such absence.

In 1642 an effort was made to enact a law to prohibit all persons from leaving the province, but it failed.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

HOW TO HAVE GOOD ROADS

Practical Suggestions on Road Building by Department of Agriculture.

The U. S. Office of Public Roads will supply this paper with practical articles on various features of road building and maintenance, which will be published from time to time. Our subscribers are urged to give this matter careful consideration, and are requested to forward to this office for transmission to the office of Public Roads any practical question which they desire answered relating to road construction and maintenance. Questions and answers will be published by this paper at suitable intervals

No. 1, Series A.

We may recognize the value of hard and durable roads in all parts of the country, but still the fact remains that for a long time to come the majority of the roads will be composed of earth. Furthermore, in about nine months out of the year, the earth road, if properly cared for, is reasonably satisfactory. For many agricultural districts, it is the only road at present available. Hence, these communities should set themselves seriously to work to learn the best methods of maintaining earth roads and of getting the maximum service from them. Prosperity comes to the country to a great extent through the prosperity of the farmers. This fact strongly suggests the importance of giving the earth road every possible care and attention in its location, drainage, construction and maintenance.

An earth road composed of water holding soil should be exposed to the sun and air as freely as possible, as comparison between the shaded and sunny portions of such a road will easily indicate. This should be accomplished by clearing a sufficient amount of trees and undergrowth away from the road. It must be remembered, however, that sandy and gravelly roads require moisture, and in these cases some shade should be retained. Furthermore, trees are beneficial along river banks and on steep grades subject to washing.

Drainage is one of the most important points to consider in connection with an earth road. The majority of earth roads in all mountainous and hilly districts have too much drainage. Occasionally a road will be found with five ditches, three in the middle made by the horses' hoofs and by wheels of the vehicles, and two on the sides. All well-constructed earth roads are supposed to have no more than two ditches, one on each side of the traveled roadway. Keep the water out of the middle of the road by giving it a crown or elevation in the center of 7½ inches above the top of the inner slope of the ditch for a 20 foot road, and where the hills are a little steep make the crown 10 inches. With a crown of about 1 inch to the foot from the center to the sides, the ditches which are often built across the road on steep grades to deflect the water will not be needed. Instead of carrying water across the road in open ditches, tile or concrete drains should, if possible, be provided. They should have sufficient capacity and fall to carry the maximum amount of water that is expected to flow through them at any one time. The capacity is increased in proportion to the fall or grade; for instance, 12-inch pipe laid on a one per cent. grade will carry 1,800 gallons per minute, while the same pipe laid on a 2 per cent. grade will carry 2,500 gallons per minute. Furthermore, a culvert laid flat will soon fill up, while one having a good incline will keep itself clear.

In the maintenance of an earth road, avoid the mistake of changing the natural order of things. Naturally the soil is found on top and the clay on the bottom. If this order is reversed in constructing a road, the result will be less satisfactory than if the soil be left at the top of the road, for soil makes better surface to a road than clay. If the road bed is largely clay to start with, will be well to place sandy soil or clean sand on top. A covering of 6 to 10 inches of sand upon clay that persists in breaking up into deep mudholes will usually be satisfactory, and if sand enough be added, this clay will cease to make mud. If the roadbed in composed of sand it can be improved by an application of clay.

The rule for a serviceable earth road, then, is as follows: make ditches on each side and keep them open; haul sand and gravel upon section needing this treatment: use a road machine and a split log drag judiciously (a full description of which will be contained in a later article); follow the stitch in time" rule and give an earth road the same careful persistent attention you would give your prize acre, factory or store, and it will pay as large a profit in proportion to your individual outlay.

GIRL DANCED WITH SKELETON.

A San Francisco Maid Must be Credited With Some Nerve.

This was a story of something that was expected to happen and did not. There was once a skeleton at the Hopkins Academy of Art supposed to be that of a celebrated French dancing master whose field of usefulness was now confined to the anatomy room, where he was daily observed by a bevy of girl students. The ex-dancing master was mounted on a base with wheels for the convenience of locomotion. When one of the customary dances was held a number of girls wandered into the anatomy room between the numbers and began to trifle with the old armor, statuary and other objects. The skeleton of the old dancing master was dragged into the middle of the room just as the band struck up a waltz. The floor was polished, and the wheels slid over it with marvelous ease. An idea suddenly occurred to the youngest and prettiest of the girls, and she acted upon it. "It is long since monsieur has had the pleasure of a dance," she said, smiling bewitchingly. "Will he dance with me?" Seizing her card she wrote, "Monsieur the Skeleton" upon it. Then encircling the bony digits with her own warm fingers she sped away with the skeleton over the polished floor. "I dance with death," she cried, and laughed gayly as she whirled. This is where something should have happened, but nothing did. The girls grew nervous and dragged her from the room. The old dancing master remained alone in the middle of the floor, and the waltz swung on.—San Francisco Call.

TARIFF AND WAGES

HOW THE VOLUME AND REWARDS OF LABOR ARE AFFECTED.

Convincing Reasons Why the Man Who Works for Wages Must Invariably Fare Better Under a Protective Tariff Than Under Free Trade Conditions.

In the Labor World, August 17, of Newark and Jersey City, appears a dignified, fair and truthful editorial, entitled "The Reason Why," which answers the question:

"Why should the man who works for wages be in favor of a protective tariff?"

It is an important question and one well worthy of the attention given to it by the Labor World. Printed in a newspaper which so ably represents the views and interests of many thousands of New Jersey wage earners, the article should and doubtless will have a wide reading. It is a healthy, wholesome sign when labor journals of this class take up the question of the true relation of a protective tariff to work and wages. The Labor World's exposition is clear and convincing. No fair-minded and intelligent man can successfully confute its conclusion:

"Low tariff always means low prices for labor's products and low wages for labor. A protective tariff always means good prices for what labor produces and high wages for labor.

"This is why the man who works for wages should always be in favor of a protective tariff."

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

A CAMPAIGN EPISODE.

"Andy" Held the Advance Position After the Regiment Fell Back.

With deep interest the survivors of the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, are awaiting the appearance of the forthcoming history of that regiment, which will come from the press in a few weeks. The records of the war department, the pocket diaries of officers and men, the faded letters from the soldier boys at the front to loved ones at home, as well as the memories of the few survivors, have been searched for facts in order that the achievements of this famous fighting regiment, in which Pittsburg was so deeply interested 45 years ago, may not fade entirely into oblivion, says Private John T. Porter, in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Truly "Truth is stranger than fiction." No dime-novel literature ever contained more thrilling adventures, more hair-breadth escapes or more individual deeds of heroism—not foolhardiness nor dare-devilism, but cool valor and pluck—than this history of the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth.

To the schoolboy as well as the psychologist the story of Andrew White is replete with human interest and affords rich material for reflection.

This former boy was mustered into the service with the regiment while he was yet 13 years old. He was quite large for his age, having the appearance of being much older than he really was. Almost illiterate he had polished manners, the correct use of language and the dignified deportment of a West Pointer. But notwithstanding these accomplishments he was still only a child in years and feelings and as such did not take military discipline at all seriously.

If he did not take kindly to disagreeable picket duty "Andy," as he was familiarly called, would not go on duty. If the skirmish line appeared an uncomfortable or dangerous place he would not be found there. Desiring to visit his home he did not consider the formality of securing a furlough necessary, but went without one. Impervious to advice, admonition or threats, he did about as he pleased. As one of his officers has expressed it, "Andy" was like the Irishman's flea, for when you attempted to put your finger upon him he wasn't there. Under the same circumstances an older man would have been made to suffer severely for such erratic conduct, but this boy's extreme youth and apparent constitutional irresponsibility saved him from severe penalties.

When Gen. Grant assumed command of the armies and initiated the Wilderness campaign on May 5, 1864, with the avowed determination to "fight it out on that line if it took all summer," "Andy" White's nature seemed to change.

All symptoms of his constitutional defect disappeared and his bearing became courageous. During the following 18 days of continuous fighting he was always at the front ready for duty, always answered to his name at roll call, and never shirked any dangerous service. On June 18, 1864, when the regiment made the memorable charge on the enemy's works in front of Petersburg, which resulted in such dreadful carnage in its ranks, "Andy's" conduct was heroic. Escaping unharmed, he risked his life many times in rescuing wounded men who had fallen on the field close to the enemy's works. In the darkness of the night he crept up almost under the enemy's fortifications in search of dead and wounded men.

On June 22, a few days later, when the regiment was forced back from an advanced position it had taken, "Andy" White held his ground. He was missed from his company, and on a search instituted the next day he was found still in his advanced position, but badly wounded in the leg. He suffered an amputation, and upon recovery was honorably discharged from the service. From that time to the date of his death a few years ago his career was an eventful one, which, however, has nothing to do with his military service.

Recasting Old Guns.

The completeness of the restoration of "Old Ironsides," on which the navy department has been at work for some time, has lately been attested by the casting of the big guns with which the ship will be armed. There are 44 of them, duplicates of the famous old pieces with which the Constitution fought its famous battle with the Guerriere. Each of them weighs 3,400 pounds, exclusive of its carriage. The carriages are also faithful reproductions, made after old drawings and prints. When all the work on the Constitution is finished, the modern visitor who steps aboard will have the sensation of passing into another century in history and another era in naval architecture and equipment; and the chances are that no one will ever again want to "tear her tattered ensign down."

Garibaldi Honored at Paris.

The statue of Garibaldi, Italy's gift to the city of Paris, was unveiled a few days ago in Lowendal Square, Paris, with imposing civil and military ceremonies, in the presence of President Fallieres, the cabinet ministers, the diplomatic corps, and other distinguished persons. Foreign Minister Pichon and Gen. Canzio, Garibaldi's son-in-law, made the principal addresses. The feature of the occasion was a defile before the monument of the French veterans of the army of the Vosges and deputations of Italian veterans who fought with Garibaldi in the defense of France during the Franco-German war of 1870-71.

TOMATO CANNING INDUSTRY IN MARYLAND.

Forty Per Cent. of The Canned Tomatoes of The Country Packed on The Eastern Shore.

The busiest days on many farms of the fertile Eastern Shore region, Maryland, come with the tomato canning season, when, from the latter part of August to the middle of October, the work of gathering and delivering tomatoes to the factories combines with the concurrent activities of corn harvesting, fall ploughing and seeding of winter wheat. At almost every railroad station and important steamboat landing the canning factories are exerting every effort to handle the wagon loads of tomatoes as they stream in from the surrounding fields.

Amid this intense activity one could scarcely repress a feeling of amazement at the strides made in the development of horticulture during the nineteenth century. It was as late as about 1830 that the tomato, or "love apple," was only sparingly cultivated as an ornamental plant, and was generally believed to possess poisonous qualities.

The cultivation of the tomato on the Eastern Shore as an important field crop had its inception with the introduction of the canning industry in Harford County about 1870. After this beginning the industry grew rapidly, and gradually spread southward until it has attained considerable importance in every county to the north of and contiguous to the Choptank River. Maryland stands at the head of all the states in the output of canned tomatoes, the average annual pack being about 40 per cent of the total for the country. According to the estimate of "The American Grocer," a recognized authority, the average annual pack for the United States for the five years 1902 to 906 was 8,971,939 cases of two dozen cans each, estimated as three-pound standard stock, while the average for Maryland was 3,626,855 cases. For a number of years Harford County has produced and canned more tomatoes than any other county of the country. The output of Caroline county alone now amounts to about one-tenth of the total pack of the United States. Indiana, California, Delaware and New Jersey rank in the order named next after Maryland in the production of canned tomatoes.

While some canneries grow a part of their supply, the majority depend largely upon contracts with farmers. Co-operation between canner and grower in the ownership and management of the factory is not generally practised, but the usual contract agreement imposes at least a spirit of joint action in the management of the crop. The canner desiring a certain tonnage of good quality fruit contracts for a stipulated acreage to be grown of approved seed. Inasmuch as the farmer cannot anticipate the season and consequent size of crop, acreage contracts are much safer, for the grower at least, than those requiring delivery of a certain quantity.

From time to time a great many varieties have been grown; old ones have been superceded by new introductions. At present the Stone is held in highest esteem, although there are those who prefer other varieties, as the Matchless, which not a few claim possesses a better color. Experience teaches that too much dependence should not always be put in the name, as climate and variety in soil have such influence that not infrequently it happens the best varieties are those which have been developed locally and have no trade names. The very popular Jersey Red, of New Jersey, for instance, is a development and improvement of a tomato introduced at some former time. Although yield is a prime consideration, the quality of the manufactured product has come to be an important factor, and it should be the aim to select not only prolific varieties, but at the same time those which produce large, smooth, solid, red fruits that ripen evenly. Conditions are such as make it impracticable for the canner to make any close distinction at the factory between good and poor varieties, notwithstanding such differences may make considerable variation in the net output of the canned product. Inasmuch as improvement in the quality of the fruit results in a better canned product and consequently in a high price for both the raw and manufactured article, and, further, in consideration of the necessity of putting on the market a product of standard superiority so as the better to meet competition from other canning sections, particularly those new sections that are making such rapid strides in this industry, it devolves upon the grower in a spirit of self-protection to produce only fruit of the highest quality.

The extensive type of soil locally called "medium loam" or "red clay bottom," and which has been mapped by the bureau of soils of the national Department of Agriculture as sassafras sandy loans, is unquestionably the best tomato soil of Eastern Shore, Maryland. This soil consists of a brown or grayish brown, medium heavy sandy loam, underlain at a depth of from nine to fourteen-inches by a reddish yellow loam, which generally passes into a much coarser material at about thirty inches. This rather open substratum insures excellent underdrainage to the soil. Good crops also can be grown on the heavier sassafras loam and fair crops on the still heavier stiff red clay land or sassafras silt loam. White oak land, which in normal seasons makes only moderate yields of a mother inferior tomatto, should be used for grass and wheat, to which crops it is very much better adapted. The yields vary from three to twelve tons an acre, according to the character of the soils and soil management.

Land intended for tomatoes is broken generally to a depth of four to six inches and it brought into good condition by repeatedly harrowing. Fall ploughing should be more generally practised, as in this way the soil can be put in the best possible condition for stirring up and maintaining a favorable supply of moisture. All land supporting a vegetable growth and land that may have assumed a compact, unfavorable structure through previous cultivation to crops not requiring intertillage, like wheat and grass, should be broken in the fall so as to convert the organic matter into active humus and subject clods to the refining of winter freezes. The profitableness of such treatment has been demonstrated on the better tomato soils by some of the most successful farmers.

After thorough preparation the land is laid off in checks so as to place the hills something like four feet apart each way. The plants grown on a rick bed, preferably in a sheltered situation, are set out, generally by hand, some time between the first of May and the middle of June. Cultivation begins almost immediately and continues at the rate of about once a week until the plants have attained nearly three-fourths full growth. The crop is tilled very much the same way as corn, the first ploughing being deep and each subsequent cultivation shallower, so as to avoid injury to the rapidly spreading root system, and to produce a surface mulch as a means of conserving moisture.

Tomatoes are nearly always fertilized. Various grades of commericial brands are used, the average analysis running from 8 to 10 per cent phosphoric acid, 4 to 6 per cent potash, and about 1 to 2½ per cent nitrogen. The usual method is to apply first broadcast some time before setting out the plants, then in the hill about the time of setting, and at the rate of from four hundred to about six hundred pounds an acre.

Or if its the purpose to grow a large, prolific plant rather than get early maturity, as is desired in crops grown for early market, the fertilizing should be such as to stimulate good, steady, perfect growth. Slow acting fertilizers, however, like cottonseed meal and coarse barnyard manure tend to stimulate active growth late in the sesson at the expense of of maturity, endangering the crop to frost; on the other hand, fertilizers, carrying readily available nitrogen, like fishscrop and best, well decompose stable manure, when applied heavily tend to produce too much vine. Such fertilizers should be used very cautiously for tomatoes. In this connection Professor L. C. Corbett says: "Since the tomato belongs to the potash consuming class of plants, the fertilizers used should be especially rich in potash. It is not to be understood, however, that it is not necesary to apply nitrogen, for frequently soils are used that are either not naturally well adapted to the plant or have not been previously well applied with vegetable matter containing nitrogen. On such soils additional nitrogen is very important, and nitrate of soda is one of the best forms to use, as it is absorbed fully by the roots, thus encouraging an early and vigorous growth of plant and a normal development of fruit. Slow acting organic forms of nitrogen, on the other hand, frequently begin to feed the plant and cause its rapid growth when the energies should be concentrated in the growth and maturity of the fruit."

Nitrogen should be largely supplied by growing legumes, especially cowpeas and red and crimson clover. Although not generally practiced, there are instances which show that the cowpeas turned under green in the fall, in conjunction with applications of lime at the rate of from twenty to fifty bushels an acre, very materially benefit a succeeding crop of tomatoes.

Addition of lime as a corrective of unfavorable soil conditions is of the greatest importance. This is particularly true in the case of those heavier soils that tend to run together and compact with saturating rains and those soils that have become sour, have accumulated deleterious substances or assumed an unfavorable structure, which conditions freqently are induced in the soil by long cultivation with out due attention to rotation. The value of lime in this connection is interestingly illustrated in the case of the Miller clay, a very heavy alluvial shil derived fron the Permian red beds of Oklahoma and Northwest Texas and spread out over the bottom lands of rivers rising in that region. The high clay content would make an extremely unyielding, impervious soil were it not for the presence of lime in the proportion that induces such floculation of constituent particles as affects an open structure favorable to good air drainage and circulation of soil moisture, making it as nearly perfect in structure as any clay soil known. Tomatoes of the most excellent quality are grown on this soil in the bottoms of the Brazon River, Texas. Lime applied to the broken surface of fall ploughed land at the rate of from twenty to fifty bushels an acre, according as the soil is light or heavy, has been found very beneficial with the soil of the Eastern Shore, and especially so in those rotations which bring tomatoes to follow grain, wheat, cowpeas or clover.

Tomatoes do not do so well after tomatoes as on sod, wheat stubble or corn land, and generally not go well after corn as after grass or wheat. The crop improves land wonderfully, not only by shreding it effectively, but also by supplying good fertilizing material in the vines and refuse fruit. Wheat does markedly better succeding a crop of tomatoes than after corn.

As the bulk of the crop is contracted for at a fairly regular price, the cost of canning varies with the price of labor and the size of the crop. With an average crop ripening fast enough to keep the canning regularly supplied and the labor regularly employed, there is nearly always a fair margin of profit for the manufacturer. Short crops mean much loss to the grower and are not necessarily profitable to the canner, inasmuch as an increase in the price of canned goods consequent on a short pack may more than balance the increase in the cost of production. The labor employed in the canneries is made up largely of negroes and foreigners. Bohemian, Italians and Poles come over from Baltimore regularly to work in the field and cannery. They live very economically in shanties and earn from $1 to $1.75 a day.

At the ruling contract price of $9 a ton there is a very fair profit in growing tomatoes on the well drained, well managed, sandy loams and clays of the Eastern Shore. There is a comparatively large area of these soils and undoubtedly the acreage cultivated to the crop would be increased extensive were it not for the potent factor—scarcity of labor. In regard to acreage extension, it should be remembered that in the long run an overproduction hurts both the canner and grower: that the industry can be maintained upon a profitable basis the better by producidg normal crops of superior article and gradually increasing the acreage to meet increased demand. The region is well suited to general farming and other truck crops to justify overproduction of tomatoes. There are soils that are well adapted to wheat, corn, grass, strawberries, asparagus, dewberries, pears and a variety of crops. The yields of wheat on the judiciously managed heavier types are as good as those made anywhere. Strawberries are profitably grown on the lighter soils, and even on swampy types when reclaimed. The strawberry industry has attained considerable importance in Caroline County, particnlarly in the neighborhood of Ridgely. Sugar corn and garden peas are important and profitable canning crops.

The introduction of the tomato as a field crop has done much to stimulate diversification and intensive farming in this region of fertile soils, abundant transportation facilities and favored situation with respect to large markets. On its pre-eminent adaptation to a diversity of products Eastern Shore, Maryland, is destined to attain a very high state of agricultural developmeet and to remain a garden spot worthy the name.

MUST BUILD UP THEIR BUSINESS.

The Country Merchant Can Use The Local Press to Great Advantage.

The sentiment exhibited in the numerous articles now printed in country newspapers for the purpose of inducing people to trade at home instead of sending their money to mail order houses is good and noble, but we doubt if it appeals to the multitude who patronize these mail order houses.

The best way in which the merchants in the towns and smaller cities can fight the mail order houses in to advertise. They know most of their patrons personally, can show them the goods before they buy them, have many other advantages over the mail order houses and in almost every instance can sell just as cheap, if not cheaper.

If the home merchant lacks foresight and is too penurious to properly advertise his goods, why should the publisher exert himself to keep the trade at home for him? If solicitations on the part of the publisher fail to educate the merchant to the fact that he must advertise if he wants to keep up with the procession, then nothing is left to the merchant but to learn in the school of experience, and if the teachings of that renowned school are of no effect on him, then there is no place for him and eventually his place in the commercial world will be taken up by some more enterprising competitor.—Buckeye Informer.

Subscribe for The Republican.

BETTER ROADS IN MARYLAND ARE BADLY NEEDED

There is a Strong Sentiment Throughout the State for Improvement.

In every part of the State there is a strong sentiment for the improvement of roads on an extensive scale. In various counties organizations with such an end in view have already been formed. Aggressive and progressive men are leading the movements and new associations are being planned.

While the immediate purpose of most of the organized and unorganized activity is to have roadbuilding enterprises carried through by the counties, with the co-operation of the State under the provisions of the Shoemaker law, nearly every man who personally uses a road is looking forward to the day when the State shall take over all of its main roads and relocate and improve them until they are good or even better than those of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and other Northern States, and foreign countries.

Although much is being done creditably by individuals, the counties, independently and with the co-operation of the Highways Commission, to give certain neighborhoods stretches of a mile or more of good roads, there is only one big roadbuilding enterprise being undertaken by the State—the Baltimore and Washington road, which has been given the title of State road No. 1.

Each of the separated strips of good road that has been built has increased the value of the abutting property, in some cases several hundred per cent., but even a greater benefit to be derived by rebuilding important thoroughfares throughout their whole length is the securing of easy intercommunication among various points.

It is well known that in the last 10 years, while the subordinate county roads have been improved, the main arteries of traffic have been growing worse, and that unless some decisive step is taken by the Legislature in the next few years not a few of the main roads will have to be abandoned and traffic move by roundabont courses.

In several counties drivers with heavily laden wagons have been heard to say: "Yes, of conrse, it is shorter to go by the old road, but it is in such terrible condition that we follow the longer route because it is better than running the risk of being stalled or breaking down. Years ago, when the turnpike company was making money and we did not have these side roads, we used to go by the old pike, which was then a good road."

The situation which exists has prevailed at times in other States. The problem, in the opinion of many persons, can be solved in only one way—the acquisition of the main roads by the counties or State.

The theory of private ownership of main turnpikes was never accepted as sound by the pioneers of Maryland or of the Federal Government. In the beginning the national Government took up the question of building roads and the old National pike was so built. Baltimore county started to build its own roads, but the money was not forthcoming, and charters were granted to private corporations to do the work. There are at present about 50 companies in the State which collect toll on about 400 miles of roadway. Nearly every year some of these companies discharge their tollgate keepers and suspend operations, letting the counties take title to the property without a struggle. Counting the toll roads, former toll roads and those of which the history is clouded, there are 2,021 miles of main roads in the State.

Of main roads in a more restricted sense—those that connect important towns with each other and with Baltimore—the mileage is much less. About 500 miles of good roads would be sufficient to bring the leading towns of the Western Shore into closer touch with Baltimore and to work wonders with the value of property.

No doubt extensive roadbuilding by the State along turnpikes traversing several counties would give impetus to the roadbuilding activities of the counties. It can almost be predicted that the counties will do more year by year for their crossroads than the State will be able to do on the main pikes.

Those interested and acquainted with the situation believe that annual appropriations of about $500,000 for several years would be a feasible and proper plan and would ultimately result in a network of admirably and much-needed roadways.

GENERALS LEE AND M'CLELLAN

An Incident of The First Meeting of The Two Soldiers.

The first meeting between General George B. McClellan and General Robert E. Lee happened in Mexico during the war with that country. McClellan was a lieutenant of engineers, and Lee was a major on the staff of General Winfield Scott.

One day McClellan was walking across a field when he saw General Scott and his staff approaching on horseback. As they drew near Major Lee reined up his horse and asked the lieutenant if he did not know that he was disobeying orders. His tone was sharp and angry. McClellan answered that he was not aware of any disobedience and asked for an explanation. Lee replied that all officers had been told to remain in the quarters, awaiting orders, and asked for the lieutenant's name.

McClellan gave his name and said that no order of that kind had reached him. But Lee in a peremptory tone ordered him to go to his quarters and remain there. Then he rode off and rejoined General Scott and the staff, who had not stopped. McClellan went to his quarters, as he had been directed to do, but was quite indignant at the way in which Lee had treated him, for he had not knowingly committed a breach of discipline.

He had just finished telling his brother officers the incident when he was informed that an officer was outside the tent asking for him. On going out he was much surprised to see Major Lee, who saluted him with respect.

"Lieutenant McClellan," the major said, "I am afraid that I was not courteous in my manner to you a little while ago and I have called to apologize."

"I assured him that it was all right," said General McClellan in telling the story, "and he rode off after making a low bow, leaving me in admiration of a superior officer who so promptly and generously repaired an error."—Chicago News.

The finest Coffee Substitute ever made has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. You don't have to boil it twenty or thirty minutes. "Made in a minute," says the doctor. "Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee Imitation is made from pure toasted cereals or grains, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—were he to unknowingly drink it for Coffee. Sold by all dealers

You Read the Other Fellow's Ad

You are reading this one. That should convince you that advertising in these columns is a profitable proposition; that it will bring business to your store. The fact that the other fellow advertises is probably the reason he is getting more business than is falling to you. Would it not be well to give the other fellow a chance

To Read Your Ad In These Columns

HOOPPOLE ROAD BLOCKED.

Main Highway Leading to County Seat Closed by Snow.

Hooppole Road, the main thoroughfare leading from the Northern section of the county to Oakland, has been closed since the 7th inst., upon which day the snow came and drifted the road shut. At some points in the road the snow is six feet deep and farmers living along it have warned persons not to pass through their fields or trespass in any other way to get around the drifted portions of the road.

That portion of the highway most effected by the drifts lies between the David Enlow farm and the Peter Brant farm, four miles north of Oakland. The star route mail from Oakland to Accident and intermediate points, instead of being taken over Hooppole, is carried via Mountain Lake Park and Armistead road, necessitating an additional drive of two or three miles.

They Want Pastors.

Accident, this county; Brandonville and Egion, Preston county, West Va., adjoining the Garrett county line, all connected with the Maryland Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church, are calling for pastors.

Church Services.

UNITED BRETHREN.

The second quarterly meeting of the Loch Lynn circuit, U. B. church, will be he held at Underwood, on the 29th and 30th of January. Quarterly conference will convene on the 29th at 2.30 p. m. Preaching by the Presiding Elder at 6.30 p. m. All are cordially invited to attend.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at 10:30 a. m., and at 7.30 p. m.

Services each evening next week at 7.30 Revival services to begin Sunday night. We invite all Christian people to join us in an effort for the salvation of the unsaved about us, and for the quickening of the church life of the community. All are cordially invited to attend and participate in our services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

An address upon Anti-Saloon League work by Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord at 10.30 a. m.

Preaching at Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 7.30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Deer Park at 11 a. m.; at Elder Hill at 7 p. m.

Everybody invited to be be present.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E. CHURCH.

Services will be held in St. Matthew's Protestant Episcopal church, Oakland, Sunday, January 26th, at 11 o'clock, by Rev. G. M. Murray, of Baltimore City. All are cordially invited.

Wants the Children.

Bert Mason, of Gormania, W. Va., through H. R. Donnelly, his attorney, secured a writ of habeas corpus to secure the custody of his children, Stella and Roy Mason, who, it is alleged, are unlawfully detained by Mr. Kuffman, on Columbia avenus, Cumberland. The case is set for a hearing Tuesday morning at 9:15.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Anti-Saloon League Talk.

On next Sunday morning the pulpit of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church in Oakland will be occupied by Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, of the Oakland bar, who will make an address upon the work of the Anti-Saloon League. The meeting will be held at 10.30 o'clock to which all are cordially invited.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

THE DEATH RECORD.

CHARLES DURST.

Charles Durst, who resided near Grantsville, this county, died on Saturday evening last of a complication of diseases. He was nearly 43 years of age and is survived by a widow and eight children. He was a son of Samuel Durst, a well known war veteran of Garrett county. The funeral of the deceased occurred on Monday, with interment at Springs, Pa.

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ.

In the Bittinger settlement, of paralysis, on the 19th inst., Christian Klotz, aged 67 years, 9 months and 3 days. Interment at Accident, where he had been a member of the German General Synod of the Lutheran church for many years. Mr. Klotz was born in Birkelbach, near Entebrich, in the Kingdom of Prussia, Germany. Mrs. Klotz died last February. To this christian couple were born nine children, five boys and four girls. One son and one daughter preceded their parents to the spirit world. Mr. Klotz was an honest, upright Christian citizen, a loving husband, an indulgent parent and helpful neighbor. One excellent comment on his life was made by one of his friends, "he always lived at peace with his neighbors." The four sons and one daughter still live at home. Two of the daughters are married. The funeral services were attended by a large concourse of people and were conducted by Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, Oakland.

THOMAS J. LOWDERMILK.

After a long and painful illness, which he bore with Christian resignation, Thomas J. Lowdermilk departed this life January 16, 1908, aged fifty-nine years, ten months and twenty-two days. He was noted for his unassuming piety and kindness and a large number of his friends followed his body to its last resting place. He was buried at Hoyes Methodist church, the funeral being preached by the writer, while Revs. Asa S. Wolfe, J. C. Beahm, Nathan Hart, Johnson and Wampler took part in the services. He had been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1873 and will be much missed in the christian work of the community.

He leaves behind him a widow and a numerous family to mourn his departure, but with the assurance that the separation is only for a time, and that they shall meet again where parting is not known. May God in his mercy comfort and bless them.

C. W. HUDSON.

MRS. FREDERICKA LOEWENSTEIN.

Fredericka Winterberg Loewenstein, relict of Charles Loewenstein, after an illness of nine days of pneumonia, died at 7 o'clock last evening at the Loewenstein home, No. 393 Somerset street, Fifth Ward, Johnstown, Pa., in her seventy-fourth year. The deceased, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Winterberg, was born in Waldeck, Germany, on April 19, 1834. Her parents are dead and her only surviving sister is Mrs. Sophia Bonig, of Grantsville, Md.

The Winterberg family came to America many years ago and located at Grantsville, Md., where Miss Fredericka Winterberg was married to Charles Loewenstein, who died there in 1881. Shortly after the Great Flood of 1889 Mrs. Loewenstein and family came to Johnstown, and have since resided on the South Side. Beside her sister, Mrs. Loewenstein is survives by these children: Miss Elizabeth Loewenstein, of Erie; Mrs. Nathan Miller, of the Rocks; Mrs. D. P. M. Loughry, of Greensburg; Mrs. S. E. Bolden, of Horner street, and Miss M. Ella, the well known school teacher, and Charles, at home. She is also survived by eight grandchildren.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from Zion's German Lutheran church, of which the deceased was a member. Her pastor, the Rev. Hugo R. Erdmann, will conduct the obsequies, and interment will be made in Grand-View Cemetery. Mrs. Loewenstain was also identified with the Ladies' Aid Society connected Zion's congregation.

MRS. SARAH REHN.

Mrs. Sarah Rehn, aged nearly eighty years, sister of Dr. E. J. M. Button, of Oakland, died at her residence in Annapolis yesterday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock. The deceased was the wife of ex-Mayor Lewis H. Rehn, of Annapolis.

Revival Services to Begin.

In another column of this paper today will be found an invitation from Rev. J. B. Workman, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, to all Christian workers and others interested in the salvation of men and women to attend a series of meetings to be inaugurated on next Sunday morning in St. Paul's church. The efforts of Rev. Workman in the past have been crowned with success, and it is the desire of all who have the welfare of the community, spirtually and otherwise, at heart, to see the good work go on.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indiam Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.
Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

POST OFFICE DECISION.

Text of General Lawshe's Order Concerning Newspapers and Other Publications.

The following decision of the United States Postoffices Department is of vital importance to both publishers of and subscribers to newspapers:

"3. A reasonable time will be allowed publishers to secure renewals of subscriptions, but unless subscriptions are expressly paid, within the following periods:

Dailies, within three months;
Tri-weeklies, within six months;
Semi-weeklies, within nine months;
Weeklies, within one year,

they shall not be counted in the legitimate list of subscribers, and copies mailed on account thereof shall not be accepted for mailing at the second-class postage rate of one cent a pound, but may be mailed at the transient second-class postage rate of one cent for each four ounces or fraction thereof, prepaid by stamps."—Section 436 of the Postal Laws and Regulations pertaining to the second-class of mail matter, issued January 1, 1908.

This simply means that publishers of weekly papers are not allowed to extend credit to subscribers for more than one year.

RYAN'S GLADE.

As we have not seen any items from this place for some time in your valuable paper will pen a few, which perhaps will be of interest to some of its readers.

The people who have hauling to do are making good use of the snow, and some of our young men, who are so lucky as to have a sleigh, are often seen with the fairer sex. We think they will be game while there is sleighing snow.

Mr. J. D. Harvey and family were visiting relatives in Stoyer last Sunday.

Mr. J. E. Lish and family, of Bethlehem, were visiting at Mr. Elisha Harvey's Sunday last.

There was a wedding in our community last week, the parties being Mr. Elijah Ney Harvey, of this place, and Miss Grace Ervin, of Wilson, W. Va. Their many friends wish them happiness and a long life.

Mr. Guy Harvey and Miss Dessie Callis were pleasant callers at Mr. B. W. Harvey's last Sunday.

Mr. Chas. Martin's father, of Etam, West Va., is visiting his son and relatives in this place for a few days.

Miss Ida Harvey, who is teaching at Stoyer, spent Saturday and Sunday last with her parents at this place.

Our Epworth League is progressing nicely under its new president Mr. John Stoyer.

There is quite an epidemic of measles in this section.

Mr. Chas. Thompson started to attend an Agricultural school at Morgantown a short time ago. We wish him success in his work.

Our school is progressing nicely. Miss Dessie Callis is the teacher.

Mr. L. A. Harvey, of Blaine, was visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Harvey, last Satnrday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John McIntyre and Miss Scinda Harvey were pleasant callers at M. Will Stoyer's Sunday.

Mr. W. G. Riley lost a good horse last week.

M. C. L. Moon, of Kurtz Chapel, was visiting at N. B. Harvey's Sunday last.

Miss Etta Thompson was visiting Misses Odessa and Ida Harvey Sunday.

We hear Mr. J. B. Shockey is on the sick list, but we hope he will improve speedily.

Rumor says, there will be a wedding in a very short while. Boys prepare for the serenade.

BLUE BELL.

Committee Assignments.

The member of the General Assembly of Maryland from Garrett county have been assigned to the following committees by the presiding officers of the two Houses of the Legislature: Senator W. McCulloh Brown to the corporation, temperance and printing committees, and he was made chairman of the pension committee. Delegate Green, currency and public records committees, Delegate Myers, agriculture and claims committees.

A Letter of Lincoln's.

On the walls of Brasenose college at Oxford University, England, hangs the following letter of President Lincoln, as a "specimen of the purest English and most elegant diction extant."

It is interesting not only for its human sympathy, but for the exquisite simplicity with which an absolutely sincere nature expresses its genuine emotions, so that the seat of the highest type of culture and learning takes this utterance of one who knew neither schools nor colleges as a model of expressive and elegant language:

Executive Mansion,
Washington, Nov. 21, 1864.

To Mrs. Bixby, Boston, Mass.

Dear Madam: I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously in the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,
A. LINCOLN.

Seven Months of Foreign Trade.

Our purchases from foreign countries continue to increase in a ratio far greater than that of our increases of sales to foreign countries. For the month of July, 1907, our exports were in value $128,765,354, while our imports were $124,764,063, leaving an excess of exports of $4,001,291. Here we have the largest importation in any July in the history of the country, together with the smallest monthly excess of exports in many years. At this rate our trade balance of $478,000,000 would be reduced to $50,000,000 for the year ending July, 1907.

For the seven months ending with July the imports were $876,043,246, an increase of $130,091,467, compared with the corresponding period of 1906. Our exports for the seven months were $1,059,215,726, being an increase over 1906 of $99,679,724, but a decrease in excess of exports amounting to $36,411,743, as compared with the first seven months of 1906.

These figures show that we are increasing our foreign trade rapidly, but mostly in imports. They show a steady decrease in our trade balance that if continued would leave us in debt to the rest of the world.

Whenever the excess of exports falls below $400,000,000, as it is certain to do at the present ratio of purchases to sales, the actual money balance will be against us.

Fully $400,000,000 is needed each year to pay for carrying our outgoing and incoming freights in foreign ships; for interest and dividends on foreign capital invested here; for money spent abroad by American travelers, and for money sent abroad by our foreign-born wage earners.

Our national finances will, therefore, cease to be on an easy basis when we fail to sell at least $400,000,000 a year more than we buy.

For the first seven months of 1907 we are falling far below that figure.

If the same rate holds good for the remaining five months of 1907 our trade balance will have dropped to about $330,000,000.

Yet the clamor for "more foreign trade" goes right on, and we have just concluded trade agreements specifically designed to greatly increase our intake of competitive goods from Germany, France and Great Britain. The showing for seven months of 1907 looks as though we had best turn our attention to restricting rather than encouraging the inflow of comparative competive commodities.

Executor's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

BARBARA YODER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 23rd day of July, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 23rd day of January, 1908.

EMANUEL HERSHBERGER,
Executor.
Grantsville Md.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

WE PRINT
SALE BILLS
AND PRINT THEM RIGHT

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE.

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 31st day of January, '08,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SIXTEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY AND FOURTEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO, CONTAINING FOR THE WHOLE TWO HUNDRED ACRES, MORE OR LESS. Said land is located in Election Eistrict No. 1 of said Garrett county and is particularly described in a deed for the same from Joshua Ritchie and others to Louis Ritchie, said deed being recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 8, folio 415, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1904 and 1905 as it is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the names of Thomas A. and William M. Ritchie, who acquired title thereto as devisees under the last will of the late Louis Ritchie, dated the 31st day of August, 1901, whice was probated in the District of Columbia and is of record in the office of the Register of Wills for Garrett county.

No. 2. A TRACT OF LAND CONTAINING SIXTY-TWO ACRES, GENERALLY KNOWN AS THE "JOHNSON FARM," located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett County, Md., adjoining the lands of Mary Patton, Wm. Lakel, Frank Caton and Orville Hileman, and being the same body of land which was conveyed by W. H. Rupple to Isabelle Patton et al., by deed dated the 6th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 280, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the assessment books of said Garrett county in the names of Isabelle Patton, Bertha May Patton, Anna Louisa Patton and Dolly Wilt.

No. 4. SIXTY-FOUR ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," being the same land which was conveyed to Annie Charity Broadwater by Lloyd Wiland and wife by deed dated the 27th day as May, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 47, folio 185, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of said Annie Charity Broadwater.

No. 5. ALL THAT PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING FIFTY-SEVEN ACRES, located in Election District No. 3 of Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning for the same at two small maple trees and running thence South 87 degrees East, 98 perches to a stone on the outlines of the whole tract, thence North 113 perches to the State line, thence with the State line West 66 perches to a stone, thence leaving said State line South 16¼ degrees West, 112 perches to the beginning, and being the same land which was conveyed to Mary M. Patton by William R. Getty and wife by deed dated the 23rd day of November, 1894, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 238, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett County. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Mary M. Patton.

No. 6. FIFTY-ONE ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SWANTON," located in Election District No. 3 of said Garrett County, and particularly described in a deed for the same from Charles M. Miller and wife to Elizabeth M. Breadwater, dated the 1st day of January, 1898, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 34, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake and stone pile standing at the beginning of a tract of land conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Peter J. Stephen, and running thence with the seventh line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Elizabeth Stephen South 57¼ degrees West, 7 perches, thence with the third and fourth lines of a tract called "Goochland" South 77 degrees East, 68¼ perches, South 7 degrees East, 54 perches, thence with part of the first line of a tract conveyed by Joseph R. Anderson and wife to Jefferson Broadwater South 58 degrees East, 56½ perches, thence reversing the first and last lines of one tract and the third and second lines of another tract, both conveyed by said Anderson and wife to Hiram Duckworth North 70½ degrees East, 46½ perches, North 43 degrees West, 46 perches to a stake, North 32½ degrees West, 27½ perches, thence with part of the sixth and the whole of the seventh lines of a tract conveyed by said Anderson and wife to George W. Broadwater South 76 degrees West, 5 perches to a stake and stone pile on the west side of Elk Lick Run North 15½ degrees West, 82 perches to a stake and stone pile on the first line of a tract of land conveyed to Peter J. Stephen and with it reversed to its beginning South 86 degrees West, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Elizabeth M. Broadwater.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Real Estate Bought and Sold.

Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 16 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JANUARY 30, 1908. NUMBER 48

DANIEL ANNAN, President

W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Vice President

D. F. KUYKENDALL, Cashier

No. 1519.

The SECOND NATIONAL BANK

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND.

United States Depository State Depository.

CAPITAL $100,000 SURPLUS $300,000.

Statement of the Second National Bank, Cumberland,

As Submitted to its Stockholders at its Annual Meeting Held At its Banking House on the Fourteenth Day of January, 1908:

Capital Stock	$ 100,000.00	Loans	$1,342,159.06
Surplus	300,000.00	U. S. and other Bonds	817,455.76
Circulation	99,150.00	Banking House and Real Estate	51,500.00
Profit and Loss	33,812.35	Cash on hand and in Banks	494,462.55
Deposits	2,177,615.02	Redemption Fund	5,000.00
	$2,710,577.37		$2,710,577.37

We, the undersigned Directors of the Second National Bank, of Cumberland, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the condition of the Bank, as shown by its books January 8th, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN, President of Second National Bank,
L. M. SHEPHERD, President Cumberland Dry Goods & Notion Co.
O. C. GEPHART, Retired Capitalist
ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Associate Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.
LLOYD LOWNDES, Lawyer, Banker, Farmer.
VAN LEAR BLACK, Director of the Consolidation Coal Co., the Potomac Coal Co.
W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Gen. Mgr. Union Mining Co., Prest. First National Bank of Mt. Savage.

This bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits. The Most Liberal Terms Granted Consistent with Safe Banking. Investment Securities for sale, including Allegany County 3½ per cent. and Garrett County 4 per cent. Bonds. The Garrett County Bonds are the only debt of the County and are free of taxation.

DIXON & KELSO

Will pay 60c. for No. 1 Oak Ties.

And 45c. for No. 2 Oak Ties

Delivered anywhere along line of the Railroad.

We can also handle 9 and 10 foot

MINE PROPS

at 1c. per foot, delivered at our yard

We have a big stock of all kinds of

Feed and Grain

Received 5 cars in the last ten days

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

B & O PUTS BAN ON DRINKING MEN

Employes Who Tipple While Not on Duty Will Be Discharged.

Employes of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad having anything to do with the direction or running of trains will not be permitted to use intoxicants at any time hereafter—either on or off duty—and no person using such beverage will be employed, according to a general notice sent out today by Mr. George L. Potter, third vice president and head of the operating department. Under no circumstances will exceptions be made.

It is believed by the management of the road that this is an important step in the effort to reduce accidents to the minimum and raise the efficiency of the service and the safety of patrons in travel to the highest standard. The object for this action is plainly expressed in the first paragraph of the circular which states, "For the protection of life and property and good of service the rigid enforcement of the Company's rules against the use of intoxicants is imperative."

Warning From P. O. Department.

The Postoffice department at Washington has issued an order advising people against putting loose money in mail boxes along rural free delivery routes, a practice that has been more or less in vogue everywhere in the country. Instead, the department requests people to supply themselves with postage stamps and thus save the rural carriers time and trouble.

Three Too Many.

A distributing agent for a brewery complained yesterday that he had sold only three cases of beer to the nine saloons in Oakland and that if business in this line did not soon improve there would be no need for the passage of a local option measure for Garrett county.

WENT VIOLENTLY INSANE.

David Saucer, of Crellin, Lost His Mind and Requires Constant Attention

David Saucer, a middle aged man, until recently employed at Crellin where he worked as a laborer on the saw mill at that place, went suddenly insane last Thursday and became so violent that the united strength of five or six able bodied men was required to restrain him from doing himself bodily harm.

Mr. Saucer worked on the mill all day previous to his sudden illness and not until Thursday afternoon was anything out of the ordinary noticed by his friends and family. Thursday evening he became so wild he had to be handcuffed and shackled. He was brought to the jail in Oakland where he is confined in the hospital ward with two men in constant attendance upon him.

He'll Get The Bump.

Mr. James D. Hamill has filed with Governor Crothers an application to be appointed a member of the Garrett County School Board. Watch him get it! but don't hold your breath until he does.

True Manhood.

Protestants as well as Catholics will find some doctrine and good advice in a little book recently published which is based upon an address by Cardinal Gibbons to the graduating class of Worcester University last summer. The venerable prelate lays stress on what another author has called "The Manliness of Christ," and urges this feature of the character of the Savior as an example for young men (and women as well.) The Cardinal evidently has but small regard for hypocrites and time-servers and he illustrates his remarks with many citations from the Bible, history, fiction and anecdote.

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

—OF—

CLOTHING

I have several hundred suits of Clothing for Men and Boys that I wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

KODAK ●● SAFETY ● FILM

Who is Responsible?

HISTORICAL.

Selected By J. B. Wampler.

It was the 28th day of March, 1773, Conrod Wieser, the great Indian interpreter of Pennsylvania, was sent by the governors of Pennsylvania and Virginia to the Onondaga council fire to make peace between the six nations of the North and the Catawbas and their allies of the South.

When Weiser asked some of the old men among the Onondagas why game was so scarce, they all sat in silance. "I was here twelve years ago," said he, "And you were living in plenty. Why is game so scarce now?"

A gray old Indian, whom the others called a wise man, finally looked up and said, "I have had a dream. The great Spirit come to me. I asked him the same question, why is game so scarce?" The great Spirit said, "You ask me why game has become so scarce. I will tell you. You kill it for the sake of the skins which you give for strong liquor and drown your senses and kill one another and carry on a great debauchery. Therefore have I driven the wild animals out of the country, for they are mine. If you will do good and cease from your sins, I will bring them back; if not, I will destroy you from off the face of the earth."

THE WRITER—BY ANALOGY

I stand (in my imagination) upon the highest elevation of the subluminary world, I take a general survey and view of the human race from every standpoint,—morally, socially, professionally and religiously. I look again and I behold multiplied thousands of county and state prisons, hospitals, state prisons, hospitals, reformatories, insane asylums, county homes, and on down to the town and city lock-ups. Another view presents to my vision thousands of railroad trains running every Lordsdays, carrying freight; and the so called "Church trains," carrying some of the vilest, most profane gamblers and drunken wretches that travel and carry on debauchery and crime. I try again and behold the multiplied thousands of distilleries and breweries that present themselves with their bonded warehouses, filled with that which the Revelations of God tells us "biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder," and that "he that partaketh thereof is not wise," and that no drunkard can ever enter heaven? Once more and I behold the almost innumerable houses of ill-fame and legalized "bawdey" houses where multiplied thousands of the fairest sons and daughters of the human race are annually degraded and dragged down into the abyss of eternal ruin.

ELDER J. B. WAMPLER.

Again in my feeble effort to behold, I see the multi millions of bushels of grain and fruits of the earth that the TRIUNE GOD so kindly and mercifully bestows upon our common humanity for the welfare and sustenance of the human race, taken by vile, wicked wretches and distilled, brewed and in various ways manufactured into the several liquids, and liquors, that drown the senses of those who partake, causing crime, murder and debaucheny of all kinds, bringing the participants thereof into disgrace and ruin in this world, and into eternal ruin in the world to come. May I now raise up the telescope of human reason and ask all the citizens of America to take a look with me and behold over three hundred thousand legally licensed saloons and bars in this so called "Christian Bible Land" in which we live and whereof we boast. Suppose each of these would be the cause of sending one soul to perdition per month. That would aggregate over thirty six hundred thousand annually: about five million. I ask, who is responsible? Some one whispers that in this free land of liberty our great American contient over which waves the "Star Spangled Banner." The people are the government and are governed by the laws they enact through the several legislative and congressional bodies, that are created by the free citizens and voters of America. This being true, I take a sad look through the telescope of thought and human reason, and view our common humanity, morally, socially and religiously and ask myself are we the people who create the constitutions of the several states of this great commonwealth? Did our fore-fathers create the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of these United States of America? Do we make the laws by which this nation is governed? Do we as voters through the several judges of the courts grant the licenses in the several districts and thereby legalize the manufacture and sale of that which destroys physical manhood and womanhood, and much more utterly destroys that inner, intellectual and spiritual manhood and womanhood that God would have preserved and kept pure and holy? I ask again who is responsible? Logically:

1st—The voters who elect the law makers.

2nd—The law makers who enact the laws.

3rd—The judges who grant the licenses.

4th—The manufacturers of intoxicants.

5th—The landlords, and saloon keepers who sell it, and those who drink it.

6th—Inasmuch as the effect of the rum traffic will not cease until the evil is removed, all persons who affiliate and confederate with the curse in making no effort by their influence or vote to remove the evil, are evidently responsible, and the blood of those they could have saved by making an effert will God require at their hand. This logic is applicable to all national sins.

The lesson taught the old Indian by the great Spirit is perhaps applicable to the several nations of the world, and especially to America. I do believe that if the citizens of America will do good and put away our National sins that God will bless her exceedingly; but if not she will no doubt get a downfall and may be in the near future.

God "may destroy her from off the face of the earth."

"Awake, oh, ZION. Put on thy beautiful garments: O Jerusalem."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan, 28, 1908.—The Democrats in the Senate held an amusing meetiug the other day in which they attempted to hold a caucus for the purpose of presenting a solid opposition to the Aldrich financial bill. Senator Stone, commonly known as "Gumshoe Bill," was the instigator and for a while his efforts met with entire success, but that was only when he worked among the younger members of the minority. Then he tackled Senator Teller. "No," said the Senator from Colorado, "I won't sign any call for a caucus against the Aldrich bill. It is no use. I have been here too long not to know that. The Democrats never can and never will stand together for or against anything and I for one will not be the party to make an exhibition of ourselves. Suppose we did oppose the Aldrich bill, what then? We have nothing better to offer as a substitute. Of all the bills that have been written, or that could be written, we never could get together behind one. Bacon has his ideas, Bailey has his, I have mine, Culberson has his. Not one of us will yield, and there you are. I am emphatically opposed to a caucus." Then Senator Stone approached Senator Bailey. "Oh no, I will not sign a call for a caucus" said the Senator from Texas. "We have nothing better to offer. Besides, Aldrich has indicated a willingness to accept my amendment to his bill, providing that emergency currency shall be distributed geographically. I shall probably amend it in some other particulars. I think the railway bond proposition will go out. You must leave it to me and don't make fuss and it will be all right. I certainly won't be a party to any caucus." And so the Democratic opposition ended, as it usnally does, in talk.

Senator Aldrich, than whom a cleverer politician has yet to born, expects to secure a unanimously favorable report of his bill. He will accept some inconsequential amendments from Bailey, all the while paying great deference to the erudite mind of the Senator from Texas, he will cajole Teller, jolly Hale and smooth everybody down and get his own way in the end, on all essentials. He has even got Speaker Cannon with him. Mr. Cannon is very sensitive about the standing of the Senate. hates all references to "the upper house of Congress," etc., and a little judicious deference to his ideas, together with a few common sense appeals, or hints, to his vast interests as a bauker, will do wonders with the speaker. Consequently, Mr. Aldrich has "consulted" the Speaker at every turn and the way is paved for the Aldrich bill's smooth passage when it get to the house. Senator Hansbrough, of North Dakota, is the Senator thus far, who is standing out for the interests of the western bankers and has already secured the adoption to two amendments which will make for their interest.

As the week closes all the hopes of the anti-Taft Republicans,—and there are many such among the old fashioned type of professional politicians—are centered upon Winthrope Murray Crane, of Massachusetts, who has gone to New York presumably to try to patch up an alliance between Governor Hughes and the other anti-Taft candidates. It is believed that if something can be done by the Hughes forces and Mr. Crane to head off the Taft movement which is sweeping over the country with a force so alarming to the other wonid-be candidates, there might be some chance for one of them. Senator Crane, however, got to New York on the very night when the Republican County Committee for the second time delivered a telling blow to the Hughes movement by refusing to endorse their own Governor for the Presidency. Of course Mr. Crane could hardly have prevented that if he had arrived earlier, for if New Yorkers won't stand by Hughes, what can a Massachusetts statesman do to help him? Still, the said Murray Crane is a wily politician, whose ways are devious and whose tricks are seldom vain. He is the understudy of Aldrich in the Senate and the representative of wealth in Massachusetts and of Wall Street in New York, so that he is never without resources once his acute mind has schemed out a plan of action, and now he knows that all the hope of the anti-Taft crowd are pinned to him, so he will doubtless make herculean efforts,

The Forakerites are circulating reports that if the present fight in Ohio is prolonged the state will go Democratic. But it is only Messrs. Foraker and Dick who see the situation in this light and some Republicans have been unkind enough to suggest that if they believe what they say they should yield to the wishes of the evident majority in the State and quit fighting, for it is a cardinal principle of the Republican party, as well as of the entire government, that the majority should rule, Republicans generally, however, have no anxiety regarding Ohio. The fact is that the enthusiasm is growing daily and if Taft is nominated the State will return one of the largest Republican majorities it ever did.

FACTS, FIGURES AND SOME STATISTICS

Review of Annual Report of the U. S. Treasurer.

THE DORMANT OR IDLE MONEY.

Paper Currency in Circulation—How Government Makes Money—Article Not Critical—Paper Currency in Circulation—National Banks.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury has just been sent out, in a book of 116 pages. It is for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907. It is very full, and interesting, in its statements and shows our national financial situation to be in a sound and healthy condition. It is believed a condensed statement of its chief features will form interesting and useful reading matter for your many readers.

The whole amount of the national revenue for the year mentioned was $846,725,339. From Customs, $332,233,362; from internal revenue, $269,669,720, and from the other 32 resources, $245,725. The Government expenditure for the the same were $762,488,853, leaving the large surplus of $84,236,586.

The gold coinage for year at our four mints was $95,916,324. Silver subsidiary coinage, halves, quarters and dimes, was $12,974,534, and minor coins, $3,319,453.18. The whole amount of coin money in circulation June 30, 1907, was, gold, $574,459,086; silver dollars, $88,422,957; subsidiary silver coins, $127,461,229.

The amount of minor coins in circulation was not given.

Gold certificates, $677,295,909; silver certificates, $464,349,568. Whole amount of this class of currency was $1,141,645,477. National Bank notes in circulation $595,123,866. The amount of money of all kinds was given at $2,876,368,696 by the secretary. About $32.00 per capita. That is so much for each of our 85,000,000 people.

The net increase of our money in the past year was $144,585,910. The increase of gold certificates was $101,337,490. Decrease of of silver certificates was $9,069,881. The dislike for silver has lessened its production as well as its coinage but it is like gold is constitutional meney.

Our constitution provides for gold and silver, not gold or silver, The real objection is its cumbersomeness.

The whole number of National Banks organized since the National Bank act of Congress, 1863, to June 30, 1907, was 8,853, but 2,271 have gone out of existence for different life and useful activity at the time mentioned. There were then in circulation National Bank notes to the extent of $595,123,866.

There now remains in the government vaults at Washington the sum of $677,295,909 in gold for the redemption of that amount of gold certrficates and $464,349,568, of silver dollars to redeem that amount of silver certificates. And it can be added to the sum of $150,000,000 for the redemption of greenback currency which has been our chief currency as legal tender money for the last 45 years.

Might not a fair percentage of this large dormant money, with propriety and safety, be put in useful circulation among our people who are now in want of more money for their relief? There may be money enough but not enough in circulation.

The government quietly and almost in an unknown manner, makes annually considerable sums of money almost without effort or cost. Last year its receipts for seniorage or profits on the coinage of gold and silver was $9,095,044.48. The government buys pure gold and silver bullion and put alloy (copper) in them at the rate of 10 per cent in the coinage. There never has been, nor ought there be any complaint of this manner of making our coin. The government has the power over the coin question and important gains will be realized in the loss, destruction and hording of the greenbacks, gold and silver certificates. About 45 years ago the government issued $50,000,000 of fractional currency. About $7,000,000 of it is still out, and will so remain. That much of a gain. These results will follow all paper issuing institutions.

This paper in no way is intended to be a criticism upon the report mentioned. No fault is found in it. What is written herein is wholly for the purpose of giving useful information in a comprehensive form to many persons who do not have the opportunities of seeing or reading voluminous reports from government officials.

Will conclude this paper by a reference to the gold product for the last year. For the whole world $403,000,000. United States $89,616,017. The State of Colorado was the largest producer at $20,888,833. Alaska $18,255,610, California, $17,394,363, Nevada, $14,704,658, Montana, Utah, and South Dakota are also gold producing states. The production of American gold was commenced in California in 1848-49; its growth was almost fabulous, for many years it stood at not less than $50,000,000 per annun, but now it stands third, a little below far-away Alaska, whose product last year of the precious metal was more than the price paid for its purchase in 1868, $7,200,000. The Transvall in benighted Africa is now the greatest gold-producing region in the world, at $128,000,000, and Australia $75,000,000. This great country of ours was with out the precious metals until the discovery of gold in California in 1848, and silver in Nevada during the civil war. We had to rely upon foreign countries for these necessaries of national business life. But we had from the beginning the old Philadelphia mint. All of this is from authentic sources.

JACOB BROWN.

January 24, 1908.

A PANAMA MISSIONARY.

Work of Miss Rose Johnson Among Men and Boys on The Isthmus.

Two years ago Miss Rose Johnson, an English deaconess and missionary, stopped at Panama on her way to Peru. She took a room in one of the low parts of the city, and there she learned, among other things, something about the condition of the young unattached men and boys who were employed in the digging of the canal. Sitting at her window one night, she saw two American boys on the point of entering a low resort. She went out and spoke to them and one of them asked:

"What's a fellow to do in this God forsaken country? There's nowhere to go. There isn't a white woman to speak to."

Miss Johnson asked them to go with her and have some coffee and cake, and it was touching, she says, to see how gladly they accepted her invitation. Miss Johnson concluded that Panama needed her more than Peru, and in Panama she remained until a few weeks ago, when she was obliged to come to the United States for a short rest.

Her work began in one room, to which the boys went by invitation to read, write or talk over their troubles with their hostess. Spanish classes were also started, and the boys became much interested. Within three months the room had grown too small, and a house was taken, with provision for lodging and meals. This place was called the Young Men's Christian Association, but as this organization was founding its own clubhouses down the line objection was raised to the use of the name and that of the Young Men's Christian League was adopted.

The quarters now occupied are two houses in the centre of the city. A large sitting and reception room, where the Stars and Stripes commingle peacefully with the folds of the Union Jock, is always open. A square table in the centre and comfortable chairs, a library, periodicals and newspapers, a piano and some good prints and photographs on the walls, complete the simple furnishings. And, above all, Miss Johnson herself is always there to give a kindly welcome, to advise or help to sew on a button or darn a pair of socks. The best of good comradeship exists between herself and "her boys."

This room is also used as a luncheon room for the vegetarians, as many find it necessary to avoid flesh foods in the tropics. The general dining room is upstairs. The sleeping rooms upstairs, opening on a veranda, are large and airy, and are furnished simply, but comfortably. Everything about the house is clean and attractive, and Miss Johnson makes a round of personal inspection every morning.

Sometimes when she inspects the kitchen on Saturday night, after the servants have gone to bed, she finds it not as clean as she would like to have it. Then she tucks up her skirts and scrubs it out herself.

The house is conducted on the co-operative system, and is by no means a money making institution. The directress pays her board as well as the rest. Regular roomers and boarders pay $33 50 in gold a mouth. Table board is $23 50. Single meals, 30 cents for breakfast and 50 cents for dinner. Fruit is supplied in abundance, as well as vegetables, and ice cream appears on the menu with satisfactory frequency.

On Sunday there are usually number of extra guests, and the principal meal of the day is served at noon. The Sunday night cold supper, when no servants are present, is the favorite meal of the week. Quite an extensive retinue of servants is kept, besides an efficient English woman as housekeeper.

In addition to this special work for young men Miss Johnson has many other interests in the canal zone. Sometimes stranded women are taken to her and she cares for them at the home until assistance comes. Shortly after her arrival in Panama she saved a young American boy from throwing himself off the sea wall in a paroxysm of despair and discouragement at having lost his money through drink and gambling. She persuaded him to go home. She has a Spanish class for women and a Sunday school which is attended by about eighteen American children. This is the only Sunday school in the canal zone, but Miss Johnson hopes to open others as soon as she returns. She has been holding Sunday evening services at Ancon, and in fact she has found so much to do in Panama that it was only her urgent need of rest after a serious illness that induced her to take a vacation. "Congratulate me on my return," she said to a friend who had felicitated her on her coming holiday. "That is what I look forward to my 'homecoming' to my boys."

Miss Johnson is a tall; slight, delicate looking woman, with snow white hair. She is a person of independent means and has done missionary work in Egypt, Germany and Austria. Including the unwritten tongues of these tribes she has, it is said, a work knowledge of seventeen languages. Miss Johnson is an ordained deaconess, and has taken courses in domestic science and nursing. She can also make a very neat pair of shoes, having learned shoemaking as a trade when she was eighteen. Before going to Panama she was engaged in rescue work among women, and had many thrilling experiences in rescuing white slaves in many different parts of the world.

OUT OF THE PAST

By GENEVIEVE HAYS

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Come see my new flower, Dick! It is perfection," calls my pretty wife.

I drop the unopened paper in my easy chair with a backward toss of my cigar case to keep it company, then run down the piazza steps to join her standing there with her misty white draperies blown about her, and the rays of the setting sun touching her soft blonde hair till it glows like an aureole.

"Look!" she cries dramatically.

And this is what I see: Over a delicate trellis, beautiful as a frozen dream, gleam clusters of snowy white passion flowers, breaking through the artistically interwoven green of the foliage like blossoming stars.

"Have a blossom, papa," cries the autocrat of our household, hurriedly breaking a cluster from the vine and reaching it to me from his diminutive height of three summers.

The odor from the deadly-white blossoms sends a thrill, a chill to my heart. I stand looking stupidly down at the cluster baby has placed in my passive hand.

"Why, Dick," cries Madge, laying a hand on either arm and looking at me anxiously, "what is the matter? Perhaps it is the perfume from these flowers—it is poison to some people."

With a hasty apology I put my wife and child from me and return to the house, still carefully holding the spray of white passion flowers in my hand. I seat myself and look away from them for the first time. The sun is dipping below the horizon and sending out long, quivering rays of light that reach to the big oaks standing sentinel over our gateway.

Out of the purple depths of the summer gloaming this picture looms up before my eyes: a semi-southern woods lighted by the shimmer and play of moonbeams, and floating sparkles of fire-flies; a mountain road with a splendid horse and rider just emerging into the moonlight—the horse swinging slowly along, his glossy chest flecked with foam, his arched neck bowed and the long black mane sweeping downward; the rider, lissome and young, with a supple grace in her rounded arms which the close-fitting jacket of black velvet reveals to perfection.

Forever I shall remember her! The dusky eyes with their hints of tropic splendor, the white passion flowers against her velvet bodice, and the soft moonlight just touching her face; and under heaven or earth there is no light so softening or beautifying to a woman's face as moonlight!

With this face still haunting me, I eat my supper in the lonely inn of the rather more-dead-than-alive little town on that same evening and listen to the garrulous talk of my obsequious host.

"I met a pretty girl on the mountain road as I came in this evening," I say, at length; "wonder who she was?"

My host regards me contemplatively through a ring of tobacco smoke.

"Ridin' a big black horse?" he queries.

I nod assent.

"Jess so," he says, meditatively; "she has been offered $200 for that horse and won't sell him. There isn't his match in the state—can run like lightning, and the fence isn't made that he would stop at. Don't mind a soul but her, neither," continues the man, waxing eloquent, "there isn't a place short of heaven that he wouldn't go if she called him. Why, stranger, one day when the Fork was up, and nothing but back water from hill to hill, I saw that horse plunge in amidst all that floating timber and driftwood and swim clean to the other hill at just one word from her!"

"But who is she?" I question.

He regards me in much the same manner that you would a comparatively well-informed person that had just asked you who Adam was.

"Maurise Shelby," he at length answers, shortly.

"She lives here?"

"Half a mile up the Fork, to the right, in a big, ruinous old house. That used to be the finest plantation on the Fork and Col. Shelby the most popular man. But times are changed. The colonel lost his life in the late war—he was as brave a man, sir, as ever wore the gray. His daughter has all his plucky spirit. Pity she were not his son! She lives all alone in that old house along with her father's sister and invalid husband. Hard to come down to poor folks' ways after once being rich, but you never heard a Shelby complain. Maurise has had many a chance to better her condition—rich fellows at that—but they all get the same answer. She don't take much to strangers, either. Northerner! you wouldn't stand any chance, sir! They buried her heart with her father, poor lass! and all the love she has to give is for the south."

A few weeks later, when the woodland hills are blushing red with shame at their departing glories and there is a spicy breath of autumn in the air, I again stop at the little village on my return home, and seek my former host.

After a late dinner I doze away in an easy chair while planning some excuse for calling on Maurise Shelby.

Suddenly I am roused by a commotion on the outside. Women's voices in helpless terror blending with men's. A child's scream rising above the clatter of iron hoofs on the pavement!

Rushing to the window I see a tiny child perched on a gray steed that is rearing and plunging beyond all control. The child's mother rushes forward, but is struck by one of the brute's forefeet as he plunges. The crowd rescues and carries her away with a dark red stain dripping upon the pavement.

It all happens so quickly—not in one-tenth the time it takes to write it! The horse has broken loose and is tearing away toward the Fork, which, muddy and swollen with the late rains, rolls rapidly out of sight.

It is death certain—either trampled beneath iron hoofs or drowned in that muddy current! I am not the only one that turns away with a groan from the sickening sight. But instead of the death cry I am expecting to hear, there rises a shout of rejoicing. Am I mad? I look again. The crazed brute has disappeared, while cantering over the sunny slopes toward us, is a rider mounted on a splendid black horse—both of which I have surely seen before.

It all comes back to me in a flash. The close-fitting jacket with the sparkle of brilliants in the golden clasp at the throat, the black-plumed hat, the spray of white passion flowers against the bodice, only that now, crushed against them is the child so late rescued from deadly peril. A moment only I see her, then the crowd close about and she is hidden from view.

"And the first thing she asked when handing the baby down was why we did not shoot the horse," this from Barnes, the grocery man, as he leans over his counter awhile later where a dozen or more of us are assembled, discussing the late incident. "She is just like the colonel, that quick to thinks," he continues; "now, any of us could have done it and maybe would have thought of it when it was too late! Never saw anything run like that horse of hers did—straight against the gray and staggered him so that she barely got the child off before the brute plunged in the river! The little fellow was still clinging like mad, they say. Might as well have shot the horse, for he's drowned by now, I reckon."

"Will you find a doctor for me, please? I think I have hurt my arm," says a low distinct voice from the doorway.

Straight and slender, with one hand resting against the counter, stands Maurise Shelby, her level eyes looking miles away, her face white as the flowers on her breast.

I hasten forward and place a chair for her.

"I am a practicing physician," I say, as quietly and naturally as I can, "will you let me examine your arm?"

Her eyes look straight into mine. I wonder that I ever fancied them blue or black! They resemble nothing so much as jewels under running water, the same brilliant rays flashing through limpid brown water.

"Thank you," she answers, quietly, taking the chair and indicating which arm was injured.

Her face is still white as the crushed flowers she is wearing. It is the reaction from the terrible excitement she has just undergone, and but for her indomitable will, I think she must faint, for I can see that she is suffering terribly, yet by neither word nor gesture does she make it known.

"Cut the sleeve," she directs, "for I cannot move my arm."

As in a dream I apply the liniment, arrange the bandages, and listen to the continued talk around me, while all the while the odor from those deadly white passion flowers permeates my brain, and Miss Shelby sits silent and motionless.

"Thank you," she says quietly, when my task is ended. Then rising she requests Barnes to bring up her horse. The man looks doubtfully at her white face, then at me.

"By no means," I say, hastily, "it would be risking your life. If you must go, my horse is yet in harness—I shall drive you."

Once more I feel an echo of that thrill of joy with which I hand Maurise Shelby into the carriage and take my place at her side.

We arrive at our destination all too soon, and a sweet-faced lady, whom Miss Shelby introduces to me as her aunt, Mrs. Thomson, meets us at the door and welcomes me with a sweet southern accent.

"I shall call to-morrow and see you," I say, authoritatively, after I have stayed in that quaintly picturesque room as long as politeness admits.

On my return to the hotel I find letters awaiting me from my father demanding my immediate presence at home.

With a sigh over the turn of fortune I promise myself a speedy return to this place which has suddenly become so dear to me.

The next morning finds me making my adieus at the picturesque homestead of the Shelbys'. Maurise, in a thin black house dress, looks fair as an alabaster image. Such a firm, sweet, womanly mouth it is that smiles and thanks me so graciously for my kindness to her.

"I shall hope to see you again, soon," I say, at length, rising reluctantly to take my departure. "Business calls me this way in a few months; may I have the pleasure of calling on you then?"

I try to keep the eagerness out of my tones, but feel that my soul is in my eyes as they seek hers for an answer. While Mrs. Thomson is giving me a cordial invitation to come, Maurise turns slightly and looks full at me for the first time that morning. Had she the gift of second sight? Did those level, tender, rar-seeing eyes read the future even then, and know that this was our last meeting on earth?

There is a mist before my eyes—in my heart a feeling that I have seen the glories of heaven and just missed them. My fingers close firmly over hers while I stammer something about the blossoms at her belt—a great cluster of white passion flowers.

"It is a new flower," explains Mrs. Thomson, "and Maurise's favorite above all others. Give him a cluster, dear."

And with the white blossoms in my hand and Maurise Shelby's sweet voice echoing in my heart, I took my last look into her beautiful eyes and leave her forever.

The few months stretch into 12 ere I can return. "These inland towns change so little," I think, noting every detail in the town to be just the same as when I left it a year ago—even to my former landlord, smiling a welcome at me from his doorway. Yet I am destined to find that Time's fingers have not been idle during my absence.

"The Shelbys?" my host repeats, wonderingly, in answer to my query. "Judge Stevens owns that place now! Thomson's widow went south jest after her husband's death. Miss Maurise? Why, haven't you heard, stranger? I thought the whole world knew how she saved the lives of 13 people during the big rise, then lost her own. How? By swimming in to them on that horse of hers, that could go anywhere. But the last trip he was struck by a piece of floating timber and both horse and rider went down, instantly. They found her body next day—"

A numbness comes over me. My heart seems turning to stone. Some men are singing at their work across the meadows—a song of Dixie and orange blossoms. The words and melody fit oddly into the broken places of my host's narrative, while he tells how the brave young life went out on that terrible night in an effort to save others.

That night, with the moonbeams silvering and softening the world as they did on our first meeting, I seek Maurise Shelby's last resting place, and kneel at her grave. The autumn winds whisper a solemn requiem and spread their leaf mats thick on the slender mound, while there, on the marble cross, twined thick with white passion flowers, I read how Maurise, daughter of Col. Shelby, died.

Then the white moonlight and white marble and white flowers blend and blur together so that I can read no further. Yet, shrined in memory's casket and embalmed with white passion flowers, is her face.

"Dick!" calls my wife. "Ah! here you are—dreaming, I do believe! The Greysons have called. Why did you not come in? Mrs. Greyson admired my new dress extravagantly. Now, really, Dick, did you ever see any woman as beautiful as I, or one that you loved half so well?"

I touch my lips to the dead white blossoms still in my hand, then toss them away into the gathering gloom. "No, dear," I answer, with a sigh—it might have been for myself, or for that lone grave on the distant hillside, or just for the lost days of my dear, dead youth.

How Indians Tan Deer Skin.

The skin dressing of the Indians, both buffalo and deer skins, is generally very beautiful and soft. They stretch the skin either on a frame or on the ground, and after it has remained there for three or four days, with the brains spread over the fleshy side, they grain it with a sort of adze or chisel.

After the process of graining, though the skin is apparently beautifully finished, it passes through another process—that of smoking. For this they hang the skin on a frame in a smoke-proof house or tent. The fire is made at the bottom out of rotten wood, which produces a strong and peculiar smell. The fire must be smothered to make the smoke.

The grained skins have to be kept in the smoke for three or four days and after this the skins will always remain the same, even after wet, which does not belong to the dressed skins in civilized countries.—From Life Among the Indians.

Centuries of Tenancy.

A Dorsetshire (Eng.) farmer writes as follows to the Standard: "A recent legal complication led me to look up the records of my family, and I think the result will interest your readers.

"I am a tenant farmer in this county, where my family has been settled for many centuries, and I knew that our connection with our present holding had existed for many generations. Through hunting up records for the case I referred to, however, I became sufficiently interested to undertake a more serious search than I had at first intended.

"I found that my ancestors have held practically the same tract of land since the year 1604. Beyond that I could find nothing, but very possibly if records existed I think they would show that we were connected with the place even before that date."

Caution.

Under oath the oil magnate was asked how much he possessed.

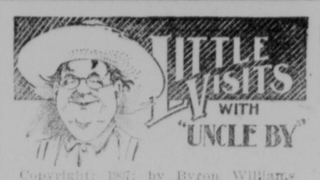
"Your honor," he said, "before this outrage goes further I would like to know if there is present any representative of the assessor."

He was assured on this point, and also that newspaper men had been excluded.

"And you ask me how much I am worth?"

"Yes."

"I don't know."



Copyright, 1907, by Byron Williams.

Saved.

I've got just this one thing to write
Tonight!
And then I'm through.
The skies are blue—
Whoa! That won't do!
The skies, I fear,
Are gray this time of year—
Or, are they red?
Sometimes my head
Don't work just right.
Along to'rds night!

I met a maid—
Oh! This is played!
Besides I'm married now,
And you'll allow
It's risky meeting pretty girls
With coral lips and Titian curls!
Let's see—
By gee,
I've written sixteen things today—
(And still I've got some bills to pay!)
Six poems and a lot of junk!
Of course the most of it is punk,
But when you turn a poem crank
From morn till night, it ain't no prank!

You know a fellow's head gets sore
If worn so dog-gone near the core!
My tank of think
Is on the blink!
The dope's run dry!
The muse is shy!
The rhythm winks its other eye!
The dingus has a hot box, too!
The whole confounded filling crew
Has struck and left me in a stew!
And, Bill,
There's still,
Just one thing more I've got to write
Tonight!
The copy boy is yelling now—
He's after me, I'll bet a cow.
He wants some more of "Uncle By!"
He says I'm shy!
Great guns! I wish that imp would die!
The clock hands race
With rapid pace,
While I sit idly thinking—What?
Oh, what! Oh, what! Oh, what!
What have I got
To write a lot
About?
Oh, kraut!

Oh, inspiration, come to me!
Oh, gee!
Oh come, nice, pretty little thought,
Come rhyme and reason, hotly sought;
Come! Come! On graceful wing
And help me write this one last THING;
What's that?
Scat! Scat!
I hear the clock
Across th' block!
I pale!
I fail!
Gone all my joy—
The copy boy!
No!
Go,
You imp of inky black!
And hurry back!
Tho' I am weak and worn and sore,
Here! Is your PESKY ONE THING MORE!

Rag Time.

If you want to live long, be mad at something or somebody all the time. Of course, you won't live as long as good-natured people who laugh and keep fat, but it will seem longer.

The cure for automobilitis is constabilitis.

Some people build very pretty homes where they may rest their bodies with never a chance therein to rest their hearts.

High finance is all right, if you are on the high side.

Love makes the world go 'round, but it takes money to make the automobile do likewise.

I see that the youngest soldier to enter the Civil war, is dead again.

Speaking of husbands, a South Dakota woman has one that "seems more like a friend than a husband!" He never beats her.

I suppose a small catastrophe is a "kittenastrophe."

Beatrice Fairfax says intoxication among women is growing. Boys, it's time for us to declare "the lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine."

A Missouri woman who has made four unsuccessful attempts to kill herself, should go to Chicago and try to cross one of the city's boulevards at 5:10 in the afternoon. This is when the automobiles own the streets.

Never walk behind a mule until you have made friends with him. Then put your trust in God and go a long way 'round.

Does holding a girl before marriage teach a man to support her afterwards?

People Who Stand Tied.

H. C. Fitch has put in a row of hitching posts on the west side of the street south of the store for the accommodation of the people who have need of them.—Burt (Kan.) Citizen.

Byron Williams

WHAT THE TARIFF IS DOING.

It Robs Foreign Factories of the Chance of Doing Our Work for Us.

Do you remember how English statesmen favored the southern Confederacy when those states were in rebellion against the government to break up the union? Do you know why England felt so much sympathy for the Confederacy?

The northern states were for a protective tariff and for building up American industries. The southern states were for free trade. All they wished was to develop their agricultural resources by means of slave labor, sell the surplus abroad, and import their manufactures. There is where England's sympathy found such deep root. The cotton industry of England depended largely on the success of the American rebellion.

When the rebellion broke out the cotton crop amounted to from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bales. It now amounts to from 10,000,000 to 13,500,000 bales. In 1860 we were spinning very little of this cotton in America, none in the south.

Year by year, since the close of the war, under Republican tariff politics, cotton spinning has increased more rapidly than the size of the crop. A year ago there were 6,350,000 spindles in England. During the past year the enlargement of English cotton factories has been very great. By the end of this decade the increase in the decade will equal that in 30 years before.

In spite of the growth in English cotton spinning there has been great expansion in America. The south, which, when the war broke out, had no cotton factories, now has many. We are using a very large portion of our own raw product and importing increasing quantities of raw cotton. The increase in value in the year 1906 amounted to $14,500,000 and the exports decreased $13,500,000.

Cotton manufactures are worth more than twice as much as the raw material. Think of that! We kept at home $13,500,000 worth of our crop more than in the previous year, and gave this a value of about $30,000,000. We sent abroad the money this made and bought raw cotton with it, which again was worth $20,000,000. That is what the Dingley tariff act added to our wealth in one year in one industry.

Under a free trade policy we would probably be growing nearly as much cotton as we do now, but it would nearly all go abroad to be made into cotton goods, and for each dollar we received for the raw stuff we would have to send out two dollars to pay for the goods made of our own material. If we were all free traders and sold all our raw cotton to go abroad we would get at the prices now ruling $500,000,000. But to get back the goods made, if we needed them, we would pay $1,000,000,000.

Which policy is the best for the American people?

This is the policy which the great and good Mr. Bryan calls the "robber tariff." If it robs any people it is the foreigners whom it deprives of the chance to do work we should do ourselves.—Los Angeles Times.

THE NEW SYSTEM OF CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATION.

Which Is Stung?

"The German government is to give United States exporters the benefit of the minimum schedules of the German 'maximum and minimum' plan while the United States simply modifies a few custom house rules and regulations that bear heavily upon foreign importers."

This is what the Worcester Post considers an arrangement which gives Germany so much the worst of it that its acceptance is astonishing. It all depends upon the view. Germany wanted a wider entrance for her competitive products, and that is practically what Germany gets. What more did she want? Our compliant state department could not very well execute a quit claim deed of the whole American union, but it did the best it could. It went a long way toward guaranteeing to Germany that it shall hereafter be permitted to do more, and the mills and factories of our own country less of the work which our wage earners have been doing in the past ten years of the Dingley tariff. It must, indeed, be an "insatiate monster" for whom all this would not suffice.

Why Not?

"Other foreign countries will in the near future insist upon our giving them better tariff rates, or they will retaliate by putting prohibitive duties on our imports."—Albany Press.

That is precisely what they will do. Why should they not? Our gifted state department has advertised to the world the fact that the way to break down the American tariff is to put up rates and then make a few threats

YOUTHFUL SMOKERS.

Cigarette Trade of the Country Is Booming.

If the general prosperity of the country were indicated by the constantly increasing consumption of tobacco in the form of cigarettes, then business prospects were never more favorable than at present. There can be no denial of the fact that the cigarette trade is booming. Nearly every little man of 15, with a brain big enough to dream of the day when visible down shall decorate his upper lip, delights in swaggering along the streets with a cigarette in his mouth. How manly the conceited little fellow thinks he is, and how his eyes sparkle with delight at the wondrous feat of ejecting smoke in long lines from his proud nostrils!

The dividing line between boyhood and manhood is surely indicated by the cigarette, says the New York Weekly. In other words, the ambitious lad who can gracefully burn a cigarette, and convert his nostrils into inverted smoke-stacks, should no longer be classed as a boy. No—he is a full-fledged man, or thinks he is, because he possesses the ability to puff away the breath of life in smoke.

This was probably the impression of a lad in Brooklyn, aged 15, who recently died from nicotine poisoning, caused by smoking cigarettes. Every boy who is addicted to the same enervating practice, and fails to take warning from the fate of the youthful smoker to whom we have referred, is not likely to become a very clever or a very strong man. If smoking does not shrink his lungs and frame, and convert him into a sickly ghost before he is 25, he may live long enough to learn that during the years when sensible boys endeavor to become clever and bright, rugged, and strong, and otherwise prepare themselves for the battle of life, he was nothing but a conceited little fool, and ruined his health and dwarfed his intellect by indulging in the senseless habit of smoking cigarettes.

ALCOHOL VS. COFFEE.

Use of the Former as a Beverage Is Harmful.

The habitual use of sedatives—such as alcohol, opium, morphia, chloral, cocaine and their allies—is to be condemned without qualification as false in principle and fatal in result. It is true that these drugs will one and all relieve worry, banish care and procure peace of mind, but it is as true that the worry, the care and the dispeace will return, bringing seven devils with them.

Let us turn now from the sedatives to the stimulents. Must caffeine, as represented by tea and coffee, fall under a like condemnation?

The sedatives we have condemned because they do nothing for the life of the body, but are opposed to it, says Dr. C. W. Saleeby. The stimulant, caffeine, on the other hand, favors the life of the body, promotes the process of combustion on which life depends, increases vitality and that power to work which is the expression of vitality.

Everywhere men find that a cup of tea or coffee is refreshing; it produces renewed vigor, it heightens the sense of organic well-being, the consciousness of fitness and capacity. This is utterly distinct from the action of alcohol or opium in deadening the sense of ill-being.

Tea and coffee have had many hard words said of them. The trouble is that people will not distinguish. Tea, for instance, as commonly understood in this country, is more nearly a decoction than an infusion of the tea leaf, and contains besides the theine or caffeine a very large proportion of tannin or tanic acid.

Drink the Cause of It.

Dr. Wilbite, superintendent of the asylum at Dunning, Ill., told a woman's club that of the 1,000 insane patients, 600 men and 400 women, alcohol was the cause of insanity in the cases of 10½ per cent. of the men and five per cent. of the women. Of 1,000 pauper cases, 800 men and 200 women, 95 per cent. of the men and 59 per cent. of the women have an "alcoholic history," and 44 per cent. and 22 per cent. of the men and women, respectively, of this class drink to excess. Of 1,000 tuberculosis patients, 800 men and 200 women, 94 per cent. and 23 per cent., respectively, have an "alcoholic history."

Must Not Drink.

The Lehigh Valley railroad has served notice on its employes that they must be total abstainers from alcoholic drinks or leave the service of the company, and it is quite likely that all of the other lines in the United States will adopt the same rule. It is only cumulative evidence that there are enough sober men in the world to do the world's work. The conviction is gaining weight everywhere that the temperance question is not simply moral, but economic, and corporations are now one with the churches in the effort to suppress this great national vice.

Crazy, Surely.

A Chicago judge ruled a man insane because it was shown that he drank 55 drinks of whisky a day. He was certainly crazy to get whisky.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30, 1908.

WHILE everything is moving harmoniously toward a united party in the Republican convention, the troubles of the Democrats are multiplying as the date of their convention approaches. The opponents of William J. Bryan are seriously considering the advisability of making a formal appeal to the Peerless Leader to withdraw from the race, as they say it is obvious that while he may control the convention he cannot win at the polls and that he ought to show sufficient patriotism to eliminate himself, to stand aside in favor of a candidate who can win. It seems to be the hope of the anti-Bryan Democrats that they can win with Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, but the Bryanites are convinced that no Democrat could poll as many votes as Mr. Bryan. The prospects are all bright for a serious division in the party accompanied by all the rancor and anger which the Democracy always injects into a political contest.

THE NEW CAESAR.

The Democratic party's courage is equal to its statesmanship. A few days ago when Mr. Bryan was headed toward Washington knots of leaders were reported as gathering about the Capitol, their faces blanched with the firmness of their determination, their breasts heaving with the intensity of their emotions. They were resolved, come what might, to tell the perennial candidate that a decent regard for the food of the party required him to step aside this time and allow the nomination of some one who at least had a chance of being elected. Mr. Bryan arrived, and all the valor of these white faced patriots oozed out at their palms, like Bob Acre's courage. None applied the flattering unction to the Nebraska man harder than they. Like guilty creatures into whose secret thoughts they feared he might penetrate, they outdid themselves in their brunt offerings to his vanity. Did they tell Mr. Bryan that he was a dead weight tied to the neck of the Democratic party? "Why should they?" asks Mr. Bryan with unfeighned surprise.

Every where the Nebraskan goes he is assured that he is the party's only hope, and Washington was no exception. If anything, the flattery there was probably laid on thicker than any where else, so that no suspicion would enter his mind that his flatterers had a moment before entertained a treasonable resolution to tell him the only hope for the Democratic party lay in his "abdication." Mr. Bryan never hears what the Democracy says about him behind his back. He never escapes from the delusive atmosphere of sycophancy. He is the idol of the masses and the peerless leader of his party; for do not the Democracy's lieutenants, who a moment before were forming brave and solemn resolutions to tell him the truth, assure him that but for him the party would perish utterly from the earth! Not a Caesar in all the pages of Tacitus was surrounded by more eager eulogists.

Whence this mortal terror with which Mr. Bryan inspires his party? If it is true, as we are told, that a large and influential group of Senators and Representatives believe there would be hope for the Democracy with Mr. Bryan confined to the Chautauqua circuit, why dare they not explain the situation to him? Though somewhat incisive in his language, he has never been known to eat a Democrat alive. If they think he is fatally doomed to defeat, why should they be afraid to tell him so, and at the same time to point out that with Johnson or Folk or some other of "The New York World's" gallery of possibilities there would be a hope of victory? A man certain to be beaten surely cannot be very dangerous to their ambitions. Mr. Bryan has in the past exerted his eloquence to eliminate certain Democratic leaders from public life. We remember the case of Mr. Roger Sullivan of Illinois. Mr. Sullivan happened somehow in the rough and tumble of politics to abrade the self-complacency of the Nebraska leader. Mr. Bryan spent the greater part of three years thundering against the Illinois leader, but finally observing that his bolts glanced off innocuous he went to Illinois, declared he himself had a soul above cherishing enmity, invited Mr. Sullivan to forgive and forget, and now Mr. Sullivan is his chosen instrument and fast sworn ally. We recall this Sullivan instance for the encouragement of the white faced gentlemen in Washington who in a few days will again be asking themselves, "Upon what meat does this our Caesar feed that he is grown so great?"

The Democratic party is in real need of some martyrs, some leaders with sufficient courage to face without flinching the fate of Mr. Sullivan. Telling the truth about Mr. Bryan behind his back will not save the day. If there is any general sentiment such as reported to exist in Washington, why not out with it? Why try to make up for revilings of Caesar behind his back by genuflections in his presence? We know that there is a long existent feeling that the best way to get rid of Mr. Bryan is to nominate him again and let the people do for him what the politicians dare not undertake, but is there any guarantee that he will accept the result as final? He shows the blind courage of a book agent, and is unlikely to take "No" for an answer.—New York Tribune.

PRESIDENT SETH'S CHARGES.

President Seth of the Maryland Senate created a sensation by making a bitter attack upon ex-Governor Warfield in a hot speech delivered in the Senate chamber Tuesday afternoon in which he charged Mr. Warfield with official corruption, using insulting and contemptuous language of the most offensive kind. General Seth charged that an ante-election deal was made with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1903, when Mr. Warfield ran against Mr. Williams, by which that corporation put a big campaign fund in return for which he was to use his influence to sell the State's interest in the Washington Branch for $210 a share. The State got $467 a share after an investigation by the Legislature of 1906.

Other charges included a deal with certain banking interests and to sell the C. & O. canal at a low rate. This row within the good old party is the result of the ex-Governor's crititism of the Legislature for spending for expenses, at the last session, nearly $200,000. A bill was pending appropriating the same amount for this session and the Republicans under Mr. Baker's lead were trying to cut it down to $150,000 and the matter was finally compromised on $170,000 which is a saving of $30,000 directly due to the agitation on the subject and the fight made by the Republicans. It was well known at the time that the Baltimore and Ohio got behind Warfield at the close of the campaign and while it is probably true that no specific deal was made, the acceptance of corporation contributions carries with it the obligation to favor them. The Seth charges in general do not carry much weight because of the coarse and insulting references to the ex-Governor. The poorer the case the more vehement the advocate speaks. Governor Warfield is a Democrat and no doubt has done many things for which he may properly be censured but he is a man of high character and sterling integrity and any man simply makes himself ridiculous by hurling at him coarse invective.

FIKE.

The Standard Oil Company is having a lot of pipes shipped to Somerfield, Pa., and the farmers in this section are all trying to make the most out of hauling the pipes along the line.

Mr. T. F. Umbel has been sick for a few days.

Mr. F. J. Bowser has bought a horse for his son George for which he paid $150.

The protracted meeting has closed at this place with eighteen accessims to the church.

Commodore Wakefield was visiting a few days with L. K. Fike.

Mrs. Jefferson Frazee went to Confluence, Pa., to undergo a surgical operation.

On the evening of the 23d inst. Tissue's store and post office at Tissue, Pa., was burned and there was not a single thing that was saved from the flames.

On the same evening that the store was burned the B. & O. R. R. station at Somerfield, Pa., was broken in by robbers and after having pillaged the station they went to the drug store that is owned by J. T. Jacobs and blowed the safe open and took all the money that it contained. They then escaped and their identity is unknown.

CARTER.

BITTINGER.

The la grippe is prevalent in this section and as a result there is not the usual bustle about the village.

Messrs. Clarence and Cleaver Brenneman, of Springs, Pa., were seeing their home folks at this place last Sunday.

Lawrence Bittinger, of Grantsville, was seen in this village last Sunday.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger and little son, Irvin, of the telephone exchange, were visiting relatives in Grantsville, this and last week.

C. J. Brenneman has been operating his saw mill here for the past week, doing some custom sawing.

Miss Bessie Wiley, assistant teacher in the public school in this village, has been off duty a few days recovering from an attack of grippe.

John H. Stark, one of our local mine operators, has closed down his plant on account of having his shed full of coal.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley is spending this week with her brother, William Winterburg, of Grantsville.

Miss Agnes Bittinger, teacher of the Amish school, was unable to take up her duties in the school room last Monday on account of illness.

To Divide District No. 2.

Delegate Jacob S. Myers has introduced a bill in the Legislature to divide Election District No. 2 into two districts.

JONES TO BRYAN: "GET OUT!"

Bryan to Jones: "I Will Not"—The Men Part Stiffly.

Ex-Senator James K. Jones, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and at one time an enthusiastic supporter of William J. Bryan, called on Mr. Bryan in his rooms at the Willard Hotel in Washington Saturday morning as spokesman for a coterie of anti-Bryan Democrats. He frankly and brusquely told Mr. Bryan that he should withdraw from the race for the nomination.

Mr. Bryan's answer was an unqualified refusal to take any such action. The men parted stiffly, and Jones reported that Mr. Bryan could not be induced to change his attitude, that his nomination was practically assured, and that other methods than appeals to the candidate himself would have to be take to prevent his nomination.

Senator Jones, it is understood, acted as spokesman for William F. Sheehan, representing the Ryan-Belmont interests; Ex-Senator George Gray, of Delaware; Ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey; George B. McClellan Harvey, representing a clique of Wall-Street interests; Perry Belmont and others. Mr. Bryan was seen before Ex-Senator Jones called on him. Asked what he should do in the event of such an appeal, he said:

"If any man asks me on behalf of the Democratic party to withdraw from the race as a candidate, I shall ask that man to show me his credentials to speak for the party."

It became known that when Mr. Bryan speaks in New York on February 1 he will denounce some of the plutocratic interests in the party. It is reported that Ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, who had promised to be one of the vice-presidents at the meeting, learning of the proposed speech, withdrew.

EAGLE ROCK.

As no one is using a pen from here I will.

Snow, rain, sun shine, mud and snow is the order of the day.

Mr. R. A. Paugh's family has the measles.

Perry Paugh was at Oakland Saturday.

Mr. John Upole is improving his time hauling lumber.

Judge Moon has a case of measles at his home.

Mr. Cyrus Harvey called on Robert Paugh Sunday.

Hubbard mines were slack two days last week.

Messrs. Perry Paugh and R. A. Brooks called on G. W. Gilson Sunday.

Mr. James Moon moved into Ashby's boarding house last week,

We are glad to hear Mrs. Jane Sollars is improving.

GORTNER.

A fierce electric storm visited this section last Sunday night, which later turned to snow, with a high wind and many of our roads are again blockaded.

Between the gripp, the measles and bad colds, it keeps a fellow guessing what will be coming next.

Noah Lichty and sister Lizzie, who were visiting relatives and friends over in Pennsylvania for the past month, returned to their home one day last week.

Peter Gortner, Jr., is on an extended visit to relatives at Kingwood and Albrightsville, W. Va.

Jacob Shettler is preparing to build a house in the near future.

Clarence Sanders and Joshua Brenninger were calling on the fair sex at Aurora last Sunday.

LOCAL MENTION.

BY PRINCE ALBERT SHROUT.

Mr. Prince Albert Shrout of Oakland, was in Hutton a few days last week with his friends and returned to his home Monday afternoon.

Mr. Joe Moon, of Hutton, was sick for some time, but he is well now.

Mr. Elijah Tasker and wife of Swanton, was in Oakland a few days last week with theie sister, Mrs. Rachel Baker, at her home on Water street.

Mr. Bert C. Scott, of Hutton, lost a black mare a few weeks ago. She died.

Mr. and Mrs. John Baker of Oakland, is the parent of a nice little daughter.

Mrs. Ella J. Tasker, wife of Mr. James William Tasker, Mountain Lake Park, is in Oakland with her daughter Mrs. Rachel Baker.

Mrs. Ann A. Shrout, was in the country with her sister, Mrs. Ella E. Tasker, a month ago, and returned to her home a week ago.

The snow lays deep but the Lord will take care of us, and you know that God is Love.

Mrs. Mary Stevens is moving to her new home on Main street.

To Be Operated On This Morning.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. E. I. West was in receipt of a telegram from Cumberland stating her brother, Mr. Charles A. Tower, would be operated on this morning in a Cumberland hospital for appendicitis. Mrs. West went to Cumberland last night.

HIS FORTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Parson Workman Remembered by Official Board of St. Paul's Church.

Tuesday being the fortieth anniversary of Rev. J. B. Workman's birth the official board of his church together with their wives and Presiding Elder Ward and wife completely surprised the parson when he came home from church that evening. They had all gathered at the parsonage, and had brought with them a fine oak roll top desk and office chair which they presented to him.

Mrs. Workman who was let into the secret, served refreshments. A social hour was spent very pleasantly, then all joined in singing "Blest Be The Tie That Binds," Dr. Ward offered prayer and all joined in wishing the parson many happy returns of the day and the guests departed leaving their pastor to wonder "how could these things be and yet he be in blessful ignorance of them."

Epworth League Society.

The members of the Epworth League of St. Paul's M. E. church were given a very pleasant social last Thursday evening in the Townshend Hall, by the social committee, of which Mr. A. W. Clary is chairman.

A brief program of music was rendered, refreshments were served and various games were enjoyed. Beautiful needle work was done by all the gentlemen present, hemming the unfinished apons worn by the ladies, while the ladies hemmed neckties to match for the gentlemen.

All agreed that it was one of the most pleasant socials ever given by the League.

THE DEATH RECORD.

CHARLES HENNEN.

Died, at his home in Deer Park, on Saturday evening, January 25th, 1908, after an illness of two years of tuberculosis, Charles, aged 31 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hennen, of Deer Park. The deceased was a member of the M. E. church at Deer Park and leaves, besides his parents two brothers and four sisters. His funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock and was conducted by Rev. E. J. Westfall, pastor of the Deer Park M. E. church.

Church Services.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

Preaching at Crellin Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Deer Park at 11 a. m.; Loch Lynn at 3 p. m. and at Ferndale at 7 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at 10:30 a. m., and at 7.30 p. m.

Revival services will continue through all of next week, services each evening at 7.30. We are pleased to note that thus far these services have been well attended, and we are truly glad for the fraternal spirit manifested by members of all the other Protestant churches of the town by their presence in our week night services. While we aim to build up our own church, we desire to help every other church that exalts our Christ.

You are cordially invited to all of our services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

Newspaper Suppressed.

For political reasons a special edition of the Morgantown Post was seized and suppressed, following a directors' meeting, when the minority stockholders, who until Monday had editorial control of the paper, were forced out and a new set of officials were appointed. Under the old management the paper favored A. C. Scherr, who is running against Secretary of State Swisher for the Republican nomination for Governor. The new management is said to be under control of local men representing Stephen B. Elkins, who favor Swisher's candidacy. The special edition was prepared by the old management, but was seized by officers as the papers were being dispatched to the postoffice and distributed among the newsboys.

Temperance Lecture at Swanton.

Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, the well known attorney of Oakland, will lecture in the Methodist Episcopal church at Swanton on Thursday evening, Feb. 6th, on "The Saloon as a Business Proposition." At 7 p. m., there will be a song service in charge of Prof. I. F. Groves, assisted by his class and the Loch Lynn Male Quartette. At 7:30 Mr. Peddicord will deliver his lecture. Everybody is cordially invited. Come and hear this very important subject discussed by one of the most able speakers in our county.

COMMITTEE.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

MR. GREEN STATES HIS POSITION.

Gives Some Facts Regarding Two Measures In The Legislation.

To the Editor of The Republican:

There seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to two bills introduced in the House by me. This misunderstanding is due to misrepresentation by newspaper reporters, and I take this method of conveying to the people of Garrett county through the columns of your paper a correct idea of the nature of these bills.

The first bill was simply a measure that has been carefully prepared defining the boundary lines of the Fourteenth Election District of Garrett county, as they now exist and positively mentions nothing in regard to a new survey, which everybody knows could not be done without incuring great expense to the county. There is not one cent of costs connected with this bill, as everybody will see when the bill is read. I am opposed to all unnecessary expenditure of the people's money and am a strict adherent of economy.

The second bill was still more absurdly misrepresented. The reporter gave this as a local option bill for Garrett county, whereas it simply amends the law applying to persons recommending applicants for liquor license,—a measure which incurs no expense whatever, but on the other hand, it has the hearty support of all our people, who understand its purpose and feel sure that it will have almost unanimous support when not misrepresented.

If newspaper correspondents and reporters cannot give the people correct reports, they had better remain "mum."

As the representative of the people I shall not be a party to anything rigid or drastic, but am at their service and will be glad to receive any suggestions that our people have to make, and shall be careful in all matters, striving to give every man a square deal.

L. F. GREEN.

MR. A. W. DENNETT DIED POOR.

Erected Hotel Dennett at Mt. Lake Park Several Years Ago.

Alfred W. Dennett, better known all over the country as "Angel" Dennett, who amassed a fortune through a chain of lunchrooms in several of the large cities, died at Stockton, Cal., on the 25th inst. Although at one time worth more than $500,000, he died poor, a victim of financial enterprise due to religious enthusiasm. Dennett first came into prominence by establishing a group of restaurants in New York, making them notorious by placing proverbs and Scriptural mottoes on the walls, along with cards giving the price of food.

Beginning this business in Boston on a small scale in 1883, Dennett had a string of restaurants from New York to San Francisco within 14 years. Through unfortunate investments in gold mines, Dennett failed in 1899. He resumed business, and later went to California. In 1901 he failed again, owing $92,000, most of his creditors being missionary societies. Starting anew, he suffered heavy losses in 1904 in Oakland and Los Angeles.

As a result of this third failure his mind was affected. He was placed in an asylum, whence he afterward was discharged as cured. Since then he had lived in retirement. He was 72 years old, and was a son of William Dennett of Topsham, Maine.

Several years ago Mr. Dennett became interested in Mountain Lake Park property where he purchased a large body of land upon which he erected Hotel Dennett, his purpose being to entertain ministers and others interested in religious work at a nominal sum, but before his plans had become perfected financial embarrassment came and the property was sold at forced sale.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

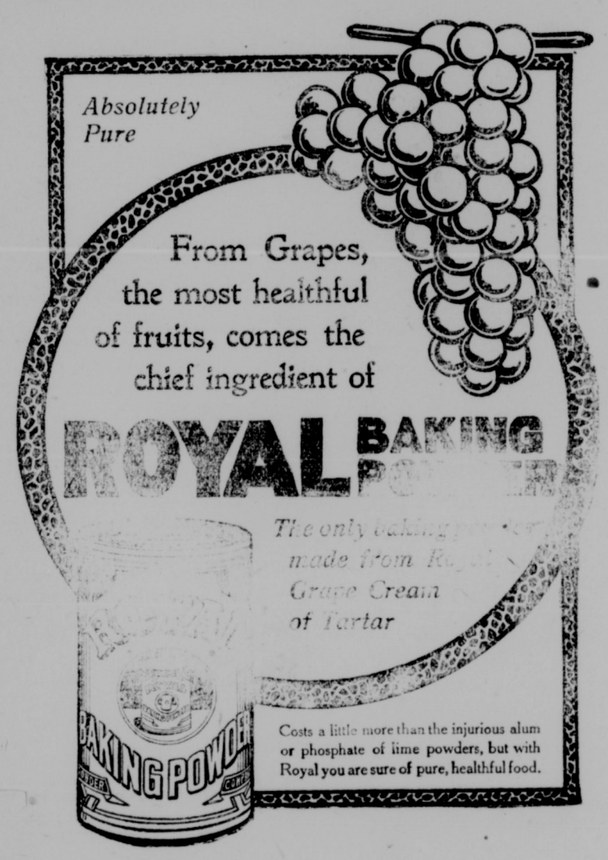
CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE-PRES. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER



Mr, G. S. Hamill went east on business Monday evening.

Mr. Louis Kamp, of the Cove, was in the city Tuesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, spent yesterday in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Browning, of near Thayerville, were in Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sincell spent Monday and Tuesday with friends in Keyser and Cumberland.

Mr. Will B. Miller, of Deer Park, spent Tuesday night and a part of yesterday morning in Oakland.

Mr. J. C. Condron, of Swanton, was in the city Saturday last when he made this office a brief business visit.

Dr. J. W. Laughlin, of the Park, visited Oakland Tuesday afternoon for the first time in a number of weeks.

Messrs. Walter Morrison and Carl White attended a dance given in Piedmont last Monday night by the Eagles.

Mrs. D. I. Totten is lying very ill at her home on Liberty street. Her condition yesterday morning was very precarious.

WANTED:—A responsible man to inspect orchards, &c., next summer in Garrett county. Write at once, State Horticultural Department, College Park, Maryland, for particulars.

It has always been a mystery to us that a young lady should make some poor fellow believe that she is interested in his welfare when as a matter of fact she is interested only in his farewell.

Ice of above twelve inches in thicknesss and practically clear, is being harvested this week by those owning ice houses in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Mesheck Browning, of Kitzmillerville, were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill at their home on Liberty street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Peddicord returned to Oakland last Saturday evening from a few days' visit to Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis.

Postmaster Joel Diehl, of the Cove, has sold his farm to Jonas Wass for the sum of $4000. The farm contains one hundred and sixty acres and is well improved.

Miss Zella Shaffer, of Carmel, W. Va., who visited her aunt, Mrs. Louis Bush in Oakland, for a few weeks, returned to her home at Carmel Monday morning.

Mr. F. H. Chase, of the Mountain View Stock Farm, left Oakland last Friday for his old home near Philadelphia where he will spend two weeks with relatives.

Next to the wife beater comes the horse beater and it is to be regretted we have one or two in this community. A horse is the most noble and faithful of animals and the man who would abuse his horse has something lacking in his manhood.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

KILLED IN WHITE ROCK MINE.

McClelland Savage, Miner, Crushed to Death Saturday.

Last Saturday afternoon McClelland Savage, aged fifty-five years, the father of a large family residing on White Rock creek, north of Kendall in this county, was instantly killed in the White Rock mine owned by the Kendall Lumber Company, in which the deceased was employed as a miner.

From what can be learned of the occurrence, Mr. Savage was pursuing his avocation when a fall of roof coal came burying him beneath it and crushing his life out in the twinkling of an eye.

The mine has been operated for a number of years and supplies the local trade within a radius of several miles.

Mr. Savage's funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from his late home.

Messrs. Edward Margroff and Louis Klotz, both of near Accident, were in Oakland yesterday when the latter qualified as administrator of the estate of his recently deceased father, Christian Klotz.

Trial Catarrn treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

Miss Lula M. Shaw, of Grantsville, who has been visiting friends in this city and in Frostburg, left yesterday afternoon for Berlin Pa.—Saturday's Cumberland News.

Mr. E. J. Fringer, the well known auctioneer of Oakland, will leave here for Baltimore next Tuesday where he will spend two weeks visiting his brother, who resides near that city.

Messrs. R. T. Browning and William Miller, who spent a few days at the State Capital, returned to Oakland last Friday morning well satisfied with the missionary work they accomplished on behalf of their friends who are seeking appointment at the hands of the Governor.

Mr. John Harned, of the Promised Land, has leased his farm to Mr. D. N. Sanders, who will assume control of the property in the spring. Mr. Harned will dispose of his live stock, farm machinery, etc., at public auction on the premises on Thursday, February 27th, beginning at ten o'clock.

Messrs. G. A. Fraley and John W. Davis, who were witnesses in the United States Court at Parkersburg in the case of the Government against Hauger for counterfeiting, returned to Oakland last Friday, after an absence of a week. The case was argued on Monday by the attorneys and on Tuesday the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

The Cumberland News of last Saturday contained the following concerning Miss Elmira Mitchell, who is an aunt of Mr. John T. Mitchell, of Oakland: "Miss Mitchell, a well known trained nurse, who has been visiting here from her Western home for some months, is quite ill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Frazee, Davidson street, where she has been a guest. Miss Mitchell's physician has advised the summoning of her near relatives."

The average house wife will soon begin to make life a burden to the other inmates of the household. She will tie a rag around her head and wade into the dirt in a way that will make your head swim. She will tear up carpets, empty the cupboards, look sour when you show up for dinner and slam things around to a queen's taste, and if you don't like it take your meals up town. Spring time is a very unhappy event when house cleaning is on.

During the illness of Miss Jennie Miller, primaay teacher in the Oakland public school, her position is being very acceptably filled by Mrs. May Hamill Loraditch. Miss Miller was taken ill on Thursday and has developed into a slight attack of diphtheria. Her sister, Miss Nan Miller, also has the disease in a mild form. Every precaution has been taken by the health authorities to prevent the disease from gaining a foothold and they feel confident that they have it well in hand.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidney nerves get weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is simply makeshift. Get a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for these weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly help will come. Free sample test sent on request by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Your health is surely worth this simple test. Sold by all dealers.

The editor who can please every one is not suited for this earth, but is so constituted that some of our readers would like to have us feed them on scandal; some would like to have us tell the unvarnish truth about them, while others would kill us if we did. It is a comforting thought to the editor to know that the Lord Himself did not please every one while on earth. We labor hard to entertain and please our subscribers but that we should occasionally fail is to be expected.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Elected Superintendent Emeritus For Life.

Deserved Recognition Accorded Rev. John M. Davis Upon His Retirement As Superintendent of Saint Paul's M. E. Sunday School of Oakland

Last Sunday afternoon after forty-one years' service as Superintendent of the Sunday school connected with St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. John M. Davis, D. D., retired from active participation in the official life of the school but was elected superintendent emeritus for life by the adoption of a resolution printed herewith.

An event of this character in the life of anyone who has occupied the position from which Rev. Davis has just retired must be witnessed to be appreciated. The school over which he has presided for upwards of a life time has grown from a mere handful of zealous, Christian men and women into a school of nearly three hundred people, who without exception are interested in the upbuilding of the Kingdom on earth.

Rev. Davis' resignation as Superintendent was tendered the official board of the school several weeks ago but was not accepted until on Sunday afternoon, when formal action was taken by the adoption of the resolutions above referred to.

These resolutions follow, having been read in the school by Rev. Workman and adopted by a rising vote of those present:

WHEREAS, The Reverend John M. Davis, who, for the past forty-one years, has been the worthy Superintendent of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, owing to the infirmities attendant upon advancing years, together with the manifold duties and cares now devolving upon him, has declined a re-election; and

WHEREAS, It would be adding care and responsibility to insist that he continue to preside over our school as active Superintendent; and

WHEREAS, We do not desire to deprive him of the well earned rest and quiet which he so justly merits and deserves; therefor, be it resolved

First, That during the forty-one years of his service as Superintendent, by his Godly life, consistent Christian example and faithful superintendency, he has endeared himself to the entire school, and has accomplished good that Eternity alone shall reveal, and that many in "that day shall rise up to call him blessed."

Second, That with deep regret, we recommend to the Sunday School board that the request of our beloved Superintendent that he be relieved be granted.

Third, That we recommend that the Sunday School Board elect the Reverend John M. Davis Superintendent Emeritus for life.

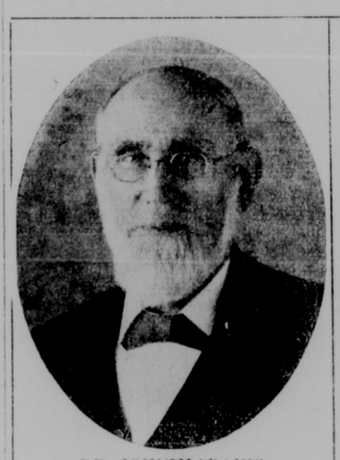
Fourth, That we assure our Superintendent that as he thus of his own choice retires from office, in the active sense, that our united prayer is that Almighty God, who through all these years has sustained, guided and upheld him, may be his constant help, comfort and companion.

Fifth, That we hereby assure our Superintendent, as he retires from active control, that we shall over regard his presence and counsel in our School as a blessed benediction.

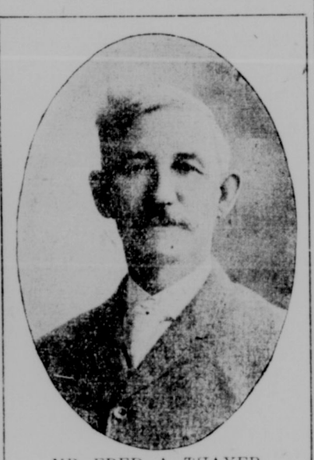
Sixth, That the aforegoing preamble and resolutions be adopted by a rising vote of the school, spread upon the minutes and an engrossed copy be delivered to our retiring Superintendent.

J. B WORKMAN,
Chairman.
J. T. MITCHELL,
E. H. SINCELL,
J. E. HARNED,
ARTHUR TOWNSHEND,
Committee.
JAMES W. WHITE, Secretary.

Immediately after the adoption of the paper Rev. Davis was invited to the platform when Rev. Workman, on behalf of the school presented him, in a few well chosen and timely remarks with a handsome gold headed cane with this inscription engraved thereon:



DR. JOHN M. DAVIS,
Superintendent Emeritus for Life.



MR. FRED. A. THAYER,
Dr. Davis' successor as Superintendent

1829.
Superintendent's Cane.
St. Paul's M. E.
Sunday School.
Oakland, Md.

In accepting the token Rev. Davis spoke feelingly of the work he had done in the Sunday school, of the many absent faces who have gone into other fields and removed by death and of the time when all, in the natural course of events, must pass away and deprecated the fact that by stress of circumstances he was compelled to surrender the office, following which a hymn was sung when the members present passing before the altar rail were grasped by the hand by the retiring superintendent.

Rev. Davis has been connected with the M. E. church since his boyhood days and was licensed as a local preacher on September 17, 1860, and was ordained elder by Bishop W. L. Harris March 19th, 1876. He was elected Superintendent of the Sunday School forty-one years ago. In June, 1902, the title of D. D. was conferred upon him by Taylor University at Upland, Ind.

At the present time there are five active members of the Sunday school who were members when Dr. Davis first assumed the Superintendency, viz: Mrs. Lou Thayer-Waters, her brother Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, Messrs. Arthur Townshend, James W. White and David T. Enlow, all of whom were present on Sunday afternoon. Mr. James W. White was married at the close of a session of the Sunday school by Superintendent Davis on March 30th, 1873, his marriage certificate being furnished by the school.

Immediately after the school dismissed Sunday afternoon the governing board met and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Superintendent, Mr. Fred. A. Thayer.
Assistants, Col. A. G. Sturgiss and Mr. E. H. Sincell.
Secretary, Mr. James W. White.
Treasurer, Mr. James C. Peddicord.
Librarian, Mr. Judson Lear.
Chorister, Dr. John G. Robinson.
Organist, Miss Nellie Workman.

ST. PAUL'S METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Teachers' Institute.

The following program will be presented at the local institute to be held in the High School room in Oakland Feb. 8, 1908:

Opening address, Mr. S. T. Jones.

"What Should be the Prime Object Sought in Teaching Language to Primary and Secondary Grades?" Mr. William Bishoff.

"What Part Should the Study of Civics Play in the Education of Boys and Girls?" Mr. L. E. Bassett.

"Should a Teacher Propare for Recitations in Primary Grades? what Difference, if any, in the Preparation Between Primary and Advance Grades?" Mr. G. W. Sterling.

"What is Good Discipline in a School?" Dr. E. H. Bartlett.

Address, "Public Schools, Public Duties," Mr. T. J. Peddicord.

"How can the Teacher Best Co-operate with the Superintendent in Advancing the Standard of Education in Garrett County?" Supt. E. A. Browning.

"What can the Teacher do to Help the Student form the Habit of Study?" Mr. M. K. Turner.

"Value of Drawing," Mr. H. A. Loraditch.

The teachers within a reasonable distance from Oakland should feel their duty to attend the Institute and are not only urged but expected to be present.

H. A. LORADITCH,
Pres. G. C. T. A..

Hurt in Runaway.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. D. H. Shank, foreman for the Kendall Lumber Company, at Crellin, was thrown from a sleigh in which he was driving to Oakland by the horse becoming unmanageable and running away. After being thrown from the vehicle Mr. Shank held onto the lines and was dragged a distance of forty feet when his hold was broken by striking with his shoulder against an obstruction in the roadway. His shoulder was very much bruised and at first it was thought he had sustained very painful injuries. He had recovered sufficiently, however, by Tuesday to return to his work at Crellin from his home in Oakland.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Allegany County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles F. A. Reichelt, late of Allegany County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 6th day of June, 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1907.

MARY A. HETZ,
Executrix,
Lonaconing, Md.

ORDER NISI.

J. B. Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure vs Jacob Fazenbaker.

No. 1562 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 8th day of January, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by J. B Emory, Assignee of mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 6th day of February, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of January, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $108.

E. Z TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

A special meeting of the Stockholders of the Penn Garrett Coal Mining Company, will be held at the office of the Company in Friendsville, Garrett county, Maryland, on

Monday, January 27th, 1908,

at 12 M., for the purpose of taking action in regard to the sale of the Company's property.

C. L. PULLEN, Stockholder.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

February 4th and 5th, 1908,

for the purpose among other business of hearing appeals on assessments and making transfers.

By order of the Board,
A. G. STURGISS, Clerk.

The Little Red House.

By JEROME SPRAGUE.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Jessie Morgan.

Brady, whizzing along Riverside in his big automobile, was a lonely man.

Before he had made his money he had lived on a farm, and in his trips back and forth from town there had been the greetings of good neighbors and the welcome of the farm hands, and at home the sociability of the meals at the great table, where maids and men gathered with the family.

There was no sociability in New York. For days he had wandered into the theaters and through the hotels, avoiding instinctively the men who would have cultivated him merely for what they could get out of him, but finding no friends.

At last, in desperation, he had learned to drive an automobile and spent his days in making long trips into the country, hobnobbing with the farmers who leaned over the fence rails to talk to him and leaving them wistfully when they returned to their toil.

Today as he sped down the drive, with its rows of cliffike buildings, he yearned for some cheery spot where he might eat and drink with a friend. And it was at this moment that his eye was caught by a sign in the window of the little red house.

The little red house was set at the edge of a vacant lot, and it seemed a very shabby neighbor to the stately white apartment house that flanked it on the left. It had a sloping roof, a few vines clung to the porch, and just above the door was the sign that had attracted Brady's notice, and the sign read, "Fresh Cherry Pies."

Brady swept up to the curb and climbed out of his machine. His great form filled the low doorway and shut out the sunlight, so that at first he could not see clearly the figure behind the counter.

"I DON'T WONDER THAT PEOPLE CAME," COMMENTED BRADY.

"I came in to ask about the cherry pies," he said. "Can I eat one here or must I carry it away with me?"

There was a ripple of laughter, and Brady moved to one side and saw that the person in charge was a girl, fresh faced, pretty and trim.

"You can eat it here," she said, taking a pie out of the case. "People usually take them away, but there is a little table and a chair, and I could make you a cup of coffee."

"Could you?" Brady's tone was eager. "I'm awfully hungry, and it is so pleasant here."

She was cutting the pie, but she looked up as he said that. "Oh, do you like it?" she asked. "I hope every one will. I am just beginning business, and I want to make a fortune."

Brady, who had made his fortune in oil, was much interested in this more picturesque method.

"Do you sell many?" he asked.

"Twenty yesterday," she confided. "I worked at night to get them ready, but it seemed as if every one wanted cherry pies. The people in the apartment house came, and I have sold out everything today except this one pie."

It was a beautiful pie, with a delicate brown crust overlaid with powdered sugar and all rosy and juicy and delicious within.

"I don't wonder that people came," commented Brady as he sat down at the little table, which she had spread with a spotless cloth.

She was like a child in her delight at his compliment.

"It was the only thing in the world that I knew how to do," she said, "and when I was left alone and lost the little income that my father had left me I decided to bake for a living."

She was sitting opposite him, and he liked the unconsciousness with which she gave him her confidence.

"I lived in the country when I was a little girl, and my mother taught me to cook."

"I'm from the country, too," Brady said.

"I thought so," she said, with a wise nod. "I think that is why I could tell you things. One can't always be sure of city men."

"Don't you hate the city?" Brady asked.

She shook her head. "No," she said. "It would be beautiful if one had friends or any one to care."

"Well, that's what I mean," Brady said. "It's so dead lonesome."

He had finished his pie, and he got up reluctantly. "I'm sorry," he said, "but I guess I'd better go."

She went to the door with him.

"What a beautiful automobile!" she said when she saw it.

"Yes, it's pretty nice," Brady agreed. "But it isn't much fun driving around by myself."

"No, I suppose not," sympathetically.

There was a moment's silence. Then Brady spoke his thoughts boldly.

"Let me drive you out into the country."

She hesitated. "I don't believe I ought," she said.

Brady looked down at her. "Can't you trust me?" he asked.

Her eyes met his steady blue ones. "Yes," she said simply and went to put on her hat.

"You see," she told him as they swept along between the green fields, "if I sell twenty pies a day at 25 cents that will be $5 a day. I ought to clear $100 a month." And she leaned back, with a sigh of content.

Brady, whose income was $100 or more a day, asked with interest, "What are you going to do with all that money?"

"Save it and buy a cottage in the country, with a fireplace and a cat and a dog and a cow."

Brady's soul was stirred by this picture of domesticity, and he asked enviously:

"Will you bake cherry pies?"

"Yes," she planned. "I am going to have a cherry tree and an apple tree. You have never tasted such apple tarts as I can make."

Brady turned in his seat and looked at her. "I am going to taste them," he informed her. "I am going to come and see you in your cottage."

She laughed. "Such air castles!" was her way of settling the question.

But Brady's chin was set with squareness, and there was determination in his tones. "I don't see how I can wait for you to build that cottage. I shall do it myself, and there shall be a fireplace—such a fireplace—with two big chairs on the hearth"—he paused expressively—"and a cat, a comfortable tabby cat, and a nice, confiding dog, and a mild eyed cow, and I am going to invite you to my cottage to make my apple tarts."

She smiled at him without self consciousness. "What dreamers we are!"

"Well, maybe you think it's a dream" —Brady's tone was dogged—"but some day I shall ask you to come."

There was no mistaking what he meant.

"Please don't," she begged.

Brady gave her a whimsical glance.

"Well, I suppose it is too soon to talk about it," he agreed. "But that cottage will need something besides a cow and a dog and a cat for me to be happy. It will need a wife and a woman worth loving—and until today I hadn't seen such a woman."

"You have known me but three hours."

"Three hours or three years! What's the difference when I know I have found the one I want?"

They were back again on the city drive, and the little red house was in sight.

"We don't have to settle anything now," Brady told her quietly. "Of course I couldn't expect you to feel the way I do. But what I want to know is this—may I come again?"

She hesitated; then, as he lifted her out of the car with his strong arms, she smiled up at him.

"Yes," she said, "if you like you may come again."

A Tart Answer.

"I was writing by my study window," writes a clergyman, "and a little child was busying himself by throwing beans at the window. Losing all patience, I rushed out of the house, determined to frighten the boy. It happened that his mother was coming after him at the same moment, and we met by his side.

"I stormed at the child, and then, as the mother seemed excessively stupid, I gave her a piece of my mind. Finally as a grand and overwhelming conclusion to my scolding I said:

"'A little discipline now with your children will save you much pain if not disgrace in the future. Think of that, madam—that is, if you ever do think.'

"'Think, is it?' she replied. 'I think if you'd go back to your bedroom and wipe the ink aff av your nose you'd be prettier even if you didn't make so much av a sensation.'

"It was not a soft answer, but it had the effect of turning away wrath."—London Tit-Bits.

An Ideal Sitter.

A Washington artist while sketching in North Carolina was one day in search of a suitable background of dark pines for a picture he had planned. At last he found the precise situation he was seeking, and, best of all, there chanced to be a pretty detail in the figure of an old colored woman in the foreground.

The artist asked the old woman to remain seated until he had sketched her. She assented with the greatest good nature, but in a few minutes asked how long the artist would be.

"Oh, only about a quarter of an hour," he answered.

Three minutes or so later the old darky again inquired—this time with manifest anxiety—how long the operation of sketching would take.

"Not long," was the reassuring reply. "But why do you ask so anxiously?"

"Oh, nuthin', sah," the old woman hastened to respond, "only I's sittin' on an ant hill, sah."—Harper's Weekly.

THE GRAND PROMOTER

Uncle Reuben Calls on the Major and Wants to Speculate.

WAS THE SOFTEST THING YET

But the Fakir Has a Different Story to Tell After the Farmer Hands Him a Lemon In the Form of a Bogus Check.

[Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.]

The grand promoter sat in his office doing a little mental arithmetic. He was owing his landlady $21 for board and lodgings, and she had that morning given him notice that he must pay or leave. He couldn't pay, and he didn't want to leave, and he was figuring on how many honeyed words it would take to permit him to hang on a week longer in hopes that something would turn up. There was a knock at the door. It might be a creditor and it might be some one of whom he could borrow 50 cents. He took his chances and bade the knocker come in.

"JUST SOLD FIVE COWS AND THREE HOGS FOR THIS."

It was Uncle Reuben from the country. There were burdocks on his trousers, corn silk on his shoulders and thistledown in his hair, and his smile was as broad and innocent as a sunflower. It just carried one back to mother's flapjacks and maple molasses to look at him.

"Say, I'm looking for a feller," he announced as he stood in the door.

"Do you want the corn doctor or the dentist?" queried Major Crofoot.

"Nope; I'm looking for a feller named Crofoot—a feller who speculates and makes a barl of money every week. They say he had an office in this building, and I want to see him. Zeke Stebbins was telling about him at our postoffice the other night."

"I am the man," said the major as he rose up and placed a chair for his caller. "Sit right down. You have come to the right place."

"Thanky. So you make lots of money for other folks?"

"Yes; I divide up a few millions occasionally."

"You do, eh? Waal, by gaul, you are the critter I'm looking for. I've been trying copper and silver mines and wheat and stocks and haven't made a red cent. I want to hit a sure thing this time."

The major's heart thumped like an engine. Here was innocence and simplicity and confidence. He hadn't had to hunt it up, but it had walked directly into his arms. He saw anywheres from $10 to $50 in it, and he pinched himself to see if he was awake.

"Just sold five cows and three hogs for this," continued Uncle Reuben as he took out his wallet and exhibited a check for $150. "I can spare it for a good investment, but it's got to be a sure thing. Zeke said you didn't deal in anything else."

"Your friend was correct. I speculate to make, not to lose."

The Major's Motto.

"That's the sort of a man I like to deal with. My motto has always been to first get a sure thing and then go ahead. I never could see why a feller wanted to speculate and lose. Got anything extra good on hand jest now?"

"The best thing I've had on hand for five years," replied the major as he tried hard to conceal his emotions. "Yes, I was just figuring out the profits when you knocked, and they are so tremendous that I'm a bit upset over the figures."

"Yes, I notice that you are changing color every minit or two. Let's hear about it. That's what I'm after—profits bigger 'n a house. No use fooling around six months to make a hundred dollars. Zeke said you sometimes made a hundred for one."

"My friend, I have promoted sixteen gigantic enterprises, and each and every one of them has been a magnificent success. I am now about to launch the seventeenth, and, as I said, the profits will be something appalling. Your coming in here this morning is an act of Providence. I was just looking around for an innocent, honest man to act as treasurer of the new incorporation—some one that can be trusted with $100,000 at a time."

"I never cheated a man in my life," said the caller.

"No, I don't believe you ever did. Our money would be perfectly safe with you. The new incorporation is called the Great International Peanut Tonic company, capital $5,000,000, and inside of a year our tonic will be sold in every country on the face of the globe. You know what the peanut is, of course?"

"Yep."

"They are eaten baked, and they are eaten raw. They are eaten on the street and in the house. They are eaten at ward caucuses and at marriages and funerals. Doctors have always said they were a good thing, but how good no one knew until I compounded a tonic of them. My dear sir, I can prove to you that one bottle of the tonic has the same nutrition as a whole carcass of fresh beef."

"Gee whiz!"

"It strengthens more than a barrel of wine."

"By thunder!"

"It will make a man or woman put on five pounds of fat per week."

"You don't say!"

"The doctors and the hospitals will throw aside every other tonic and accept mine. What does Lillian Russell say? She weighed 185 pounds before taking the peanut tonic and was supposed to be going into a decline. In two weeks she weighed 210 pounds and was looking around for the ax to chop wood. What has kept the two senators from New York state alive for the last month? What has braced Senator Foraker up anew? Why has the czar of Russia ceased to talk of resigning? Why is the Chicago beef trust trembling in its shoes? I tell you, sir, we have the grandest thing on the face of this green earth, and if you don't make $10,000,000 out of it in three years I'll be disappointed in you. As I said, I want you for treasurer."

"And, by gum, you can have me!"

Uncle Reuben's Salary.

"That's right. That's the way I like to hear a man speak up. Your salary for the first year, while we are getting under way, will only be a hundred thousand dollars, but after that it may go to half a million. All you'll have to do is to count the money as it comes in and goes out and be careful that you don't pay out any thousand dollar bills for hundreds."

"Say, it's great; it's great!" whispered Uncle Reuben as he walked around and rubbed his hands together.

"It is greater than great," added the major as he also walked. "You may want to know where we shall get our peanuts from. Not from the American trust, you can bet. I have leased 5,000,000 acres of the great Sahara desert to grow them on. Fifty bushels to the acre, and that makes 250,000,000 bushels of peanuts. We shall have our own bottle factories and raise our corks."

"Lord, what a head you have got on you!"

"Kings, emperors, czars, presidents, dictators, lords, dukes, barons, counts, opera singers and actresses to advertise us, and behind them all the doctors come trailing in; also all the newspapers. Can you beat it? Can you match Major Crofoot?"

"Shake hands, major," said Uncle Reuben as he held out his paw.

"And can you go to work on Monday?" queried the promoter after shaking.

"I'll be on hand or perish."

"Very well. You may indorse that check and leave it with me as security that you will show up. It's a mere formality, you know. Turn the check over and write your name there."

"And I'll make—make"—

"You'll have $5,000,000 in the bank before another buckwheat crop is off. And now, as this is my busy day"—

"I'll take a skate and shoot up Monday morning."

The major sat down and pressed his hands to his thumping heart and longed for a dose of brandy. He gave Uncle Reuben ten minutes to get out of the neighborhood and then wrote his own name on the check and went over to the bank and shoved it at the paying teller in a careless way.

"Good only for paper rags," said the teller as he shoved it back, with a grin.

Uncle Reuben was on top. He had soaked the man who was seeking to soak him. M. QUAD.

Strong In Death.

Towne—Well, Hussel is gone, poor fellow! He just worked himself to death. He was always in such a hurry!

Browne—Yes, and they say he was out of breath when he died.—Philadelphia Press.

A Gay Old Bird.

Judge Pelican—Your grandfather was a gay old bird.

Tommy Crane—That so?

Judge Pelican—Yes. Haven't you heard about "The Hanging of the Crane?"—Harper's Weekly.

The Truth of It.

"Yes," said Hamley, the actor, "I had a splendid part in the show, but I—er—took sick and"—

"Huh!" interrupted Crittick. "You mean you didn't take well."—New York Life.

CALENDAR OF 1896 WILL DO FOR 1908

Which Goes to Show Even Calendars Sometimes Repeat Themselves.

At this season of the year, when everyone wants a new calendar for 1908, it may interest readers to know that if they have an old one either the years 1812, 1840, 1868 or 1896 lying around the house it will do just as well; also if they will save their 1908 calendars they can be used again in 1936, 1964 and so on up. This goes to show that a calendar, like history, repeats itself.

The year 1908 being a leap year, its calendar can be used only every 28 years, but the calendar of 1907 ought to be saved, for it is a useful one. For instance, it was found handy in 1782, 1793, 1799, 1805, 1811, 1811, 1822, 1833, 1839, 1850, 1861, 1867, 1878, 1889, 1895 and 1907, and will be used again in 1916 and thereafter every six or 11 years, excepting when the year 2000 comes in, which, while divisible by four, isn't a leap year any more than 1800 or 1900 were. So we lose a day and they get an extra year as the result, which means a period of 12 years must must elapse between the time we use the calendar before the year 2000 and the time we next use it after the year 2000.

This matter of the recurrence of the same calendar every six or 11 years is very simple when looked into. The year 1907 began on a Tuesday, and when Tuesday begins a year again it is evident the same calendar can be used, unless it is leap year. As 1908 is a leap year, starting on Wednesday, an extra day is gained and 1909, instead of starting on Thursday, doesn't get going until Friday, 1910 on Saturday, 1911 on Sunday and 1912 would naturally start on Tuesday, the extra day shoves it it along to Wednesday and Tuesday is missed. Then 1814 starts on Thursday, 1915 on Friday and 1916, another leap year, on Saturday. In turn, 1917 starts on Monday instead of Sunday, on account of leap year, so that not until 1918 do we find a year, which starts on Tuesday again, the same as 1907 did, yet it is not a leap year.

It is evident that if only one leap year had come in, as in the period from 1900 to 1907, the same day of the week the year to start on will recur in 6 years, but if two comes in 11 years must intervene.

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation even to very young babes. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung-healing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal aching lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor uses, "The Sacred Herb." Always demand Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indiam Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.
Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

You Read the Other Fellow's Ad

You are reading this one. That should convince you that advertising in these columns is a profitable proposition; that it will bring business to your store. The fact that the other fellow advertises is probably the reason he is getting more business than is falling to you. Would it not be well to give the other fellow a chance

To Read Your Ad In These Columns

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneezing stage—they break, or head off these ear[illegible]. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 5. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics
"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
Schedule effective June 2, 1907.
OAKLAND.
*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *9.53 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *8.29 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *2.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *9.53 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.
Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.
Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.
New Buildings with modern improvements.
Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees. All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance.
Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.
Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.
Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.
Write for particulars.
Term commences September 19th, 1907.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
22-8t College Park Md.

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others.' J. H. PRUITT, Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

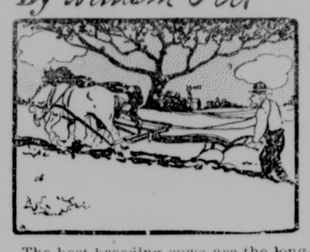
The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,

Okland, Md.

NOTES FROM MEADOW BROOK FARM

By William Pitt



The best breeding sows are the long-bodied animals.

Second growth clover makes splendid pasturage for young pigs.

Put your confidence in good management rather than in the veterinarian.

The pigs should have access to a box containing salt, charcoal and sulphur.

Horses will do better if given the run of a small yard adjoining the stable.

Cut the old canes out of the raspberry patch and give the young canes a chance to mature.

Exposure to the hot sun of the summer is bad for hogs. Provide some kind of shelter.

Mild cases of diarrhoea in pigs can be relieved by feeding fresh skimmed milk thickened with wheat flour.

A great deal of fruit can be grown on a very small plot of ground if it is well fertilized and cultivated.

The health of the steer requires good air and good feed; the air all the time and the feed at regular periods.

Don't be a pessimist. Look on the bright side of things. Matters turn out better than we think they will, generally.

It is a good rule to purchase a new boar as often as the sows have passed their prime and are replaced by the offspring of the old boar.

Planting cherry trees in the fence corners is all right, if care is given them, but any fruit tree left to shift for itself will not return a profit.

You will rest better after your hard day's work if you make the horses comfortable by rubbing them down when putting them up for the night.

Free range hogs are generally more hearty and vigorous than the penned ones. They do well in the cow pasture and follow up the cows with good results.

An advocate of tile drainage declares his experience proves that it pays ten per cent. on the investment and will return the principal in five years if the work is properly done.

The low-wheeled wagon has its uses on the farm, but remember that the lower the wheel the more times it has to turn to get there, and for this reason the low wheeler is not a good road wagon.

Have you been so much interested in the matter of your field crops as to have forgotten and neglected the wood lot? Don't let any kind of trees grow there, but pick the trees which make the best fire-wood.

Just send a batch of vegetables from your garden to your neighbor who did not have time, as he said, to plant a garden. Perhaps it will make him repent of his folly and lead him to make good resolutions for the year to come.

In the grading of hogs for the market reports it is the general rule that the packing hogs are of a class that are of a poorer grade than the butcher hogs, and they may include old brood sows and all other hogs, except the poorer classes, such as roughs, boars, and coarse stags that are heavy enough for this class, and not good enough for the butcher hog class.

Tenant farming may bring profit to the tenant, but it works ill to the farm, nine times out of ten. To be sure, there are good and bad tenants, but human nature is the same everywhere, and the farm which the man does not own is not going to receive the care which the owner would give it. The tenant is interested in the farm only to the extent of paying his rental and realizing as large a profit as is possible.

Feeding and breeding are closely related. Some experimenters have found that when sows are fed very sparingly or on improper kinds of food for some time before the breeding season, it is often difficult to get them to breed and the individuals in the litters are generally pretty irregular both as to size and vigor. On the other hand, sows that are fed bountifully before farrowing usually breed without difficulty, producing large and uniform litters. Of course during these experiments the sows were fed a suitable balanced ration and were given plenty of exercise.

Do not keep your poultry in too large flocks.

Young pigs running with old ones will not do well. Keep them separate.

Look over the lambs and select the best possible animals for future breeding.

Agriculture as a regular study in the schools is coming, especially in rural communities.

It appears from the statements of experts that the world's wheat crop is short this year.

Be sure the cows get plenty of drinking water that is clean and cool. Water your milk through the cow.

Good management of the swine herd will put money into the farmer's pocket quicker than in almost any other way.

Feed well during the moulting season if you would have your poultry come through strong and ready for fall and winter laying.

Keep the digestive apparatus of the pigs in good condition as it is through this channel that you build up the pork you hope to sell.

Looseness of the bowels is sometimes caused in horses by sharpness of the teeth which prevents proper mastication of the food.

Know what your crops cost you, keep account of your receipts and draw a balance to see if you are getting ahead or are losing money.

A few minutes work over the forge will turn an old harrow tooth into a good staple puller. Sharpen and bend the point into a curve and it is ready for use.

Horses like water just as do you when they are thirsty. What plan do you have of watering them? Any old time that is most convenient? Don't do it that way.

The bed of the pig is seldom looked after as it should be. Give fresh straw as often as necessary to provide a dry, clean bed and have the building located in a dry place.

The surest way to drive the boys from the farm is to let the work of the farm be carried on in such a slipshod method as to never be done. Early and late method is a poor one.

Proper handling of the farm means increase in value of the farm each year, but any system of farming that takes away more fertility than is returned to the soil means bankruptcy in the end.

Are you planning to attend the agricultural fair? Do so by all means. A study of the exhibits will prove many an eye opener to you and give you suggestions for the betterment of your own methods.

Perhaps your wood lot can be improved by draining and by the planting of seeds of species of trees that will give the greatest amount of fuel material in the fewest number of years.

How do you pick your breeding sow? Some farmers look over their herds at marketing time and those which are not fat enough to kill are kept for breeding purposes. Such a system is folly as it is certain to result in deterioration of the herd.

Appearances go a long ways towards selling the goods. An inferior article will often sell more readily than one of better quality because the former is offered for sale in a clean, neat, attractive form, while the latter is not. Remember this when preparing your products for the market.

Exterminate wild garlic by system of cultivation which will disturb the plant in its critical stages. This may be accomplished by summer and early fall cultivation, followed by similar treatment in the early spring and through the second season, together with the growing of a field crop for two or three years.

Here is a cow story from England which shows that the shrewd cow man is in evidence over there as well as in Yankee land. A Dumfries cattle-dealer sold a cow to the man from Hawick. The latter summoned the dealer for compensation, on the ground that he had given false information about the cow. The case came before the sheriff. "I asked him," said the plaintiff, "if the cow was a good milker?" "And what did he say?" "He said, 'She'll astonish you,' but since I've had her she has not given one drop of milk." "Then," said the sheriff, "I should say she has astonished you." Verdict for the defendant.

Oats and peas make a good soiling crop for stock. C. G. Williams, agronomist of the Ohio experiment station, says that they use there one and one-half bushels of each per acre. The pease need to be covered much deeper than the oats, hence it is necessary to seed them separately. Seed the peas first, weighting the drill hoes in order to put them in four or five inches deep. The oats are sown broadcast and harrowed or else drilled shallow. Then make the first seeding as early as it is possible to work the ground, following with two later seedings at intervals of two weeks each.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contagious germs and bacterial diseases It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, Oakland, Md.

SHEEP MEN OF TRE WEST.

They Held a Convention at Helena, Mont., and Our Correspondent Roasts Them.

Helena, Montana, Jan. 23, 1908.

The 44th meeting of the National Wool Growers' Association has just closed in this city after a three days' session.

All the wool growing states of the west were represented, also Ohio and Pennsylvania. There were about four hundred delegates present.

The committee on reception met the incoming members without overcoats and clad in straw hats to call their attention to the mildness of the weather because the previous year they declared they would all freeze to death if they had to hold the 1908 meeting in the Rocky mountains.

So far we have had but three inches of snow to date and December and January have been more like April and May than mid winter with the mercury standing 30 above by night and 50 to 60 by day. Sweet peas were blooming out of doors till the middle of November.

To return to the sheep men—a lot of them were inclined to be hog men as regards the public domain. Every speaker toasted Theodore Roosevelt to a turn for his policy regarding the public lands in setting aside forest reserves and advocating a leasing system for the public lands. They never looked at the question from any other stand point except their own self-intertest.

They declared it was a flagrant and unconstitutional interference with states rights for the President to set aside large tracts of land as forest reserves in a state or to charge for the use of the same to the residents of that state not seeming to recollect that the Public Lands belong to all of the people instead of to a few thousand sheep men.

The only hope of the future for the dangerously congested cities of the east is to homestead some of the population on the public lands in the west.

Millions of acres have been stolen the past few years and had it not been for Roosevelt millions more would have gone the same way.

Guggenheim, a rich Jew from Colorado who has recently broken into the Senate, is out as the father of a very dangerous bill to give millions more of the public lands into the hands of a few in perpetuity for the nominal sum of 50 cents and $1 per acre. The bill is not in the interest of the masses but of the classes.

As I look from my window I can see a great lake of water covering thousands of acres of the Prickey Pear valley. Some months ago I had a steam launch ride on it. It is the back-water of the Missouri river from dam No. 2 ten miles away, which has been built to give electric power to Helena, Butte and Great Falls and to raise the waters to a height sufficient to irrigate the valley of the Prickly Pear.

It is a magnificent feat of engineering skill and defiance of natural limitations placed by Nature.

The work at Niagara Falls which attracted world wide attention a few years ago was child's play compared to this colossal conquest of a mighty river.

We saw by the paper that there was a panic in the East but its effects were not visible here. The banks kept on in the even tenor of their way and the people also.

There's a great deal of wealth here but not very much refinement, the chief aim being to make a display and to outshine each other. Bridge whist is the all-absorbing pastime among the women and poker and money grabbing among the men.

Two of the citizens near here who are "making good" in a very substantial way were born near Oakland and lived there until late in their teens. It has taken hard work and plenty of it to put them on "easy street," but now with thousands of sheep and a nominally fine range winter and summer, they are practically certain of an average of 50 per cent on their investment.

I do not see how eastern sheep growers are going to compete with such conditions successfully as it only costs about 50 cents per head here to fit a sheep for market and they shear from 8 pounds of wool up to 12 or 15 and that more than pays purchase price and cost of keeping, in a year or less.

Yesterday I attended a reception given to the Daughters of the Confederacy by the wife of General Wade Hampton's son, who is U. S. Government Inspector of Chinese Immigration for Montana.

The pastime was naming correctly the greatest number of the photographs of distinguished Confederate generals and Southern leaders whose pictures adorned all the curtains.

Prizes were distributed to the two most successful ladies.

M. A. Y.

Eagle Instead of Coon.

At the recent meeting of the Republican state executive committee at Parkersburg a resolution was passed adopting the eagle as the party emblem for the election ballots throughout West Virginia. This relegates the aforetime coon to the rear so far as election ballots are concerned, but his familiar figure is bound to reappear wherever there is a Republican victory in West Virginia.

DUNDER UND BLITZEN!

Remarkable Storm for This Season of the Year Sunday Night.

Last Sunday evening about eight o'clock an electrical storm reminding one of the good old summer time, passed over this section of the country.

The lightning, visible in the eastern sky was accompanied by rumbling thunder and a downpour of rain which exceeded in the volume that of many storms in midsummer. The rain continued until probably ten o'clock when the weather became colder and snow followed.

Statistics For Churches 1907.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, who is the leading authority on church statistics in the United States, has just published his report for 1907. In it we find that the net gains for all denominations for last year were ministers 2,301; churches, 4,214; communicants, 627,546.

The Baptists (14 Bodies) have 38,279 ministers, 55,294 churches and 5,224,305 communicants; gaining last year 259 ministers, 676 churches and 103,358 communicants.

The Catholics (9 bodies) have 15,891 ministers; 12,731 churches and 11,645,495 communicants; gained last year 622 ministers, 282 churches, and 266,000 communicants.

The Lutherans (five general bodies and eighteen indpendent synods), ministers 8,040; churches, 13,169; communicants 2,022,605. Gains being given for the five general bodies and eleven Synods as follows; Ministers 168; churches 135; communicants 65,175.

Methodists (17 bodies) ministers 41,893; churches, 61,518; communicants 6,660,784. Gains, ministers 381; churches 1946; communicants, 101,696.

Presbyterians (12 bodies) ministers 12,723; churches 16, 478; communicants 1,821,504. Gains, ministers 18; churches 556, communicants 49,627.

Protestant Episcopal (2 bodies), namely Protestant Episcopal and Reformed Episcopal, ministers 5,197; churches 7,779; communicants 830,659. No figures are given to show gains of the Reformed Episcopal but the Protestant Episcopal shows a decrease of 61 ministers and 15,833 communicants and a gain of 212 churches. In a note Dr. Carroll says "Episcopal Year Books disagree. Decrease probably due to defective statistics." This note refers to decrease in number of churches and not to number of communicants.

United Brethren (2 bodies), ministers 2,168; churches 4,359; communicants 289,652 / Gains are only given for one branch which shows a gain of 8 churches, 3,414 communicants and a decrease of 79 ministers.

The statistics show that there were 4,214 churches built in this country last year and all the denominations did not make report. This is nearly fourteen churches gained for every working day in the year besides the new ones built to take the place of others.

The Methodist Episcopal church made the largest gain in number of any Protestant denomination communicants 52,406. They gained in ministers 167 and in churches 274.

The African Methodist Episcopal with its 850,000 members built more than one-fourth the churches gained, they making a gain in churches to the number of 1,494 the total for the country being 4,214.

There are according to Dr. Carroll 15,693 Roman Catholic Priests being a gain of 592 over previous year, an increase of 251 churches and a gain of 246,000 in membership, making the total number of communicants in that church 11,371,970, and a total number of churches 12,482.

There are 17,861 Methodist Episcopal ministers, 27,965 churches and 3,036,667 members.

The Lutherans added 65,172 to the number of communicants reported for 1906. The Disciples of Christ, 20,365.

Taken as a whole the report of Dr. Carroll is very interesting to any one interested in the great work of the churches of our country.

Among many other things which are of value to note in that the second Protestant denomination to make the largest increase of members is the Regular (colored) Baptist being 944 (estimate), and also that the African Methodist Episcopal church as stated above built more than one-fourth of the churches that was gained last year. Ignorance and prejudice will never solve the colored problem. The religion of Him who went around doing good and who spoke as never Man spake will, and Christianity is the only thing that will solve this great problem.

We can get a vast amount of information and encouragement from these valuable statistics which Dr. Carroll has compiled.

Very truly,
A. F. George.

B. & O. Suspends at Grafton.

Orders were issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company calling for a suspension of work in its shops at Grafton until February 3rd. The order affects employes also at Parkersburg, Fairmont, Weston and other points. In Grafton alone several hundred men are thus thrown out of work for ten days. Small business is assigned as the cause.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

Bond, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

Matthews & Hamill, Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. Brown,
Supt. Bond Mill.

Killed in Fahey Mine.

John W. Dailey, son of Michael Dailey, of Franklin, Allegany county, was killed in Faheys mine at Franklin, by a fall of rock. He was working with Joseph Stone and John Franklin, and while loading the last car of the shaft, a piece of rock fell from the roof, crushing Dailey to the floor. His campanions fled and gave the alarm. When rescuers returned, they found that another piece of rock had fallen and Dailey was dead. He is survived by his wife and three small children, who reside at Borden Shaft.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

The First National Bank,
Friendsville, Md.

Orphans' Court.

At the session of the Orphans' Court held on Tuesday with all the judges present the following business was transacted:

Letters of administration upon the estate of Jonas Teats were granted Catherine Teats.

Also upon the estate of Levi Sweitzer to Joseph R. Glass.

Visits Scene of Former Labors.

Ex-Senator George L. Wellington has returned from a brief visit to Washington. For the first time since he left the United States Senate, he visited the Senate Chamber where he was warmly greeted by many former colleagues. He received much attention while on the floor of the Senate, a privilege which former senators enjoy. He had quite a pleasant chat with Vice President Fairbanks, who is an old friend. The time went by so pleasantly that Senator Welington did not realize that he spent between three and four hours on the floor.

Wants to Be School Commissioner

On Monday afternoon Mr. George T. Porter, of near Oakland, filed his application for the appointment of School Commissioner for this county with Governor Crothers.

Guilty of Libel.

In the Allegany County Circuit Court at Cumberland Tuesday Mr. J. J. Robinson, editor of the Lonaconing Star, was found guilty by a jury of criminal libel, the prosecuting witness being Mr. Duncan R. Sloan, of Lonaconing. Pending sentence by the Court Robinson is at liberty upon bond in the sum of $300.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

Amount of Seed Required Per Acre.

The amount of seeds required to an acre is estimated as follows: Oats, 3 bushels; barley, 2 bushels; timothy, 6 quarts; tobacco, 2 ounces; bluegrass, 2 bushels; red clover, 8 quarts; redtop, 1 to 2 pecks; millet, one-quarter bushel; orchard grass, 2 quarts; white clover, 4 quarts; buckwheat, one-half bushel; broom corn, one-half bushel; corn, broadcast, 4 bushels; potatoes, 10 to 15 bushels; ruta-bagas, three-fourths pound; mixed lawn grass, one-half bushel; corn, in hills, 4 to 8 quarts; corn in drills, 2 to 3 bushels; rye, 1½ to 2 bushels; wheat, 1½ to 2 bushels.

Monongah Mine Open.

Monongah mines, Nos. 6 and 8, of the Fairmont Coal Company, in which the explosion of December 6 last killed 360 men, resumed operation Monday. The officials have received hundreds of applications for work. As the finishing touches were being put on the mine Sunday the bodies of James Moon, a trapper boy, and an unknown Slav were found.

Hurt While Logging.

Mr. Thaddeus C. Hinebaugh, son of the late William Hinebaugh, while engaged in logging near McHenry last Thursday afternoon was painfully hurt by being struck and knocked down with a trail of logs he was taking to the mill. Coming to a steep place in the log run the rear logs of the trail crowded the forward ones, which caused them to buckle, one striking him in the stomach and throwing him against a tree which dislocated his shoulder and cut a deep gash in his forehead. He was attended by his brother, Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, of Oakland.

Prices of Beef Reduced.

To the People of Oakland and Vicinity:

Western Beef has not fallen in price, but Garrett county beef has, which I will sell at the prices following:

Porterhouse Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Tenderloin Steak, 10 to 12½ cents; Round Steak, 10 to 12 cents; Roast, 7 to 10 cents; Boiling Beef, 5 to 7 cents. A poor man's dollar looks as big to me as a rich man's. If your are too poor to buy I will give it to you.

Yours to stay,
H. Creutzburg,
Meat Dealer and Grocer.

Corporation Election to be Held.

A primary was held in Friendsville last Thursday when the following were placed in nomination to be voted for at the corporation election to be held in that town on Tuesday, February 4th: For Mayor, Arthur Chisholm, B. F. Friend and Milton Forsythe; Councilmen, George B. Frazee, A. A. Allen, William Steel, George Friend, R. M. Holman and George W. Dunham. Three Councilmen and the Mayor are to be selected from the above nominees.

IN CONFLICT WITH LAW.

Strong Proof That German Tariff Agreement Is Illegal.

Illegality is the strongest count in the indictment framed in the protest of the American Protective Tariff league against the German tariff agreement. Authority is not lacking in support of the contention that the "export price" provision of that agreement is in direct conflict with a law of congress which points out the procedure by which the basis of dutiable value must be ascertained. Actual market value in the country from whence the goods are exported is the basis established by congress; not an "export price" nor the value named by a local chamber of commerce.

In the American Economist is printed in full the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals, rendered March 26, 1907, in which the court holds, after quoting section 19, of the customs administrative act, that the duty of the collector is plain; he must assess tariff duties upon the ascertained actual market value in the country from whence the merchandise was exported. Says the court:

"The rule thus fixed by statute is plain and simple, binding alike on importer and collector. Neither may vary nor evade it. Neither may appeal to other criteria of value."

Referring again to the binding force of the law enacted by congress, the court said:

"By the express command of the statute the collector was prohibited from considering anything but the actual market value of the wool in the principal markets of Turkey. Having ascertained that value, he should have levied duty accordingly."

Nothing could be plainer than this. Not an "export price" shaved down for purposes of tariff evasion; not a valuation named by a local chamber of commerce composed of the men most interested in tariff evasion; but "the actual value of the merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities"—that is the rule "fixed by statute," which neither a collector of customs nor a secretary of state, a secretary of the treasury, nor a president himself can set aside or disregard.

Under the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals the duty of congress is plain. Both houses should, without regard to party lines, unite in a joint resolution demanding the abrogation of a tariff trade agreement that is clearly illegal.—American Economist.

WOULD CLIP THE EAGLE'S WINGS.

Lost—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

WE PRINT
SALE BILLS
AND PRINT THEM RIGHT

Executor's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letter Testamentary on the personal estate of

BARBARA YODER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 23rd day of July, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 23rd day of January, 1908.

EMANUEL HERSHBERGER,
Executor.
Grantsville Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix.
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted—where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE.
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,
the 31st day of January, '08,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SIXTEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX, SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY AND FOURTEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO, CONTAINING FOR THE WHOLE TWO HUNDRED ACRES, MORE OR LESS. Said land is located in Election Eistrict No. 1 of said Garrett county and is particularly described in a deed for the same from Joshua Ritchie and others to Louis Ritchie, said deed being recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 8, folio 415, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1904 and 1905 as it is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the names of Thomas A. and William M. Ritchie, who acquired title thereto as devisees under the last will of the late Louis Ritchie, dated the 31st day of August, 1901, whice was probated in the District of Columbia and is of record in the office of the Register of Wills for Garrett county.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.
We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1908. NUMBER 49

DANIEL ANNAN, President

W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Vice President

D. F. KUYKENDALL, Cashier

No. 1519.

The SECOND NATIONAL BANK

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND.

United States Depository State Depository.

CAPITAL $100,000 SURPLUS $300,000.

Statement of the Second National Bank, Cumberland,

As Submitted to its Stockholders at its Annual Meeting Held At its Banking House on the Fourteenth Day of January, 1908:

Capital Stock	$ 100,000.00	Loans	$1,342,159.06
Surplus	300,000.00	U. S. and other Bonds	817,455.76
Circulation	99,150.00	Banking House and Real Estate	51,500.00
Profit and Loss	33,812.35	Cash on hand and in Banks	494,462.55
Deposits	2,177,615.02	Redemption Fund	5,000.00
	$2,710,577.37		$2,710,577.37

We, the undersigned Directors of the Second National Bank, of Cumberland, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the condition of the Bank, as shown by its books January 8th, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN, President of Second National Bank.
L. M. SHEPHERD, President Cumberland Dry Goods & Notion Co.
O. C. GEPHART, Retired Capitalist
ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Associate Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.
LLOYD LOWNDES, Lawyer, Banker, Farmer.
VAN LEAR BLACK, Director of the Consolidation Coal Co., the Potomac Coal Co.
W. BLADEN LOWNDES, Gen. Mgr. Union Mining Co., Prest. First National Bank of Mt. Savage.

This bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits. The Most Liberal Terms Granted Consistent with Safe Banking. Investment Securities for sale, including Allegany County 3½ per cent. and Garrett County 4 per cent. Bonds. The Garrett County Bonds are the only debt of the County and are free of taxation.

DIXON & KELSO

Will pay 60c. for No. 1 Oak Ties.

And 45c. for No. 2 Oak Ties

Delivered anywhere along line of the Railroad.

We can also handle 9 and 10 foot

MINE PROPS

at 1c. per foot, delivered at our yard

We have a big stock of all kinds of

Feed and Gra

Received 5 cars in the days

Yours to Please,

DIXON & K.

BITTINGER.

Last Sunday was Ground Hog Day but when the gray old snoozer awo from his long winter nap and found t mercury hovering near zero and the trance to his subteranean castle blo with snow, he turned around s times and laid down again, smili his peculiar way and concluded the weather and all matters of to Spangler. local s that both Spa could get int

A foreign Bros'. as a his legs brol woods last wee hospital at Cumberla

The last two days o the early part of t coldest and most se in this section.

Miss Effie Bitt week with he Yommer, of C

Noah Star dorf's sugar son. He w the camp

A sma room b T. J w sent. der

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

OF OTHING

several hundred suits of ing for Men and Boys that wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

E. A. WEIMER.
OAKLAND, MD

MAJOR BURNS MAKES A RECOMMENDATION

Which is Considered Worthy of Special Attention.

TRAINING OF ARMY OFFICERS.

The Agricultural Colleges Would be Good Places for This Work—Maj. Burns Has Long Experience in Guard Affairs.

The following is taken from the Army and Navy Register and refers to the annual report of Major James M. Burns, U. S. Army, now on duty with the National Guard of West Virginia.

Major J. M. Burns, U. S. Army, retired, on duty with the West Virginia militia, has made an important recommendation to the effect that the agricultural colleges, which are partly supported by the proceeds of congressional land grants, a course of study be adopted with a view to the training of officers of the organized militia. The suggestion is considered as one entitled to special attention, but all that the War Department can do in this matter would be to present the advantages of such a course in training to the governors of the various states. Each state legislature must be relied on to take such action as would be of advantage to the national guard. It has also been suggested by Major Burns that officers of the organized militia of any state or territory be allowed to attend and pursue a course of study at any agricultural college where an officer of the army is stationed as professor of military science; and that, during such attendance, they be authorized to receive from the annual appropriations for the support of the army the same travelling allowance, quarters, etc., to which an officer of the regular army is entitled under the same circumstances together with commutation of subsistence, etc. It is not probable, however, that the existing law is sufficiently broad to include a course of study of this sort.

The Dick bill, which was approved Jan. 21, 1903, provides "That whenever any officer of the organized militia shall, upon the recommendation of the governor of any state, territory, or general commanding the Distriet of Columbia, and when authorized by the President, attend and pursue a regular course of study at any military school or college of the United States such officer shall receive from the annual appropriation for the support of the army the same travel allowances and quarters, or commutation of quarters, to which an officer of the regular army would be entitled if attending such school or college under orders from proper military authority, and shall also receive commutation of subsistence at the rate of one dollar per day while in actual attendance upon the course of instruction." (Those allowances would amount to about $80 per month for captains and lieutenants.) Major Burns holds that as the ageicultural colleges in the different states are partly supported by the government and that the law requires that military science be taught in each of these institutions an officer of the U. S. army is detailed as Professor of Military Science, they should be considered as military schools or colleges of the United States, within the meaning of the Dick bill, and if the present law will not permit of such construction, then it should be changed so as to include these institutions and that the officer detailed as Professor of Military Science be instructed to offer free of charge a six months course, such as it usually given at militaay posts, to all officers of the National Guard of the state in which they are located and who present themselves under proper orders. Upon the completion of the courses and after passing a satisfactory examination the officer in charge should give a certificate of graduation, which would entitle the holder to be mustered into the U. S. volunteers, without further mental examination in case his services were required by the government.

It might be argued that such a course would be very expensive to the government, which is true, but when we consider the great benefits to be derived from such an expenditure it would be remarkably cheap. There are in the National Guard of the different states about five thousand company officers and to give each of them the course recommended the cost would be about $250,000, and thereafter the cost would only be a few thousand each year. Major Burns has had large experience in National Guard affairs. He was the first officer of the army ever detailed for duty with the National Guard. He was on the staff of Governor Campbell, of Ohio, in 1890 and rendered valuable service to the Guard of that state, and in 1897 he was again detailed on the staff of Governor Bushnell, of the same state. Major Burns' first military service was in Co. B, 1st West Virginia Infantry in 1861 and he was discharged on account of the close of the war in July, 1865. During these four years he was on many hard campaigns and in many battles and skirmishes, and on the 15th of May, 1864, at the battle of Newmarket, in the Valley of Virginia, he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for gallantry on the field of battle. (This is the battle in which the cadets of the V. M. I. distinguished themselves). With his large experience in war and peace he is qualified to speak on National Guard affairs and his recommendations always receive great consideration.

It is believed by many that this is the only practical method ever suggested where officers can be properly educated to command men in the field. It would be better to abandon the large summer encampments, which are of no practical advantage to the large majority of the Guard and devote the money to educating the officers. What the National Guard most needs is regimental encampments where men can be taught outpost and patrol duty and have target practice. Hiking around over the country in a kind of brigade formation is of no practical benefit to anyone except perhaps to the brigadier general.

OIL THAT WILL NOT FREEZE

A Lubriant for Automobiles in the Arctic Regions.

There has recently been some talk of an automobile race from New York to Paris. A part of the route will lie through British America, Alaska and Siberia. Doubts have been entertained whether ordinary lubricating oil would be serviceable in the extreme temperature of those regions. The Standard Oil Company has announced that a special oil will be provided, but the cost will be enormous when the mercury gets down to zero.

"It has always been the policy," Mr. Kingsbury says, "to keep even with the demand, and as soon as we realized that the proposed race would call for a lubricating oil that we were manufacturing we took up the matter of meeting that demand and its consequent demands. We have consulted our experts and they are now busy making experiments. The Standard Oil Company's object is to get out a lubricating oil that will be fluid enough in the very cold climate that it will pass through.

"We have received requests already," he continued, "for a lubricating oil which will be that will stand the test of zero and give perfect service. We have been specially making for the start of the New York. It is believed that will be highly successful."

A MEMORIAL RELATING TO THE NATIONAL PIKE

Prepared by Delegate Carl and Read in the House Thursday.

A memorial addressed to Congress and urging the taking over and restoration by the Federal government of the national pike to its early state of efficiency for travel and transportation, was read in the House of Delegatse Thursday and was received with a lively degree of interest, being later referred to the committee on federal relations, which will doubtless report it favorably. The memorial was prepared and introduced by Delegate Frank Lee Carl, of Allegany county. Of course, it specifies merely that the government accept that portion of the pike which extends from Cumberland through Garrett county, as the State of Maryland has jurisdiction only over that section, but it is really designed to awaken a kindred interest and feeling in other states traversed by the historic thoroughfare. The memorial, which it is believed will eventually be sanctioned by both branches of the General Assembly reads as follows:

Whereas, The Counties of Allegany and Garrett, in the State of Maryland, are the respective owners of that portion of the "Cumberland Road," (commonly known as the "National Road,") within their boundary limits, and within the limits of the State of Maryland, and having been made such owners by an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, said road originally beginning on the west side of Will's Creek, in the City of Cumberland, Md., a short distance from the site of Fort Cumberland, and following in a large measures the route of the road built by General Braddock in 1755, in his expedition to Fort Duquesne, now the site of Pittsburg, Pa., and

Whereas, Since the organization of the general government in 1789, in the development of the "western" territory of the United States as the country beyond the Alleganies was then known, this road became the main and most important thoroughfare in the transportation of people and supplies to the west and its constant use caused it to become worn out and utterly inadequate to the public necessities

Whereas all the principal roads of ... far back as ... the first federal ... ing in ... initiative ... Congress ...

tion approaching its former usefulness and adaptability as a means of transportation; and

Whereas, Said road was in the year 1834 changed in course from the west to the east side of Will's Creek in the City of Cumberland, so as to begin at the intersection of Baltimore and Mechanic streets in said city, and follow said Mechanic street and after several miles distance connects with the old route and passes through Frostburg and other towns in Allegany county, Maryland, on to Grantsville, Garrett county, Maryland, and from said last-named county into the State of Pennsylvania, and

Whereas, The said "Cumberland" or "National Road" in Maryland has intimately linked itself with the development and improvement of the nation and was first to receive national recognition and support, and is still an important artery of travel between the above points, but through lack of attention on account of the financial disability, the respective counties of Allegany and Garrett, through which it passes, have been unable to give it the attention it requires and preserve it in the excellent condition which its antiquity and famous history would justify the pride of the people of the United States in keeping it, and therefore be it

Resolved, By the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled be and they are hereby respectfully requested to pass a bill taking over as the property of the United States, that part of the "Cumberland" or "National Road" lying in Allegany and Garrett counties, Maryland, and keeping, maintaining and preserving it in the same manner as such property is now kept, maintained and preserved for the benefit of the nation by the Congress of the United States.

Be it further resolved, That the Secretary of State be and he is hereby requested to transmit under seal of this State a copy of the aforegoing memorial to each of the Senators and Representatives now in Congress from Maryland, with the request that they lay the same before their respective Houses in support of the measure hereinbefore mentioned.

MARKERS FOR BRADDOCK ROAD.

Measure Introduced in Congress That Deals With a Matter of Local Interest.

A measure not without local significance has been introduced in Congress by Congressman Ernest F. Acheson, of Pennsylvania, whose patriotic provisions will appeal to residents of this locality. Its text is herewith presented:

A Bill authorizing the President to appoint a commissioner to supervise the erection of monuments and markers, and locate what is known as Braddock's road.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President ... to appoint ... shall, under the President, ... and markers ... material as ... located the route ... Braddock's army from ... Maryland, toward ... now Pittsburg, ... fittingly commemorous deeds of ... that army. ... commissioner ... at the ... Braddock's road ... valley line, ... travel- ... at the ... es any ... ner ...

GOV. WARFIELD HOTLY REPLIES TO GEN. SETH

Brand of Dishonor Must Be Affixed to One of Them.

WANTS PROOF OR AN APOLOGY

Sale of Canal Discussed—Seth's Errors as to Figures Never Made Any Agreement With Corporation A Most Emphatic Denial.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 31.—Ex-Governor Warfield replied last night to the changes made against him on the floor of the Senate January 21 by President Joseph B. Seth.

A special delivery letter containing the reply, and addressed to General Seth, was dispatched at 10 p. m. Today Mr. Robert R. Hart, the Governor's secretary, will go to Annapolis with another copy, should General Seth fail to receive it by mail.

The reply of the ex-Governor is in substance as follows:

"Either you or I deserve the indignant contempt of the people of Maryland, and before this controversy is ended all the people will know upon whom to imprint the brand of dishonor."

He characterizes some of the charges as an exhibition of vulgarity, and states that had not General Seth been president of the Senate no reply would have been given.

"In case proof is not produced," the ex-Governor insists, "it is your duty to make a full retraction and apology on the floor of the Senate with as much publicity as the charge was made. If you do not you should be treated as being unworthy of your high position and be driven from the Senate by an outraged public opinion."

The charge that he agreed to sell the State's stock in the Washington Branch of the B. & O. R. R. for $210 a share and made an ante-election agreement to that effect is indignantly denied. An extended account of the transaction is given.

The Chesapeake and Ohio canal sale is also fully discussed.

Replying to the charge that he made ante-election promises with regard to the sale of the Northern Central annuity, Mr. Warfield says General Seth "doesn't know what he is talking about." He says he never thought of it before the election. He favored the sale while he was Governor and does so now.

Instead of placing an unauthorized $1,050 portrait of himself in the Senate Chamber, Mr. Warfield says the painting cost $592.50, and all action in regard to it was taken by the State House Commission.

Authority for restoring the old Senate Chamber, questioned by General Seth, was given by the same commission on motion of Gen. F. C. Latrobe. Instead of costing $25,000, as General Seth charges, it costing but $4,264.75.

The ex-Governor declares the expenditures from the contingent fund were accounted for to the Legislature and that General Seth knew it when he asked for an accounting.

He denies that he ever promised to give $50,000 for his campaign fund and offers to furnish a list of of his friends who did contribute. He also says he made no promises to corporations to use his veto power to protect them.

Mr. Warfield offers to make an apology if General Seth can prove that public money was not wasted by the Legislature. He demands that the ans... read on the journal o...

...AST:

...eather

...ts Feb-

...re fa...

...eral... ...ge...

... the opening

... ensue, but as

...ces toward its

... weather will be-

... is usual in February. The rain periods will pass off with light disturbances, which may only be denoted by changes of air currents. As we pass toward the close of the month the waves of disturbances will become more intense.

The first storm wave of the month will come over from January with rain, snow, and slee... which on the northern tange will become a blizzard and a reaching cold wave will follow track of the rain and snow, spreading through all northern and central parts also reaching far south.

About the 4th or 5th the cold grip will relax and the temperature become much warmer, attended by cloudiness, rain, and snow on or touching the 7th or 8th, followed by a cold wave holding to the 10th.

The wave will relax its grip on or touching the 10th or 11th, the weather will then warm up and more storm indication will appear about the 12th and 13th, which may rise to the dignity of rain and snow on the above dates and turning cooler on the 15th.

The temperature will change to warmer about the 17th, attended with cloudy threatening weather on the 18th, 19th, and perhaps the 20th, with rain and snow on the northern rim of the disturbance, followed by a cold wave.

On the 23d, 24th, and 25th a wave of disturbance will be in progress.

On the closing days of the month more rain and disagreeable weather will ensue.

Much of March is likely to be blustery, yet it will have some fairly favorable weather.

GREATEST LUMBER CUT.

More lumber was cut in the United States last year than in any other year in its history. The enormous amount of 37,550,736 board feet was produced, and the mill value of this was $621,151,388. In addition, there were produced 11,858,260,000 shingles, valued at $24,155,555, and 3,812,807,000 lath, valued at $11,3... 570. On the whole, it is safe say that the present annual lumber cut of the United States approximates 40 billion feet, and that the total mill value of the lumber, lath, and shingles each year produced is not less than $700,000,000. These figures give some idea of how vast is the lumber industry and how great is the demand for its products.

A glance at the kinds of lumber produced shows very clearly the passing of white pine and oak, one the greatest softwood and the other the greatest hardwood which the forest has ever grown. Since 1899 the cut of white pine has fallen off more than 40 per cent. while that of white oak has fallen off more than 36 per cent. Today yellow pine leads all other woods in amount cut, while Douglas fir—and this will be a surprise to many—comes second. Since 1899 the cut of Douglas fir has increased 186 per cent. Louisiana is the foremost yellow pine State, with Texas, Mississippi, and Arkansas following in order. Washington produces by far the greatest amount of Douglar fir.

A comparison of the lumber-producing States shows that since 1899 there have been many changes in their relative rank. Washington, which in 1899 stood sixth, now leads, while Wisconsin, which eight years ago led all others, is now third. In the same period Oregon, Louisiana, Mississippi, Idaho, and California made great strides as lumber-producing States, though, on the other hand, the amount produced in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Indiana, and Ohio fell off anywhere from 29 to 54 per cent.

The highest-priced native w... are walnut, hickory, and ash, the cheapest are larch and wh... fir. From the fact, however, t... since 1899 the average increase the price of lumber has been ... per cent. it will not be long before cheap woods are few and far between.

Figures upon the lumber cut of the United States in 1906 are contained in Circular 122 of the Forest Service, which can be had upon application to the Forester, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Ueber die Sterne Ist Ruh

By Elizabeth A. Vore.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh,
Ueber die sterne ist ruh."

It was the Herr Professor singing in the organ loft. Higher and higher swelled the music, louder and sweeter the rich full tones of the great organ, and the mellow, wonderful voice of the musician rose, until the dim, quaint old church was filled with the exquisite harmony.

Slowly and cautiously one of the heavy outer doors was partly opened and a dark, lovely face looked timidly in, as the music swelled upward in all its sublime sweetness, the door was pushed farther open by a little brown hand and a slight, childish figure entered and crept softly, hesitatingly up the aisle.

Presently the music stopped, but the child remained kneeling as if in a trance. The door leading from the organ loft opened and the musician came slowly down, humming softly to himself. As he came forward his eyes fell on the kneeling child with her rapt, exquisite face and her wondrous, lifted eyes, and he stopped short in astonishment.

"Liebe Himmel!" he muttered. "It is the face of an angel!"

A tide of crimson flooded the lovely olive face as the child sprang up and shrank back timidly.

"Pardon, sir—a thousand pardons!" she stammered, in a soft, musical voice, tremulous with fright.

The look of wonder and astonishment on the good professor's face changed to one of gentleness and pity at the little one's evident fear.

"Pfui, little one, thou hast naught to fear; am I then so great a monster that thou shouldst run from me? Come, maitchen, let us see thee closer."

The child came shyly forward and stood before the great master, who took her small hands in his own and gazed with kindly curiosity into her face.

"Thou art a puzzle, little one," he said, smiling. "Who art thou? I find thee in this quiet English town, and the tongue is English, too, but the face and voice, they do not belong to an English maid. How is it, leibchen?"

"I am Gabrielle," said the child, simply. "My father keeps the music shop near by. He is English, but I—I am like my mother who is with the angels. She was born over the sea, in Italy."

"Ah! that accounts for thy soft voice and dark face, my lovely one. I thought there was southern blood in thy veins. And thou wert listening to the music? Perhaps thou couldst like to learn, thyself?"

The child drew in her breath quickly and clasped her hands spasmodically in the emotion that suddenly swept over her.

"Ah! if I might!" she cried, "if I only might! But there is none to teach, and I can do nothing but sing, and that not at home, for it makes my father sad. My mother sang, and he is always remembering."

"So you sing, then, little one; let us hear you. Come, do not be afraid; sing something you know well."

He had, somehow, expected to hear an unusual voice, but nothing like what he did hear; as the child threw back her head proudly and her sweet, clear voice swelled upward, the purity and richness of its exquisite tones thrilled the great master, and filled him with wondering astonishment.

"It is wonderful!" he exclaimed, as the sweet voice died away, and Gabrielle stood flushed and trembling before him. "My child, you are blest of the saints! your voice is perfect. You will have the world at your feet."

"I want only to be able to play the great organ and sing as you do. Shall I ever be able to sing the song you sang just now?"

"Certainly, and many much more difficult than that."

"But who would teach me, sir?" faltered Gabrielle. "My father has no money."

"We shall see to that, little one; we shall see to all that—such a voice must not be lost to the world. Tell me where you live and I will see the father about it."

Gabrielle directed him, and then with the impulsiveness born of her hot, southern blood, she raised his hand to her lips and covered it with kisses.

The great German master had come to this little out-of-the-way English town some weeks before, for the purpose of resting. He had secured clear of hotels and boarding houses, though they were of a very quiet, primitive order in this country place, and had secured lodgings with one of his own countrymen, Karl Hansel, a music teacher, who soon ascertained who his guest was and was not a little proud of the distinction of having the famous "Herr Professor," to use his own words, under his roof. He became a great favorite with the simple town folk, who always spoke of him after Karl Hansel's example, as the "Herr Professor." But now the time for his departure was at hand, and he made haste to see Gabrielle's father before he went away.

He did not long hesitate in giving his consent that his little daughter receive a musical education.

She was to study during the winter and summer with Karl Hansel, "and then when autumn comes again," said the master, smiling, "I shall come for her to the Fatherland. We will make a great singer of thee, leibchen."

Through the late winter and spring Gabrielle advanced rapidly and her tutor was full of pride at her progress. But when the hot days of summer came she began to droop; the slender form grew thin, and the rosy color faded from her cheek. By-and-by she became too weak to continue her lessons. Poor little Gabrielle! it soon became apparent to all who saw her that she would never sing for the world. Yet—let me change it—rich Gabrielle, she would sing, not for the world, but for the angels. She lingered on until winter, growing weaker every day, but making no complaint save weariness.

"I am so tired!" she would say, "so tired." She never complained of aught else. She had but one wish. "To hear the song of the Herr Professor," and see the master before she died. But Karl Hansel did not know exactly his whereabouts, although he wrote him occasionally to learn of the progress of his protege, and for three months he had heard nothing of him, although he wrote of the child's failing strength; the master was in the north of Russia, then over into Scandinavia, playing his wonderful music and singing with his wonderful voice, to the admiring thousands who were delighted to listen, and the letters failed to reach him, while in the little English town Gabrielle was dying, watching daily as only the sick and dying can watch, for the return of her beloved benefactor, and begging to hear the song he sang that day in the organ loft. But alas, she did not know the words, not even the name, and no one knew what she wanted.

"Child, Child! You Break My Heart!"

"I am so tired!" she would cry, "and I cannot rest. Sing me the song of the Herr Professor. I cannot rest till I have heard it."

"Child, child!" her heartbroken, white-haired father would cry, "you break my heart! alas! there is no one who knows it—if you could but remember the name."

There came a day in the early autumn when with tearful eyes the friends of little Gabrielle gathered around her couch. The little life was fast ebbing out.

"Tell the Herr Professor," she whispered. Just then a step was heard without—the door opened and the master stood on the threshold. Gabrielle's eyes grew radiant and she stretched out her little thin hands. "It is the Herr Professor!" she cried, joyfully.

The next instant he had crossed over and knelt by her couch and taking the little feeble hands, pressed them to his breast.

"Leibchen! lamkin! beloved child!" he cried. "Ach! mein Gott! but it is cruel!"

"Sing me the song you sang in the church, dear Herr Professor," she begged; "I have waited so long to hear it again, and I am so tired—oh, so very tired, and I cannot rest."

Then the master raised his powerful voice, its richness mingled now with a solemn tenderness.

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh," he sang again—sang as he never sang it before, as he would never sing it again, and the dying Gabrielle listened with parted lips, while into her weary dark eyes there stole a sweet, restful peace.

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh!" she repeated feebly. "What does it mean, Herr Professor?"

"Over the stars is thy rest," said the master, solemnly. "Rest for thee, little Gabrielle."

"Ah! it is for me! for me the song is made!" cried Gabrielle, smiling weakly. "I am so tired, but—over—the stars—"

The sentence was finished in heaven, where she had found rest at last. They laid her gently back and led the [illegible] father away; then the gr[illegible] bowed his head and wep[illegible] lifeless form.

"Ach! [illegible]nd!" he murmured, [illegible] world perhaps [illegible]

WITH OPEN TARIFF

HOW EMPLOYERS MIGHT DEAL WITH TRADE UNIONISM.

Instead of Raising Millions with Which to Fight Organized Labor the Manufacturers Might Spend Their Money in Breaking Down Tariff Protection.

It would seem that zeal for the open shop on the part of the National Association of Manufacturers has subsided in favor of zeal for the open tariff. At least one would infer as much from the strenuous propaganda lately inaugurated for an all-round overhauling of the tariff schedules. At the recent annual meeting of the association declaration was made for tariff revision at the earliest practicable moment and also for a general system of trade treaties involving a still further reduction of tariff duties. Perhaps the impression prevails among some of the wage payers of the association that the quickest way to get the open shop is through the tariff. Probably they are right. Than wage reduction because of tariff reduction nothing is more certain to break the ranks of trades unionism.

When prices of commodities have been forced downward by the larger inflow of competitive goods from abroad that must follow lower tariff duties wages must also go down. When lack of employment comes as a consequence of allowing foreigners to do a larger portion of the work that Americans have been doing, and when three men are looking for two men's jobs, instead of two men being hard to get for three men's jobs, the open shop problem will have solved itself. Men do not strike for higher wages or shorter hours when work is scarce; only when work is plenty.

Open the tariff gates and you will have the open shop. There will then be no need of the million-dollar fund with which to fight trades unionism. Indeed, there is a better way to produce the desired result: Use the million-dollar fund to fight tariff protection.

The impression that the National Association of Manufacturers is dominated by forces which care more for an open tariff than for an open shop, and would rather fight labor by increasing competitive imports than cultivate amicable relations with wage earners by upholding the tariff protection, which alone can insure both employment and wages at high water mark, is strengthened by the views expressed in a recent interview in the New York Herald, by H. E. Miles, chairman of the committee on tariff and reciprocity of the National Association of Manufacturers, also a member of the committee on resolutions, and, presumably, author of the tariff ripping and reciprocity declaration already alluded to. In this interview Mr. Miles expresses a desire for downward tariff revision at the earliest practicable moment. He wants the tariff torn open at the next winter's session of congress.

"The inequalities of the tariff schedules now operative are unnecessarily, needlessly, improperly taking, by governmental sanction, hundreds of millions of dollars from the many and adding them to the fortunes of the president is watching with al[illegible]

This is the way Mr. Miles [illegible] case. It is only another way of [illegible] that "protection is robbery." [illegible] might safely be trusted to w[illegible] tariff plank of the next Dem[illegible] platform. Too many people a[illegible] too well; therefore, let us s[illegible] that opportunities for doing w[illegible] without delay circumscribed. Ta[illegible] duction will do the trick. Let us [illegible] tariff reduction forthwith. Thus [illegible] Miles, as we read him.

That Chairman Miles of the [illegible] and reciprocity committee cor[illegible] represents the views and purpo[illegible] the forces that are permitted t[illegible] trol the acts and deliverances [illegible] National Association of Manu[illegible] ers on the tariff question we [illegible] for a moment dispute. For [illegible] time past the fact that half [illegible] tec[illegible]'s and all-the-way [illegible] ers h[illegible] has [illegible] now [illegible] tens[illegible] con[illegible] paper[illegible] procity [illegible] made a[illegible] But we [illegible] near one[illegible] —of the [illegible] scribe to[illegible] tion. Ti[illegible] to votin[illegible] they h[illegible] rightly[illegible] a larg[illegible] in t[illegible] but [illegible] the[illegible] be[illegible] o[illegible]

ry for ry ch

ff- ow ess an ish rue rth ves

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Burn the tent caterpillars with a torch.

—

You can't cut out pear blight too quickly.

—

Keep the dates of the time each sow is to farrow.

—

Milk low in butter fat is also low in the total solids.

—

Vetch is growing in favor as a plant for green manuring.

—

The pear is easily grown, but is very subject to blight.

—

Excessive sweating on the part of the horse is a sign of weakness.

—

To restore moldy leather to good cloth and apply pyroligneous acid.

—

Try chalk and charcoal for lambs suffering from acidity of the stomach.

—

Buckwheat is a crop which could be grown by most farmers with profit.

—

An ounce of quality is worth a pound of size in any male animal used for breeding purposes.

—

Peas and new potatoes and corn coming on! Life is worth living on the farm that has the garden.

—

Soil crust is a synonym for moisture evaporation. Shut the moisture in with a dust mulch.

—

Think ahead. Know what the next task should be while finishing up with the present one and thus save time.

—

Start with a few sheep and let that few be of the best. Other kinds don't pay.

—

Let the poultry have free range as soon as danger of injuring the spring planting is passed.

—

Pigeons need water for bathing as well as for drinking purposes. Provide separate vessels for each.

—

Give the little pigs a nice clover field to run in. They will thrive and bring you large profit in the fall.

—

If there are no trees in the hog lot, put up some sort of shelter so that they can get away from the hot sun.

—

To work the horse too long without feeding weakens the stomach and is apt to bring [illegible] indigestion.

—

Don't let the [illegible]ks or thistles go to seed. Dig [illegible]out and burn them.

—

You would not [illegible] your [illegible]old colt. Do[illegible] boys, either.

—

The well-fed, well-cared-for colt will show better and sell to advantage over the colt of better pedigree which has been allowed to drift along for itself.

—

If there is no natural shade in the pasture, provide some sort of rough board or thatched shelter under which the stock may take shelter from the fierce rays of the hot summer sun.

—

A bed out in the field in an all-night pouring rain will not benefit the general health of the cows or aid in filling the milk pail. Better stable them during severe inclement weather.

—

Don't work too hard these hot days, and remember to be sparing of the drinking water. You can water-log your stomach very easily if you drink all you think you want.

—

Take a little rest after the midday meal. To rush out into the hot sun and resume the hard work too soon after eating is to invite discomfort, if not illness.

—

A good deal of fun has been poked at the straw bonnet of the horse, but it has proved a most humane and useful article of the horse's equipment on a hot day.

—

It is announced that the Farmers' Union of Texas, in addition to its running of cotton gins, oil mills and warehouses, is going into the country store business. The experiment will be watched with interest.

—

By the action of the Illinois railroad and warehouse commission, denatured alcohol has been placed on the classified list as an article of commerce. Illinois is the first state to take such action.

—

In making up your fruit packages be sure and give full measure. It will help your standing with your marketman and will help him sell the goods, which will create a stronger demand another year for your fruit and bring better prices.

—

In most breeds cockerels will crow at or before five months of age. But we had a cockerel this year which was scarcely three months old when he began to stretch up and crow. Who has a precocious youngster that can beat that?

—

The haying is not all done unless you have mowed the corners of the fields. Think the extra hay you get doesn't pay for the trouble? Remember that you not only get the hay, but you remove a breeding place for insect pests.

—

How are the trees doing you set last spring? Keep your eye on them and give them all the encouragement you can, such as an extra drink in a dry time and the stirring of the soil above the roots to keep a dust mulch there to prevent evaporation of moisture.

—

Fodder in the silo that has depth will keep better than in one which is larger in circumference and not so high, as in the former the fodder is under greater pressure, packs more closely and thus excludes the air. Remember this when building a silo.

—

The future of the tree depends much on the proper treatment being given it at the time of treatment of trees at the time of planting. A large part of the root system of the tree has been cut off in digging. Cut off the bruised and broken ends and thin out the crowding and interlacing roots.

—

The claim that there was a higher nutritive value in the brown-shelled egg over the white-shelled egg is not borne out by the experiments conducted by the California experiment station to determine this point. There was practically no difference between the two groups as to food value.

—

In an experiment at the Iowa experiment station sweet milk and shorts as feed for pigs gave the greatest amount of gain. Other stations have found that ground oats and sweet milk gave nearly as large returns. Corn showed the smallest gains up to the time the pigs were four months of age.

—

A cow ought to [illegible] until her pri[illegible]s with differe[illegible]w that is se[illegible] last

[illegible] wage war on the ob[illegible]tures at your local a[illegible] There should be no ob[illegible] right kind of amuse[illegible], but those which in[illegible]g in any of its various [illegible] the off-color vaudeville [illegible]e rigidly shut out. Seek [illegible]nce to raise the moral [illegible] fair this year. Remem[illegible] place where your boys [illegible] turned loose for a short [illegible] that day at the fair [illegible] seen and heard [illegible] on the wrong

Copyright, 1907, by Byron Williams.

"Dead Soldiers."

Oh, many "dead soldiers" were scattered about
By the side of the brothel door
With other debris from the charnel house,
That reeked to its very core.
But two "dead soldiers" were singled out
From all that had stung so well—
The evening before they had heard a tale
That now they refused to tell!

The other "dead soldiers" had boasted long
Of how they had helped the din,
And some of them laughed as they spun their yarns
Of intrigue and lust and sin!
One told of a woman who toasted death,
And one of a country lass
Who followed the path of the primrose way
Straight down to destruction's pass!

And one gave the words of a plotted crime,
Of murder and dregs and shame,
A page of dishonor and broken trust,
A tale of a blackened name!
But two empty bottles refused to tell
And this is the reason why
A man who is up in the world to-day,
Is still in the public eye!

Ah! many a wolf in the cloth of sheep
Is safe in his lordly sphere,
And many a strumpet is free to sit
Enshrined in a home of cheer—
For many a one who is loved with trust,
Goes down to the broth of Hell
And back to respect by the silent grace
Of "soldiers" who never tell!

Eddies.

There is seldom any room for alimony with love in a cottage.

A man may know a lot and still not be able to find buyers.

It never pays to get chesty and dare the boss to tle a can to you. He may see you, if it costs him money.

Frequently, the man of few words uses the few altogether too much.

The man who listens, learns. The man who talks should teach.

One way to be a leader is to run like sixty ahead of the mob.

A Philadelphia bride is stuffing her sofa pillows with love letters. They ought to make soft cushions.

Save your money—all of it. Lobsters never spend a cent!

Sometimes, what a chorus girl has on her mind keeps her from catching cold.

A physician advises me to eat blackberries from the bushes if I need iron in my system. Blackberry bushes are very scarce out where I live, Doc. Wouldn't it do just as well to suck a nice smooth bolt?

It is better to be paid on Friday than not at all.

Revenge is sweet only when it is your revenge.

A Michigan firm sent a large number of circulars by mail, one of which was addressed to Rev. John Jonathan. This was returned with these words written across the face: "Party dead for eight years." Underneath the customary post office stamp read: "Present address unknown."

Old Butter.

Nebraskans have discovered a churn full of butter in a spring and claim to tell by the hieroglyphics on the receptacle that the butter was made in 1846. They think that's old! Why, the last time I went butter-nutting down on the farm I bought with my cigar money, I stumbled onto an old butter strong enough to chase me up a slippery-elm tree so fast the friction set fire to my trousers legs! When I first saw the butter, it was standing in a spring just like it was in Nebraska. There was some hair there, too, I remember that! But just then the butter in the spring sprang at me and I dove for the slippery-elm. A gray squirrel was ascending at the same time, but I kicked him out of the way and scooted to a place of safety in a jiffy! Tenants who will permit their butter to promiscuously wander about the farm, must not feel hurt when people climb trees to escape it!

Another Version.

Very frequently we read "Then they were wed and lived happily ever afterward." Does it not happen, sometimes, that: "Then with a sob in her voice, but fire in her eye, she gave him his ring and faltered, 'Go!'—and they lived happily ever afterward?"

Byron Williams

Ueber die Sterne Ist Ruh

By Elizabeth A. Vore.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh,
Ueber die sterne ist ruh."

It was the Herr Professor singing in the organ loft. Higher and higher swelled the music, louder and sweeter the rich full tones of the great organ, and the mellow, wonderful voice of the musician rose, until the dim, quaint old church was filled with the exquisite harmony.

Slowly and cautiously one of the heavy outer doors was partly opened and a dark, lovely face looked timidly in, as the music swelled upward in all its sublime sweetness, the door was pushed farther open by a little brown hand and a slight, childish figure entered and crept softly, hesitatingly up the aisle.

Presently the music stopped, but the child remained kneeling as if in a trance. The door leading from the organ loft opened and the musician came slowly down, humming softly to himself. As he came forward his eyes fell on the kneeling child with her rapt, exquisite face and her wondrous, lifted eyes, and he stopped short in astonishment.

"Liebe Himmel!" he muttered. "It is the face of an angel!"

A tide of crimson flooded the lovely olive face as the child sprang up and shrank back timidly.

"Pardon, sir—a thousand pardons!" she stammered, in a soft, musical voice, tremulous with fright.

The look of wonder and astonishment on the good professor's face changed to one of gentleness and pity at the little one's evident fear.

"Pfui, little one, thou hast naught to fear; am I then so great a monster that thou shouldst run from me? Come, maitchen, let us see thee closer."

The child came shyly forward and stood before the great master, who took her small hands in his own and gazed with kindly curiosity into her face.

"Thou art a puzzle, little one," he said, smiling. "Who art thou? I find thee in this quiet English town, and the tongue is English, too, but the face and voice, they do not belong to an English maid. How is it, leibchen?"

"I am Gabrielle," said the child, simply. "My father keeps the music shop near by. He is English, but I—I am like my mother who is with the angels. She was born over the sea, in Italy."

"Ah! that accounts for thy soft voice and dark face, my lovely one. I thought there was southern blood in thy veins. And thou wert listening to the music? Perhaps thou wouldst like to learn, thyself?"

The child drew in her breath quickly and clasped her hands spasmodically in the emotion that suddenly swept over her.

"Ah! if I might!" she cried, "if I only might! But there is none to teach, and I can do nothing but sing, and that not at home, for it makes my father sad. My mother sang, and he is always remembering."

"So you sing, then, little one; let us hear you. Come, do not be afraid; sing something you know well."

He had, somehow, expected to hear an unusual voice, but nothing like what he did hear; as the child threw back her head proudly and her sweet, clear voice swelled upward, the purity and richness of its exquisite tones thrilled the great master, and filled him with wondering astonishment.

"It is wonderful!" he exclaimed, as the sweet voice died away, and Gabrielle stood flushed and trembling before him. "My child, you are blest of the saints! your voice is perfect. You will have the world at your feet."

"I want only to be able to play the great organ and sing as you do. Shall I ever be able to sing the song you sang just now?"

"Certainly, and many much more difficult than that."

"But who would teach me, sir?" faltered Gabrielle. "My father has no money."

"We shall see to that, little one; we shall see to all that—such a voice must not be lost to the world. Tell me where you live and I will see the father about it."

Gabrielle directed him, and then with the impulsiveness born of her hot, southern blood, she raised his hand to her lips and covered it with kisses.

The great German master had come to this little out-of-the-way English town some weeks before, for the purpose of resting. He had sickened of hotels and boarding houses, though they were of a very quiet, primitive order in this country place, and had secured lodgings with one of his own countrymen, Karl Hansel, a music teacher, who soon ascertained who his guest was and was not a little proud of the distinction of having the famous "Herr Professor," to use his own words, under his roof. He became a great favorite with the simple town folk, who always spoke of him after Karl Hansel's example, as the "Herr Professor." But now the time for his departure was at hand, and he made haste to see Gabrielle's father before he went away.

He did not long hesitate in giving his consent that his little daughter receive a musical education.

She was to study during the winter and summer with Karl Hansel, "and then when autumn comes again," said the master, smiling, "I shall come for her to the Fatherland. We will make a great singer of thee, liebchen."

Through the late winter and spring Gabrielle advanced rapidly and her tutor was full of pride at her progress. But when the hot days of summer came she began to droop; the slender form grew thin, and the rosy color faded from her cheek. By-and-by she became too weak to continue her lessons. Poor little Gabrielle! it soon became apparent to all who saw her that she would never sing for the world. Yet—let me change it—rich Gabrielle, she would sing, not for the world, but for the angels. She lingered on until winter, growing weaker every day, but making no complaint save weariness.

"I am so tired!" she would say, "so tired." She never complained of aught else. She had but one wish. "To hear the song of the Herr Professor," and see the master before she died. But Karl Hansel did not know exactly his whereabouts, although he wrote him occasionally to learn of the progress of his protege, and for three months he had heard nothing of him, although he wrote of the child's failing strength; the master was in the north of Russia, then over into Scandinavia, playing his wonderful music and singing with his wonderful voice, to the admiring thousands who were delighted to listen, and the letters failed to reach him, while in the little English town Gabrielle was dying, watching daily as only the sick and dying can watch, for the return of her beloved benefactor, and begging to hear the song he sang that day in the organ loft. But alas, she did not know the words, not even the name, and no one knew what she wanted.

"Child, Child! You Break My Heart!"

"I am so tired!" she would cry, "and I cannot rest. Sing me the song of the Herr Professor. I cannot rest till I have heard it."

"Child, child!" her heartbroken, white-haired father would cry, "you break my heart! alas! there is no one who knows it—if you could but remember the name."

There came a day in the early autumn when with tearful eyes the friends of little Gabrielle gathered around her couch. The little life was fast ebbing out.

"Tell the Herr Professor," she whispered. Just then a step was heard without—the door opened and the master stood on the threshold. Gabrielle's eyes grew radiant and she stretched out her little thin hands. "It is the Herr Professor!" she cried, joyfully.

The next instant he had crossed over and knelt by her couch and taking the little feeble hands, pressed them to his breast.

"Leibchen! lankin' beloved child!" he cried. "Ach! mein Gott! but it is cruel!"

"Sing me the song you sang in the church, dear Herr Professor," she begged; "I have waited so long to hear it again, and I am so tired—oh, so very tired, and I cannot rest."

Then the master raised his powerful voice, its richness mingled now with a solemn tenderness.

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh," he sang again—sang as he never sang it before, as he would never sing it again, and the dying Gabrielle listened with parted lips, while into her weary dark eyes there stole a sweet, restful peace.

"Ueber die sterne ist ruh!" she repeated feebly. "What does it mean, Herr Professor?"

"Over the stars is thy rest," said the master, solemnly. "Rest for thee, little Gabrielle."

"Ah! it is for me! for me the song is made!" cried Gabrielle, smiling weakly. "I am so tired, but—over—the stars—"

The sentence was finished in heaven, where she had found rest at last. They laid her gently back and led the [illegible]ing father away; then the gr[illegible] bowed his head and wep[illegible] lifeless form.

"Ach! [illegible]ured," he mur[illegible]perha[illegible]e world [illegible]ter [illegible]len[illegible]

[illegible]yal[illegible]

[illegible]marke[illegible]headsto[illegible]the villa[illegible]

"Yes[illegible]

[illegible]th[illegible]sic[illegible]res[illegible]

[illegible]rul[illegible]

WITH OPEN TARIFF

HOW EMPLOYERS MIGHT DEAL WITH TRADE UNIONISM.

Instead of Raising Millions with Which to Fight Organized Labor the Manufacturers Might Spend Their Money in Breaking Down Tariff Protection.

It would seem that zeal for the open shop on the part of the National Association of Manufacturers has subsided in favor of zeal for the open tariff. At least one would infer as much from the strenuous propaganda lately inaugurated for an all-round overhauling of the tariff schedules. At the recent annual meeting of the association declaration was made for tariff revision at the earliest practicable moment and also for a general system of trade treaties involving a still further reduction of tariff duties. Perhaps the impression prevails among some of the wage payers of the association that the quickest way to get the open shop is through the tariff. Probably they are right. Than wage reduction because of tariff reduction nothing is more certain to break the ranks of trades unionism.

When prices of commodities have been forced downward by the larger inflow of competitive goods from abroad that must follow lower tariff duties wages must also go down. When lack of employment comes as a consequence of allowing foreigners to do a larger portion of the work that Americans have been doing, and when three men are looking for two men's jobs, instead of two men being hard to get for three men's jobs, the open shop problem will have solved itself. Men do not strike for higher wages or shorter hours when work is scarce; only when work is plenty.

Open the tariff gates and you will have the open shop. There will then be no need of the million-dollar fund with which to fight trades unionism. Indeed, there is a better way to produce the desired result: Use the million-dollar fund to fight tariff protection.

The impression that the National Association of Manufacturers is dominated by forces which care more for an open tariff than for an open shop, and would rather fight labor by increasing competitive imports than cultivate amicable relations with wage earners by upholding the tariff protection, which alone can insure both employment and wages at high water mark, is strengthened by the views expressed in a recent interview in the New York Herald, by H. E. Miles, chairman of the committee on tariff and reciprocity of the National Association of Manufacturers, also a member of the committee on resolutions, and, presumably, author of the tariff ripping and reciprocity declaration already alluded to. In this interview Mr. Miles expresses a desire for downward tariff revision at the earliest practicable moment. He wants the tariff torn open at the next winter's session of congress.

"The inequalities of the tariff schedules now operative are unnecessarily, needlessly, improperly taking, by governmental sanction, hundreds of millions of dollars from the many and adding them to the fortunes of the president is watching with ala[illegible]

This is the way Mr. Miles [illegible] case. It is only another way of [illegible] that "protection is robbery." [illegible] might safely be trusted to w[illegible] tariff plank of the next De[illegible] platform. Too many people a[illegible] too well; therefore, let us s[illegible] that opportunities for doing w[illegible] without delay circumscribed. Ti[illegible] duction will do the trick. Let u[illegible] tariff reduction forthwith. Thu[illegible] Miles, as we read him.

That Chairman Miles of the [illegible] and reciprocity committee cor[illegible] represents the views and purpo[illegible] the forces that are permitted t[illegible] trol the acts and deliverances [illegible] National Association of Manu[illegible]ers on the tariff question we[illegible] for a moment dispute. For[illegible] time past the fact that half-[illegible]tec[illegible]'s and all-the-way [illegible]ers i[illegible] has [illegible] now [illegible]tens[illegible] coh[illegible] paper[illegible] procity [illegible] made a[illegible] But we [illegible] near one[illegible] —of the [illegible] scribe to[illegible] tion. Ti[illegible] to votin[illegible] they h[illegible] rightly[illegible] a larg[illegible] in t[illegible] but [illegible] the[illegible] be[illegible] o[illegible]

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Burn the tent caterpillars with a torch.

—

You can't cut out pear blight too quickly.

—

Keep the dates of the time each sow is to farrow.

—

Milk low in butter fat is also low in the total solids.

—

Vetch is growing in favor as a plant for green manuring.

—

The pear is easily grown, but is very subject to blight.

—

Excessive sweating on the part of the horse is a sign of weakness.

—

To restore moldy leather to good cloth and apply pyroligneous acid.

—

Try chalk and charcoal for lambs suffering from acidity of the stomach.

—

Buckwheat is a crop which could be grown by most farmers with profit.

—

An ounce of quality is worth a pound of size in any male animal used for breeding purposes.

—

Peas and new potatoes and corn coming on! Life is worth living on the farm that has the garden.

—

Soil crust is a synonym for moisture evaporation. Shut the moisture in with a dust mulch.

—

Think ahead. Know what the next task should be while finishing up with the present one and thus save time.

—

Start with a few sheep and let that few be of the best. Other kinds don't pay.

—

Let the poultry have free range as soon as danger of injuring the spring planting is passed.

—

Pigeons need water for bathing as well as for drinking purposes. Provide separate vessels for each.

—

Give the little pigs a nice clover field to run in. They will thrive and bring you large profit in the fall.

—

If there are no trees in the hog lot, put up some sort of shelter so that they can get away from the hot sun.

—

To work the horse too long without feeding weakens the stomach and is apt to bring [illegible] indigestion.

—

Don't let the [illegible]ks or thistles go to seed. Dig [illegible]out and burn them.

—

You would not [illegible] your [illegible]ld colt. D[illegible] [illegible]ys, eith[illegible]

—

The well-fed, well-cared-for colt will show better and sell to advantage over the colt of better pedigree which has been allowed to drift along for itself.

—

If there is no natural shade in the pasture, provide some sort of rough board or thatched shelter under which the stock may take shelter from the fierce rays of the hot summer sun.

—

A bed out in the field in an all-night pouring rain will not benefit the general health of the cows or aid in filling the milk pail. Better stable them during severe inclement weather.

—

Don't work too hard these hot days, and remember to be sparing of the drinking water. You can water-log your stomach very easily if you drink all you think you want.

—

Take a little rest after the midday meal. To rush out into the hot sun and resume the hard work too soon after eating is to invite discomfort, if not illness.

—

A good deal of fun has been poked at the straw bonnet of the horse, but it has proved a most humane and useful article of the horse's equipment on a hot day.

—

It is announced that the Farmers' Union of Texas, in addition to its running of cotton gins, oil mills and warehouses, is going into the country store business. The experiment will be watched with interest.

—

By the action of the Illinois railroad and warehouse commission, denatured alcohol has been placed on the classified list as an article of commerce. Illinois is the first state to take such action.

—

In making up your fruit packages be sure and give full measure. It will help your standing with your marketman and will help him sell the goods, which will create a stronger demand another year for your fruit and bring better prices.

—

In most breeds cockerels will crow at or before five months of age. But we had a cockerel this year which was scarcely three months old when he began to stretch up and crow. Who has a precocious youngster that can beat that?

—

The haying is not all done unless you have mowed the corners of the fields. Think the extra hay you get doesn't pay for the trouble? Remember that you not only get the hay, but you remove a breeding place for insect pests.

—

How are the trees doing you set last spring? Keep your eye on them and give them all the encouragement you can, such as an extra drink in a dry time and the stirring of the soil above the roots to keep a dust mulch there to prevent evaporation of moisture.

—

Fodder in the silo that has depth will keep better than in one which is larger in circumference and not so high, as in the former the fodder is under greater pressure, packs more closely and thus excludes the air. Remember this when building a silo.

—

The future of the tree depends much on the proper treatment being given it at the time of treatment of trees at the time of planting. A large part of the root system of the tree has been cut off in digging. Cut off the bruised and broken ends and thin out the crowding and interlacing roots.

—

The claim that there was a higher nutritive value in the brown-shelled egg over the white-shelled egg is not borne out by the experiments conducted by the California experiment station to determine this point. There was practically no difference between the two groups as to food value.

—

In an experiment at the Iowa experiment station sweet milk and shorts as feed for pigs gave the greatest amount of gain. Other stations have found that ground oats and sweet milk gave nearly as large returns. Corn showed the smallest gains up to the time the pigs were four months of age.

—

A cow ought to [illegible] until her pri[illegible]s with differe[illegible]w that is se[illegible] last [illegible]

—

[illegible] wage war on the ob[illegible]tures at your local ani[illegible] There should be no ob[illegible] right kind of amuse[illegible], but those which in[illegible]g in any of its various [illegible]the off-color vaudeville [illegible]e rigidly shut out. Seek [illegible]nce to raise the moral [illegible] fair this year. Remem[illegible] place where your boys [illegible] turned loose for a short [illegible] that day at the fair [illegible] seen and heard [illegible]n on the wrong

Copyright, 1907, by Byron Williams.

"Dead Soldiers."

Oh, many "dead soldiers" were scattered about
By the side of the brothel door
With other debris from the charnel house,
That reeked to its very core.
But two "dead soldiers" were singled out
From all that had stung so well—
The evening before they had heard a tale
That now they refused to tell!

The other "dead soldiers" had boasted long
Of how they had helped the din,
And some of them laughed as they spun their yarns
Of intrigue and lust and sin!
One told of a woman who toasted death,
And one of a country lass
Who followed the path of the primrose way
Straight down to destruction's pass!

And one gave the words of a plotted crime,
Of murder and dregs and shame,
A page of dishonor and broken trust,
A tale of a blackened name!
But two empty bottles refused to tell
And this is the reason why
A man who is up in the world to-day,
Is still in the public eye!

Ah! many a wolf in the cloth of sheep
Is safe in his lordly sphere,
And many a strumpet is free to sit
Enshrined in a home of cheer—
For many a one who is loved with trust,
Goes down to the broth of Hell
And back to respect by the silent grace
Of "soldiers" who never tell!

Eddies.

There is seldom any room for alimony with love in a cottage.

A man may know a lot and still not be able to find buyers.

It never pays to get chesty and dare the boss to tie a can to you. He may see you, if it costs him money.

Frequently, the man of few words uses the few altogether too much.

The man who listens, learns. The man who talks should teach.

One way to be a leader is to run like sixty ahead of the mob.

A Philadelphia bride is stuffing her sofa pillows with love letters. They ought to make soft cushions.

Save your money—all of it. Lobsters never spend a cent!

Sometimes, what a chorus girl has on her mind keeps her from catching cold.

A physician advises me to eat blackberries from the bushes if I need iron in my system. Blackberry bushes are very scarce out where I live, Doc. Wouldn't it do just as well to suck a nice smooth bolt?

It is better to be paid on Friday than not at all.

Revenge is sweet only when it is your revenge.

A Michigan firm sent a large number of circulars by mail, one of which was addressed to Rev. John Jonathan. This was returned with these words written across the face: "Party dead for eight years." Underneath the customary post office stamp read: "Present address unknown."

Old Butter.

Nebraskans have discovered a churn full of butter in a spring and claim to tell by the hieroglyphics on the receptacle that the butter was made in 1846. They think that's old! Why, the last time I went butter-nutting down on the farm I bought with my cigar money, I stumbled onto an old butter strong enough to chase me up a slippery-elm tree so fast the friction set fire to my trousers legs! When I first saw the butter, it was standing in a spring just like it was in Nebraska. There was some hair there, too, I remember that! But just then the butter in the spring sprang at me and I dove for the slippery-elm. A gray squirrel was ascending at the same time, but I kicked him out of the way and scooted to a place of safety in a jiffy! Tenants who will permit their butter to promiscuously wander about the farm, must not feel hurt when people climb trees to escape it!

Another Version.

Very frequently we read "Then they were wed and lived happily ever afterward." Does it not happen, sometimes, that: "Then with a sob in her voice, but fire in her eye, she gave him his ring and faltered, 'Go!'—and they lived happily ever afterward?"

Byron Williams

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, FEBRAURY 6, 1908.

FATHER FOLEY HITS THE NAIL.

At a tremendous meeting held under the aspices of the Anti-Saloon League at the Lyric, Baltimore, last Sunday, Rev. Michael F. Foley, pastor of St. Paul's Catholic Church, gave a fine condensation of the reasons why the local option bill should be passed. He said:

"I am for this local-option bill, because I am a citizen and a Catholic and a priest. I find the saloon set against the church. I find that all around me the saloon is not content to leave to the church one day of the week as the Lord's own in which it might work without hindrance for the souls of men, but it must have as its own the Lord's Day, too, on which to do the evil work. I find that the saloon is set against the school; I find it taking into its pythonlike embrace the boy whom I and other men like me have toiled so hard to bring up in the way of decency and sobriety. I find, too, that the saloon is set against the home."

That is the case, precisely. The saloon is set against the church and against the home. Not content with six days in the week, it must do the Devil's work on the Lord's Day. If the saloonkeepers, as a whole, had been content to refuse to sell to drunkards and to close their places of business on Sundays (as a few of them do) much of the present agitation and feeling against them would not have arisen. But if they are set against the home, the church, the school, true manhood and womanhood, the salvation of souls and all that is purest and best in life and death, which must go, these or the saloon?

PUBLIC ROADS.

The Legislature of Maryland is at last awaking to the necessity of a public roads system for the state, and to this end it is proposed to make a bond issue of $5,000,000 to be available in allotments, and to be spent through several years. It is estimated that 1000 miles of good roads can be constructen with this sum. It is proposed to insert in the law a clause providing for condemnation proceedings, by which it will be possible for the state to acquire the turnpikes, thus making them free. A few days ago Governor Crothers held a conference with a joint committee of the Legislature at which there was a more definite indication of details concerning the Governor's previously indicated scheme to provide for "a system of good roads ramifying uniformly through every section of the state." Commenting upon this scheme the Baltimore American of Saturday said editorially:"

"Though plans are understood to be as yet tentative, there seemed to be a general concurrence in the suggestion that a large road fund should be created by bonded loan, the aggregate sum of $5,000,000 being indicated as the amount which should be made available for road-building purposes. The plans, as outlined, contemplate a state commission to control and direct the road-building enterprises. The new road system which is being evolved is expected to be a state system entirely; that is, the roads that are to be built under the new scheme will be state enterprises purely and not undertakings in which each county will have a partnership with the state in the construction of roads in each particular county. The proposed new plan is not expected to supersede or to interfere with the existing road law, generally known as the Shoemaker law. The method of distributing the proposed road fund among the counties seems to be a problem that has not yet been worked out.

"It is by no means certain that even so large a sum as $5,000,000 will be adequate to the construction of what may be termed the trunk-line roads pertaining to the twenty-three counties of Maryland. The State Geological Survey has estimated that there are 2,0[illegible] miles of these main arteries of tra[illegible] It does not seem probable, judging f[illegible] the figures indicating road-buildin[illegible] now of record, that durable, s[illegible] and solid roads can be built in this st[illegible] at a much lower average cost t[illegible] $6,000 per mile. In sections where r[illegible] is not close at hand they would proba[illegible] cost considerably more than this. T[illegible] construction of 2,000 miles of r[illegible] would involve a total outlay of abo[illegible] $14,000,000. If $5,000,000 were equa[illegible] distributed among the twenty-thr[illegible] counties, there would be sufficient [illegible] build (at an average cost of $7,000 p[illegible] mile) about thirty-one miles of road [illegible] each county. But, of course, the la[illegible] ger counties will demand a distribution according to area, taxable basis, population or some other method that would recognize the difference between big and little. When it comes to dividing up a $5,000,000 fund some counties in the state probably will come out with an allotment of ten or twelve miles of road as their assignments.

"The present Maryland Road Law embodies the system under which good road-building is being directed in practically every state that has thus far undertaken road construction as a state enterprise. It is a system which compels each county to raise by local taxation an amount equal to that allotted to the county from the state fund. Under the method there is rarely dissatisfaction with the amount which any particular county obtains from the state fund. Here in Maryland many counties have refused to comply with conditions of the state law, and have allowed their apportionment from the state fund to go by default. The situation will look very different, however, when there will be a fund to be divided that does not require a local levy to counterbalance it."

A BOOMERANG ARGUMENT.

One of the lamest arguments advanced against the abolition of the liquor traffic is that so much money is invested in breweries, distilleries and saloons, and that so many men derive their wages from it. It would be just as reasonable to insist that war should continue because the nations have so many millions of dollars invested in battle ships, cannons, rifles and other paraphernalia of death, and so many men drawing wages as soldiers. There are better arguments for war, because it is sometimes necessary for protection against aggression, but no one can maintain that the liquor traffic is in any way a benefit to mankind.

The millions of dollars invested in the liquor business in this State are used in the manufacture and distribution of articles for which the best that can be claimed is that they are luxuries. It is strongly maintained by many that they are evils of the worst sort. We have the testimony of our judges and magistrates that the liquor business is responsible for by far the largest part of our crime. Statistics bear the judges out, and they also show that it is responsible for fifty per cent. of the poverty. Suppose the millions of dollars invested and the thousands of men engaged in the liquor business were put to producing and distributing food, clothing or something else useful to mankind, would there be much harm done?

Proposed Maryland Legislation.

"A bill entitle an Act to impose a tax of six mills a net ton on all coal mined in Alldghany and Garrett counties upon all corporations engaged in coal mining in said counties, and a tax of forty cents a month upon corporations engaged in clay mining for each person employed therein, etc., to be distributed for relief of dependents upon workmen killed in the line of such employment, was introduced by Senator Shannon, Tuesday.

The bill has been carefully drawn by Hon. David J. Lewis, an ex-State Senator, and based upon the predicate—"Let the Industry Bear the Burden of the Lives it Takes," seems to be the most orderly plan for relief emergencies yet devised. Crystalized into law, it will afford much satisfaction to underground workmen who go to their employment every morning impressed with the deadly risk they incur for themsleves and the dependent welfare of their families.

Providing for a relief fund in a way so systematic and considerate, the friends of the bill confidently believe that employers will allege no objection to its enactment into law. Indeed they feel that it so far appeals to humane magnanimity that employing interests will rather ask for than oppose its adoption. —Frostburg Journal.

GROUND HOG SAW SHAD[illegible]

Winter Weather For Weeks T[illegible] Will Be Result of His Visi[illegible]

Sunday was the second day of F[illegible] ary, the day on which it is given dwellers of the earth to know whet[illegible] the thermometer will remain station[illegible] for a season or whether the merc[illegible] therein will ascend or descend.

That is the day on which Mr. Groun[illegible] hog shines, and the sun also—sometime[illegible] —most always. The groundhog came o[illegible] as is customary for him to d[illegible] orn his home below t[illegible] oped that he w[illegible] to his hole be[illegible] uld enable hi[illegible] nes of his ov[illegible] upon the s[illegible]

Says de[illegible]

Mr. James D. [illegible] applied to be a[illegible] the Garrett Coun[illegible] ing that he woul[illegible] tion if tendered [illegible] was a member o[illegible] one time, so he i[illegible] that the official du[illegible] and heavy to carry[illegible]

County Com[illegible]

The bo[illegible] are in s[illegible] peals on[illegible] fers of

WHY THE CAUCUS WAS POSTPONED

Senator Gorman Wants Disfranchising Bill Changed.

SCHEME FOR RETENTION OF POWER

Favors Elimination Of Property Qualification And Restoration Of Time Limit To Grandfather's Clause—Governor Favors Present Amendment Other Legislative News.

State House, Annapolis, Feb. 4.—The constitutional amendment question is "up in the air" today. This morning it was believed that the Democrats would hold a caucus on the measure tonight, but later in the day it was stated that no time had been set for the discussion of the measure by the Democratic majority.

The postponement of the caucus, which was originally scheduled for tonight, is due chiefly to Senator Gorman, who wants two important changes made. He favors the elimination of the property qualification and the restoring of the time limit to the grandfather clause. Senator Biddison, without expressing himself on the property and grandfather clause, makes the point that the amendment as drafted, while providing for getting names on the registration list, makes no provision for getting them off when they get there illegally. Delegate Stanford, however, says that Senator Biddison's point is not well taken, as the provision for registration will be made by an act of the General Assembly.

Governor Crothers said this afternoon that the committee which framed the amendment had given more time to the work than it would be possible for anyone else to give, and he thought it ought to be passed without change.

"I have my views on the amendment," said Senator-elect Smith, "but I hardly think it right to try to force them too prominently to the front, as I am anxious for the Democracy to get together and present a measure agreeable to all."

The time limit fixed by Governor Crothers for receiving delegations indorsing applicants for office ended today. He has, therefore, passed through the most trying ordeal of his term of Governor, and through it all he is believed to have made only two promises. They were for members of the School board of Baltimore County, who have given uniform satisfaction. As the day was well advertised as the last for the reception of delegations, a rush was anticipated. It did not materialize, however. The demands for interviews were less numerous than those of several preceeding days.

All the throng lacked in numbers it made up in distinction. United States Senator Whyte was with the Governor for a time, as was also Ex-Mayor Timanus.

Now that the Governor has closed his door against[illegible] side influence, he has yet to take consideration the vie[illegible] of the House and Sen[illegible] for [illegible] asons he may [illegible] wise t[illegible] em. He is als[illegible] vice before ch[illegible] this vote, but will outlaw the saloon utterly if we ask it?"

Another move to increase the revenues of the State was made last night when Mr. Squier of Cecil offered in the House a bill to increase the collateral inheritance tax from 2½ percentum to 5 percentum.

The revenue now derived from this source is said to be about $100,000 annually, and doubling the tax will, of course, double the amount.

Mr. Squier said the bill changed the present law in no respect except to increase the amount of the tax. Under the provisions of the law, no tax is levied on bequests to parents and no lineal descendents. Husband and wife are also exempted from its provisions.

The measure will, it is believed, have the support of the Governor's friends, as increased revenues are a part of the programme, money being needed to build good roads and carry out other progressive movements.

VIOLATES THE CONSTITUTION.

Attorney General Bonaparte Discusses the Proposed Suffrage Amendment.

The Baltimore American has had an interview with Attorney General Bonaparte on the suffrage amendment to the state constitution proposed by the Democrats, and publishes the following as the result:

"I consider the proposed suffrage amendment to the Consitution of Maryland thoroughly bad. It violates the Constitution of the United States; it establishes hereditary privileges in political rights, which is unrepublican, undemocratic and un-American."

This statement was made by Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte at his home, on Park avenue, Saturday in response to a request for his views upon the all-absorbing question which the Democrats are pressing to the front and which they will make the subject for caucus action at Annapolis this week.

The most significant of Mr. Bonaparte's objections to the Straus plan of disfranchisement is that it is unconstitutional. This is the opinion of the Attorney General of the United States. It is, therefore, the most weighty opinion that can be given on the question.

"If the enacting bill is passed by the General Assembly and it the amendment is approved at the polls next year will you be a party to a proceeding to be carried eventually to the United States Supreme Court to have the proposition declared to be unconstitutional?"

"I shall not be attorney general when the amendment is approved, if it is approved by the voters of Maryland. I shall, therefore, be at liberty to be a party to such proceedings."

"What, in your opinion, will be the effect of the amendment upon government upon government in Maryland if it is adopted?"

"It will foster misgovernment and help to perpetuate the rule of bosses and rings. Finally, it displays Maryland to the enlightened public opinion of the Union and of the civilized world as so given over to blind and stupid prejudices of race as to tolerate virtual injury and gross injustice to gratify these prejudices. I shall, of course, do all little I can to defeat it if possible at the polls when the time comes and I will try to think up a few more amiable things to say of it or its supporters during the next 18 months."

Maryland Democrats will find that Maryland Republicans will not supinely accept the disfranchising amendment. Led by Attorney General Bonaparte, Congressman Mudd, John C. Rose and other lawyers, they will carry the case to the United States Supreme Court and will leave no stone unturned to secure from that court a decision upon the constitutionality of the amendment if it is approved. And if the Maryland [illegible]ment fails the [illegible]franchising [illegible]its of the [illegible] tumbling [illegible]e Southern [illegible], the dis[illegible]t submit to [illegible]resentation in [illegible]tives.

[illegible] of the proceed[illegible]-Pacific Railroad, [illegible] Harriman is the [illegible] Mr. Bonaparte [illegible] the District [illegible]ost probably [illegible]preme Court. [illegible]gued before [illegible]as attorney [illegible] am doing [illegible]the case."

[illegible]ospects [illegible] of the [illegible]hich a [illegible] Lon-setting forth its side of the case. This statement struck me as a violation of the Sherman act. Before proceedings were begun, however, the Senate passed a resolution, introduced by Mr. Hansbrough, instructing the Bureau of Corporations to investigate the company in question. That bureau is now at work, I suppose.

"We are also looking into the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, which is said to have absorbed trolley lines and which is otherwise said to be violating the Sherman act."

"Do you consider that one of the aims of President Roosevelt's administration is to place investments, including, of course, all securities, upon a more solid and legitimate basis?"

"I do and think that his aim will be more generally recognized and applauded the more generally it is understood."

Mr. Bonaparte's statement along this line coincides the view expressed by former Postmaster General James A. Gary, who last week had a long conference with Collector Stone in which he praised Mr. Stone's efforts in behalf of the national administration. He also indorsed the Collector's efforts to nominate for president a man best fitted to carry out the President's policies. As the President has, apparently, bestowed for his preference upon Secretary Taft presidential nominee and, therefore, deems him best qualified to carry out his policies, Collector Stone has been willing to fall in line with Mr. Roosevelt.

Will Sail For The Philippines.

Mr. H. Byrne Hamill, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hamill, who joined the United States Army one day last week, and who is now stationed with his command at Fort Thomas, Kentucky, will leave that point within the next two weeks for San Francisco, from whence he will sail for the Philippines. Byrne will be followed by the best wishes of many admiring friends in Oakland who hope for his safe return.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

Tne New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in [illegible]ing the claim. Your promptn[illegible] paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, an[illegible] have no desire to take advantage o[illegible] those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

Subscribe for the Republican.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick[illegible] results from it.

[illegible]s up the athlete's strength, puts fat [illegible]ple, makes a fretful baby happy, [illegible] a pale girl's cheeks, and pre[illegible]colds and consumption.

[illegible] concentrated form for sick and [illegible]g and old, rich and poor.

[illegible]ains no drugs and no alcohol.

[illegible]GGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

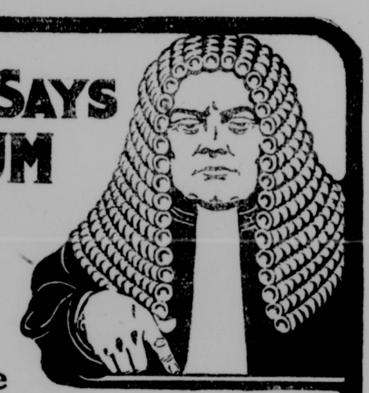
DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

G. S. HAM... T...
G... ASSISTANT CASHIER.

ENGLAND SAYS NO ALUM IN FOOD



and strictly prohibits the sale of alum baking powder—

So does France
So does Germany

The sale of alum foods has been made illegal in Washington and the District of Columbia, and alum baking powders are everywhere recognized as injurious.

To protect yourself against alum, when ordering baking powder,

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

and be very sure you get Royal.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar. It adds to the digestibility and wholesomeness of the food.

Mr. F. C. Ries, of Accident, was in the city yesterday on business.

Sincell & Co. will open their 10th Annual White Sale Monday, Feb. 10th.

Mr. Will Pendergast, of Grafton, W. Va., spent several days in Oakland this week.

Everything new will be displayed at Sincell & Co.'s White Sale Feb. 10th.

Miss Lulu Fringer, who spent two weeks with relatives in Grafton, has returned to her home in Oakland.

Don't overlook the bargains Sincell & Co. will offer at their White Sale beginning Monday, Feb. 10th.

Messrs. William H. Jacobs and son Stanley, of near Lonaconing, were in Oakland Monday morning for a few hours.

Messrs. Charles A. Bender and C. C. Durst, two of the residents of Grantsville, were in Oakland on business Tuesday, when they called to see THE REPUBLICAN.

The members of Olive Branch Castle No. 9, K. of G. E., are requested to be at the castle room Monday night, Feb. 10, 1908, at 7:30 o'clock, as business of importance is to be transacted.

F. P. ARNOLD, M. of R.

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

Mrs. W. R. Getty, wife of the late Senator W. R. Getty, of Grantsville, Garrett county, is reported to be very ill and her children have been summoned to her bedside.—Cumberland News.

County Commissioner Asa B. Friend, who came up to Oakland Monday from his home near Hoyes, was taken ill that night with an attack of bronchitis and was unable to meet with the Board until yesterday's session.

WANTED:—A responsible man to inspect orchards, &c., next summer in Garrett county. Write at once, State Horticultural Department, College Park, Maryland, for particulars.

Nearly everyone of us is figuring on having a fine time just ahead when we get all fixed, and this vision is just ahead of us when we fall asleep. To live in the now and enjoy the present is the work of a philosopher.

The home of Dr. and Mrs. Webster Ravenscroft, near Oakland, was visited last Thursday by the stork who left in their keeping a bright little son, it being the first son born to them. They are correspondingly happy.

It is probable that the star ro... running from Oakland to Eglon, W... Va., will be discontinued at an... date, as the Postoffice Departm... under advisement the consolid... the Oakland Eglon route with t... Alta route, starting at the form... and going through Aurora t... Alta and return.

CAPITAL $50,0 0.00 THE SURPLUS PROFITS $2...

First National B...

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT L...

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

The Depositor with a Dollar a... tion as the largest depositor.

ARRESTED FOR STEALING.

Three Young Men in Jail Charged With Stealing Merchandise, etc.

Tuesday afternoon Sheriff Austin Brown placed three young men, hailing from the vicinity of Hoyes under arrest charged with having stolen a boom chain and a log chain at Loch Lynn Heights, the property of Messrs. C. M. Rathbun & Sons. The chains were found in a sleigh belonging to one of the party and after their hearing before Justice Gonder the Sheriff was requested to look after the horse and sleigh, which he did. A further examination of the sleigh by Sheriff Brown disclosed a large lot of merchandise which had been taken from various stores in town and which was identified by the proprietors, including a rain coat from the store of Mr. E. A. Weimer; a hat, box of ties, two belts and one pair of kid gloves from the store of Messrs. H. C. Sincell & Co.; a bridle and two whip lashes from Messrs. J. W. Leathers & Co.; two vanity mirrors from D. E. Bolden's store; souvenir postals from Messrs. Eugene Baumgartner and James P. Treacy, besides a curry comb and horse brush from the stable of Mr. R. K. Maroney.

The young men came to Oakland on Saturday and it is supposed that they committed the depredations in Oakland on Monday as Mr. Weimer discovered his loss early Tuesday morning.

The young men, all of them past twenty years of age, are named Carr, Friend and Glover. They come from excellent families and the predicament they now find themselves in is directly traceable to the fact that they imbibed too freely.

Mr. Emanuel Hershberger, one of the good residents of the Grantsville section, who settled in that part of the country shortly after the close of the war, was in Oakland on business Tuesday, when he made this office a visit.

No place else on the globe will you find as big-hearted, generous and noble people as reside in this old town. They are not much on dress parade. They do not wear silk stockings and silk hats but they have hearts as big and warm as ever pulsated in human breasts.

Miss Corinne Manges, who visited friends and relatives in Philadelphia and York, Pa., returned to her home in Oakland Monday evening. Her sister, Miss Catherine, who accompanied her east, will remain with friends in York for another week.

Mr. Cliff White, who has been employed in the Westinghouse Works at Pittsburg for a year or more, came home last Friday evening to receive medical treatment. He has been suffering for some months, but hopes to be speedily restored to health.

Mrs. E. I. West, who went to Cumberland last Wendesday where she was summoned owing to the critical illness of her brother, Mr. Charles A. Tower, who underwent an operation for appendicitis on Thursday, has returned to Oakland and states that her brother withstood the ordeal and is ... way toward redovery.

Read the announcements o... merchants in this issue. Many ... has been saved by a careful per... a merchant's ad. When a b... man advertises for your patronag... not only has a line of goods t... "speaks" but there may be some articl... or articles listed that you desire ar... that it may be advantageous to ... this time.

Grippe is sweeping the count... it with Preventics, before it ge... seated. To check early co... these little Candy Cold Tablet... sensible and safe. Prevent... no Quinine, no laxative, not... or sickening. Pneumonia w... appear if early colds wer... broken. Also good for fe... ren. Large box, 48 table... Vest pocket boxes 5 cents... dealers.

Messrs. Fred. A. Tho... Sincell, aft... ser...

FRIENDSVILLE VOTED "DRY" ON TUESDAY.

No License Proposition Carried by a Majority of Seven Votes.

MR. B. F. FRIEND ELECTED MAYOR

Messrs. George W. Durham, R. M. Holman and George M. Friend Chosen Councilmen—A Hot Fight Put Up.

Tuesday the annual municipal election was held in Friendsville, at which time the voters of that place, besides electing their Mayor and three members of Council, voted upon the proposition of license or on license, the latter carrying by a majority of seven votes.

Under the Charter of Friendsville it is provided that whenever ten freeholders of the town shall desire to have the sale of liquor abolished they shall petition at least thirty days before the February election to have the matter submitted to a vote of the free holders within said town. This feature of the law was strictly observed by the temperance people of the town and on Tuesday the election was held with the result as above stated. The liquor interests put up a pretty stiff fight against the temperance people and came very nearly winning.

Besides carrying the town for no license the candidates for Mayor and Councilmen have expressed themselves as entirely in accord with the temperance movement, were elected by handsome majorities, the vote standing as follows:

For Mayor, B. F. Friend, 61; Arthur Chisholm, 26.

For Councilmen, R. M. Holman, 52; George W. Dunham, 48; George M. Friend, 48; A. A. Allen, 35; William Steele, 24; George Frazee, 32.

After May 1st of the present year when the liquor license now in force expires by limitation Friendsville will be one of the dryest spots in the country, or to express it as expressed by a citizen of the county yesterday it will be "dry and dusty."

Superintendent W. W. Davis of the Park, came up to Oakland from his home in Baltimore Monday night and will remain here this week superintending the cutting and shipment of the ice crop from the lake at the Park. Thus far more than a thousand tons have been shipped to points along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for the use of the railway company. The contract with the railroad people call for several thousand tons, which will be shipped as fast as it can be cut and loaded into cars.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and kidneys. The weak nerves, ...ns themselves, need this ...xplains why Dr. Shoop's ...nas, and is promptly helpful to sick ones. It goes direct ...se of these diseases. Test ...ruth, and see. All dealers.

...nt to say a good word for the ...eets his small obligations ...ey are not as ...entiful as ... and th... ...at ... ...ny ...ime, ...ts all ...collect ...to them ...financial ... that the ...ar is the ...

...ls in the ... the girl ...rmer. ...d, is ...o ...

Mr. William L. Rawlings aged 70, died at his home No. 24 Altamont Terrace Cumberland, at 6 o'clock Saturday evening, after an illness of several months. He is survived by his widow and one son, Mr. Lloyd Rowlings, teller in the First National Bank at Cumberland. At the time of his death Mr. Rawlings was employed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court.

Mr. Rawlings was born in Cumberland and was the son of the late Moses Rawlings and grand son of the late Col. Moses Rawlings, of revolutionary fame, and after whom Rawling Station on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, was named. In his early manhood Mr. Rawlings pursued farming, but later in life went into the coal business in connection with the old Hampshire mines near Piedmont. After the division of Allegany county, creating the county of Garrett, Mr. ... has been Register o... county seat ... moved ... Oakland. This o... ...ed, em... ...ct...

...con... ...ring his ... esteem a... was ... an exemplary citizen, ... to his widow and son Mr. ...leaves surviving him the ...sisters and brothers: Mr. ...ing, Mrs. Mariah L. Spring ... George M. Newton, T. ... C. Rawlings of Allegany county, ...Rawlings of St. Louis, Mo., and ...yd Rawlings of San Dema...

...neral was under the auspices ...ge, and took place at 3 o'cl... afternoon from the reside... ...nes E. Moffatt, D. D., pa... ...st Presbyterian church, ...

...CASTEEL.

...youngest ...son of the late Archibald Casteel, died January 22, 1908, aged eleven years and three days. He had been kicked by a horse several weeks ago, which caused concussion of the brain. For a time hopes of recovery were entertained, but it was God's will to take him. It grieved those who were left behind to give him up, but God does all things well and afflicts none needlessly. His brother and sisters may not now understand why God took him, but there is coming a time when we shall look at things from God's point of view and then we will understand his dealings with us here which some times appear so mysterious. Austin is safe with the Christ who loves little children, let us who are left seek to go to him, for he cannot return unto us. He was buried January 24 at Blooming Rose, the funeral being preached by Rev. A. S. Wolfe, of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. A. L. Donachy, of the Baptist church. His relatives and friends have our deepest sympathy.

C. W. HUDSON.

REVIVAL SERVICES.

Sermons Each Evening This Week By Dr. W. W. Davis.

The special services which were inaugurated more than a week ago in St. Paul's M. E. church by the pastor Rev. J. B. Workman, have been quite interesting, notwithstanding the fact that the attendance upon the services, owing to the very bad condition of the weather and the prevalence of illness, has been less than desired by the pastor and church people.

On Tuesday evening Dr. W. W. Davis, whose work in behalf of the church last winter was so abundantly successful, begun a series of sermons, his theme for the week being "Possibilities for Services." His Tuesday night's discourse was based on the subject "Finding Our Possibilities." Last night his theme was "Asserting Our Possibilities." Tonight it will be "Protecting Our Possibilities." Friday night the subject will be "Developing Our Possibilities." Sunday morning he will preach at half past ten o'clock the subject being "Possibility of Being Like Our Heroes," and on Sunday night "Possibility of Our Time."

Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock a meeting for men only will be held in the church when Dr. Davis will deliver an address on "Possibility of The New Life." For this as well as other meetings during the week invitation cards asking all to attend have been printed and circulated by Pastor Workman. The Sunday afternoon meeting promises to be well attended and an interesting time is expected by those who will be there.

Church Services.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Preaching at Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 11 a. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at 10:30 a. m., by Dr. Davis subject "Possibility of Being Like Our Heroes." Sunday school at 2.15 p. m. Men's meeting at 3.30, addressed by Dr. Davis, subject "The Possibilty of the New Life." Epworth League at 6.30 p. m. Sermon at 7.30 by Dr. Davis subject "Possibilities of Our Time."

Services each evening this week.

You are cordially invited to all of our services. Men especially invited to attend the 3.30 meeting Sunday.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Elder Hill at 10.30 a. m., and at Deep Creek at 7.30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MR. WILLIAM L. RAWLINGS.

MRS. OLIVE S. JACOBS.

Mrs. Olive S. Jacobs, wife of Stanley M. Jacobs, of Oak Grove, District No. 11, died at her home Tuesday afternoon last at 4.20 o'clock. She was born in Adams county, Ind., Sept. 17, 1876, and was married to Mr. Jacobs in August, 1898. To the union were born six children, five of whom with the husband, mother, one brother and one sister, survive. Mrs. Jacobs was ill several months with Bright's disease, complicated with other troubles. She was a member of the M. E. church and was a thorough Christian lady. Her funeral took place on Friday, the services being conducted by Rev. G. W. Evans, pastor, assisted by Rev. John T. Green, of the U. B. church. The interment was made in the family burying ground, near her late home.

JACKSON TEATS.

Jackson Teats, aged about forty-five years, who moved to Oakland last spring from near Friendsville, died at his home here this morning after an illness of a few days of acute typhoid fever. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The subject for the Sunday afternoon lecture at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Club next Sunday afternoon at four o'clock will be "Jesus at Jacob's Well." Everyone will find a warm welcome. Come and bring a friend with you.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Executrix's Notice.

...is to give notice that the subscriber ... has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Allegany County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles E. A. Bennett, late of Allegany County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 8th day of June 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1907.

MARY A. BETZ,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

ORDER NISI.

...ion for the ... Jacob ... court for ... January, 1908, by ... county, stating ... and reported ... to G. H. Emory, ... the purpose of ... unless ... or before ... 1908, provided a ... be published in some ... county, ... weeks before ... ...out of the sale to ... ...erk.

...STOCKHOLD-...TING.

...Stockholders of ... Company, ... Company in ... Maryland, on ... 27th, 1908, ... ing action in ... company's prop- ...

...LIN, Stockholder.

...ers' Meeting.

...E OF THE ... FOR GARRETT C... ...ember, 26, 1907.

...sioners for Garrett ... office in Oakland on ...

...d 5th, 1908, ...

...other business of ...ments and making ...

...the Board, ...A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Home Love Is Best.

By JANE LUDLUM LEE.

Copyrighted, 1905, by P. C. Eastment.

"Miss Short, I want you to be my wife. I want to take you to my home in Germany and teach you to love my people as they will love you. Will you have me?"

These words fell from the lips of a handsome German who was staying at the Ellwood inn for the summer and who for weeks had been devoted to the beautiful Eleanor Short, heiress to a cool million.

"Oh, Count Andres, thank you so much, but I am not for other lands. I'm a home girl pure and simple. Your people would not love me. I had hoped you would go without making me say this."

"You knew, then, that I would ask you?"

The girl drew herself up with a stately manner and replied:

"Since you do not spare me why should I save you? Yes, I knew that you would."

"Americans do not know the meaning of home," sneered the count. "I could not have gone without asking you, Miss Short, because—well, it does not matter now. I am sorry I asked you, and I trust you will never regret your answer. You will hear of me again." And with a stiff bow he left her.

"DEAR HEART!" HE MURMURED.

Eleanor, once more on the piazza, dropped into an armchair and rocked slowly back and forth. It was a beautiful night, a night for happiness, not for tears, and why should she cry? Yet tears would come to her eyes. She did not love the man who had just left her, and she did love some one else. She did not want a German home nor a German husband, and she resented his attack on the American home. She leaned forward on the rail and sighed.

A shot rang through the stillness of the night air, followed by a piercing scream.

In an instant the conservative patrons of Elwood inn became a clamorous crowd, surging on the piazza from every direction. The men rushed this way and that, and in a few moments the lifeless form of a woman was carried into the hotel lobby. Miss Short had been shot in the back, perhaps fatally, and her slayer was still at large.

While the doctors worked over the injured girl searching parties were organized to find the assassin. The grounds were carefully guarded, detectives were called in and went through their usual methods of cross questioning the employees of the hotel, and hours dragged by with no trace of the man who had fired the shot. Bulletins were issued from time to time regarding the condition of the patient, and by morning symptoms showed that there was a chance for her recovery.

With the recovery of consciousness came speech, and her first rambling words were, "Oh, how could he!"

An anxious mother leaned over her and gently said:

"Who, Eleanor, dear?"

The injured girl gasped, "The count!" and again lapsed into unconsciousness.

But one count had been at the hotel and it did not take long to find him in his room and place him under arrest. He was placed under heavy bail until Miss Short either recovered to face him at the trial or died.

Days intervened while the patient hung between life and death, but finally she began to pick up the broken threads and was well on the road to recovery. Her mother, sitting by the bedside of the girl, fondly caressing her, said:

"Jack has been here every day, dear, asking and pleading to see you, and we have promised that he shall be the first. Can you see him today? The poor boy is almost frantic."

"Yes, mother; I want to see him whenever you say I may."

"He has been waiting in the other room for two hours, so I will call him."

A well built, brown faced man appeared at the door in answer to the mother's call and knelt down by the side of the girl, slipping one strong arm about her shoulders and nestling his bronzed face close to hers.

"Dear heart!" he murmured.

"Why, Jack, mother is here looking at us!" said Eleanor as the color came to her pale cheeks.

"Your mother knows all about it, dear. Haven't I been telling her every day for the past two weeks? If she don't know it it's not my fault. You see, I couldn't tell you, so I had to tell some one and thought your mother a safe repository for confidences. But you mustn't talk, dear. You are just to get well, and then I'm going to take you away for months and months just you and I, dear."

Eleanor proved a good patient, and each day found her stronger than the one gone by. Jack was in attendance almost as constantly as the nurse and Mrs. Short, and many happy hours he sat beside her, with her head on his shoulder, while he read aloud. One day as the twilight approached she leaned over and closed the book that he was reading.

"Jack, dear, you have not told me that you loved me."

"Why, Eleanor, how can you say that. It was the last thing I said last evening when your mother turned me out."

"I remember now, but that was yesterday," she said as she nestled closer to him. "That was a whole twenty-four hours ago."

"Dear heart," he said, with a smile, "as each twenty-four hours elapse I love you that much more. You know that, dear, and I don't see why we have to wait until you get entirely well. Why not be married quietly, right here in this little room, where we have been so happy with each other, and let me nurse you back to health?"

"Why, Jack, you selfish man! Not have a wedding, no bridesmaids and no long, white satin dress with a train! Oh, how could you even suggest it? But if you want me to I will, dear, for when you go far away from me the whole light seems to go out of my life, and it's been dark such a long time."

Jack's answer was to take her in his strong arms and hold her close to his heart for a moment as he whispered "Darling!"

"Jack," Eleanor murmured, "I want to ask you a question that has been on my mind ever since I regained consciousness. I wanted to ask mother, but feared to worry her. But if you will hold me tight I will ask you."

"What is it, dear?" answered Jack.

"Who shot me?" And her eyes closed as she asked the dreaded question.

"The poor count did not do it. I happened to be coming up the grounds that night as he left you, and I stopped to watch him. He walked down the front steps and sauntered over to the big elm tree at the south end of the grounds, when from the bushes the form of a woman appeared, and in an instant she leveled a pistol and shot at him. She missed him and the bullet struck you. It all came out in a few days. It has since come to light that the woman was his wife, whom he deserted in Germany."

"Oh, Jack! What suffering that wicked man has caused?"

"Yes. But he opened my eyes to how precious you were to me. I had taken you for granted, dear, not as a special blessing. We men are so selfish."

"Not you, Jack," she murmured as his arms closed around her.

He Was Examined.

Francois Arago, the great French scientist, was a precocious youth. He was prepared for the rigid examinations of the Ecole Polytechnique before he was seventeen years old. The examiner was almost brutal in his manner toward the young candidates. A favorite companion of Arago was badly frightened at his severe questions and failed to pass the examination. At length Arago's turn came.

"Young man," said the examiner sternly, "you are probably as ignorant as your companion. I advise you to go and complete your studies before you risk this examination."

"Monsieur," replied the boy, "timidity was all that prevented my companion from passing. He knew much more than he seemed to know."

"Timidity!" exclaimed the examiner. "The excuse of fools! Perhaps you are timid also."

"Far from it," returned Arago shortly.

"Take care. It would be wise to spare yourself the disgrace of being rejected."

"[illegible] would lie, [illegible] said the you[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] ordina[illegible]

[illegible] a proj[illegible]

[illegible] would seem in[illegible]

[illegible] the opposite sid[illegible]

[illegible] without injuring the[illegible]

[illegible] the stem. Yet it can[illegible]

after two or three att[illegible]

a piece of the stem—a[illegible] inches will do—and pla[illegible] ble so that it projects a[illegible] edge. Ask a friend to h[illegible] obliquely, heel upward[illegible] higher than the end of[illegible] can do this by inserting[illegible]

ger in the bowl. Now[illegible] in proper line with the[illegible] pipe and strike it forc[illegible]

with the palm of you[illegible] piece will fly across th[illegible]

the stem and break th[illegible]

This seems [illegible]

but any[illegible]

can [illegible]

BOWSER THIEF ALARM

Prepares His Home For Possible Inroad of a Burglar.

IT AROUSES NEIGHBORHOOD.

Device, However, Starts Without Any Assistance From a Marauding Housebreaker — Alimony Question Again Comes Up For Discussion.

[Copyright, 1905, by Homer Sprague.]

When Mrs. Bowser reached home the other afternoon after three hours of shopping a workman was picking up his tools, and Mr. Bowser had a satisfied and complacent look on his face. When asked how long he had been home and why he came he replied:

"I got here soon after you started downtown. I came home to make the house safe."

"But what is the matter with the house?"

"The matter is that it could have been robbed by day and burglarized by

IN THE DARKNESS HE FELL OVER A CHAIR.

night at any time in the last ten years, and I can only wonder that it hasn't been done a dozen times over."

"But how could it have been?"

"During the day you are upstairs, down cellar or downtown half the time, and the cook is in the kitchen. Any man can unlock the front door and help himself. During the night we sleep like two logs, and a wagon could be backed up and our furniture loaded in. I shiver when I think of the risks we have run; but, thank heaven, they are over with now."

"What have you been doing?" was asked.

"Making things safe for the future. I have been wanting to do it for a year past, but haven't had the time. It was reading some criminal statistics this forenoon that hurried me up. Mrs. Bowser, do you know that 646 houses were burglarized in this city in the last year?"

"I had no idea of it."

"And that only se[illegible]en burglars were sent to prison?"

"I never read those [illegible]"

"And that it was [illegible] householders themselve[illegible] even one burglary?"

"How do you mean?"

"I mean that if a house[illegible] fended like an old shed [illegible] be tempted to enter. It[illegible] ness that makes burg[illegible]ly in[illegible]m to r[illegible]

"Of course not. When did you find it out?"

"Months and months ago. If I have not said anything it is because I didn't want to worry you. Suppose you should dig your elbow into me at midnight and wake me up to announce that there was a burglar in the house."

"Yes."

"I should, of course, spring out of bed and grapple with him. I should choke him into insensibility and then hand him over to the police. He would be tried and sentenced, but when all was over I should doubtless collapse and go dead. You see, in putting in this alarm I am preventing that lamentable casualty."

It was confidently expected that Mrs. Bowser would make objections and refer to the fire escapes Mr. Bowser had at times invested in, but she had nothing of the sort to say. He purposely gave her several opportunities and was surprised when she refused to take advantage of them. He finally decided that she realized he had struck a great thing at last, and he went to bed half an hour ahead of the usual time to enjoy the safe and comfortable feeling of security. He had slept for two hours when he got that dig of the elbow, and Mrs. Bowser said to him as he sat up in bed:

"Now, don't get excited and get your heart to fluttering. The old gong is ringing, as you hear, and that's a sign that the burglar hasn't got in. You might go down and yell at him from the front door and then turn the thing off."

The Alarm Worked.

"Didn't I say so—didn't I say so?" whispered Mr. Bowser as he pulled on his trousers. "We got the alarm in at 4 o'clock and a burglar arrives before midnight and is scared away by it. Jingo, but how the old thing is bumping herself!"

"Don't run any risks."

"There will be none. The would be burglar is half a mile away by this time and running like a whitehead."

He went down and opened the front door.

No burglar in sight.

He took a look from the back windows.

Nothing in sight but the Bowser cat trying to walk the clothesline.

The opening of the door had increased the ringing of the gong by one-half. The shutting of it did no good. Mr. Bowser knew just where to turn the ring off, but in the darkness he fell over a chair, and in getting up he knocked a vase over. This confused him, and he was groping around when Mrs. Bowser called down:

"Why, in mercy's name, don't you turn that thing off? People are beginning to stop at the gate."

"Let 'em stop. I'm not going to break my neck in the dark."

Not being able to find a match in the darkness, he made his way to the door again and opened it. Then that old gong did business. It had only been loafing around before. It rang and buzzed and rattled and groaned and grunted. It brought pedestrians down from one street and up from another. It woke the sleeping inmates of ten houses, and it brought heads to windows and swear words from mild mannered men. It brought a crowd up on the steps and a dozen demands to know what was wrong.

"It's [illegible]ny durned old burglar alarm!" [illegible]ained Mr. Bowser.

[illegible]e crowd wouldn't believe it. There [illegible]re half a dozen who declared that [illegible] was torturing somebody, and a [illegible]all boy had been promised a cent to [illegible] for a policeman when one arrived [illegible]d pushed his way into the hall. His first act was to light the gas. His second was to seize the gong and tear it out by the roots and throw it outdoors. Then he turned to Mr. Bowser and [illegible]:

"[illegible]'ll be around after you early in the [illegible]ning, old man, and if the judge [illegible] give you six months for this [illegible]key business I'll eat my hat!"

[illegible]e crowd was driven away and the [illegible]locked, and Mr. Bowser climbed [illegible]irs.

[illegible]w many people escaped from be[illegible]rdered in their beds last year?" [illegible]rs. Bowser.

[illegible]ng from you, madam!" he re[illegible] I understand your little game. [illegible]elephone our respective law[illegible]e morning, and I'll fight the [illegible] to the supreme [illegible]AD.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00. Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O. Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

You Read the [illegible]her Fellow's Ad

[illegible]re reading this one. [illegible]ould convince you [illegible]rtising in these [illegible] profitable prop[illegible] it will bring [illegible]e. [illegible]ner [illegible]ob[illegible]et[illegible]

VALENTINE DAY IS NEAR AT HAND

Historical and Romantic Day of The Year is Looked Forward To.

February fourteenth is Valentine Day.

The announcement is nothing new or startling. Valentine Day is February 14 every year, and has been since about the year three hundred. But it is not too early for merchants to begin preparing for the event, as they are now doing.

First shipments for this year's valentines now are arriving in Oakland. There is an infinite number of them—all kinds, all sizes, all prices. There are pretty ones, very pretty ones, worth anywhere from ten cents up to as many dollars. And then there are the so-called funny valentines.

Fewer "funny" valentines are sold every year here, according to several dealers who handle such stock. When comic valentines first made their appearance in local markets, they at once sprang into favor. Their sale was astounding so it is no wonder dealers paid so much attention to them.

Their prices had to be reduced through competition. Gradually the "fully" gave way to the vulgar, nowadays over one-half of these alleged funny valentines are such as no friend would send to another. The general public liking for them has decreased.

The custom of sending valentines on St. Valentine's Day is an ancient one. Modern valentines—billets of good will—had their origin away back in the year three hundred or so. The present day valentines are named after St. Valentine.

St. Valentine was a holy priest in Rome, who, with Marius and his family assisted the martyrs in the prosecution under Claudius II. He was apprehended and beaten with clubs because he would not deny his faith in Jesus Christ. Afterwards he was beheaded about the year 270.

Pope Julius I. is said to have built a church near Ponte Mole to his memory, which for a long time gave name to the water, now called Porta Del Popolo formerly Porta Oalentini. The greater part of the saint's relics now are in the church of Praxedes.

In St. Valentine's time and before his day there had been a custom among the heathen of boys' drawing girls' names in honor of their goddess, Februtaa, Juno, or February fourteenth. To abolish this lewd custom, zealous pastors, following upon the death of St. Valentine, substituted the names of saints in billets given on this day.

The custom of calling them valentines in honor of St. Valentine rapidly increased in favor, until now recognized by this name all over the civilized world.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Bliss for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, night or day, Herein especially lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes at druggists. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North Third street. Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,

Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity. Office in McComas Building, Second street.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT, DENTIST.

Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md. Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST, OAKLAND MD.

Office at residence on Liberty street. GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

All business given prompt attention. Office—First National Bank Building. KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

Office in Garrett National Bank Building. Particular attention given to Conveyancing. Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.20 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *6.58 p. m., *10.20 p. m., §11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart †9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *5.33 p. m., §11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., §12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., §

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare:

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO., Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY

Six Courses of Instruction Leading to professional degree of "P. S."

Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific. Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical. Trains for a life's work.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements.

Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees. All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't. College Park Md.

22 8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others." J. H. FRUITT, Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Paint, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS, Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signatnre of and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Chas. H. Fletcher.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron. ¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd we carry only the very best grade of papers; and 3rd with which to create attractive tye displays ¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an

Th

IMPERIAL MONOPOLY OF ELECTRICITY.

Rumor That Germany Will Control Supply Causes Stir.

Just at present German engineering circles are much worked up over the report that the imperial Treasury contemplates making the supply of electricity an imperial monopoly. Nothing definite has yet been announced, but the mere rumor has caused a considerable stir. In commenting on this statement "Engineering" says:

If the electricity supply is to become an imperial monopoly the municipalities will suffer. The public electric power stations are either owned and managed by the municipalities, or they will become their property at the expiration of the concessions granted to companies. Most of these electric supply undertakings are doing well; a smaller number do not pay their way, and would hardly be more prosperous under government administration, which does not, as a rule, work more economically and successfully than private enterprise. If the empire is to buy these undertakings out it will saddle itself with a heavy debt, and the municipalities will have to impose further rates to compensate themselves for the loss of revenue when they are no longer able to trade in electric light and power. That the state would succeed in increasing its income by raising the rates for the electricity supply is not at all probable, though it has been suggested. If the electric light of today had to compete against the gaslight of twenty years ago electricity might disregard its competitors. But it is too often forgotten that, astounding as the development of electricity has been, the progess made by gas illumination and gas power supply is still more astounding, and that the gas progress curves continue to rise more steeply than the electricity curves. Any attempt to raise the electricity rates would benefit the gas industry and cripple the electric industry.

We should be sorry to interfere in a German political question. We are only concerned with the general features of the matter. We have state mo[nopo]lies, postal and telegra[ph] we do not wish monopolies. I[n] the railways are ernment monopoly, ed States may adopt We do not want more co[n]tion than is absolutely neces in Great Britain, as we ar[e] citizens of a federation of and we are not in favor o[f] polies on the whole. Yet understand those whom of the abuses of trusts con[vert] to believers in state mo[n]although they see in pr[i]terprise better guarante[e] thy and steady prog[ress] electric [in]fall w[ith]

Do not keep your poultry in too large flocks.

—

Young pigs running with old ones will not do well. Keep them separate.

—

Look over the lambs and select the best possible animals for future breeding.

—

Agriculture as a regular study in the schools is coming, especially in rural communities.

—

It appears from the statements of experts that the world's wheat crop is short this year.

—

Be sure the cows get plenty of drinking water that is clean and cool. Water your milk through the cow.

—

Good management of the swine herd will put money into the farmer's pocket quicker than in almost any other way.

—

Feed well during the moulting season if you would have your poultry come through strong and ready for fall and winter laying.

—

Keep the digestive apparatus of the pigs in good condition as it is through this channel that you build up the pork you hope to sell.

—

Looseness of the bowels is sometimes caused in horses by sharpness of the teeth which prevents proper mastication of the food.

—

Know what your crops cost you, keep account of your receipts and draw a balance to see if you are getting ahead or are losing money.

—

A few minutes work over the forge will turn an old harrow tooth into a good staple puller. Sharpen and bend the point into a curve and it is ready for use.

—

Horses like water just as do you when they are thirsty. What plan do you have of watering them? Any old time that is most convenient? Don't do it that way.

—

The bed of the pig is seldom looked after as it should be. Give fresh straw as often as necessary to provide a dry, clean bed and have the building located in a dry place.

—

The surest way to drive the boys from the farm is to let the work of the farm be carried on in such a slipshod method as to never be done. Early and late method is a poor one.

—

Proper handling of the farm means increase in value of the farm each year, but any system of farming that takes away more fertility than is returned to the soil means bankruptcy in the end.

—

Are you planning to attend the agricultural fair? Do so by all means. A study of the exhibits will prove many an eye opener to you and give you suggestions for the betterment of your [m]ethods.

[Y]our wood lot can be im[p]ing and by the plant[i]species of trees that [g]atest amount of fuel [f]ewest number of

[C]k your breeding [r]s look over their [t]time and those [e]enough to kill are purposes. Such a it is certain to re[s]n of the her[d]

[f]or to-[s]erior [l]illy the [c]ean, [a]tter [s]epar-

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice — buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, President
C. M. STANTON, Vice President
J. O. GETTY, Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Warfield,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y.

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensable household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests the development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures [sore] throat, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 80 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. and telephone service.

COTT[AGES] for sale on Mt. Lake Park

HOU[SE] on Oak Street [for] sale or rent. [Con]tains 7 rooms—[Lot] 50x150 with [Out]buildings.

FO[R] BUILDING [Lo]cated on Oak [Ave]nue. [Will] build to suit [pur]chaser. [TER]MS EASY.

[Sev]eral choice [lots] on Second [Ave]nue.

[Two] choice [lots] on Third [Ave]nue.

[Ano]ther [lot] on Fourth [Ave]nue.

[A] very [des]irable [lot] on Fifth [Ave]nue.

[Lar]ge and [com]fortable [cot]tage on Sixth Avenue. Can be [bou]ght [on] easy [ter]ms.

For sale 18 of the [very] choicest [lots] in the [town] which I will sell [on] easy terms [at] $5 per month.

ACRES OF VALUABLE [TIM]BER less than two miles of Oakland [for] sale at a great bargain. The [sur]face of this land is well [wa]tered and this land is well [tim]bered and has several good springs.

MORE CHOICE BUILDING [LOTS] for sale and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your [pro]perty or want your cash, let me hear from [you].

For further particulars call [on]

Jes A. Sincell [Re]al Estate [Sur]veyor [and] C. E.

SHERIFF BROWN CHASED GEESE.

Well Known Officer of Oakland Had Wild Goose Chase.

Sheriff Austin Brown, of Garrett county, Maryland, arrived here this morning in quest of a man named Gnagy, who jumped a board bill at Hutton, Md., and he was wired by the authorities here that the man had been arrested here and would be produced on the arrival of the proper authorities.

When Mr. Brown arrived in the city this morning, however, he heard a peculiar fluttering much resembling a flock of wild geese on the wind and soon became aware of the fact that he was chasing them, as the authorities here had arrested the wrong man, one that was wanted in Elkins instead of Oakland, and he returned to Oakland this afternoon without his man, which is a very unusual occurrence for him as there is not a more successful officer in Western Maryland than Sheriff Brown.

Mr. Brown is one of Oakland's leading citizens and is now serving his second term as sheriff of the Maryland county. He was first elected to the position back in 1896 and served 2 successful years and upon his retirement was engaged in numerous business ventures until his re-election last fall, when he carried the county by a large majority.—Tuesday's Grafton Sentinel.

At Tax Sale.

Ex-County Treasurer E. A. Weimer advertises in this paper to day the sale of a number of pieces of real estate for the non-payment of taxes for the years 1904 and 1905. The sale will take place in front of the court house on Friday, March 6th, 1908, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

A Freak Month.

February is a freak month, in that it will have five Saturdays. It came in on the last day of the week and goes out the same way it came in. Laborers will have five pay days and the unmarried women will have five Saturdays in which to propose—for this is leap year, you know. All this will happen in the shortest month, too, and when it will occur again deponeth sayeth not, but it would not be a bad idea in proportion for some of the high school scholars to solve.

Sent to Sylvan Retreat.

David Saucer, of Crellin, who was brought to Oakland one day last week suffering with a peculiar form of dementia and confined to the jail here, where he was kept under constant surveillance by two men employed for that purpose, was examined before a jury empanneled by Sheriff Brown to enquire into his mental capabilities on last Thursday afternoon, who found upon the evidence adduced before them that Mr. Saucer's mind was affected to some extent and that he be confined to some institution for treatment. Following the recommendation of the jury Judge Henderson passed an order committing him to Sylvan Retreat at Cumberland where it is hoped by his friends that a permanent cure may be worked. Sheriff Brown took Mr. Saucer to Cumberland Monday morning.

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted—where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

The Rebellion of Jackie

By Susie Bouchelle Wight

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"What a perfectly exquisite child!" exclaimed a passer-by to her companion, after a glance at little Jack. Jack's mother fidgetted with complacency, and looked admiringly at the vision at her feet—a vision of golden curls, rich, creamy complexion, and the most tempting briar-rose cheeks—a small boy, clad from top to toe in spotless white. He was a pretty boy. She knew there was no denying that fact, and so she did not tarry to ask herself the meaning of that inscrutable look that was dawning in the great brown eyes. A look new and strange, it would have seemed to her, for she was all a-flutter with maternal vanity.

Mrs. Perham sighed.

"How fortunate you are Mattie," she said. "Jack is such a perfect gentleman, and takes all the lovely dressing you can think up for him, but my James—" She sighed again, and Jack's mother laughed, for the mere mention of James, the unspeakable, usually provoked smiles in Oldtop.

"You needn't laugh, Mattie. I assure you it is anything but funny to be the mother of a freckled little tough, that will not stay clean two minutes after he is dressed."

Jack's mother laughed again. "Oh, James is all right, only it is a pity that he looked like the Perhams instead of like our family—that is all! I do believe, though, Jennie dear, that if you would pursue a different course with him, you could mold him as much to your liking as Jack is to mine. Now, no matter if he does rebel at blouses and frills and other things that he ought to wear as a matter of course, you ought to make him understand that your will is to be his law about his dress for a good many years to come yet."

"How can I? I told him only last week that if he would wear a sweet little brown linen sailor suit to the Fourth of July celebration I would give him a dollar—now what do you suppose Jim said to that? Why, he simply looked up from his paper and said, 'Take her up on it, son, and get your dollar, and then father will give you another to go out and roll in a mud-puddle with that suit on.'"

"Jennie Perham! You don't mean to say that Jim Perham set your authority at naught in that way?"

"Oh, he didn't mean to set it at naught—but he is always saying that he cannot bear to see country people trying to put on city airs—" Mrs. Perham stopped suddenly and bit her lip at a recollection of the connection in which he had said this, but Jack's mother did not seem to feel hit, so she continued: "He is given to abetting James in all of his shines, anyway, and I simply haven't the backbone to undertake the quelling of the two of them."

"There's where you and I differ!" said her sister. "Now listen to me. Go right on and make that linen suit for the Fourth, and when the time comes let him choose between wearing it and staying at home all day, and you will see that he will come to terms; then, when he has worn it there will be no more trouble. Don't say a word to Jim about it, and above all, do not try to hire James—just be firm and positive and you will see that you will carry your point readily. He really would be a strikingly handsome boy if he were well dressed, and whether you will believe me or not, his freckles and his snaggled teeth look a great deal worse to you than they do to anyone else."

They left the room and Jackie, aged seven, looked out of the window across the street at his cousin James turning a handspring in the dust of a vacant lot, and then down at his own immaculateness, with envy and rebellion in his soul.

The Fourth came. It was in the south where the sound of fireworks did not smite the morning air. Early in the morning the people began to ga... country 'round, for proud this day ...pen house. ...l and cha... dar—the ...se than ...me—c... her ...

...I dou...e dare yo... ...undown." ...twinkling t... ...as tramp" ... or a b... "J... yo... in ... T... mou... kick... the a...

a... ...ed a fo... s. P...ham, w... drawing on ... m...

"Why, Jennie, w..." asked Jack's mother.

"James is in bed," ...ham, firmly. "I have ... his other clothes, and ... en suit and the tan shoes ... either wear them or spend ... bed."

"That's right—be firm a... and you will carry your ... have always told you—but ... Jim?"

"Oh, Jim! I'll tell you ... him. He had to sally out ... ly after breakfast—you ... chairman of the committee ... so he doesn't know a thing ... unpleasantness," she concl... sound of a muffled kick ... came from James' room.

Jack's mother stood a ...

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE.

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. SEVENTY-TWO ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "LOCHIEL," it being Lot No. 15 of the said tract and more particularly described in a deed for the same from James H. Lockhart to James H. Darr bearing date the 12th day of February, 1894, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 24, folio 70, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county, and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said James H. Darr.

No. 2. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, and being the same land which was conveyed to Jeremiah J. McKenzie by Samuel Johnson and others by deed bearing date the 11th day of October, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 16, folio 311, etc. one of the Land Records of said Garrett county saving and excepting therefrom 10 acres and 80 perches conveyed by said McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated September 30th, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, said residue containing the quantity of THIRTY-NINE AND ONE-HALF ACRES. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear ... the year 1905 as is ...e Assessment Books ... the said Jeremiah J. ...

...PIECE OR PAR... ...ND CONTAINING ...TITY OF THIRTY-... ...ES, and being the same ...ch was conveyed by Flor... ...d. Beall and others to Lewis Joseph McKenzie by deed bearing date the 19th day of March, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 508, etc., one of the ...nd Records of said Garrett ...nty, and more particularly de... ...bed therein by the following ...ses and distances: Beginning ...the same at a stake standing 20 ... South of Military Lot No. 791 ...on the line between the tract ...nd known as Mt. Aetna and ...od of Richard Beall, deceased, ...nning with said line South 50 ...East 102 ... rods to a tract of ...rveyed by the said Richard ...d... ...nveyed to W... A. Rob... ...h lin... ...said land ...s, North ...uth of ...

was conveyed to John Fadley by deed from Charles H. Johnson and others dated the 10th day of September, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 380, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John Fadley.

No. 6. LOTS NUMBERS THREE, TWO, TWENTY AND NINETEEN as shown on the plat of Sarah Wright's land as recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland and being the same lots which were conveyed to Horace R. Hamilton by John B. Wright and others by deed dated the 14th day of February, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 181, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Horace R. Hamilton.

No. 7. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND ONE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWO, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES EACH, being located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county and described in a deed for the same to Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham, duly of record in the Land Records of Allegany county, Maryland. The said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the heirs of said Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham.

No. 8. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF SEVEN ACRES, located at the West end of Everett's Tunnell, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Election District No. 1 of Garrett county, and being the same which was conveyed by Maggie Collins to Edward J. Devine by deed dated the 18th day of March, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 268, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Edward J. Devine.

No. 9. PARTS OF MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE, CONTAINING FORTY-TWO AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Mary Willison to Jacob P. McKenzie by deed dated the 11th day of September, 1902, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 42, folio 307, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 and the whole of the taxes for the year 1905 due and in arrear thereon as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jacob P. McKenzie.

No. 10. LOT NUMBER ELEVEN OF THE SUB-DIVISION OF THE TRACT OF LAND KNOWN AS "LOCHIEL," CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF TWO HUNDRED AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES, and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green, dated the 17th day of August, 1893, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folio 247, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jefferson S. Green.

No. 11. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING TWO AND ONE-TENTH ACRES and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Belle Klipstein Field and others to John E. Klipstein and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 49, folio 171, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, by the following metes and bounds: Beginning for ...he same at a ten-inch beech tree ...tanding near the new county drive ...ad, and marked with three hacks ... two sides, and running North 38 ...grees 10 minutes East, 248 feet to ...aple standing on the South bank ...ll Run, thence North 50 de... ...15 minutes West, 54 feet ...nd near the South bank of ... thence South 48 degrees ... West, 84 feet to a maple, ...th 33 degrees 50 minutes ...eet to the beginning. ...cated in Election Dis... ...said Garrett county ... to satisfy and pay ... in ... on ... ar... aid ... of ... s

Executor's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

BARBARA YODER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 23rd day of July, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 23rd day of January, 1908.

EMANUEL HERSHBERGER,
Executor.
Grantsville, Md.

Administrator's Notice.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix.
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS & CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:
One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.
Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.
Also 10 acres suitable for building site just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.
For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.
We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1908. NUMBER 50

M'SHERRY M'COMAS. LOWNDES.

ator Brown Offered Resolutions of Respect to This Memory.

In the Maryland Senate on last Wednesday just before the delivery of the eulogies by Senator Price, of Wicomico, and Linthicum, of Baltimore, upon Senator A. P. Gorman and Gov. E. E. Jackson, were pronounced this morning, Senator Brown, of Garrett, offered joint resolutions, paying tribute to the memories of three other Marylanders lately deceased, who occupied high offices in this State—namely, Chief Justice James McSherry, Hon. Louis E. McComas and the Hon. Lloyd Lowndes.

The resolutions were made the special order for next Wednesday. They are as follows:

WHEREAS, The people of this State, notably those residing in Western Maryland, have been called upon to mourn the loss of three of their honored citizens and devoted public servants.

The one, Hon. Lloyd Lowndes, became by adoption a citizen of Western Maryland, and by his force of character and ability was chosen to represent his district in Congress and later called to the highest position in the gift of the State, occupying the Governor's chair from 1896 to 1900.

The Hon. Louis E. McComas, representing our State in both halls of Congress with credit and distinction, and later being honored by the national Government in his appointment to the bench in the capital of our nation, where he faithfully discharged his duties and was honored and respected by his associates.

The Hon. Judge James McSherry, a native of Frederick, was pre-eminently a jurist, and the high qualities of mind and heart which he possessed added new lustre to the already renowned bench of the State of Maryland, and his loss to our highest court has left a gap which will be felt for many years, while his kindly and genial nature endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

Each of these citizens have devoted the best years of their lives to the services of their State and furnish an example of honesty and marked ability in the discharge of public duty. Therefore, be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That in the death of Lloyd Lowndes, Louis E. McComas and James McSherry this State has been deprived of the services, the counsel and judicial power of men of marked ability, devotion to duty and highest personal integrity.

Resolved further, That as a mark of respect to the said deceased citizens a copy of these resolutions be bound with the Acts of the Assembly for the session of 1908, and that copies thereof properly engrossed and under the great seal be forwarded by the secretary of the Senate to the families of each of the said deceased citizens.

For Sale

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

GOOD ROADS ADDRESS BY THE GOVERNOR

His Excellency Would Enlarge Scope of the Shoemaker Law.

GENERAL LOCAL OPTION BILL

The Prospects of Its Passage by the General Assembly—Republicans to Caucus on Disfranchising Amendment.

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—Governor Crothers today addressed a meeting of the citizens of Anne Arundel county on the good roads movement at the courthouse at Annapolis, under the auspices of the Anne Arundel Taxpayer's Association. The Governor was escorted to the court house by a committee sent over by the Association, composed of Messrs. B. R. Anderson, Benjamin Watkins, H. L. Shipley, Henry Tydings and Edward Jones.

The meeting was well attended, not only by members of the Tax-payers' Association, but among those present were a number of Senators and delegates, who came to hear the Governor's views.

The Governor did not go into the question of detail in the proposed road bill further than to urge the incorporation of the Shoemaker law, or some system of that sort, and the provisions of the new general road-improvement scheme in one act, as he thought this would make possible the carrying on of the work already begun in some of the counties.

Governor Crothers insisted that every county in the state should receive benefit from the improvement law. He expressed the opinion that the whole secret of the success of the movement lay in the personnel of the commission to which is to be intrusted the execution of the law. He urged that this commission, the lack of which has been felt in administration of the new New York state road law, should be made up of the highest type of men. The people had a right to know that the men who handled the money to be expended in this or in any public capacity were doing their duty in every way, he said, and he pledged himself unequivocally to the removal of any member of the commission found guilty of the slightest extravagance or neglect, if the power to do so were lodged in him.

While the Governor did not explain his views as to how the money should be raised to carry out the improvement, he implied a preference for a bond issue rather than by direct taxation.

The Governor devoted some time to the subject of the expenditure of the tax-payers money in a general way by public servants. He said that when the tax payers' money is once deposited in the State Treasury it ought not to be taken from that Treasury under any circumstances except to positively subserve the the public good.

The prospects of the passage of the general local-option bill have greatly improved in the last few days. There is a prospect that the greater part of the Republican vote will be cast for the bill, covering the whole state. As the matter now stands, the bill would pass the Senate, as it seems to have all the Republican votes and can easily get enough votes from the Democratic side to make up the necessary 14.

In the House the prospects of the bill are not so bright; and there the fight will be made. It is counted that the five Republican votes from Baltimore city will be cast in favor of the bill, as the Republicans see a good chance of putting the Democrats in a hole by getting them on record against the measure. That the Republicans from Southern Maryland will line up with the Baltimore city Republicans is not yet certain. However, there is a big sentiment in the House in favor of letting the people of the entire state vote on the liquor question.

It is reported today that the local-option people count 46 votes in the House as sure, but Superintendent Anderson of the Anti-Saloon League declined to make an estimate of strength.

Among the friends of local option today, Governor Crothers was quoted as having said to some of the Democratic leaders that the party cannot afford to let the local-option bill be defeated. Governor Crothers denies having made such a statement.

The Republicans, on the advice of Congressman Mudd, will hold a caucus on the Constitutional amendment tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The Republicans will move to strike out the enacting clause, but are not expected to adopt any dilatory tactics.

The Joint committee of the Senate and House named in accordance with a resolution introduced by Senator Linthicum to confer with a similar committee from the Virginia Legislature, with the view of securing concurrent oyster legislation in the Potomac river and other waters in which the two states are interested, met tonight after the adjourment of the Legislature.

Senator Linthicum was chosen as chairman of the joint committee, and Mr. Dwight Burroughs was named as special messenger to go to Richmond for the purpose of conferring with the members of the Virginia committee in order to fix on a convenient date for the meeting.

The members of the committee include Senator Linthicum, Andrews, Brashears, Milbourne and Greenwell and Delegates Hayden, Benson, Quinn, Brady, Jones of Calvert and Carl of Allegany.

At a meeting of the Allegany and Garrett county delegations today, Delegate Ford's mining bills were approved and will now proceed in the regular channel of legislation.

The temperance committee yesterday decided to report unfavorably the bill introduced by Delegate Green of Garrett county, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the district of Accident.

BITTINGER.

Ice harvesting is going on briskly in this neighborhood and the ice housed is of unusual thickness and quality.

A small child of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Platter is reported to be seriously ill at this writing.

Samuel Bowser has charge of the primary department of our public school, this week. Mr. Bowser is employed as a substitute in Miss Bessie Wiley's stead, as she is suffering an attack of the grip.

Harry Shaw, of Jennings, was calling in this village last Sunday.

Gil. Broadwater, of Grantsville, was in this village last Saturday on business.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley and two daughters Misses Myrtle and Bessie, with their brother Harry, attended the funeral of Mrs. William Winterburg at Grantsville last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Earle Stanton, who has been very ill for some weeks, is rapidly recovering.

Jennings Bros.' who own and operate a large lumbering plant at Jennings, have closed down their mill indefinitely.

Our efficient mail carrier, Dennis Deitriech, faced all the blizzards of the past week and brought the mail safely through each day.

T. H. Bittinger, of Grantsville, was caught in a blizzard near this place last week, and was obliged to remain a week with his sister before he could get home.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. A. J. Heltel, Mr. William Keyser, Mr. Theodore Miller, Mr. Robert Roy, Miss Lula Smith, Mrs. Clara Wolf.

HON. BRAINARD H. WARNER CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

Resident of Kensington, Montgomery County, Whtch Town He Founded.

WANTS TO REPRESENT DISTRICT 6

Mr. Warner Has Been An Active Republican for Some Years and is a Man of Affairs, Being Identified With Many Financial Institutions.

Following is a sketch of Hon. B. H. Warner, Kensington, Montgomery county, Maryland, and Washington, D. C., which is copied from a recent issue of the Washington Star.

Mr. Warner some weeks ago announced that he is a candidate for the nomination of Congress from the Sixth Maryland District and his candidacy has attracted general interest. Although he has not yet opened an active campaign for the nomination, Mr. Warner is having his cause advocated throughout the district and is being brought to the attention of voters. He will no doubt create considerable interest in the contest, and it is expected he will make a canvass in every county. The prospective contest between Messrs. Lowndes and Pearre in Allegany county again this year will accentuate the interest in Mr. Warner's candidacy.

The article from the Washington Star follows:

"The announcement several days ago of the candidacy of Brainard H. Warner in the Sixth Maryland District, to succeed Col. Pearre, the present incumbent, has aroused considerable interest in Washington, where Mr. Warner is widely known. Although formal announcement of Mr. Warner's candidacy was made only recently, his friends have been acquainted for some time with his intention to become a candidate for the lower house of the National legislature in the district in question.

HON. B. H. WARNER.

"Mr. Warner has been connected locally since his fifteenth year, when, shortly after his arrival in the National capital, he was, for three months, a clerk in the Judiciary Square Hospital. Then he was promoted to a clerkship in the War Department, where he remained until the latter part of 1866, when he was appointed a clerk in the office of the controller of the treasury. At the same time he was private secretary of Mr. Charles R. Buckalew, who was, at that time a prominent democratic senator from Pennsylvania. It was in this position that Mr. Warner was first brought into connection with legislative business at the Capitol.

"In the latter part of 1867 he was made deputy collector of internal revenue of the ninth district of Pennsylvania, and continued his law studies with the late Thaddeus Stevens, then a Republican member of Congress from that district. He started a paper while in this position called The Voice of Truth and also aided in the publishing The Father Abraham, a picturesque campaign journal, using the Dutch dialect.

"In 1868 he resigned for the purpose of completing his course at the Columbian College Law School in Washington, and after making a tour through the West, as a correspondent for the Harrisburg Telegraph, entered the school and graduated one year later. He was reappointed to his old position in the Treasury Department, but resigned upon his graduation and entered upon the practice of law, later entering the real estate business.

"Mr. Warner was one of the charter members of the Metropolitan Savings Bank, Central National Bank and Second National Bank, a director of the National Metropolitan Bank and National Safe Deposit and Trust Company, the founder of the B. H. Warner Company, the Columbian National Bank and the Washington Loan and Trust Company. He was president of the two latter named institutions until the pressure of business led to his retirement, and ever since he has been a member of the board of directors and executive committtees. He was one of the founders of the Washington Public Library and has been vice president from its incorporation. He is a member of the board of trustees of the American University.

"Mr. Warner was one of the founders of the Washington Board of Trade and its second president, and the Young Men's Christian Association and many Washington institutions. He has been a member of the various inaugural executive committees since 1870. During the last three inaugurations he was grand marshal of the division embracing civic organizations. Mr. Warner was president of the local branch of the Red Cross during the Spanish-American war, president of the National Philharmonic Society, secretary of the Yellow Fever Aid Society and President of the Sound Money Club during the campaign of 1897, and dedicated his entire office force for several months to the work of that campaign. He was treasurer of the inaugural committee when President Harrison became President. He was chairman of the executive committee of the grand encampment of the G. A. R. in 1902, and is a member of Burnside Post.

"For more than twenty years he has been interested in Maryland politics and a prominent member of the Republican party, whose interests he has advanced by active participation in campaign in different sections of the state. He was proprietor of the Montgomory Press for several years, and also president of the Maryland Republican Editorial Association. He was also one of the original proprietors and developers of Takoma Park, Woodside, Forest Glen, Hyattsville, and several other suburbs.

"In 1891 he founded the town of Kensington, Montgomery county, which largely through his instrumentality, has grown to be an active and important suburb of the National Capital.

"In politics Mr. Warner is a thorough Republican, though not an intense partisan. He has been frequently mentioned for Congress in the Sixth District of Maryland, but thus far has preferred business to politics. Now that he has retired from active participation in business, he has, from the suggestion of many friends, announced himself as a candidate for congressional honors."

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

Subscribe for The Republican.

LOCAL INSTITUTE NOTES.

Interesting Session Held in Oakland Last Saturday.

The local teachers' institute, which was held in the High School building in Oakland last Saturday was well attended considering the state of weather then prevailing and the further fact that many of the teachers in this immediate neighborhood were suffering with colds, grip and other forms of disease, which precluded them from attending.

The institute, however was interesting from the start and was opened at half hast ten o'clock by Prof. Loraditch in the absence of Principal Turner of the High School, who was unable to be present owing of illness, much to the disappointment of many.

After singing "Maryland, My Maryland," Mr. Scott T. Jones, delivered the opening address, which was full of instruction and inspiration to the teachers present, his theme being "The Responsibility of The Teacher."

Mr. William E. Bishoff spoke on teaching Language in primary and secondary grades, followed by Mr. Bassett on Civics, who read an instructive paper on this subject.

At the close of Mr. Bassett's paper the noon recess was taken. The second session convened at 1.45 p. m., when Prof. DeWitt made a lengthy address and moved that a vote of thanks be tendered Superintendent Browning for his able management of the schools of Garrett county.

Mr. G. W. Sterling spoke on the subject "Preparation for Recitation in Primary and Advanced Grades," which was full of instruction and the speaker advanced some new and unique methods along this line.

Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord then addressed the institute on "Public Schools and Public Duties." In his remarks Mr. Peddicord called attention to the fact that teachers should do their duty irrespective of public complaint, and by comparison showed the great improvement made in the public school system during the past fifty years. "Politics," said Mr. Peddicord, "should have no influence in the appointment of public school officials, but they should be compelled to pass an examination as to their qualifications for the position to which they aspire." He urged that the County Commissioners appropriate more money for school purposes, pointing out the great benefits to be derived by the children as a result of the increased levy and consequent additional length of the school term.

Superintendent Browning made a few upon the subject "How Can the Teachers Cooperate With the Superintendent in Bettering the Schools."

Prof. Loraditch presented the subject of Drawing and discussed it intelligently and thoughtfully, after which the session closed.

DIXON & KELSO

A Big Stock of the Old Reliable

Oliver Chilled Plows

5000 RODS

WOVEN FENCE

In All Heights

15000 Pounds

BARB WIRE

All of Which Will We Will Sell At Prices in Keeping With the Times.

Also 300 Bushels

FANCY APPLES

at $1 Per Bushel.

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

SPECIAL SALE

OF

CLOTHING

I have several hundred suits of Clothing for Men and Boys that I wish to turn into cash in the next two months and to do so I have made deep cuts in prices, and during the next two months will sell Clothing

20% to 50%

less than usual prices.

COME AND SEE ME BEFORE YOU BUY

and I will save you money.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

The War For Supremacy

By STEPHEN CRANE,
Author of the "Red Badge of Courage," Etc.

Copyright, 1900, by William Howe Crane.

IT came to pass that a certain half dime, blood and thunder pamphlet once had a great vogue in a tribe of boys at Whilomville. This story relates the experiences of a lad who began his career as a cabin boy on a pirate ship. Throughout the first fifteen chapters he was rope's ended from one end of the ship to the other end, and very often he was felled to the deck by a heavy fist. He lived through enough hardships to have killed a battalion of Turkish soldiers, but in the end he rose upon them. Yes, he rose upon them. Hordes of pirates fell before his intrepid arm, and in the last chapters of the book he is seen jauntily careering on his own hook as one of the most gallous pirate captains that ever sailed the seas.

Naturally when this tale was thoroughly understood by the tribe they had to dramatize it, although it was a dramatization that would gain no royalties for the author. Now, it was plain that the urchin who was cast for the cabin boy's part would lead a life throughout the first fifteen chapters which would attract few actors. Willie Dalzel, the chief, developed a scheme by which some small lad would play cabin boy during this period of misfortune and abuse, and then when the cabin boy came to the part where he slew all his enemies and reached his zenith he, Willie Dalzel, should take the part.

This fugitive and disconnected rendering of a great play opened in Jimmie Trescott's back garden. The path between the two lines of gooseberry bushes was elected unanimously to be the ship. Then Willie Dalzel insisted that Homer Phelps should be the cabin boy. Homer tried the position for a time and then elected that he would resign in favor of some other victim. There was no other applicant to succeed him, whereupon it became necessary to press some boy. Jimmie Trescott was a great actor, as is well known, but he steadfastly refused to engage for the part. Ultimately they seized upon little Dan Earl, whose disposition was so milky and docile that he would do whatever anybody asked him. But Dan Earl made the one firm revolt of his life after trying existence as a cabin boy for some ten minutes. Willie Dalzel was in despair. Then he suddenly sighted the little brother of Johnnie Hedge, who had come into the garden and in a poor little stranger sort of fashion was looking wistfully at the play. When he was invited to become the cabin boy he accepted joyfully, thinking that it was his initiation into the tribe. Then they proceeded to give him the rope's end and to punch him with a realism which was not altogether painless. Directly he began to cry out. They exhorted him not to cry out, not to mind it, but still they continued to hurt him.

TWO CABIN BOYS.

There was a commotion among the gooseberry bushes, two branches were swept aside, and Johnnie Hedge, a new boy who did not belong to the tribe, walked down upon them. Every boy stopped in his tracks. Johnnie was boiling with rage.

"Who hurt him?" he said ferociously. "Did you?" He had looked at Willie Dalzel.

Willie Dalzel began to mumble: "We was on'y playin'. Wasn't nothin' fer him to cry fer."

The newcomer had at his command some big phrases, and he used them. "I am goin' to whip you within an inch of your life. I am goin' to tan the hide off'n you." And immediately there was a mixture, an infusion of two boys which looked as if it had been done by a chemist. The other children stood back, stricken with horror. But out of this whirl they presently perceived the figure of Willie Dalzel seated on the chest of the Hedge boy.

"Got enough?" asked Willie hoarsely.

"No," choked out the Hedge boy. Then there was another flapping and floundering and finally another calm.

"Got enough?" asked Willie.

"No," said the Hedge boy. A sort of war cloud again puzzled the sight of the observers. Both combatants were breathless, bloodless in their faces and very weak.

"Got enough?" said Willie.

"No," said the Hedge boy. The carnage was again renewed. All the spectators were silent but Johnnie Hedge's little brother, who exhorted him to continue the struggle, but it was not plain that the Hedge boy needed any encouragement, for he was crying bitterly, and it has been explained that when a boy cried it was a bad time to hope for peace. He had managed to wriggle over upon his hands and knees, but Willie Dalzel was tenaciously gripping him from the back, and it seemed that his strength would spend itself in futility. The bear cub seemed to have the advantage of the working model of the windmill. They heaved, uttered strange words, wept, and the sun looked down upon them with steady, unwinking eye.

Now, Peter Washington, the doctor's coachman, came out of the stable and observed this tragedy of the back garden. He stood transfixed for a moment and then ran toward it, shouting: "Hi, what's all dish yere? Hit Stopper dat, stopper dat, you two! For lan' sake, what's all dish yere?" He grabbed the struggling boys and pulled them apart. He was stormy and fine in his indignation. "For lan' sake! You two kids act like you was mad dogs. Stopper dat!" The whitened, tearful, soiled combatants, their clothing all awry, glared fiercely at each other as Peter stood between them lecturing. They made several futile attempts to circumvent him and again come to battle. As he fended them off with his open hands he delivered his reproaches at Jimmie. "I's s'prised at you! I suhtainly is!"

"Why?" said Jimmie. "I ain't done nothin'. What have I done?"

"Y-y-you done 'courage dese yere kids ter scrap," said Peter virtuously.

"Me?" cried Jimmie. "I ain't had nothin' to do with it."

"I ralkon you ain't," retorted Peter, with heavy sarcasm. "I ralkon you been er-prayin', ain't you?" Turning to Willie Dalzel, he said, "You jest take an' run erlong outer dish yere or I'll jest nachually take an' damnearkill you." Willie Dalzel went. To the new boy Peter said: "You look like you had some sainee, but I ralkon you don't know no more'n er rabbit. You jest take an' trot erlong off home, an' don' lemme catich you round yere er-fightin' or I'll break yer back." The Hedge boy moved away with dignity, followed by his little brother. The latter, when he had placed a sufficient distance between himself and Peter, played his fingers at his nose and called out:

"Nig-ger-r-r! Nig-ger-r-r!"

Peter Washington's resentment poured out upon Jimmie.

"'Pears like you never would understan' you ain't reglar common trash. You take an' 'sociate with an'body what done come erlong."

"Aw, go on," retorted Jimmie profanely. "Go soak your head, Pete."

The remaining boys retired to the street, whereupon they perceived Willie Dalzel in the distance. He ran to them.

"I licked him!" he shouted exultantly. "I licked him! Didn't I, now?"

From the Whilomville point of view he was entitled to a favorable answer. They made it. "Yes," they said, "you did."

"I run in," cried Willie, "an' I grabbed 'im, an' afore he knew what it was I throwed 'im. An' then it was easy." He puffed out his chest and smiled like an English recruiting sergeant. "An' now," said he, suddenly facing Jimmie Trescott, "whose side were you on?"

The question was direct and startling. Jimmie gave back two paces. "He licked you once," he explained haltingly.

"He never saw the day when he could lick one side of me. I could lick him with my left hand tied behind me.

"WHO HURT HIM?" HE SAID FEROCIOUSLY.

Why, I could lick him when I was asleep." Willie Dalzel was magnificent.

A gate clicked, and Johnnie Hedge was seen to be strolling toward them.

"You said," he remarked coldly, "you licked me, didn't you?"

Willie Dalzel stood his ground. "Yes," he said stoutly.

"Well, you're a liar," said the Hedge boy.

"You're another," retorted Willie.

"No, I ain't either, but you're a liar."

"You're another," retorted Willie.

"Don't you dare tell me I'm a liar or I'll smack your mouth for you," said the Hedge boy.

"Well, I did, didn't I?" barked Willie. "An' whatche goin' to do about it?"

"I'm goin' to lam you," said the Hedge boy.

He approached to attack warily, and the other boys held their breaths. Willie Dalzel winced back a pace. "Hol' on a minute," he cried, raising his palm. "I'm not"—

But the comic windmill was again in motion, and between gasps from his exertions Johnnie Hedge remarked, "I'll show—you—whether—you kin—lick me—or not."

The first blows did not reach home on Willie, for he backed away with expedition, keeping up his futile cry, "Hol' on a minute!" Soon enough a swinging fist landed on his cheek. It did not knock him down, but it hurt him a little and frightened him a great deal. He suddenly opened his mouth to an amazing and startling extent, tilted back his head and howled, while his eyes, glittering with tears, were fixed upon this scowling butcher of a Johnnie Hedge. The latter was making slow and vicious circles, evidently intending to renew the massacre.

But the spectators really had been desolated and shocked by the terrible thing which had happened to Willie Dalzell. They now cried out: "No, no; don't hit 'im any more! Don't hit 'im any more!"

Jimmie Trescott, in a panic of bravery, yelled, "We'll all jump on you if you do."

The Hedge boy paused, at bay. He breathed angrily and flashed his glance from lad to lad. They still protested: "No, no; don't hit 'im any more! Don't hit 'im no more!"

"I'll hammer him until he can't stand up," said Johnnie, observing

A DREADFUL WOMAN WITH GRAY HAIR.

that they all feared him. "I'll fix him so he won't know hisself, an' if any of you kids bother with me"—

Suddenly he ceased, he trembled, he collapsed. The hand of one approaching from behind had laid hold upon his ear, and it was the hand of one whom he knew.

The other lads heard a loud, iron filing voice say, "Caught ye at it again, ye brat, ye!" They saw a dreadful woman with gray hair, with a sharp, red nose, with bare arms, with spectacles of such magnifying quality that her eyes shone through them like two fierce white moons. She was Johnnie Hedge's mother. Still holding Johnnie by the ear, she swung out swiftly and ferociously and succeeded in boxing the ears of two boys before the crowd realized its presence of mind and scampered. Yes, the war for supremacy was over, and the question was never again disputed. The supreme power was Mrs. Hedge.

His Evil Genius.

In a western [illegible] town Ben Watson had saved the life of Myra Underhill, says Harper's Weekly. Miss Underhill had been overturned in a creek with a swift current, and the rescue of young Watson was a very heroic one. He had saved the life of the girl after she was sinking for the third time and had barely strength to pull himself and the young woman to shallow water.

The news soon spread, and Ben Watson was hailed as the real live hero of the village.

Aunt Tabby Wilson, the oldest woman in the village, the mother of the little colony, was loud in praise of the heroism of the young man and at once declared that Ben and Myra must get married. "Ben saved Myry's life," she said, "and now they must marry and be happy ever afterward, just as they do it in the story books."

But Ben demurred. The arrangement did not suit him.

"Why not marry Myry, Ben?" said the old lady. "She is yours, and we must have a wedding."

"She is a nice girl, all right," replied Ben, "but I don't think we ought to marry. Seems to me," he went on, "I have done enough for Myry."

Followed Instructions.

Cricket is a fairly well known pastime, but there are still a few benighted individuals who do not understand the intricacies of the game, and the Muggleton eleven discovered one of these recently while they were playing Puddleton. They were a man short, and, as the wickets had been falling at a fast and furious rate, they looked for a substitute. Hodge, the cow keeper, was approached.

"Darn'" he said. "I can't play cricket." But on being assured that all he need do was to hit the ball as hard as he could he took his place at the wicket. He caught the first ball a mighty whack and sent it spinning away toward the boundary.

"Run, Hodge; run as fast as you can!" he heard every one shout, and, seeing the other batsman, the local blacksmith, coming toward him, swinging his bat, Hodge did run, and he didn't stop till he was safe over the farther gate.

"What did I do to 'im, I wonder?" he muttered. "Anyhow he never caught me. That's a blessing!"—Tit-Bits.

Force of Habit.

Why do you always walk on the same side of the street? Why do you always put on the same boot first? Just force of habit. Habit is a splendid time and energy saver. If we had to think before we did each of the little things that now we do automatically, our minds would be tired when we brought them to tackle more important matters. Habit makes things easy, too, call it by what name you like. Sometimes it is known as system, and in this form it is habit that rules the world. On the other hand, don't let habit get hold of you if it is not helping you.

TALKS BY MRS. DOLBY

Hubby Listens to Another of Her Interesting Conversations.

THOUGHT SHE WAS DYING.

That Was How She Felt During a Fainting Spell, but It Didn't Feaze the Deacon Any—Samuel's Experience With a Cow.

[Copyright, 1907, by T. C. McClure.]

Deacon Dolby was digging potatoes in the garden the other afternoon and stopping occasionally to throw a stone or a clod of earth at a hog that was hunting for a hole in the fence to get in when Mrs. Dolby called to him from the back steps:

"Samuel! I have got to run over to Mrs. Gay's for a few minutes to see why she hasn't brought my nutmeg grater back. I shall want it in making a custard pie for supper. Mrs. Gay is one of the best women in the world, but she never thinks of returning anything she borrows."

Deacon Dolby looked up and nodded his head, and his wife departed on her errand and was absent half an hour. When she returned she came out to where he was still bringing the potatoes out of the ground, and without saying a word she kneeled over in the dirt and rolled up her eyes and indulged in three or four convulsive kicks. The deacon didn't seem in the least surprised. He stooped and lifted her one side and dug three more hills of potatoes. Then, as she had not recovered consciousness, he picked her up in his arms and carried her into the house and laid her down on the lounge. He didn't bring out the camphor bottle nor throw water in her face. On the contrary, he sat down at the stand not far away and picked up the family album and began to look through it. A long minute elapsed, and then Mrs. Dolby struggled to a sitting position and asked:

"Samuel, am I in heaven?"

She wasn't. The deacon knew she wasn't. He could have bet ten to one and felt perfectly safe. He made no reply, however. She would find that she was still on earth without any help from him. She did discover the fact, and after looking around she wailed out:

"No, I haven't died and gone to heaven and left all my troubles behind, as I thought I had. I am still doomed to suffer here below. Mebbe however, there will be a thunderstorm and kill me off before night, and so I want to talk to you a little. You wouldn't want me to die without saying anything, would you?"

YOU JUMPED UP AND BEGAN KICKING THE COW.

Mr. Dolby didn't answer the question. He was looking at an old picture of his grandfather and counting the horn buttons on his coat.

"I told you that I was going over to Mrs. Gay's," continued Mrs. Dolby as she stretched out in a more comfortable position, and I went. I had asked her for the nutmeg grater, and we had talked about the high price of eggs, when I suddenly observed tears in her eyes. I thought mebbe her sister in Ohio was dead, but when I asked her about it she put her arms around me and asked:

"'Mrs. Dolby, can you bear to hear some awful, terrible news?'

"I told her that I could. I have been hearing awful, terrible news for the last thirty years and have got used to it. Then she went on to tell me. She hadn't meant to say a word, but her conscience wouldn't let her keep things to herself any longer. Are you listening to me, Samuel?"

Samuel was. He even had a bit of curiosity to know what was coming, but he turned to the photograph of his grandmother and uttered no word.

Samuel and the Gate.

"A month ago, Samuel, the gate fell down, and you had to take out one of the posts and put in a new one. That was the day I was over to Mrs. Johnson's quilting bee. Mrs. Gay didn't go. She was preserving some pears and couldn't leave 'em. She wanted more sugar and was going down to the store to get some, when, just as she was passing you, you stepped backward into the post hole and went down clear to your hip. You got a jar and broke both suspenders. You didn't know that there was anybody within forty rods of you, and you let out. Poor Mrs. Gay couldn't remember the half you said, but the other half was enough. I came home with my blood like ice. When I looked at you and thought of you saying them words I just fainted dead away."

Mr. Dolby was still looking at that photograph. He started to smile grimly, but checked it. He remembered the incident, and he thought it a mean trick on the part of Mrs. Gay to give him away. He had thought himself all alone, and when he went into that hole backward and busted things and sprained his back he just naturally shouted out, the same as Judge Landis or Elihu Root would have done. Mrs. Gay should have realized the provocation and kept the affair to herself.

"Samuel, I don't want to weep, because I know men folks don't like tears, but I have to," continued Mrs. Dolby as she proceeded to weep and let the tears fall where they would. "I leave you setting a new gutepost and singing a hymn. If fifty different people had told me that you were a pirate, I couldn't have believed it. Within half an hour you were hitting the fence with the spade and using such language that Mrs. Gay thinks it curdled her pear preserves and that she will have to throw them all out. Can you blame me for fainting away? Can you blame me for wanting to expire? Can you wonder that my spirit longs to sail far away where post holes and pirates are not?"

The deacon didn't blame her one bit, but as he had now reached the photograph of his Uncle Jim, who always claimed to be the original discoverer of the Atlantic ocean, he wanted to keep quiet and do a lot of thinking.

"If that was all, Samuel," said Mrs. Dolby after a sobbing silence of three minutes, "I shouldn't feel so like dying. I would lay it to your absent-mindedness. I would think that you temporarily mistook yourself for Captain Kidd and that the words fell unconsciously from your lips, but that couldn't have been the case. Three days after that, as I well remember, Mr. Brownfield came over and asked you to go back with him and see what ailed his cow. He thought she was coming down with the holler horn. You are not saying a word, Samuel, but I know you remember all about it. Can't you get me the kitchen towel to wipe my eyes on?"

The deacon never moved. He had struck an attitude, and he thought it safest to maintain it. Besides, he was now looking at the photograph of an aunt of his who was the first woman in America to discover that heavy bread and sour buttermilk added years to the life of a tramp.

Kicked by a Cow.

"You went over and saw the cow. You were examining her horns when she threw her head around and knocked the breath all out of you. Mr. Brownfield was scared almost to death. As he stood there, looking at you, you jumped up and began kicking the cow. He counted the kicks, and there were just twenty-six of them. You called her seventeen different names. You swore forty-two times and was still at it when Mr. Brownfield laid his hand on your arm and told you to recollect who you were and what you owed to society. You grabbed him and ran him against the barn, and if Mrs. Brownfield hadn't come out and screamed I don't know how you would have ended up. Think of it, Samuel—think of it!"

Samuel thought of it, and the more he thought the more he wished he had knocked the cow's horns off. He didn't say so, however. He was in one of his silent moods. Mrs. Dolby was permitted to weep for the next five minutes and wipe her eyes on the skirt of her dress, and it was almost a relief to hear her finally say:

"Well, Samuel, you can go out to your taters, and I will lie here and die. You'll find me dead when you come into supper, but don't let it bother you. You can get yourself some bread and milk, and if you want tea you'll find the teakettle boiling. Farewell, dear. I can no longer live with a pirate. My place is with the angels."

Mr. Dolby went out and resumed his digging, but he hadn't unearthed more than a bushel of the white tubers when Mrs. Dolby appeared. She had dried her eyes, slicked down her hair and was even smiling as she observed:

"Samuel, I think I want some more spice for those quince preserves, and I wish you'd think of it when you go down to the postoffice tonight."

M. QUAD.

The Main Thing.

Professor—Young man, what to your mind represents the greatest problem of the races?

Student (abstractedly)—To pick the winner.—Baltimore American.

Diabolicalness of Diabolic Diabolo.

The world, the flesh and the d—.

The Only Way.

My butcher sells me doctored veal,
My coal man sells me clinkered coal,
My grocer sells me moldered meal,
My baker stints the breakfast roll.

My vintner sells me weakened hoch,
With other tinctured chemic wines,
My broker sells me watered stock
And boosted shares in salted mines.

How can I make both ends to meet
When thus these rogues my wealth purloin
Unless I practice like deceit
And pay their claims with tainted coin?
—Arthur Guiterman in Judge.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the first sneeze—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for children—and thoroughly safe too. If you chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think Preventics. Promptness may also save half a usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day, Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 40 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, MD.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *2.12 a. m., *5.55 a. m., *10.29 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m. Arrive *5.55 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.55 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticultural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.
Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.
New Buildings with modern improvements.
Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.
Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.
Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.
Write for particulars.
Term commences September 19th, 1907.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
College Park Md.
22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others.' J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Okland, Md.

American Woman The Finest.

Otto J. Schwiezer, the young sculptor who created "The Ticker," a work that has caused a furore in Europe and America, is in America studying men and things.

"I think American women are incomparable," he said. "They are essentially artistic in form and color, and they are much further developed intellectually than the European women. Indeed, I thought so much of them I made one of them my wife, which is the sincerest proof of my appreciation."

Asked to give his views on international marriages, he said:

"I think I can account for the rush for foreign noblemen. In matrimony as well as finance the American men like to dominate. He wants his wife and daughters to enjoy things in his way. He is liberal, kindly intentioned, but domineering. He forgets that his home is not the market, and he drags his work into it, and serves it up to his family three times a day, or as often as he is at home. He is like a machine. All of his tenderness has been lost in his business. Whatever the foreigner may be, he never forgets the attentions due the woman he loves."

All the News Everything that happens in the home town; the births, marriages, deaths, the social affairs, the comings and goings of the people—your neighbors; the notes of the schools and churches; all these and many other new and interesting things this paper will give you All the Time

The Well-Dressed Woman.

The news comes from Paris that a leader of fashion says a woman cannot be well dressed in the gay French city for less than $30,000 a year. She must pay at least $600 for a dress for ordinary wear and $3000 for a "creation." Proper hats cannot be had for less than $250 each, and the dainty hosiery of my lady of fashion must run $5 to $50 a pair.

That story was probably only circulated in America, and with the intention to catch the American eye and gull the American trade. Because of our lavish use of money, Americans have come to be regarded by Europeans as wholly money-mined. They think we have set up the dollar mark as the arbiter of good taste, and judge only worth and elegance and art by what they cost in terms of gold. It is not true that the dollar mark is the symbol of value to all of us. We do not form our tastes upon the size of it. We do not think that riches mean elegance, or gaudiness beauty. Our American women do not need all the appliances nor appurtenances some of their Parisian sisters require to make them well dressed. The American woman has taste, grace, style and dignity, and she need only gown these with a simplicity as sweet as her own character to be always well dressed.—Washington Post.

Don't Preach About Home Trade and at the same time send your orders for job printing out of town. Your home printer can do your work just as good, and in nine cases out of ten he can beat the city man's prices, because he pays much less for running expenses. By sending your next printing order to this office you'll be better satisfied all around, and you'll be keeping the money at home.

STRINGS TIGHTENING

SOME SIGNS OF MORE STRINGENT MONEY CONDITIONS.

That Result Would Seem to Be the Logical Consequence of Unsettling Business Confidence by Premature Tariff Agitation and an Unwise Foreign Trade Policy.

Not long ago the Des Moines Capital, a Republican newspaper, reviewing the tariff ripping action of the National Association of Manufacturers, remarked:

"If there is to be tariff ripping, you had better tie the string a little tighter around your pocketbook."

Has the tightening process already begun? There are many men eminent in circles of industry, commerce and finance who think they see signs of tighter conditions. Why do they think this? Reasons are not wanting.

First among these reasons for thinking that a period of tightened pocketbooks is at hand is the growing tendency to disturb sound business conditions. For more than three years past this tendency has taken the form of agitation for tariff revision.

To agitate for tariff revision is no new thing in the country's history. The party that was out has always agitated for the revision of the tariff made by the party that was in. But it is a new thing in American politics for the party that is in to wholly discredit and completely undermine a tariff of its own making. Yet this is what has actually happened.

Tariff revision talk has become so fashionable in the Republican party that those who deprecate tariff disturbance as bad for business, bad for labor, and bad for prosperity, are censured as obstructionists, enemies of progress, worshipers of a fetich, standpatters. Yet these men have only stood for stability of business conditions and for a postponement of tariff agitation until revision should be plainly required in the general interest.

Nevertheless, the rage for tariff disturbance has gone on and on, encouraged by ambitious politicians, and helped along by newspapers which find it easier to recklessly criticise than to judiciously commend, until at last an influential body of American producers, manipulated by free traders and selfish interests bent upon expanding their own foreign trade at the expense of other lines of domestic industry, has put itself on record as favoring tariff revision "at the earliest practical moment," and in the meantime the installment of a general system of reciprocity in competing products.

Is there not in all this enough to tighten money strings?

Then, to crown all, came governmental interference in favor of tariff instability in the form of a commercial arrangement whereby foreign producers are by means of openly recognized undervaluation privileges permitted to escape the full payment of the tariff duties prescribed by law.

Just how far this extraordinary straining of executive authority for the benefit of foreign competitors is going to go in the direction of unsettling and demoralizing domestic industrial conditions no man can with certainty predict. The new arrangement went into effect July 1, 1907, and some time will be required in which to demonstrate its workings. Detrimental consequences are confidently predicted by wise, experienced and conservative men, and a feeling of alarm is already manifesting itself among many lines of domestic production.

It is believed that in giving to competing producers in the lower wage countries the right to undervalue their goods exported to this country the tariff has already been revised downward by diplomatic dicker and executive sanction.

It is believed that a dangerous precedent has been established when tariff schedules can be by indirection altered without the knowledge, consent or approval of congress, and without consulting the domestic interests certain to be affected.

Is there not enough in this to tighten money strings?

First, a persistent determination to create business instability through tariff revision downward.

Second, the actual revision of the tariff downward through the German agreement, which is to be followed by similar agreements with other countries.

Taken together there would seem to be enough in these two conditions to account for the tightening of money strings.

The Results.

"Under the leadership of that great statesman and patriot, Richard Cobden, himself a cotton spinner, the English manufacturers earnestly supported the demand for free trade. In a house of commons elected to maintain protection and under the ministry of a former ardent protectionist, Sir Robert Peel, the whole system was swept away, corn laws, navigation laws, and all. The results need not be described."—Philadelphia Record.

The results are too well known to require description. British manufacturers are being undersold in the British market, the United Kingdom has become a dumping ground for the cheaper wares of competitive countries, British workmen in vast numbers are out of employment, and the British pauper percentage is the highest of any civilized nation. These are the results of displacing protection and installing free trade.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice President
J. O. GETTY, - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber. R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot [illegible] feet with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also TWO LIVING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best new Building in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres, about [illegible] cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about [illegible] acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or [illegible] down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sin[illegible] Real Estate Agt and Surveyor [illegible], OAKLAND, Md.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, FEBRAURY 13, 1908.

THE REPUBLICAN, after paying running expenses of the office, paper bills, etc., and providing for the necessities of the home, does not have very many dollars left in bank, but we will manage to scrape together twenty-five mazumas (slang expression for dollars, and this explanation of the term is made for the exclusive benefit of the Journal), which we will give the Journal editor for convincing proof that we have ever been a candidate for the office of House of Delegates or any other county office. Come, Mr. Journal, here's a chance to get a little money on the side, and if we read the Journal article aright last Thursday in respect to our candidacy, it will be "easy" money. As a side remark we believe that if at any time within the past dozen or so years our inclination had been toward a seat in the Legislature we could have marshalled enough friends throughout Garrett county to have not only given us the nomination but also the election.

DISFRANCHISEMENT.

The Washington Herald commenting upon the efforts of Maryland and Oklahoma to disfranchise the negro voters by constitutional amendment says:

"Two states have now under consideration legislation for the disfranchisement of negro voters—Maryland and Oklahoma. In both of these Commonwealths the whites for outnumber the blacks—in Oklahoma the population being ten to one and in Maryland five to one; so that in neither state is there any danger of negro domination, the possibility which has been held to justify the disfranchisement legislation of the South. The negro has, in fact, voted for many years in Maryland without challenging white supremacy, save in a few counties where the blacks are more numerous than the whites. Thus the necessity for disfranchisement felt by Southerners generally has not strongly impressed the people of this state, and two years ago a constitutional amendment for the suppression of the negro vote was overwhelmingly defeated.

"Under these circumstances the problem of disfranchisement has this year been approached with extreme caution by the Maryland Democracy. The Baltimore Sun, the leading party organ, is conspicuously lukewarm on the subject, and the Baltimore News, an independent paper frankly confesses that "no intrinsic and unavoidable necessity exists" for a suffrage amendment. It asserts that the negro vote has not been an injurious factor in the state or municipal government or in Federal elections, but would not object to a reasonable disfranchisement measure—one that allowed a considerable number of the better class of negroes to vote if it could be counted on to put a stop to the ceaseles agitation of the race question. Having regard to the rather uncertain state of public sentiment in the disfranchisement proposition, the Democratic leaders have evoluted a constitutional amendment establishing new suffrage qualifications which in their judgment will meet the objections that led to the defeat of the former measure.

"The proposed amendment contains some novel features. Native-born whites are granted the suffrage by inheritance by the familiar grandfather clause. But as there is a large foreign population in Maryland, it has been found politically expedient to confer on foreign-born citizens or their descendants the right to vote on the same terms as the natives thus creating two classes of citizens entitled to the suffrage by inheritance. No time limit is fixed to the operation of the heredity clauses, as in the case of the grandfather clauses of other states, so that the Maryland Democracy proposes to established for the first time in American history, a perpetually hereditary electorate. A wide difference of opinion has developed concerning the propriety and constitutionality of this proposition, but its advocates insist that it will strengthen the amendment at the polls, even if it should prove to weaken it from a constitutinnal standpoint. Negro voters are required to have either a property or an educational qualification, neither of which is onerous. Curiously enough, it is provided that a negro may vote if his wife owns property, though he may have none himself. If approved by the people, the disfranchisement amendment will be brought before the bar of the United States Supreme Court, where Republican leaders feel confident it will be annulled, as do also the more timorous of the Democrats.

"Oklahoma's disfranchisement law, while containing a grandfather clause, seeks to exclude negro voters by requiring a satisfactory construction of some provision of the Oklahoma or Federal Constitution. This test is to be applied, not at the time of registration, but at the polls, and may apparently be required of any voter, so that it places in the hands of partisan election boards a powerful weapon of fraud and corruption. Besides this law the Maryland amendment is conspicuously fair and just, for under the latter the voter's right to deposit his ballot is unchallenged if he possesses the proper qualifications. In Oklahoma, on the other hand, it would be impossible for any voter to give a construction of the constitution satisfactory to an election board bent on excluding his ballot."

THE Bumper never jarred us. How d'ye like that for an inelegant expression, Mr. Journal?

MYSTIFIED SPELLING.

Only a short time ago the Simplified Spelling Board was reported to have decided that it would remodel the English language gradually, so that none save the most tightly stuck-in-the-rut would resist the gentle, even pressure of phonetic reform. But, alas! the board now apperrs to be going the way of other revolutionists who find a large, unwilling public thwarting their ideals; it is chafing under the restraint of popular opinions, and, consumed with the desire to see great strides taken toward perfect orthography, resorts to bomb throwing and terrorism generally. Its second list of revised words has just appeared, and among the seventy-five novelties which it hurls at the head of the innocent public there are several infernal machines expressly calculated to blast out a deep chasm between English literature and English dictionaries. The chief purpose of phonetic spelling being to assist the feeble minded and the ignorant, we should like to regard the movement as a charitable one, kindred to the war against the sweating system, and as such beyond the reach of criticism, according to literary canons. Nevertheless, here, as in other notable instances, gross cruelties are committed in the name of mercy.

"Ake," which displaces "ache," is truly painful, as perhaps an ache should be. It reduces Dr. Aked to a past participle, thus doing grave injustice to the distinguished pastor and his native tongue at one blow. The simplifiers divide New York City into "boros" which are decidedly unphonetic boroughs; but who could expect that simplified spelling would be absolutely consistent in its strivings toward ideal phoneticisms? Is not the most highly simplified style of spelling that which is complicated and restrained by no rules? We should like to know who "egd" the board on to transform an egg into an "eg." Doubtless an "eg" with only one "g" will smell as sweet, ceteris paribus, but as a biliteral it seems to have lost one of its three component parts, yolk, white or shell. Many persons may approve heartily of the change from "debt" to "det": for in these hard times it is a kindly act on the part of a richly endowed board to reduce the debt of all English spelling people. This benevolent deed, it is probably hoped, will soon make English the universal language and rob "foren" of all meaning. Until that day comes, however, "foren" will remain a happy substitute for "foreign," expressing in its alien spelling the meaning of the word.

The rude shock caused by the displacement of "limb" by "lim," "numb" by "num" and "tongue" by "tung" is partly absorbed by the thought that in changing "ghost" to "gost" the board has robbed spooks of all their terror. A "gost" is no more awesome than a gosling. Thus does reason triumph over superstition. As we contemplate the seventy-five revision in conjunction with the announcement that twenty thousand (and) odd writers of English have sworn fealty to the board's mystified spelling fear and horror are diluted with curious speculations over the possibility of witnessing in the near future a confusion of pens more disastrous than the mythical confusion of tongues.

WE DO not understand why our reference to the application of Mr. James D. Hamill, of the Journal, for appointment as a member of the School Board for Garrett county, stirred up such a hornet's nest, unless it be that gentleman's past record as a member of the Board. He was a brilliant public servant. Under his administration schools in the county enjoyed a term extending over seventeen days, which is truly a record to be proud of, isn't it? He is proud of it, we know, so he need not 'fess up, unless his spirits are so exuberent that he positively has to. Then he had expended, as a public official, a great amount of money for a system of heating and ventilation in the public school building in Oakland. The stacks for the heaters required a large per centage of the space within the building which could have been utilized to better advantage by providing seats the scholars, but it wasn't needed that year, was it, when he gave the children seventeen days' schooling. The heater and ventilator was a farce from the start, was it not? It failed to do the work for which it was intended, anyway, and was torn out at great expense and another system installed. These things, we presume, are tender memories in the great ex-School Commissioner's mind and he does not like to be disturbed in contemplating them or having any reference made to his record as a past, or future member of the School Board. Requisat in pace!

"BRAINSTORMS," said a resident of Oakland the other day, as he completed reading the screed published in the Journal concerning the editor of THE REPUBLICAN, "never proved an assertion to be a fact. The Journal evidently was laboring under one when it attempted to create the impression that THE REPUBLICAN editor was ever a candidate for a public office. So far as the Oakland postoffice appointment was concerned I believe that Sincell can live without it; nor did he seem greatly disappointed when his friend Peddicord secured the plum." The gentlemen using the above language expressed our sentiments exactly, so if the Journal can get any satisfaction from the thought that we are greatly put out along the post office line it is welcome to it.

Let Us Abolish the Saloon in Garrett.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Three articles in THE REPUBLICAN of last week deserve more than passing notice, and should cause the people of our county and especially the people of Oakland, serious thought, and it seems to me should cause every man with iron in his blood to act and act promptly.

The editorial "Father Foley Hits the Nail," giving a quotation from Father Foley's address and your comment thereon ending with the vital question referring to the saloons you ask, "But if they are set against the home, the church, the school, true manhood and womanhood, the salvation of souls and all that is purest and best in life and death, which must go, these or the saloons?" This, Mr. Editor, is a vital question. Men of Garrett what shall the answer be? WE CAN ABOLISH THE SALOONS FROM OUR COUNTY. IS THERE ANY GOOD REASON WHY WE SHOULD NOT DO IT?

The second article is in reference to Delegate Green's bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in District No. 5. Again, Mr. Editor, you strike the keynote when you ask, "if liquor is bad for District No. 5, it is not bad for the rest of the districts so why not make it (the bill) general?"

There is no reason as far as the good, the prosperity, the peace and the happiness of the people of our couuty are concerned. Your question is to the point. Men of Garrett, we can overthrow this great evil which is in opposition to everything that is good in man, that is blighting so many of the homes in our county and destroying so many of our citizens, both body and soul. We CAN rid our county of this terrible evil, let us do it.

The third article, Mr. Editor, has the headlines "Arrested for Stealing," and we are told of three young men going to your town, the county seat of our county, and while under the influence of "booze" they committed theft and are now in jail on that account.

Men of Oakland, ye who know the evil being caused by the demon intemperance, listen: It is not necessary to tell you of your duty in regard to this traffic, but we ask you, who is responsible for the saloons in Oakland? Who is morally responsible for furnishing these young men the drink? Some of the districts outside of Oakland have no saloons We are trying to protect our homes from this evil and yet too often when many of our boys go to Oakland they get the stuff which is ruining so many of the boys and girls of our county. Men of Oakland, do you not think it time to wipe the saloons out of your town? The traffic you are permitting in your beautiful town has caused some men to lose their lives, some of our boys have gone to Oakland sober and come from there drunk, to blight our homes and sadden our hearts. Men have gone to your town law abiding citizens and have come back under the influence of liquor obtained in your town which made them law breakers.

In the name of young manhood and young womanhood of our county, in the name of the mothers whose hearts are being broken by the business you are permitting to exist in your town, in the name of God and the best interests of church and state, men of Oakland as you go to the beautiful temples you have erected to the worship of the Living God and as you pray "Thy Kingdom Come," will you not for the sake of your own children and for the sake of your neighbor's children and for the sake of God and suffering humanity, arise in the power of Christian manhood and do your duty by abolishing the saloons from your midst? You have a remedy. Will you not use it?

If you cannot vote it out of Oakland the voters of our county will help you. The time for action is here. With the great Lincoln let us pray "God help us to do the right as we see the right."

Very truly,

A. F. GEORGE.

Swanton, Feb. 10, 1908.

Sales Advertised.

Messrs. Julius C. Renninger and William R. Offutt, trustees, advertise in this paper today the sale of a valuable piece of real estate located in Election District No. 8 of this county. The sale will occur on Monday, March 9th.

Mr. E. A. Weimer, late treasurer of Garrett county, advertises the sale of a number of pieces of real estate for taxes due and in arrear. Sale to occur in front of the court house in Oakland on Friday, March 6th.

DEATH KNELL OF THE SUFFRAGE PLAN

It Was Sounded by The Democratic Caucus.

APPEAL TO U. S. SUPREME COURT

Retention of The Property Qualification Clause Will Surely Bring Defeat to The Proposition. Many of Democrats Convinced That It Is Discrimination.

The Democratic caucus on Thursday night at Annapolis practically sounded the death knell of the disfranchising amendment to the Constitution by restoring the property qualification clause. The unanimous action of the caucus in upholding the proposition means that the Democrats, who have the required constitutional majority in the two houses, will rush the proposition through. It will be signed by the Governor and will be voted for in 1909.

Democratic leaders privately admit that the property qualification clause means the downfall of the whole scheme. Despite a campaign of education, which the Democratic leaders say they will institute at once, the poor classes of the Democrats cannot and will not be convinced that the whole amendment is a blow against them and is intended to discriminate against them and in favor of the rich man.

And the idea that the husband of a woman owning $500 should be allowed to vote though not worth a cent himself! The suggestion is preposterous.

Thousands of Democratic voters cannot be convinced that they can register under the grandfather's clause, under the naturalization and educational clause. They will not understand, or refuse to understand, the meaning of alternatives. That property qualification will stare them in the face and will blind them to every other qualification.

Just as sure death comes to all and taxes are imposed upon real estate owners, the amendment will be carried to the United States Supreme Court if it is approved at the election next year. Maryland Republicans will not sit supinely by and have rights of voters taken away without a resort to the Supreme Court to test those rights. And if the Maryland amendment is upset all the disfranchising constitutions of Southern states will come tumbling after. It is interesting to note the attitude of the Supreme Court on this disfranchising question.

The validity of the constitutions of the Southern states containing the "grandfather's clause" and other features drafted with a view to eliminating the colored vote has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court. In the cases which have reached the court jurisdiction has been denied. The most important ruling was that by Associate Justice Holmes in the Alabama case. In this case a colored man was denied registration. The relief sought was denied on the ground that the case was political.

The court as a whole did not pass on the question of jurisdiction. Justice Harlan claimed that the court should have declined to assume jurisdiction. Justices Brewer and Brown held that a federal question was involved in that the man denied registration was deprived of the right to vote for a candidate for Congress.

If the Supreme Court holds to the opinion that the Alabama case was entirely political and not within the scope of the court's consideration, then, of course, all future attempts to bring the Southern contsitutions to the attention of the court will have to be abandoned.

The suffrage clause of the constitution of Mississippi was before the United States Supreme Court in the case of Williams vs. State of Mississippi (170 U. S. 213). The decision of the court has been considered as an affirmation of the validity of the clause. In opposition to that contention, Mr. Lowe, of the American Negro Academy, has expressed the belief that the case only brought up the question of disfranchisement collaterally, without proper allegations or sufficient proof.

It is contended that the Fifteenth Amendment did not confer the right of suffrage upon anyone. It prevented the state and the United States from giving preference in this particular to one citizen of the United States over another on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. Before its adoption this could be done. It was formerly as much within the power of a state to exclude a citizen of the United States on account of race as it was on account of age, property or education; now it was not. If citizens of one race having certain qualifications were permitted by law to vote, those of another having the same qualifications also must be. Previous to this amendment there was no constitutional guarantee against this discrimination; had invested citizens of the United States with a new constitutional right which was within the protecting powers of Congress—that of exemption from discrimination in the exercise of the elective franchise.

The right to vote in a state came from the state, but the prohibitive discrimination came from the United States, it is argued. The first had not been secured by the Constitution, but the last had. The constitutional provisions as to the specific qualifications of suffrage, it is held, are valid and in no wise forbidden by the Constitution or federal laws.

Surprise has been expressed that the Maryland Election Law passed duriug the extra session has never found its way in entirety to the Supreme Court. The reasons for lack of action lie in the desire expressed by the Republican members who so valiantly fought against the passage of the law, and who in a protest signed at the close of the session said:

"This is a fight to the finish before the people of Maryland for manhood and manhood suffrage. We believe the people can meet the issue and wisely solve it without aid from any outside source, and are, therefore, opposed to any federal interference.

"Although the disfranchisement of citizens is in violation of the Constitution of our state, and comes within the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, we favor leaving the entire question to the people of Maryland, and pledge our efforts to that end."

As a matter of record it may be stated that the State Court of Appeals has never passed upon the validity of the Election Law, a fact dwelt upon by Attorney General Bryan in the campaign when he was the Democratic candidate for the position which he occupied.

The registration features of the act haye been contested before the United States Supreme Court and the state court, and in each case have been upheld.

The Wilson law would seem to offer a greater opportunity because of its direct imposition of an education qualification on the voters than the election law enacted during the recent session of the legislature.

Surscribe for The Republican.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,

E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 150 acres. 75 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey R. F. D. No. 1.

Subscribe for the Republican.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE P. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

Confidence

when eating, that your food is of highest wholesomeness—that it has nothing in it that can injure or distress you—makes the repast doubly comfortable and satisfactory. This supreme confidence you have when the food is raised with

ROYAL
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

The only baking powder made with Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

There can be no comforting confidence when eating alum baking powder food. Chemists say that more or less of the alum powder in unchanged alum or alum salts remains in the food.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Garrett, of Deer Park, were in Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. George D. Browning, of Swallow Falls, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday afternoon.

Messrs. William Miller, F. C. Ries and ex-Senator R. T. Browning, who spent a day or two at Annapolis, returned to Oakland last Saturday.

Mr. H. B. Harvey, recently of near Deer Park, but now located at Glady, West Va., was in the city Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Elwood Offutt entertained a number of their friends at their residence near Oakland last night.

Col. George A. Pearre, of Cumberland, was in Oakland a day or two last week where he appeared as counsel for one of the parties in an equity case being heard before Court Examiner W. R. Offutt.

Farm for Sale—I offer my firm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. T. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13t

"Health Coffee" is really the closest thing to imitation ever yet produced. It is the finest Coffee Substitute ever produced has recently been produced by Postum of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

Why is it, a careless seven year old kid can drop a half burned match in an alley and burn up all the barns in a block, while an able bodied man has to use up a whole box of matches to get a wood fire started into a heater that has draft enough to draw all the furniture up the stove pipe?

Some newspaper men are terrible liars. In writing of a cyclone out west one of them said it turned a well inside out, a cellar upside down, moved a township line, blew the staves out of a whiskey barrel and left nothing but a bung hole, changed the day of the week, blew a mortgage off a farm, blew all the cracks out of a fence and knocked the wind out of a politician.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

An exchange tells of a newspaper reporter who interviewed thirty successful business men and found that all of them when boys had been governed strictly and frequently thrashed. He also interviewed thirty loafers and learned that twenty-seven of them had been "mamma's darling," and the other three had been reared by their grandmothers.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 THE SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

THE DEATH RECORD.

WILLIAM EDMONDS.

At his home near Deer Park on Sunday, the 9th inst., of general senility, William Edmonds, aged nearly eighty years. The deceased was buried Tuesday in the Deer Park cemetery.

AARON PRITTS.

Died, at his home on Meadow Mountain, Tuesday, February 4th, after an illness of many months, Aaron Pritts, aged 61 years, 6 months and 8 days. The deceased leaves to mourn the loss of a dear father and loving husband a wife, eleven children, one sister and one brother, who have the assuranee that they can meet with him in that realm above. During his protracted illness he received every care and attention that a loving wife could bestow. His remains were interred in the O'Brien cemetery, the services being conducted by Rev. C. W. Hudson of the Baptist church.

MRS. HANNAH ABERNATHY.

Died, at the home of her son, Rev. Isaac W. Abernathy, near Wilson, on Tuesday, February 4th, after a prolonged illness, Mrs. Hannah Abernathy, widow of the late James Abernathy, aged eighty-four years, eleven months and fourteen days. The deceased was a consistent and life-long member of the German Baptist church, highly esteemed for her many Christian traits of character and dearly beloved by all who were acquainted with her. Her funeral took place on Thursday last from Fairview church, the services being conducted by Rev. Jonas Fike. The interment was made in the cemetery nearby.

JOHN KITZMILLER.

John Kitzmiller was born near Elk Garden, West Va., on April 27th, 1827, and died at his home near Hoyes, this county, February 8th, 1908, aged eighty years, nine months and twenty-seven day. His body was laid to rest in a small cemetery on his farm on Monday of this week. He leaves two aged brothers and two sons, John and George, both successful farmers located near Kalona, Iowa. His son John being notified of the death of his father, arrived at his home near Hoyes on Sunday and arranged for the funeral. A brother of the deceased came from near Elk Garden to be with the other mourning friends and relatives. While the deceased had his faults yet he had many good traits. He was a kind, obliging neighbor, was industrious and kept his stock and other property in excellent shape. Mr. Kitzmiller was living alone at his home and Mr. Ralph Brenneman, one of his nearest neighbors, bearing him a telephone message conveying the news of the death of his brother, Isaac Kitzmiller, who died on Thursday at his home near Elk Garden, found him prostrate on the floor of his kitchen and in an unconscious condition, in which state he remained until the end came. The surroundings indicated that he had been prostrate for at least thirty hours. The burial services were conducted by the writer.

GEORGE E. BISHOFF.

WILLIAM W. HARVEY.

On Monday, Feb. 3, Mr. Wm. W. Harvey met instant death at Elk Garden. An engine was pushing some empties up the track to the new mine, No. 10. Mr. Harvey was walking on the track toward the mine, and the blinding wind and cold confused him it is supposed, and he was struck by a car, knocked down and five cars and the tender passed over him.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. church, South, Wednesday afternoon. The weather was very inclement but every available place, both sitting and standing room, was taken up. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Geo. W. Yost, who was intimately acquainted with the deceased and referred to him in tender words, saying that he was a good husband, an affection father, a true friend, and a Christian gentleman. Revs. McGuire and J. F. F. Gray assisted in the service with words of comfort and sympathy. About one hundred members of the I. O. O. F., and Red Men attended the service of their brother conducting a part of the lodge service in the church. The floral offerings consisted of a wreath from the family, pillow with white dove from the Red Men.

Mr. Harvey was member of the council at the time of his death and has served in that capacity a number of times. His age is 46 years, 1 month, 27 days. He leaves a wife and four children. A sister, Mrs. Harrison Buckhannon lives at Bloomington, Md. His brothers are Gibson, in Pennsylvania; Augustus, at Barnum, this county; Soloman, at Chaffee, Joseph, in Garrett Co., Md. Mr. F. C. Rollman had charge of the funeral.—Piedmont Herald.

Engine Turned Over.

Last Friday evening Dr. Wilson, of Piedmont and Dr. Kemp of Bloomington, were called to Bond, to see a man who had his leg broken. On their return and while enroute home the engine jumped the track and turned over on its side. There were six persons on the engine when it turned over, including the two physicians mentioned above, and strange to say there was not one of them hurt.

Subscribe for The Republican.

HE IS A PIONEER OF WESTERN MARYLAND.

Some Interesting Things Connected With The Life of Rev. John M. Davis.

Upon the retirement of Rev. John M. Davis as superintendent for forty-one years of the M. E. Sunday school in Oakland, THE REPUBLICAN gave a general outline of the work done by Rev. Davis in his capacity as superintendent and his connection with the church. The following interview with Mr. Davis appeared in the Cumberland Times of Monday and is reproduced in these columns for the benefit of our readers:

"I think of this beautiful glade country in which we live as it was forty-six years ago, when I, with my wife, took up our abode on the "Promised Land" farm, near Oakland. Then this entire region was grazing ground for cattle, the native grass was abundant, flowers of almost endless variety and delicate hue attracted the eye.

"During the summer season, herds of cattle could be seen in every direction, attracted by the facilities for grazing on the native grass, and being a dealer in cattle I was led to purchase land and secure a home on this mountain top. During the summer of 1859 I herded 600 head of cattle on what is known as the Herrington Creek Glade. At that time from 1,000 to 2,000 cattle were annually pastured within the radius of ten miles; deer were numerous, speckled trout could be caught in almost any of the streams. Farmers were few, and it was thought to be useless to try to raise wheat or corn. Oakland was a very small village, having two stores and a depot.

"Of the many changes that have occurred during the past half a century is noticed in the value of things and the cost of labor. For instance, a good laboring man could be secured to work on the farm for about $7.00 per month; harvest hands, fifty cents per day; a girl would spin wool into yarn at fifty or seventy-five cents a week. The same low prices obtained in the price of stock. A cow could be bought for $8 or $10; sheep from $1.25 to $1.50 per head; horses from $35 to $50; wheat and corn, fifty cents per bushel; oats, eighteen to twenty cents.

"The modern conveniences were unknown. For instances—matches were not manufactured, and fire was obtained by the use of flint and punk, or by hooting powder into a bunch of tow, or by going to a neighbor's house and carrying a chunk of fire to the home. The writing was done with a pen made from a goose quill. Envelopes were unknown; a sheet of paper was folded and sealed with wax, making the letter ready for the mail, the postage on each letter being three cents. Sand was used to dry the ink instead of a blotter. Tallow candles supplied light for the home and church. Brooms were made from young grown hickory and known as split brooms. I made four of these brooms when a boy and exchanged them for a twenty-five cent pocket-knife. The introduction of cooking stoves was perhaps during the year between 1840 and 1845. Prior to this, our mothers cooked in an open fireplace. Grain was threshed or pounded out with a flail, threshing machines being unknown.

"Now the question will arise, how did the people live? In some respects better than they do now. The cost of living was not so great. People ate plain food, were very sociable, neighbors assisted each other in clearing their lands, building their houses and harvesting their crops. They really enjoyed life. While not possessed of the many luxuries that are to be had at the present time, they had plenty of wholesome food, and consequently very little trouble with indigestion and insomnia, about which we hear so much now. People retired early and slept well.

"From 1840 to 1850 there was a steady increase in values, and general prosperity. In 1857 there was a money panic which caused a lull in business, and a decrease in values. In 1852 the B. & O. railroad was completed. Prior to that time the National road was the only thoroughfare for Western Maryland and Pennsylvania.

"The Glades Hotel, owned by Mr. John Daily, was very popular and for many years crowded with guests during the summer season. The patrons of this hotel came from the East, West, North and South. Among the noted visitors were Jefferson Davis and wife. Mr. Daily was successful in the management of a hotel. In speaking with him on this subject I asked him the secret of running a hotel successfully. He said in reply: 'Give people something good to eat and plenty of it.'

"Mr. D. E. Offutt antidated me in a business way in Oakland for years. Mr. Offutt is still active in a business sense, although having been in business for half a century.

"Referring to a few other of the early settlers we may name Messrs. Burton and White, who built the old Glades Hotel; Judge John Armstrong, the surveyor; the late S. L. Townshend, with whom I was associated in business for more than twenty years, will be kindly remembered by a host of friends in Allegany and Garrett counties. Also the late Ralph Thayer, who when a small boy journeyed with his father from Massachusetts, hauled their goods with an ox team and located on the Spiker farm south of Oakland. Mr. Thayer remained in what is now Garrett county and always took an active part in public matters."

Mr. Davis early in life made the following piece of good advice a rule to follow, which no doubt accounts for his splendid life:

"He who every morning plans the transactions of the day, and follows out that plan, carries on a thread that will guide him through the labyrinths of the most busy life."

Mr. Horace Y. Evans, rural mail carrier between Frostburg and Grantsville, deserves great credit for the manner in which he performed his duties Monday morning. Mr. Evans with two assistants and a four-horse team left the burg about eight o'clock and in three hours was in Grantsville a distance of 14 miles. But ask him about zero, blizzard, snowdrifts and lost trails.—Cumberland Times.

Mr. W. J. Kitzmiller, of Kalona, Iowa, who was called to this county owing to the death of his father, the late John Kitzmiller, of near Hoyes, was in Oakland yesterday in company with Messrs. William Callis, D. O. DeWitt, William A. Smith and William Mattingly, all of Hoyes and vicinity, who came to Oakland for the purpose of appearing in the Orphans' Court to prove the will of the deceased, under the provisions of which Messrs Kitzmiller and Callis became the executors. As such they give notice in this paper today to the creditors of the estate to file their claims. The party returned to Hoyes yesterday afternoon.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

Mr. Harry A. Rasche, freight and ticket agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Oakland, left here on last Friday morning for a trip to Los Angeles, Cal., in which city a convention of railroad agents is to assemble. From here Mr. Rasche went to Chicago over the B. & O. From Chicago the Santa Fe route will be taken to Los Angeles, and returning he will go over the Southern Pacific to New Orleans, from which city the Illinois Central will be taken to Chicago. He expects to be absent from Oakland about three weeks, during which time his place as agent here is being filled by his assistant, W. O. Davis.

Church Services.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching 10:30 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.
Preaching at Crellin Thursday, Feb. 20th at 7:30 p. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Deer Park at 11 a. m.; Loch Lynn at 3 p. m. and at Ferndale at 7:30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.; Sunday school at 2.15 p. m., and Epworth League at 6.30 p. m.
The revival meetings continue with increasing interest. Preaching each evening at 7.30 by the pastor.
All are cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

Temperance Lecture at Swanton.

A large congregation assembled in the Methodist Episcopal church in Swanton on last Thursday evening to hear Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord of Oakland, deliver his lecture on "The Saloon as a Business Proposition." Mr. Peddicord, however, was unable to be present on account of important legal business. We hope to have him in Swanton in the near future.

Addresses were made by Mr. Harry Cuppett, of Loch Lynn, Superintendent of the Garrett county Sunday School Association, Mr. W. W. Sweet and A. F. George. All of the addresses were attentively listened to.

The song service in charge of Prof. I. F. Groves assisted by his class and the Loch Lynn Male Quartette, was fine and greatly enjoyed by all. We hope to have the Quartette with us again as their good singing is much appreciated by our people. The Swanton class proved again that they are making good progress under the efficient teaching of Prof. Groves.

We were all disappointed in not having Mr. Peddicord but all that were in attendance were well repaid for coming out in the storm and we are certain that good was accomplished and the cause of temperance strengthened in Swanton District. We would like to have the question submitted to a vote of the people of our county.

REPORTER.

SHORT RUN.

Hello! Here we are from Short Run again, and I hope this will escape the waste basket.

Snow and sleigh riding is the go at present.

Mr. Milo Wilson and Miss Carrie Wilson are visiting relatives in West Virginia at this writing.

Miss Merl Fowler is visiting friends at Kitzmillerville.

Messrs Scott Harvey and Bert and Daniel Wilson were business callers in Oakland Wednesday.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Moore was buried in the Short Run cemetery Friday.

Mrs. A. E. Harvey has recently returned from a visit to North Glade.

Miss Helen Harvey, who has been on the sick list, for the past two weeks, is improving.

Mr. J. T. Harvey was in Cumberland last week on business.

Miss Jane Wilson is staying in Kitzmillerville at present.

Mr. Scott Harvey was visiting his brother Claud Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Junkins, of Keyser, are the guests of Mr. Jas. H. Wilson.

Girls, I want to inform you that we have just sixteen old bachelors living near here and all farmers, too. All are respectable gentlemen in business, but almost deadheads as ladies' men.

The Legislature is about to pass a law to allow nothing but safety matches to be used in this state, and let me say that, if any of we girls can make a match with any of them we will be perfectly safe in doing so.

I think it would just be fun to have a little tax put on all single men over thirty in this county, and the money spent in presents for the ladies, but perhaps I am saying to much. Now let me hear some others, and then we will corral our State Senator.

If any lady wants the discription and wishes to correspond with any of those gentlemen, address me.

MILDRED HOWEL,
Kitzmillerville, Md.

BETHLEHEM.

As I have not seen any items from Bethlehem I will try and pen a few.

Snow, frost, sunshine and hail is the order of the day here.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lish called on Mr. R. E. Paugh Sunday.

Measles are still progressing in this vicinity.

The occupation of the neighborhood is board riding.

Miss Grace Upole had a very severe attack of grip, but we are glad she is improving.

Mr. John Upole thinks he has the finest baby in town.

Miss Minnie Lipscomb returned home Saturday last from a visit to Mt. Lake Park.

Mr. William Harvey, we are glad to say, is able to fox hunt again.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. James Harvey is improving.

School is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Mamie Baldwin.

Mr. Allen Paugh and Mr. Columbus Paugh were the guests of Mr. R. E. Paugh Monday night.

PINKEY.

DEEP CREEK.

Fine skating and sleighing at present.

Our school is progressing nicely under the [illegible] management of Miss [illegible].

Mrs. Clarence Hardesty was the guest of Miss Nora Hardesty Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. I. F. Groves were visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. Hardesty Sunday.

[illegible] has been home on a visit from Swanton where she is attending school.

[illegible] made a business trip to [illegible] Monday.

Mr. [illegible] Hobbs' family is sick with [illegible] fever.

Miss [illegible] Bernard is sick at this writing and will not be able to attend school.

[illegible] will soon get better for we [illegible]

[illegible] blocked the road so [illegible] unable to make

[illegible], of this place, who [illegible] some time, went to [illegible] Brothers and Co. [illegible] much suc-

ROSE BUD.

[illegible] 1903.

[illegible] subscribers [illegible] from the [illegible] in Maryland [illegible] personal

[illegible] ll persons [illegible] the deceased [illegible] estate, with [illegible] authenticated [illegible] the 18th day [illegible] otherwise by law [illegible] sold estate. [illegible] indebted to [illegible] immediate

[illegible] 18th day of [illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible] LER,
Executors,
Hoyes, Md.

FASCINATION OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Holding The Habit Takes Hold of a Man When He Begins to Collect.

"The rich stamp collector as a rule is the very closest buyer," said a stamp dealer to a New York Sun reporter. "This phase of collecting, indeed, forms one of the chief delights of the rich collector.

"A millionaire collector of this city will roam about the greater part of a day in order to get a desired stamp at a bargain, and when he succeeds it gives him the greatest satisfaction. Apparently he feels amply compensated for all his trouble.

"But the hobby has its advantages, as it gives invaluable mental relaxation. When the man of business is occupied with his stamps all business problems and worries fly to the winds.

"Some time ago a very prominent lawyer in Chicago walked into the store of a stamp dealer of that city and said: 'I want to see some of your stamps.'

"The stamp dealer, who knew the lawyer and was aware that he was an extremely busy and hard worked man, replied: 'Why, you are joking—you don't want to buy stamps.'

"Yes I do,' said the lawyer. 'I have done too much work lately and have had something like a breakdown. My physician suggests that I take up some kind of collecting pursuit that will furnish a degree of mental rest, so I thought of stamps, and the physician thinks that collecting them will answer the purpose nicely.'

"The collecting of stamps possesses a curious fascination. Some years ago a Chicagoan was appointed consul-general at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. After he had been stationed there for a while his niece, who lived in Chicago, wrote and asked if he would send her some Brazilian stamps.

"The consul-general told one of the attaches of the office to tear off some stamps from letters which came to hand in the course of ordinary business, and these were forwarded to the Chicago girl.

"Upon receiving the stamps she wrote and thanked her uncle for them, but stated that the stamps he had sent were not the kind she wanted, as plenty of the common and current varieties were easily obtainable in Chicago. What she wanted was the old Brazilian stamps of the obsolete issues.

"The gathering of the latter stamps he found to be a task of considerable difficulity, but he went to work, visited the different local stamp dealers, made inquiries in various directions for the stamps and in the course of a few months had acquired an expert knowledge of the numerous Brazilian issues.

"Brazil was the second country in the world to adopt the adhesive postage stamp, and from the time of their first use, in 1843, down to and including 1906, there were not less than 431 straight varieties, not to speak of the numerous trifling varieties.

"In trying to get additional information about these stamps the collection of them finally began to exercise a fascination for him and the first thing he knew he was buying stamps for the American consul-general at Brazil and his niece had become a secondary consideration.

"He had much trouble in distinguishing the difference between the early issues, as from 1843 up to 1866 all the stamps showed just the figures from 10 to 600, without value or inscription and nearly all printed in black. But he persevered.

"Often when he desired a certain variety of stamp to fill out a certain series he bought the entire collection of some person and then put the rest of the stamps of the collection into a trunk. Once he actually bought the entire stock of a Brazilian stamp dealer in order to gain possession of a few rare varieties.

"And by the time he left Rio he not only had the most complete collection of Brazilian stamps in the world, but he had the greatest number of them, the trunk being jammed to the top with the different issues. He also had become the leading authority on the stamps of Brazil. After his return to the United States he disposed of his collection to a dealer, and the latter said, when he saw the number of Brazilian stamps the trunk contained that he could scarcely believe there were so many stamps of this one country in existence."

PUBLICITY.

There is a demand from all sections of Maryland for more publicity in legislative matters and the press of the state, without regard to party is emphasizing this public clamor for timelier enlightenment upon the doings of the General Assembly, in the matter, especially, of legislative expenses. In discussing this branch of the subject the Baltimore Sun, among other influental newspapers of the state says.

"Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery county, has introduced in the Senate a bill to amend the Code of Public Laws so as to require the State Comptroller to report in detail the expenses of each session of the General Assembly, together with the name of every employe to whom money is paid by the State. The Code already requires an annual report of the receipts and disbursements of the funds of the State. Senator Lee's amendment is a step in the right direction, and as such it is to be commended. Nevertheless, we are inclined to think that it does not go far enough.

"If the Legislature should pass the bill introduced by the Senator from Montgomery county the people of Maryland would have official information, through the Comptroller's annual report, published next winter, concerning all the details of expenditures by the Legislature of 1908. The present Legislature has appropriate $170,000 for its expenses. It would have appropriated $200,000 if public opinien had not expressed itself with unmistakable emphasis and disapproval against reckless extravagance. We believe it would be advisable to publish, before the adjournment of the legislature, an itemized statement of its expenditures and we are convinced that such a publication would have a salutary effect.

"It ought to be practicable for the clerks of the Senate and of the House of Delegates to prepare, 10 days before the adjournment of the legislature, a report in detail of the expenses of each branch of the General Assembly, giving the name of every employe, his duties and the amount paid him. This information ought to be laid before the people of Maryland before the end of the session. Then the people would be able to pass judgment upon their representatives in the legislature with the facts fresh in their minds and while Senators and Delegates were still in legislative harness.

"Senator Lee is an able and earnest advocate of publicity. But publicity, however, thorough, may lose much of its effect if it is long delayed. We believe public opinion in Maryland would heartily support the Senator from Montgomery if he would amend his excellent amendment with the view of securing publicity of legislative expenditures before the end of the session, instead of next fall. We think the adoption of an amendment for early publicity, such as has been suggested, would make members of the legislature more deliberate and prudent than any publication which the Comptroller of the Treasury might make late next winter."

Revenge.

"It took you an awfully long time to pull that fellow's tooth," said the assistant.

"Yes," answered the dentist grimly. "He married the girl I loved!"

LOST—On Second street between Green and Alder streets, a grey fur neckpiece. Finder will please leave at Offutt's store and receive reward.

GOODS MADE IN THE SWEATSHOPS

Many Workers in The Large Cities Are Compelled to Labor For Little Compensation.

The average resident in the small town or of the farming district has little conception of conditions which prevail among the working classes of the large cities. New and then some article may appear in a magazine or newspaper relating to the "sweatshop" system, but few understand what this means. It is simply this: In the garment-making line and kindred industries different articles of goods are made by contract for so-called manufacturers. The sweatshops are found in the closely crowded tenement districts, and generally are small rooms into which the workers are crowded. The different garments are cut out at another place, and are sent to be sewn together to the "sweatshops" which serve as a living place as well as a work shop. Each worker receives so much per dozen for garments sewed, and the price is barely sufficient to pay living expenses. A woman will work all day sewing skirts together, and will receive from 40 to 50 cents for her labor. Those who work on shirts confine themselves to this particular line; the ones who sew trousers, the same, and the coatmakers and vestmakers are all confined to their particular classes of work. What they receive is so scaled down as to allow the poorest kind of an existence. These shops are controlled by men who dispose of their goods to houses which compete with the regular dealers throughout the country. "Keep the price of production at the lowest," is the motto of these manufacturers, and the result is worn out and miserable women and children whose unfortunate circumstances compel them to thus labor in order to buy food.

Benevolent associations and social ties for the prevention of crime have repeatedly tried to break up these horrible places, but they manage to exist in every city of any size, particularly in eastern cities. People who live in the country can assist in preventing the operation of these shops by not patronizing any concerns which make extraordinary offers in the line of clothing for men and women in catalogues and circulars sent through the mails. It is such concerns that support the sweatshop system. No reputable dealer handles sweatshop goods. So therefore the entire output of the factories go to the concerns that do a miscellaneous class of business by mail throughout the country. It is only the very cheapest kinds of clothing that come from the sweatshops. The better classes are manufactured in large and roomy factories, where there is plenty of fresh air and light, and where men and women are paid good wages, and these are the classes of goods sold by the regular trade.

There is danger in wearing clothing made in the sweatshops, as owing to the closely crowded rooms and general squalid conditions, germs of disease are plentiful, and it has been known that smallpox, measles, scarlet fever and other infections diseases have been carried and spread throughout the country by clothing from these infected places.

Snow Baths A New Fad.

Three young women, whose announced purpose was to avoid "catching cold," floundered about in a five-foot mound of snow in the rear of 2027 Indiana avenue yesterday, attired only in black bathing suits, blue noses and gleesome smiles. The smiles were intended to indicate their intense enjoyment of the pastime.

In garments even more sparse, five men turned somersaults, "skinned the cat" and rolled about in the same snow mound. Their entire array of clothing could have been placed in an upturned silk hat discarded by one of them.

The men appeared to enjoy the exercise. One of the young women endeavored to describe the delicious comfort emanating from the mound of snow, while the thermometer registered 10 degrees below the freezing point.

"It's-s-s-s-s-s-ss ju-ju-ju-just l-l-l-l-lovely," she announced. "I-I-I-"—at this point her teeth clicked so violently that further enunciation was impossible, and she waved an appealing arm to one of the scantily clothed masculine snow bearers, who continued for her:

—"am going to come out here and do it every day. Yes, Miss Adams is enamored of the snow bath, and her enthusiasm—"

Further eulogies of the bath were interrupted by a frantic dash of the feminine enthusiast to the steam-heated kitchen of the building.

Prof. W. Hubert Miller, who owned the snow and the backyard, continued his explanation while the two companions of the enthusiast quietly, but decisively, hurried themselves into the same kitchen.

"The young ladies are members of a comic opera company now playing in the downtown district," he said. "They are aware of the dangers of the Chicago climate to the voices of vocalists, who have not become acclimated. For that reason they are fortifying themselves against danger of catching cold by taking these baths. No other purpose animates them, I assure you."

The professor said he was the advance courier in this country of the snow bath, which is now a recognized medical treatment in Austria. Dr. Schnitzler, a famous neurologist of Berlin, is the originator of the treatment. In the yard in the rear of the Miller sanitarium, which is inclosed by high fences, trapezes and other paraphernalia to assist in the snow exercises are installed.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Trade and the Mails.

J. B. McNeil, a wholesale grocer of Chicago, calculates that, through living in the suburbs, he has traveled 755,000 miles on the trains in the last 35 years.

"While I have been traveling," said Mr. McNeil the other day, "the grocery business has changed for the better, and I hope I have helped a little in the change.

"Grocers and general storekeepers are more liberal than they used to be—kinder more polished, more gentlemanly. Let me give you an idea of the typical storekeeper of the past, the storekeeper of the early 50s.

"The general storekeeper of Croydhn was also the village postmaster. He dispensed letters and cabbages, stamps and underwear, with an equal hand.

"But one autumn a rival establishment opened across the way a general store that was a little brighter, a little handsomer, a little larger, than the old one. And the postmaster observed with disgust that the fickle villagers were flocking in great numbers to the new shop.

"As the postmaster stood glowering at his rival from his doorway one afternoon a fellow-townsman entered and asked if there were any letters for him.

" 'No, there ain't none. I told ye that yesterday,' said the storekeeper, without moving from the doorway.

" 'But one might 'a' come today,' said the villager.

"Oh, there might, might there?' the storekeeper sneered. 'Well, there ain't.'

" 'But ye hain't looked.'

" 'Hain't I? Well, I ain't a-goin' to.'

" 'But'——

" 'There's no letter for ye, I tell ye,' shouted the postmaster.

" 'But'——

" 'Blast ye,' shouted the furious postmaster rushing up to the villager and shaking his first in his face, 'won't ye take "no" for answer? I tell ye again—no, no, no! And now, if ye ain't satisfied, go and git yer letters where ye git yer goods!' "—Washington Star.

THE MARRIAGE RITE IN MEXICO

Women Over Thirty Have Not Much Chance of Getting Married.

Not the least of the romantic features of the marriages of Mexico are the ceremonies uniting children. The marriage of girls over 12 years of age and boys over 15 is permitted, and most marriages in Mexico come in early life.

There are about 170 to 180 marriages a month in this capital, says the Mexican Herald, a ridiculous proportion in view of the fact that the population by the census of 1900 was 550,000, and is now probably nearer 600,000. This small proportion of legal marriages is due largely to the expense attending a religious ceremony, for the peon is educated to believe that the legal marriage is notsacred without the church service. Hence when he cannot have the church service he does not bother to have the official service, which is not expensive, performed.

The general age for women to marry in Mexico is about 20. The statistics for the last two months show the following figures on the marrying of women:

From 12 to 20 years, 33; from 21 to 30 years, 102; from 31 to 45 years, 24; from 46 to 60 years, 5.

No woman over 60 was married during this period. As is seen from these figures, the number of women who married at from 21 to 30 years is greater that any other. The age at which most women marry in Mexico is from 18 to 24. It is to to be observed that in the higher classes the girls marry generally when over 20, and some of nearly 30, and over 30, while in the middle class a great majority of the women marry before they are 20 years old.

Among the lower class, on the contrary, the number of girls who marry before 20 is considerable, and many of them marry at 15, 14 and even 12 years. The most recent class of girls marry at 15 and 16 are observed among the middle class and lower class people. One of these is Angela Carmona, who married at 15 years; another is a Spanish girl, Rosario Gonzalez, who married at 16, and another is that of Eduarda Gutierrez, who married at 14.

As to the men, the age at which they generally marry is also from 21 to 30 years. The statistics for the last two months show that the number of men married at different ages was as follows:

From 14 to 20 years, 5; from 21 to 30 years, 90; from 31 to 45 years, 57; over 60 years, one.

It is seen that the proportion of men marrying before 30 years is strong, although it is not as heavy as that of the women married under that age. The proportion of women married under 30 years is 136 to 29, while the same proportion among the men is 95 to 70.

In Mexico a woman above 20 is considered as not having much chance of being married, and in the middle class the chances are not great beyond 25 years.

GET MARRIED ANY TIME, but send us your orders for wedding invitations. We have the latest styles, lowest prices, and do best work. Samples at this office.

George Washington A Spoilsman.

George Washington, and not Andrew Jackson was the real originator of the doctrine that "to the victors belongs the spoils," according to the discovery made by Mayor Reyburn of Philadelphia, who is an outspoken opponent of the civil-service-reform system. In making this announcement, the Mayor quoted from a letter of the first President to his Secretary of War, Timothy Pickering, dated September 27, 1795, in which Washington declared that the appointment to an important office under the Administration of any man not in sympathy with its principles would be political suicide. The Mayor said that doctrine was good enough for him. He again expressed his belief that much of the recent reform legislation extorted from the Pennsylvania Legislatuae by the anti-gas lease uprising was unconstitutional.

FAMOUS DUEL IS RECALLED

Something About the Affair Between Commodore Decatur and Commodore Barron Back in 1820.

On March 22, 1820, was fought one of the most memorable duels in the annals of the United States. Commodore Decatur and Commodore Barron met on the fatal field near Bladensburg that day. Both participants were wounded, Decatur fatally, dying within a few hours after the encounter. The causes which led to the ill feeling between these two naval heroes have never been accurately determined, but it is generally supposed that Decatur's harsh criticism of Barron on account of the latter not returning from abroad to take part in the war brought about the breach. Certain it is that Decatur's words were repeated to Barron and a correspondence between the two ensued, which probably resulted in the challenge. The impending duel was kept a profound secret. Only a few of the most intimate friends of the respective participants had even an inkling of it. Decatur was the first to arrive upon the scene. He was accompanied by Commodores Rodgers and Porter and several other friends. Barron arrived a few minutes later. The combatants bowed stiffly to each other and stood waiting for their friends to measure off the ground and make the final arrangements.

"I hope sir," said Barron as they took their places, "that when we meet in another world we shall be better friends than we have been in this."

Decatur is said to have haughtily regarded his adversary a moment and then replied:

"Sir, I have never been your enemy."

A moment later the word was given, and two shots rang out simultaneously. Barron fell almost immediately. Decatur straightened himself, but the pistol fell from his grasp and in a moment he was upon the greensward writhing in agony. He was raised by his friends and carried nearer the road, where Barron was lying.

"I wish I had fallen in the service of my country," Decatur muttered, whereupon Barron looked up.

"Everything has been conducted most honorably," he said.

Then turning his eyes upon Decatur:

"I am mortally wounded. Commodore Decatur, I forgive you from the bottom of my hsart."

As Decatur was being lifted into a carriage Bainbridge, whom Decatur had once rescued from a Moorish prison, stooped down and kissed his cheek.

With his head upon Rodgers' shoulder and in company with a physician, Decatur was driven slowly back to the city and carried into his residence on Lafayette square, where he died a few hours afterward.

The news of the duel spread like wildfire throughout the city. The following day John Randolph offered consolidary resolutions in congress which, however, were promptly objected to, and the press rigorously denounced the practice of dueling.

Barron ultimately recovered from his injury, but it is said the memory of the fatal duel darkened his life ever afterward. He lived until the year 1851 and had charge of several vessels. At his own request he was court martialed upon the charge made against him by Decatur and exonerated.—Washington Star.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

Subscribe for The Republican.

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

The Offending Hand

By Annie Hamilton Donnell

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Jeffy felt better about that hand when he kept it in his pocket. He couldn't see how black it was—it had looked very black when he shut it up there, two hours ago. He remembered it now with a little shudder. That nursery soap and water a little tempered with heat might possibly have made it look less guilty had not occurred to him—did not occur to him now.

Of course nobody had seen when he slid his white nightgown over his little trousers and waist. How else could he keep his hand—that hand—in his pocket, he meant to, all night? Jeffy felt better about it there. In a sense it was in prison, where hands that—that—you know—ought to be incarcerated for their sins. In a sense he seemed to be making reparation. Not exactly to Elizabeth—no-o, but still—Jeffy twisted about under his little white covers miserably. That hand hurt him—maybe because it was cramped and stiff, maybe not. Maybe because—that. Jeffy wondered if Elizabeth ached there.

Of course, Elizabeth was to blame—still, she was very little. All at once, lying there in the dark, Jeffy remembered how very little Elizabeth was. Her head just came to the edge of the dining-room table; you're pretty little when you have to stretch up on tiptoe to see what there is going to be for dinner. Perhaps when you were as little as that you'd have meddled with your big brother's things—you might have.

Elizabeth was very little and Jeffy was her big brother. Jeffy was seven. He had always rather domineered over Elizabeth, but he had never done—that, before. Oh, no, no, I tell you! Never!

"Does it show, I wonder?" the little boy in bed thought, among the other thoughts.

"I'm going in and see," he said with a little premonitory shiver of dread.

Elizabeth, because she was so very little, slept beside mother's bed in her dainty white crib. Jeffy could see the whiteness of it shining faintly through the dark. He crept toward it very quietly. On the edge of it nestled Elizabeth snugly. Just her small, serene face in its mellow radiance. Jeffy could see it distinctly.

She was lying on that cheek. He could not see it at all. The other cheek was fair and sweet, with a dimple in as though a dream-angel had been there and kissed it a minute ago and that were the print of the kiss. The "big brother" stood looking at it with a strange impression that Elizabeth was turning the other cheek also. He flushed all over his little guilty face.

Somewhere downstairs a step sounded and disturbed Elizabeth in her sleep. She threw up both small hands, then with a restless little heaving of round body and white covers, turned over on her pillows.

"It shows!" gasped Jeffy, and fled back to his own room in horror. He had seen little parallel red creases in Elizabeth's cheek—that cheek. He did not for a moment doubt their origin.

"It shows!—it shows!" he groaned in the awful loneliness of night. Perched on the side of his bed with his little lean bare legs a-dangle, he thought about what the Bible said—Jeff's thoughts did not quote verbatim:

"If thy right hand strikest thy sister, cut it off an' cast it into Hell Fire," he repeated under his breath, "an' there shall be gnashing—an' there shall be gnashing."

He shuddered. The precise significance of gnashing puzzled him a little, but it meant something awful—awful! An' cut it off meant—oh, oh!

"Ur-rr!" softly shuddered Jeffy, thinking how hot hell fire must be. You were to cast it into Hell Fire, where there would be gnashing—if it ever struckest thy sister. The Bible said you were. And it had struck her, it had struck Elizabeth.

The darkness seemed to grow darker, the stillness stiller in Jeffy's room. The little figure on the bedside swayed unsteadily—swayed again—fell backward on the quilts. Jeff was very tired. It tires you to—to—what does it tire you to do? Yes—oh, yes, that. An' it makes you tired still to—to-o—feel—sorry—so awful sor—

Some one seemed to be speaking in the room, but there was no one there, Jeffy could see, for it had grown light, as if many lamps had been lighted. Or else it was one great lamp, the sun. Could it be morning? The voice called out and now it seemed to be his own voice calling to him.

"Come, Jeffy, time to go," it said, brusquely. "The sooner you get it over with the better. I suppose you know that?"

"Y-yes," shivered Jeffy, answering himself, "I've got some o' my clothes all on. I'll be ready in a minute."

"Well, be spry about it. You're going to the One With Spectacles, I suppose?"

"Yes, to the One With Spectacles. He was the kindest one. When Elizabeth had the croup he came and when mother was sick. He was the one that always smiled. But now—of course now he wouldn't smile."

It was too early for office hours, but the One With Spectacles was at home. He put out his hand to Jeffy and smiled—but that was before he knew.

"Why, Jeffy, this you?" he said. "What can I do for you?"

Jeffy stretched out his right hand and shut his eyes.

"Cut it off an' cast it into Hell Fire," he said rapidly. "It would be over soon if you kept your eyes shut an' never budged."

The One With Spectacles started a very little, but recovered himself the next instant. He proceeded to examine the small hand gravely.

"It does look pretty black," he said in a professional tone. "Been offending you, has it?"

"Oh, no, Elizabeth—please hurry! I'd rather you'd do it f-fast," trembled the little voice.

"You are sure you want it done? Better think twice. You won't be able to cut your meat, you know."

Jeffy knew.

"Or write in your copybook—or play ball—"

Or play ball—oh! But the small right hand did not waver.

"I know," Jeffy said.

"It'll be pretty hard to button your buttons, of course—"

"Of course."

"And it takes two hands to whittle. Still, if you say so—"

Jeffy nodded. Something was the matter with his voice; it would not go.

"Well, then, steady! It's going to hurt, of course—now then!"

The hurt of it woke Jeffy. Something awful seemed to have happened and it required a little time to realize what it was. Then he remembered. His hand—oh, how it ached! He shuddered as he drew it painfully out of its cramped prison, and it made him rather faint to look at it—

"Why!" Jeffy laughed aloud in his relief. Why, the little calloused brown right hand was there! It felt numb in some parts and throbbed in others, but there it was! Not cut off—nor cast out. You could pinch it and wriggle it—you could cut meat with it, whittle with it, button buttons—anything! The One With Spectacles was only a dreadful dream.

In mother's room next door, Elizabeth was singing to herself. Her little, thin, clear voice piped up joyously. Elizabeth sounded happy. Jeffy sat up on the bed—he had slept all night outside the covers, slanting across them—and listened eagerly. Then if Elizabeth was happy, she—she wasn't unhappy. She hadn't laid anything up. Perhaps if he were to go in there now and say: "Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry"—perhaps if he were to do that, she would forgive him. You couldn't tell till you tried.

"So's Me," Elizabeth Smiled.

Jeffy tried. He slid softly to the floor and softly across the floor—to Elizabeth. She was sitting with her little bare feet out between the bars of her crib, swinging them to the time of her music. Jeffy caught the glints of morning sunshine in her yellow hair and thought how beautiful they were—how beautiful Elizabeth was. Before he got to her his heart had her in its arms hugging her.

"Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry, Elizabeth!" he cried. The gay little song ended suddenly and the gay little singer whirled about.

"So's me," Elizabeth smiled.

Which Way

The story is told of a major who was in command of troops who were in pursuit of some outlaws. In the chase he arrived at a village to discover that he was too late to intercept them, and finally ordered the horses unsaddled and fed.

Now the major's hostler was a son of Ireland, ignorant of everything pertaining to the equestrian art, and, coming in from the village in a state bordering on intoxication, he put the major's saddle on the horse facing to the rear. When the horses were brought up for a fresh start the major, instantly discovering the mistake, demanded the reason for it.

"An' sure," said Pat, a little terrified—"an' shure, major, an' I didn't know which way you was going!"

An explosion followed—the major was satisfied—and Pat escaped punishment.—Harper's Weekly.

A Strange Incident.

The ambitious young humorist had received from the editor his offering of jokes.

"I wonder why he didn't take them," said the humorist, sadly.

"I shouldn't be surprised," said his wife, "if the editor is one of these men who don't understand a joke until it has been explained to them. If I were you I should send them back to him, with a kind little note telling him what the point is in each one."

The humorist did so.

To his great surprise the editor accepted his explanations.—Judge.

KEEP UP WORKERS' WAGES.

Tariff Tax on Printed Matter Shown to Be Good Thing.

The Philadelphia Record complains of the tariff on books as "a tax on the mind." It probably does operate that way on the mind of a free trader, for he wants to buy everything where it is the cheapest, no matter what becomes of American employment and wages. Twenty-five per cent. ad valorem is the tariff on all books, pamphlets, etc., printed in the English language. On books printed in other than the English language there is no tariff.

It is purely a matter of wages, the cost of paper being practically the same here and abroad. In Great Britain the pay of compositors, pressmen and bookbinders is 30 per cent. lower than in the United States. In Germany these workmen receive not more than 50 per cent. of American wages. Large quantities of books and other printed matter in the English language are produced in Germany and shipped over to Great Britain, where no tariff bars this low priced competition.

But for our tariff of 25 per cent. Germany would do a big trade in printing for the United States. We are not sure but the Record itself would find it a saving to send over the "copy" for its Sunday supplements and have the composition and press work done in Germany. Certain it is that if the 25 per cent. tariff did not stand in the way many millions of pages of books, pamphlets, catalogues, etc., would be set up, printed and bound in the low wage printing houses of Europe that are now produced in this country and give employment to great numbers of American printers, pressmen and binders.

Considering the extraordinary abundance and cheapness of good literature in the United States, and also the economic value of maintaining the superior American wage scale, the criticism of that 25 per cent. tariff seems puerile indeed.

HARK! FROM THE TOMBS A DOLEFUL SOUND.

Massachusetts' Mugwump Nightmare.

The masses of both parties in Massachusetts know that Canadian reciprocity is resented by Canada; that our trade with Canada breaks all records—the past year, gaining more than English trade with Canada, and that under the Dingley tariff Massachusetts has advanced by leaps and bounds, while under the Wilson-Gorman tariff—the joint product of Whitneyism and of Fossism—Massachusetts cotton factories and shoe shops were distressed.

The masses want no more confusion of the trust problem with the tariff problem—they stand for federal regulation of the trusts and for tariff changes along protective lines, not when the country's business is bigger than it can handle, but when business is so bad that business would be promoted by the necessary disturbance of tariff schedules.

Between Democratic Douglas and Moran, bipartisan Guild and bipartisan Whitney, the student of American politics has data as adequate for the philosophy of the spoils system as for the psychology of opportunism, whether expressed in the limited concerns of the importer or in the trust system, awarding economic salvation only to those who are "organized," whether with Moran and George Fred or with Guild and Whitney, uniformly for the mugwump nightmare, but labeled as opposite "parties."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Substantial Part.

The substantial part of the concession to which this country has been committed is to be found in the regulations which have been issued from the treasury department for the guidance of the American officials upon whom the enforcement of the "deal" will devolve. If these regulations do not materially facilitate the sale in the American market of many more articles than those expressly mentioned in the agreement a number of German manufacturers are going to be sadly disappointed. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

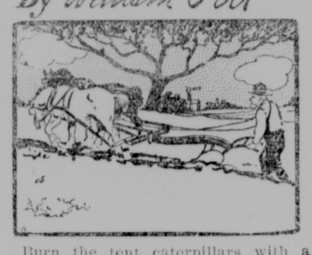
Has Been Taken Care Of.

"Few Americans will object to reciprocity that reciprocates so very much to our advantage. But how about the German manufacturer?—Brooklyn Eagle.

Don't worry about the German manufacturer. He has been well taken care of. The privilege of fixing an "export price" on goods shipped to this country will be worth to him anywhere from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year in lower duties paid.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt



Burn the tent caterpillars with a torch.

You can't cut out pear blight too quickly.

Keep the dates of the time each sow is to farrow.

Milk low in butter fat is also low in the total solids.

Vetch is growing in favor as a plant for green manuring.

The pear is easily grown, but is very subject to blight.

Excessive sweating on the part of the horse is a sign of weakness.

To restore moldy leather to good cloth and apply pyroligneous acid.

Try chalk and charcoal for lambs suffering from acidity of the stomach.

Buckwheat is a crop which could be grown by most farmers with profit.

An ounce of quality is worth a pound of size in any male animal used for breeding purposes.

Peas and new potatoes and corn coming on! Life is worth living on the farm that has the garden.

Soil crust is a synonym for moisture evaporation. Shut the moisture in with a dust mulch.

Think ahead. Know what the next task should be while finishing up with the present one and thus save time.

Start with a few sheep and let that few be of the best. Other kinds don't pay.

Let the poultry have free range as soon as danger of injuring the spring planting is passed.

Pigeons need water for bathing as well as for drinking purposes. Provide separate vessels for each.

Give the little pigs a nice clover field to run in. They will thrive and bring you large profit in the fall.

If there are no trees in the hog lot, put up some sort of shelter so that they can get away from the hot sun.

To work the horse too long without feeding weakens the stomach and is apt to bring on indigestion.

Don't let the burdocks or thistles go to seed. Dig them out and burn them.

You would not overwork your three-year-old colt. Don't overwork the small boys, either.

A manure spreader is a time saver and a money maker. It saves labor and makes the manure go farther.

Cut alfalfa when not more than one-tenth of the plants have blossomed, says an experienced farmer.

A few sheep kept with the dairy cattle will make better pasturage for the latter.

The farmer who loves his business is the one who shows you about with pride and talks with cheery voice about thrifty stock and growing crops.

Study the markets, watch the crop reports, and then market your produce at such time and in such place as you can do best.

Wear gloves when tightening the nuts on the farm machinery, then if your hand slips you will not have a skinned and bruised hand to nurse.

Be sure the cows have plenty of water during the hot days of summer. A fruitful source of falling off in the milk is lack of good water supply.

A dilly-dally method with the lambs will not put them in condition to bring a good price in the fall. Remember that.

Worry the weeds between the corn and taters by frequent cultivation, or they will work the crops to your financial loss.

A hasty glance about the poultry house will not discover the mites. Look sharp this hot weather and keep the poultry free from vermin.

Mix plaster of paris with meal and leave it where the rats can get it. See that dishes with water are left where they can get at them. A plaster paris cake inside of a rat renders him hors de combat. Try it.

If you cannot see gain in the pigs every week, investigate matters. Something is wrong. You can just see a healthy pig grow.

What availeth cleanliness in the dairy if filth and filthy methods are allowed to prevail in the barn where the cows are stabled and milked?

It should be the ideal of every horseman to breed the best animal possible, and this can only be done by the wise selection of both dam and sire.

If the horse has lice rub Scotch snuff into his hair; keep him well brushed and spray his stall with kerosene emulsion. Repeat the treatment twice a week for three weeks.

Here is a good spray for the cow during fly time: One quart of kerosene oil and one tablespoonful each of tar, fish oil, carbolic acid and oil of pennyroyal.

Better keep your money invested in the farm, rather than speculating in mining stock or other alluring schemes which promise larger returns than the old farm.

Never sign any folded document or paper which has not first been read carefully, but it is a good and safe rule never to sign one's name for a stranger.

These hot days in the field be careful and not get overheated and then drink too freely. Better hand yourself a lemon and take a suck on that. Surprising how refreshing it is.

Get rid of the horns. They are a menace to man and a source of danger to the animals themselves. The muley cows don't ever lock horns or hook each other.

Rheumatism sometimes renders the hog helpless in his hind quarters. Provide dry bed, and get animal out into the air and sunshine. See that bowels are kept open by feeding fruit or roots or a little oil meal.

Fence wires should be grounded to prevent lightning injuring the stock. This is done by burbing an upright wire in the ground every hundred feet and connecting this wire with each fence wire.

Many a farmer who is strong as an agriculturist, is weak as a salesman. It is one thing to raise good crops and it is quite another thing to market them at the top-notch price. Try and study to do both.

For the sheep infested with stomach worms give a tablespoonful of gasoline in four ounces of sweet milk after the animal has been fasted for about 16 hours. Give no water for at least two hours after dosing.

Sulphur, salt, wood ashes and oil meal in equal portions are said to be very beneficial for horses and hogs. When kept before them it is said they will not eat more than is good for them.

Cracked corn, wheat and beef scrap makes a good feed for laying hens. If they have not access to a grass run, see that they are supplied with greens daily. Have grits, oyster shells and fresh water before them at all times.

Don't nag at the team. It is a poor way to get more service out of it, and tapping horses with the lines or whip does no good. The thing to do is to teach the horses to walk fast. Do this and they will give you all the work you want without urging.

During the trying summer the dairyman should do a little trying himself to make the cows as comfortable as possible. An old bag fastened over the cow's back and one underneath her belly will do much to protect from flies. Remember that your cow cannot make milk and fight flies at the same time.

Here is the best treatment to be given a harness, as recommended by an experienced saddler: Saturate the leather with as much oil as it will take up; then sponge off with a thick lather of castile soap; when dry wipe gently with a flannel, and follow with a solution of gum tragacanth, made by boiling one-half ounce in two quarts of water and boiling down to three pints.

The cowpea grown extensively as stock food is claiming attention as an article of food diet. Recent experiments at the University of Tennessee have proved that the cowpea compares favorably with peas and beans and other leguminous plants both as to nutritive value and digestibility. It has a distinctive and pleasing flavor, and can be prepared for the table in a variety of appetizing ways.

Is it not a mistake on the part of farmers to seek to escape trouble of raising calves and have to depend upon the cow seller to keep up their herds? The practice of years ago of raising all the calves possible to replenish and increase the herd seems to be gradually dying out. To be sure, it is some trouble to raise the calves, yet the farmer should remember that when buying matured animals, that he is paying some one for that trouble, and a good big profit besides. The farmer who keeps only a few cows should raise his heifer calves; and, on the large stock farms, we must get back to the system of having a good crop of calves coming on every spring. Every farmer will be better off by growing young things, and feeding them up to maturity.

MAY BE MOVING TOO FAST.

Governor Cummins Seems to Be in a Hurry to Count Chickens.

Have the Iowa Republicans already elected their delegates-at-large to the National Convention of 1908? Is A. B. Cummins among the number elected? It would seem so, for Governor Cummins has lately announced his intention to see to it personally that a pledge of immediate tariff revision is incorporated in the platform. We had not heard that a state convention had been held in Iowa and that Mr. Cummins had been chosen one of the delegates for next year. Is not the governor then counting his chickens before they are hatched? May not the Republicans of Iowa decide not to thus honor a man whose mania for tariff ripping and for political mischief in general has been so fruitful of dissension and trouble? There was some question in 1904 as to including Cummins among the delegates-at-large, but "in the interest of harmony" the objectors acquiesced. How far harmony was thereby promoted was shown last year in the vindictive attitude of the Cummins faction and in the heavy falling off in the Republican vote of that year. It proved to be a harmony that did not harmonize. Possibly the time has arrived for different tactics. In that event Cummins may not be in a position to personally direct the action of the Republican national convention on the question of tariff revision.

Printers Are Interested.

Some apprehension is expressed regarding the effect of the German agreement upon the printing and publishing business. The Engraver and Electrotyper of August 1 raises the question whether the "export price" provision may not be so manipulated as to allow the Germans to do a great deal more in the way of composition and plate casting for the American market than they have ever before done. A large amount of English typesetting is done in Germany already, and the 25 per cent. duty has not kept out the competition of plates cast from type set at about one-third the wages paid to American compositors. Now that German chambers of commerce are to fix values for export, will not the German printers, electrotypers and engravers, producing articles for export only, be able to get in under a low valuation and thus take the bread out of the mouths of American workmen? This might be worth looking into by the International Typographical union and by the organizations of stereotypers and electrotypers. Some years ago it was found that plates ready for the press were coming in as "scrap metal" and paying less than one-tenth the duty prescribed for imported printing plates. "Big Six" took up the matter and stopped the fraud. The German agreement also will bear investigation.

THE RIGHT THING TO DO.

Reciprocal Tariff Reformer: "Germany threatens to shut out our exports with her high maximum tariff. To avert that disaster we must make tariff concessions that will satisfy Germany."

Thomas Jefferson: "We must do nothing of the sort. Let me repeat what I wrote on that subject in 1793: 'Where a nation imposes high duties on our productions or prohibits them altogether, it may be proper for us to do the same by theirs; first burdening those productions which they bring here in competition with our own of the same kind; selecting next such manufactures as we take from them in greatest quantity and which at the same time we could the soonest furnish to ourselves or obtain from other countries; imposing on them duties lighter at first, but heavier and heavier afterward, as other channels of supply open. Such duties having the effect of indirect encouragement to domestic manufactures of the same kind, may induce the manufacturer to come himself into the states, where a cheaper subsistence, equal laws and a vent for his wares, free of duty, may insure him the highest profits from his skill and industry. . . . .

Can Cut Our Duties in Two.

If all the German exporters can arrange to do their own valuing at our custom houses they cannot only secure a reduction in duty amounting to 20 per cent., but they can cut our ad valorem duties in two by merely cutting in two the actual value of their goods. Not only can the German exporters do this, but all European exporters can do it, for, of course, it is our purpose to apply the new customs regulation to imports from all favored nations. If this is the situation which actually confronts our customs department it is quite in order to suggest that congress shall take some action to prevent such wholesale nullification of the tariff rules enumerated in the Dingley law.—Sioux City Journal.

IF YOU DON'T WATCH OUT.

Have you got a little wife, quite the sunshine of your life,
Who is very wise and witty and as pretty as can be,
Some jolly little Molly or some dainty little Polly?
Or perhaps her name is Sally. It is all the same to me.
Then, remember this, old chappy: See that she is always happy;
Never vex her nor perplex her; never even let her pout,
For, though you may be a stranger, I will warn you of your danger—
An affinity will get her if you don't watch out.

Let her dine on roast canary. Never be so mercenary
As to hint that beef and cabbages would quite as well suffice.
Let her wardrobe be extensive; never mind if it's expensive;
Pay the price without a murmur if she keeps on looking nice.
Down in Newport let her summer—that's the way to be a hummer.
She'll appreciate such kindnesses without a single doubt
If in keeping with her wishes you should also wash the dishes.
An affinity will get her if you don't watch out.

Never kick about the cooking; never frown when she is looking;
Never venture to remind her of the pie that mother made.
Always grin while at the table and, as far as you are able,
Make her think it is a privilege to see that bills are paid.
So, if you would keep your treasure, always cater to her pleasure.
Never balk nor outtalk her; never have a wordy bout.
Though you may not be outspoken, always sleep with one eye open.
An affinity will get her if you don't watch out.

—Paul C. Willard in Puck.

Could Make Allowances.

The young mother, who was trying to put the baby to sleep, had darkened the room.

Somebody tried to enter the side door, and she went and opened it.

"I beg your pardon," said the elderly matron who had come up on the porch, "but is this house for rent?"

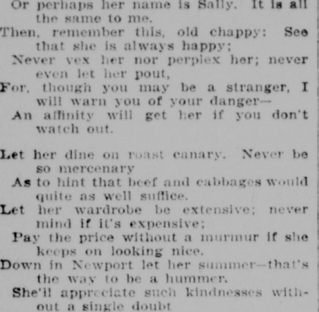
"Not at all."

"Seeing the blinds down, I thought there was nobody living here, and as I am looking for a house I was going to step in and inspect it."

"Well, it's not empty, and it's not for rent, ma'am. The reason why the blinds are down, if you must know"—

"Oh, I see. The lace curtains are in the wash. Well, we all have to clean house once in awhile. Sorry to have troubled you. Good day."—Chicago Tribune.

Quite of Her Opinion.



Gushing Young Lady (to famous actor)—Oh, Mr. Sinclair, I did so want to have a talk with you. I'm simply mad to go on the stage.

Sinclair—Yes; I should think you would be, my dear young lady.—Illustrated Bits.

He Meant It.

There is a western politician now serving his state in the halls of congress who is well known for his disinclination to admit that he is ill as well as for his circumlocutory method of expression.

One day a friend asked after the great man's health.

"Thomas," said the conservative representative cautiously, "I am not well, but I am better than I was when I was worse than I now am."—Lippincott's.

Mary Knew All About It.

Little Mary's father had been teaching her to walk properly. "Walk slowly and turn out your toes," he admonished her.

While she was undergoing this teaching she attended Sunday school one day. The golden text was "Teach me to walk honestly." After reciting it several times the teacher asked:

"Who knows what that means?"

"I do," replied little Mary. "Walk slowly and turn out your toes."—Philadelphia Ledger.

They Are Plentiful.

"Pa, do you know any philosophers?"

"Yes; I meet crowds of them every day."

"What do they do?"

"They are generally busy explaining how glad they are that they have no money and are therefore in no danger of losing anything on account of the stringency."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Public Benefactor.

Stingyman—It is true that I put very little money in circulation. But that really makes me a public benefactor.

Binks—In what way?

Stingyman—All the authorities unite in declaring that money is a transmitter of disease. They'll never charge me with pushing any plagues around.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Looking Backward.

Patience—Oh, I can look after myself.

Patrice—So you can, dear, if there is a mirror handy.—Yonkers Statesman.

Familiarity Breeds Success.

In perusing one of my exchanges the other night, I came upon this story, which is worthy of another boost on its around-the-world travels:

"An exchange says a colored citizen was brought before a police judge charged with stealing chickens. He pleaded guilty and received sentence, when the judge asked him how he had managed to lift those chickens right under the window of the owner's house when there was a dog loose in the yard. 'Hit would't be no use, judge,' said the negro, 'to try to 'splain dis thing to yo' all. Ef you was to understand it you like as not would get your hide full of shot and not get no chicken nuther. If yo' want to engage in any rascality, yo' better stick to de bench whar yo' is familiar."

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.

Sold by Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

GET MARRIED ANY TIME, but send us your orders for wedding invitations. We have the latest styles type and prices, and do best work. Samples at this office.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Allegany County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles E. A. Reichelt, late of Allegany County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 6th day of June, 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1907.

MARY A. HETZ,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Tuesday, March 3th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business. Road supervisors who have not filed their bonds, are requested to do so at once.

By order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted—where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

TRUSTEES' SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
Situate in Garrett County.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county wherein James E. Lish, et al., are plaintiffs, and Thompson Lish, et al., are defendants, the same being No. 1496 Equity of said Court, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, on

MONDAY,
The 9th Day of March, 1908,

at two o'clock p. m., all that piece or parcel of land situated, lying and being in District No. 8 in Garrett county, Maryland, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a stake standing at the bars or entrance through a line fence South 50½ degrees West, 28 perches from a large White Oak tree standing at the end of said fence and running thence with the old rail fence North 64 degrees and 30 minutes West, 36 rods and 2 links to corner of said fence, then with said fence South 76 degrees 15 minutes West, 15 rods and 12 links to corner of said fence, then leaving the fence to the left North 23degrees 30 minutes West, 10 rods to a large rock marked "A," then South 80 degrees 25 min. West, 14 rods to a stake standing beside a rail fence then South 19 degrees 46 minutes West, 13 rods 6 links to a stake and stone pile beside an old fence, then with said fence South 88 degrees 30 minutes East, 18 rods 25 links to corner of said fence, then crossing said fence leaving it to the right South 8 degrees 30 minutes West, 45 rods and 22 links to a stake standing on the South side of an old rail fence, then with said fence North 81 degrees 25 minutes East, 36 reds to corner of rail fence, then with said fence North 52 degrees 45 minutes East, 63 rods and 14 links to the beginning, containing 25 4-10 acres, more or less.

The property is improved by a small house and outbuildings and good orchard.

TERMS OF SALE—¼ cash, ¼ in 6 months and ½ in 12 months, or all cash at option of the purchaser. The credit portions to bear interest from day of sale, and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett County, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,
the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY-NINE, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES, MORE OR LESS, excepting therefrom the quantity of two acres, which was conveyed by John E. Winebrenner to Floyd Winebrenner by deed dated the 15th day of November, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 557, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning at the North corner of the stable on said Military Lot No. 599 and running thence South 12 rods to a stake, thence West 26 rods to a stake, thence North 22 rods, thence by a straight line to the beginning, containing two acres. Said portion of said lot hereby intended to be sold contains forty-eight acres and is fully described (as a whole) in a deed for the same from Isaac Winebrenner to John E. Winebrenner dated the 15th day of November, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 555, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in name of the said John E. Winebrenner.

No. 2. ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SUGAR TREE FLAT," located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county, and standing on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of Henry Wolf. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Henry Wolf.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annun and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE.
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,
the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. SEVENTY-TWO ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "LOCHIEL," it being Lot No. 15 of the said tract and more particularly described in a deed for the same from James H. Lockhart to James H. Darr bearing date the 12th day of February, 1894, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 24, folio 70, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county, and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said James H. Darr.

No. 2. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, and being the same land which was conveyed to Jeremiah J. McKenzie by Samuel Johnson and others by deed bearing date the 11th day of October, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 16, folio 311, etc. one of the Land Records of said Garrett county saving and excepting therefrom 10 acres and 80 perches conveyed by said McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated September 30th, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, said residue containing the quantity of THIRTY-NINE AND ONE-HALF ACRES. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books in the name of the said Jeremiah J. McKenzie.

No. 3. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF THIRTY-FIVE ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Florence G. Beall and others to Lewis Joseph McKenzie by deed bearing date the 19th day of March, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 508, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and more particularly described therein by the following courses and distances: Beginning for the same at a stake standing 20 rods South of Military Lot No. 791 and on the line between the tract of land known as Mt. Aetna and the land of Richard Beall, deceased, and running with said line South 50 rods East 102⅔ rods to a tract of land surveyed by the said Richard Beall and conveyed to W. A. Roberson, then with line of said land North 25 rods, West 16 rods, North 39 rods to a point 6 rods South of Lot No. 790, then in a westerly course 91½ rods to the place of beginning. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lewis Joseph McKenzie.

No. 4. ALL THAT PORTION OF MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, CONTAINING TEN AND ONE-HALF ACRES, it being the same land which was conveyed by Jeremiah J. McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated the 30th day of September, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and more particularly described therein as follows: Beginning for the same at the southeast corner of said lot and running thence North 4½ degrees East, 62 perches to a stake, thence North 85½ degrees West, 5 perches to a stake, thence South 37 degrees West, 74 perches to a pine stump, thence South 85½ degrees East, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land (minerals excepted) will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Ella C. McKenzie. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county.

No. 5. TWENTY-FIVE ACRES OF MILITARY LOT FIVE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-NINE, known as the nothern half of said lot, which was conveyed to John Fadley by deed from Charles H. Johnson and others dated the 10th day of September, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 380, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John Fadley.

No. 6. LOTS NUMBERS THREE, TWO, TWENTY AND NINETEEN as shown on the plat of Sarah Wright's land as recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland and being the same lots which were conveyed to Horace R. Hamilton by John B. Wright and others by deed dated the 14th day of February, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 181, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Horace R. Hamilton.

No. 7. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND ONE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWO, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES EACH, being located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county and described in a deed for the same to Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham, duly of record in the Land Records of Allegany county, Maryland. The said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the heirs of said Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham.

No. 9. PARTS OF MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE, CONTAINING FORTY-TWO AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Mary Willison to Jacob P. McKenzie by deed dated the 11th day of September, 1902, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 42, folio 307, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 and the whole of the taxes for the year 1905 due and in arrear thereon as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jacob P. McKenzie.

No. 10. LOT NUMBER ELEVEN OF THE SUB-DIVISION OF THE TRACT OF LAND KNOWN AS "LOCHIEL," CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF TWO HUNDRED AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES, and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green, dated the 17th day of August, 1893, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folio 247, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jefferson S. Green.

No. 11. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING TWO AND ONE-TENTH ACRES and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Belle Klipstein Field and others to John E. Klipstein and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 49, folio 171, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, by the following metes and bounds: Beginning for the same at a ten-inch beech tree standing near the new county drive road, and marked with three hacks on two sides, and running North 38 degrees 10 minutes East, 248 feet to a maple standing on the South bank of Mill Run, thence North 50 degrees 15 minutes West, 54 feet along and near the South bank of Mill Run, thence South 48 degrees 3 minutes West, 84 feet to a maple, thence South 33 degrees 50 minutes East, 583 feet to the beginning. Said land is located in Election District No. 4 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John E. Klipstein.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

Executor's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

BARBARA YODER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 23rd day of July, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 23rd day of January, 1908.

EMANUEL HERSHBERGER,
Executor.
Grantsville Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix.
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1908. NUMBER 51

LEGISLATURE IS DRAGGING.

Nothing of Importance Has Been Done—Local Measures Introduced.

The present session of the Maryland Legislature, in so far as healthy legislation being accomplished is concerned, will probably go down in history as the worst ever. Positively nothing has been done in either House that will in any manner reflect credit upon the dominant party.

The Republicans have made an effort to pass several bills of merit but their endeavors have been negatively reported by the committees to which the measures were committed for consideration.

Maryland would be better off if the members of the Assembly would simply quit, shake the dust of the ancient city from their feet and go hence.

Tuesday the Anti-Saloon Leaguers to the number of 1700 invaded Annapolis where they presented their views to the Temperance Committee upon the bill now pending that is intended to give the voters the right to say by ballot whether the saloon shall go or remain. On the 25th and 27th instants the liquor interests will appear before the committee and present their side of the matter.

Senator Brown made his maiden speech in the Senate the other day when he eulogized the memories of Judge McSherry, Senator McComas and Governor Lowndes. He acquitted himself creditably and was warmly congratulated by his fellow Senators upon his effort.

Since our last report Delegate Myers has introduced bills to prohibit the pollution of streams in Garrett county and also to repeal the mortgage tax. The latter measure has the unqualified endorsement of the business interests of the county and should pass without a dissenting voice. When this measure was first enacted into law it was general, but it had the effect to keep capital out of the State, consequently it was repealed in so far as other counties in Western Maryland is concerned, Garrett county alone retaining it.

A Jim Crow Town.

West Virginia is to make an experiment in a Jim Crow city. This city has been laid out near Charleston, the capital of the state, and it is expected that within a year it will contain a population of several thousand. No white person will be permitted to reside within its limits or to own property therein. In the midst of this little Africa is situated the state colored high school. Educational facilities will be ample and there will be electric lights, sewers and a park. The city will be governed, of course, by the negro inhabitants, and the whole state will watch with interest the progress of the experiment as testing the capacity of the negro for self-government.—Baltimore Sun.

Surscribe for The Republican.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

Entirely New Board of Supervisors of Elections Appointed Thursday.

REST OF APPOINTMENTS MONDAY.

Some Disappointment Among The Local Leaders By Action of The Executive In Turning Down Aspirants For Fish Commissioner.

The State's Executive gave the political plum tree a decided jar Monday evening of this week when he sent down to the Senate the list of appointments for a number of the counties, among them being Garrett.

The appointment of Supervisors of Elections was made on last Thursday evening, when the Governor submitted his list for this county. None of the old members of the board were retained, although an effort was made by friends of the old board to keep one or two members on the new board.

The supervisors named by the Governor were Messrs. D. M. Mason, of Oakland, and Clarence V. Guard, of Friendsville, Democrats; and Mr. Samuel Lawton, of Oakland, Republican.

Garrett county had two aspirants for the position of Fish Commissioner for the Western Shore, they being Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, and ex-Senator R. T. Browning, of Thayerville. While Mr. Browning had strong endorsements from his party's leaders he was not considered, nor was Mr. Hamill, although he is the chairman of the Democratic Committee for this county. Mr. John H. Wade, of Washington county, caught this plum. There are many Garrett countians sorely displeased that the appointment was given to another county. Other appointments for Garrett county follow:

Justice of the Peace—Francis H. Turner, Swanton; J. L. McRobie, Swanton; Leon Hardie, Friendsville; James Guard, Selbysport; Peter Nathan, Grantsville; Henry Bonig, Grantsville; Marcus M. Fazenbaker, Westernport; Henry Kahl, Accident; William Bowman, Sang Run; A. S. Teats, Oakland; William A. Harvey, Gormania, W. Va.; Thomas J. Crowe, Frostburg; William D. Hove, Deer Park; George Brown, Avilton; J. B. Emory, Bittinger; Albert L. Lee, Kitzmillerville; Andrew B. Gonder, Oakland; William Dent, Crellin.

Notaries Public—Wade H. Lohr, Swanton; Edward Liston, Selbysport; Orval A. Welch, Friendsville; Dennis Kurtz, Grantsville; Samuel Sines, Sines; P. T. Garthright, Mountain Lake Park; P. J. Garrett, Deer Park; George J. Poole, Kitzmillersville; Stuart F. Hamill, Oakland; H. L. Jones, Oakland; A. T. Matthews, Oakland; James P. Treacy, Oakland.

School Commissioner—William Miller, Accident.

A strong effort was made by a number of leading Democrats to have Mr. George T. Porter appointed School Commissioner in the place of Mr. Miller, and efforts were made in other directions to keep Mr. Miller off the Board, of Commissioners but they were unavailing.

Do You Take a Nip?

To the Editor of The Republican:

The nipping habit grows apace, else how could so many nipping places prosper? and how could so many breweries and distilleries become so profitable?

We hear a lot about temperance reform and there is a hot fight against saloons throughout the country and yet our jails and prisons are full of people who were sent there by strong drink, and our cities are full of sad homes because of it. Every where we may see more or less misery that may be traced directly to it. Think of the murders in our own District No. 2.

Have you ever got down to figure on the subject? It is one of the things that can be figured out reasonably close and accurately. To save you this trouble and the time some one who had access to the necessary statistics has done so, and the result is worth reading and considering. New York spends a million dollars a day for drinks, says the Sun. The annual consumption of drinks in the United States amounts to $1,400,000,000. If all the beer drunk in the United States since 1876 were brought together it would fill a canal from New York to Denver, 20 feet wide, 10 feet deep and 1,938 miles long.

The nation's drink bill is one third more than the public debt, twice as much as the capital stock of the banks, a little less than the capitalization of the trusts, one half the value of our domestic animals, more than one-half the value of all our products, one-third more than our total exports. If each individual in this country, regardless of age or sex, had drunk his share of liquor in 1876 he would have consumed about eight gallons. But now the proportion is a little more than 20 gallons.

The increase is attributed to the influx of immigrants, who drink much beer. It is estimated that three-fourths of the population are total abstainers, which would make every fourth person who does drink consume on an average $70 worth of liquor each year. If the people who drink should abstain for one year and provide a fund from the savings it would start every illiterate child in the United States on the way to a college education, and if the drinkers of the world were to endure these thirst for eighteen months their savings would buy every ounce of gold in existence.

These figures provide food for thought, even for those who fill glasses as well as for those who empty them. But there are not the only ones interested in the business, or effected by it. Indeed everybody is effected more or less, and none benefitted or at least not favorably or permanently.

The average factory hand earns $440 a year, while it is estimated that the average criminal costs the public at least $1,200 a year, and 95 per cent of all crime is traceable to drink.

Look not upon the wine when it is red, for it biteth the like a serpent and stingeth like an adder.

We have 4,000,000 paupers in this country and 10,000,000 persons are on the ragged edge of pauperism.

Well, what can be done about it? we all know that the better way by which to get rid of a bad habit is to get away from the temptations that lead to it. I commend the good people of Friendsville for getting away from the temptations and making so many wives, children and homes happy in No. 2 and hope our present legislators will pass a law giving the people a chance to vote it out of our county.

G. D. F.

Friendsville, Feb. 17, 1908.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

BALTO. & OHIO TAKES THE LEAD.

It Will Put The Nine Hour System in Force at Once.

A dispatch from Washington states that the Interstate Commerce Commission is informed that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad proposes to put into effect at once throughout its system the so-called "nine hour law," which by its terms does not become operative until March 4 next. The law limits the hour of service of all classes of train operatives, particularly locomotive engineers and firemen, train dispatchers, railway telegraphers, tower men and signal operators. The dispatch continues:

Recently the Interstate Commerce Commission was requested by the operating vice-presidents of 10 or 12 important systems of railway to extend the time when the nine-hour provision is to go into effect. It was pointed out that nine hours constituted an unusual and awkward period, as duties of that kind have to be performed in all the 24 hours of every day. If two shifts of train dispatchers, telegraph operators and signal men each worked nine hours, there would be a period of 6 hours in every 24 which could not be covered satisfactrily, either to the mem themselves but that "tricks" of eight hours might be better for all concerned, but for such a period of work the men could not be paid wages which they would regard as adequate for their needs. And in addition, it might be difficult to obtain the services of enough skilled men to make up three shifts every 24 hours on all of the railroads in America.

The commission has set February 27 as a date on which it will hear formal applications for an extension of the time of operation of the nine-hour provision.

However, the Baltimore and Ohio does not propose to await the result of the hearing. As explained to the commission, the purpose of the officials of that system is to put the law into effect immediately, in order that both the officials and the operatives may become familiar with the new conditions before they are made imperative by the act itself. It is the desire of the Baltimore and Ohio officials to meet every reasonable require of law that may be made through the commission. Should the operation of the law be unsatisfactory either to the men or to the railroad in its practical operation, that fact may be developed in time to have a remedy applied before March 4.

Another source of gratification to the commission is the very general compliance of the railroads with that provision of the Hepburn act which makes it obligatory upon carriers to submit to the commission monthly reports, covering every phase of the operation of interstate roads. A few weeks ago it was announced in a tentative way that several important systems, notably the New York Central lines, had declined to furnish reports to the commission, in accordance with the law and in conformity with the regulations and forms prescribed by the commission. It was held by the counsel for the New York Central lines, for instance, that provision of the law was unconstitutional, and it was understood to be the advice of counsel that the officials refuse the reports. Within the past day or two an understanding has been reached between the commission and the New York Central by which the road has filed with the commission complete reports of its operations for the five months ended November 30 last. The commission now has complete reports for five months ended November 30 of 99 per cent of the railroad mileage of the country. Reports for the month of December are coming in slowly.

Through these reports it will be possible at all times for an investor to ascertain definitely from the commission the precise condition of any one of the 730 interstate roads in America. This information ought to prove of great value to investors.

Valuable Coal Lands to Be Sold.

In another column of THE REPUBLICAN will be found a notice of a mortgage's sale of one of the most valuable pieces of coal property in Garrett county. The land is located along the line of the Western Maryland Railroad and will be sold on Saturday, March 14th, in front of the First National Bank in Oakland by Mr. D. Lindley Sloan, attorney for the mortgagee.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

EXPENSIVE LEGISLATION: NOTHING ACCOMPLISHED

To Kill a Bill Prohibiting the Sale of Liquor It Cost the State $500.

LOCAL MEASURE BECOMES FAMOUS

Delegate Myers' Remarks Misconstrued and a Resolution Asking the Appointment of An Investigating Committee Introduced—Later Withdrawn.

It cost the State of Maryland close to $500 Thursday on the long-winded debate relative to the closing of one saloon in District 5 of Garrett county at Accident. And the saloon will stay open. The Garrett delegates, especially Green, who will hereafter be known as the Boy Orator of the Alleganies, made a desperate effort to have the bill substituted for the unfavorable report. Chairman Dawkins, of the temperance committee opposed him and the pair argued for 90 minutes. Then Dawkins won out, and then the figures discovered the state had expended fully $500 to allow that one saloon to continue to do business. Mr. Green was given three hearings by the temperance committee and he "queered" his case by stating at the first hearing that he introduced the bill by request and had no special interest in it. Mr. William Miller, of Garrett county, spoke with great vigor before the committee against Mr. Green's bill, producing a petition with twice as many signatures of voters in Accident district as that submitted by Mr. Green. Mr. Miller also read a letter which tended to show that politics was behind the attempt to close up Mr. Reese's hotel bar at Accident. The temperance committee, although there are several members on it who have shown decided leaning toward local option, voted unanimously to report Mr. Green's bill unfavorably, who made a dramatic plea for his bill on the floor of the House and he was backed up by colleague, Mr. Myers, who is alleged to have intimated that "undue influence" was used on the temperance committee. This brought a resolution on Friday by Mr. Marley a member of the committee, calling for an investigation of the charge. Mr. Myers then made a most manly explanation, in which he declared he was misunderstood. "I never intended to indicate," said he, "that undue influence had been used in the sense that it was reported," he declared. "I would not think of making such a charge against the members of the temperance committee or Mr. Miller or others interested in the bill, for whom I have the greatest respect. I want to make the announcement publicly, so there will be no misapprehension of my intentions."

"Then I withdraw the resolution," said Marley.

Mr. Myers was so open-hearted and earnest in his manner that he won the admiration of the House and he was heartily applauded.

Mr. Wm. Miller, the distiller received a letter from Superintendent W. H. Anderson of the Anti-Saloon League, addressed to "Rev. William Miller." The recipient of the letter is apprised of the success of the local option rally at the Lyric, Baltimore, and was urged to accompany the temperance forces to Annapolis on Tuesday.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I was very much gratified to read, in a recent number of THE REPUBLICAN, what were in effect three editorial utterances in favor of local option or prohibition, although only two of them were in the editorial columns and the other among the local items. You very truly say, "If liquor is bad for District No. 5, it is also bad for the rest of the districts, so why not make it general? If good, allow it to be sold everywhere."

If the saloon is a good thing, why require a license? A really good thing ought not to be hampered by restrictions. But will anybody say that the saloon is a good thing? Will any person rise up and tell what good it does?

On the other hand, does the saloon do any harm? Does it ever make homes unhappy? Does it tend to increase lawlessness and crime? Does it make its patrons less qualified for their work? Does it take from legitimate trade the money that would better be spent for meat and bread and groceries and boots and shoes and clothing and books and newspapers and magazines and other useful things? Do we not have to answer yes to every one of these questions?

If the saloon does no good, but does do harm, why license it? Why not close it by local option or prohibition and put a stop to the evil it does? If some say that "prohibition doesn't prohibit," how do they explain the fact that all the saloons are opposed to the enactment of prohibitory laws?

Very respectfully yours,
W. O. ISON.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17, 1908.

Married.

CARPENTER—FAY.—Miss Helen Clare Fay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Fay, formerly of Oakland, but now residents of Washington, D. C., was married to Mr. James Lee Carpenter, of Birmingham, Alabama, Saturday morning, February 8th, by Rev. Father Connelly, in the rectory of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Washington. The wedding was a quiet one, the immediate relatives being present. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom took their departure for their future home in Allabama.

DIXON & KELSO

A Big Stock of the Old Reliable

Oliver Chilled Plows

5000 RODS
WOVEN FENCE
In All Heights

15000 Pounds
BARB WIRE

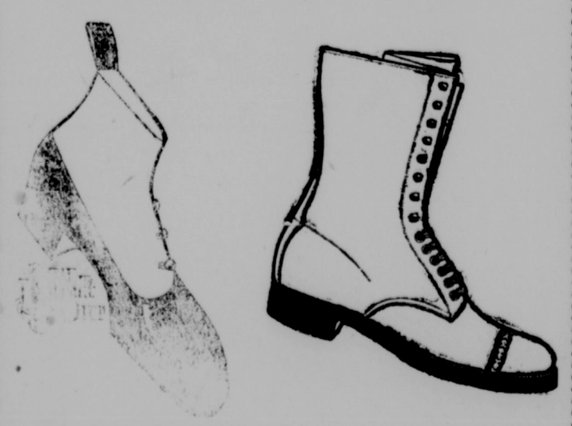
All of Which Will We Will Sell At Prices in Keeping With the Times.

Also 300 Bushels
FANCY APPLES
at $1 Per Bushel.

Yours to Please,
DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST
It Costs No More.



WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price, bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE
OAKLAND, MD

A NEW YORKER IN MARYLAND.

Notes by the Way On the Western Shore of the Chesapeake—Historical Reminiscences—Social and Agricultural Condition.

Last week I wrote of agricultural conditions; to-day I am writing mostly of others things. At La Plata, in Charles County, I was entertained at a home where Wilkes Booth sought shelter when he was fleeing from justice after he had shot President Lincoln, and from which place he was guided through the bed of a stream to a thicket, where he was hidden for four days under a screen of brush. The swamp where the horses were shot and their bodies sunk in the quicksand was pointed out. The fugitives were fed by a colored man named Henry, who is still is living. He was in the employ of a Confederate sympathizer named Jones. The county was filled with Union troops looking for the assassin. They traced him to the door of my host, but then lost track for the reason given above, nor did they find any until after Booth had crossed the Potomac in a boat provided by Henry. This boat is said to be still in existence. A gentleman suggested Henry that if he would show the to boat and tell the story in the North he would make a lot of money. He replied: "No sah! Fust thing sumbody shoot me; den what good dat money do Henry?" After the finding of the boat and the owner by the Union scouts they traced out the place where Booth was hidden. Henry was strung up to a tree, but so vehemently did he protest his lack of knowledge that he was finally released. Doubtless he really did not know who Booth was until after his escape.

Jones and my host's father were arrested and imprisoned in the government prison at Washington. Jones was finally released, nothing being proved against him. He has written a little book telling the whole story. The life of Mr. Cox, my host's father, was saved by the unshaken testimony of a little colored girl, whom I saw—now, of course, a grown woman—who insisted: "Massa Sam did not take him in."

These stirring times are long since past. I found there people very ready to talk of them when they discovered I could look at things from their point of view. Mr. Cox—the younger—paid what I consider one of the highest tributes to President Lincoln I ever heard. Remember, his father was in the Confederate service and was long imprisoned. His brother met his death as the result of a wound received in battle. He said: "I was brought up to consider Abraham Lincoln a monster and to despise a Northern man as I would a rattlesnake; today I consider Lincoln the greatest and best man this country has ever produced. Had he lived through the reconstruction period our condition and that of the whole South would have been far different." It is delightful to hear such tributes to Lincoln all through the South. When I read again the history of those troublous times, when sectional feeling ran so high, and see conditions that prevail here today after more than forty years, largely the result of the unjust course then pursued, I can appreciate the real tribute conveyed in the statement.

In all this county there are no large towns. The old mansion houses were built in the centre of the plantations, often a mile from the main road. Until ten years before the war there were gates on all roads except the main highway. One lady told me they had to open eleven gates in going to church, four miles distant; most of the travel was on horseback. When they went by carriage a negro boy was always in the box to open and close the gates. People lived largely on what they produced on their own plantaitons. Such supplies as could not be so produced were bought at wholesale in the city; thus they had small need of a local store. The one at the crossroads, where was, and is, the postoffice, served every purpose. About this were the blacksmith shop and perhaps a half dozen houses and the church; such constituted the towns. The courthouses were the centres. Here was done not only the county business, as is usual in such places, but the affairs of the community were settled here, both political and commercial. One fall court over in Virginia is known as "the hog court," for at this season and place the crop of hogs is sold. At Leonardtown, from which I am writing the spring term is known as "the horse court." In the centre of the village is a spot dignified by the name of "the green." Here at the court held in March all the best horses in the county are paraded. Many change hands and not a little liquid rye is disposed of.

We have just held an institute at Prince Frederick, the county seat of Calvert county. It consists of the courthouse, a substantial brick building, a couple of lawyers' offices, two newspaper offices, two stores, the hotel, a blacksmith shop, possibly a dozen houses, a white and a colored schoolhouse—always seperate, and the colored children usually taught by a colored teacher—a brick, vine covered Episcopal church, quite ancient, about which the forefathers of the hamlet sleep, and a more modern Methodist Episcopal church. This constitutes the only "large" town in the county and is a fair type of many others.

At the best session of the institute we had ninety-nine present. This represented the intelligent farmers from within a radius of twenty miles, and would be equal to an audience of eight hundred or nine hundred in the thickly populated states of New York, Ohio or Pennsylvania.

Leonardtown, above referred to, is in the extreme south of St. Mary's County, on Bamton Bay, running in from the Potomac about seven miles. It is one of the oldest towns in the United States. On my first visit home, some ten years ago, before it had been somewhat modernized as at present, one might well imagine that he was set down in an old English town of the seventeenth century, from the type of architecture and the appearance of the buildings. Moore's Hotel, with its peaked roof, small window panes, and the first floor only a step above the steeet, was a fair type, and enjoyed the distinction of having been the greatest hotel of Southern Maryland, noted not only for its cuisine, but because here have been entertained some of the notable men of the state and nation. Alas! in its latter days like Ichabod, its glory had departed. It has recently been torn down and a more modern structure has taken its place.

The latchstring of the people always hangs out, and they delight to entertain. Their homes may not be so well heated nor have as fine carpets on the floor nor as fine modern furniture as those north of the Mason and Dixon's line, for they are poor, but you will be warmly welcomed and given a comfortable seat near the fire. You will find the table loaded with an abundance of food; always two or more kinds of hot bread, one of which is sure to be corn pone, made from unbolted meal and without sugar. To my mind this is much better than our "Johnnie cake." Then there are the "Maryland biscuit," made light by beating the dough with a stick. "Forty licks" is considered necessary to produce them par excellence. At this season sausage and ham are on every table. I have never been able to agree that the much vaunted Virginia cured ham are superior. To my mind they are too dry and oversmoked.

Oysters are gathered anywhere on these salt water fronts. An oyster stew here means a dish full of oysters, not a few lost in a sea of soup. Coming right out of the water, with a flavor never found in the fresh water soaked oysters, they are delivered to us at 50 cents a quart. Wood in airtight stoves is the fuel in general use. More than once I have been awakened in "the dawn's early light" by my host starting the fire in my room that I might have a warm temperature to dress in.

Just now the question of an ice crop is agitating the public mind. None as yet has been secured. The icehouses are built in the ground. When the ice is three or four inches thick it is broken out, thrown in carts or wagons and dumped into the houses, where it is pounded down as may be. I am told it keeps well. It is this or nothing with them.

I was surprised to see a number of ox teams carting timothy hay from the wharves back to the farms This hay cost $25 a ton. The people say, "We can't raise green grass." I have been looking at a ten acre field that has been in meadow for eight years, and last year cut some two tons an acre. Naturally I supposed this was choice land. I was surprised to learn that it was considered the poorest in the vicinity. It had been abandoned for years, and had grown up with trees and bushes. The owner bought fifty-two acres for $300. He cleaned up the wood and bushes, ploughed the land, manured it and used a fertilizer recommended by the experiment station. He kept a small livery stable and two or three cows. He went down to the marsh and put up a quantity of marsh hay for bedding, and thus made and saved a good deal of manure, in a country where most of it is wasted. His first crop was millet, and was said to be a good one. The land was reploughed, limed, worked up in good shape, sowed with timothy, red top and alsike clover and then given another light coat of manure, with the result noted. The field has been top dressed lightly at intervals, as manure was available. This was sandy loam land, considered poor, almost devoid of vegetable matter, and having had no fertilizing material applied since Captain John Smith sailed up the Chesapeake, three hundred years ago. Yet on really good, fine land well located farmers say that they can't raise hay! When pointed to this field they say: "Oh, Mr. Turner had manure. We are too poor to buy fertilizers; our money crop is tobacco." So they let the cattle roam over the land without much housing. They find money somehow to pay $25 a ton for hay, which means half the selling price of an average acre of tobacco, and this is a country where common clover and cowpeas flourish.—Edward Van Alstine in the New York Farmer.

Customs of the Street.

In crowded city streets, especially in London and Paris, when a driver is halted by another driver ahead of him he throws up his hand or his whip perpendicularly as a warning to the man back of him. Thus warned, the next driver checks his team and then holds up his hand or his whip as a warning to the man back of him. Thus there might be seen going up one after another in a line stretching back hands or whips to the number of a half a dozen or more as the drivers were successively halted or slowed down by the blockade in front. So of drivers of horse drawn vehicles whose drivers commonly sit high where their hands or whips can be seen above their heads. This signaling is done somewhat differently by the drivers of automobiles, who sit low. So in such circumstances what the automobile does to signal to the man back of him that he is held up is to stretch his arm out outside of his vehicle horizontally to the right.—Washington Post.

Farm for Sale—I offer my firm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six-room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. S. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13t

DISTINGUISHED MARYLAND MEN

A Chicago Newspaper's View of Senators Smith. Bayner and Whyte.

January 15, 1908, the General Assembly of Marylahd, in joint convention, elected as United States Senator for the full term of six years, beginning March 4, 1909, Col. John Walter Smith, Governor of Maryland from 1900 until 1904, hence the independent Warfield's predecessor in the Gubernatorial chair, defeated aspirant for the Senatorship won by the independent Rayner, who had served as Attorney-General during his term of office as Governor, and lifelong adherent of Gorman and the Gorman organization. The election makes Colonel Smith the successor of Senator Gorman in the State as well as in the Senate, as it confirms his claim to the leadership of the Democratic machine, which last fall, under his management, captured for himself the Senatorship, unhorsed Governor Warfield, elected the State ticket headed by Judge Crothers, fortified the organization by the 1,600 offices which go with a sweeping State victory and elected 90 out of a possible 128 members of the General Assembly of the State.

Young Arthur P. Gorman, who was elected State Senator, carrying Governor Warfield's home county against him, and whose chief ambition is to succeed his father in the leadership, is by election made the head of the Democratic party in the State Legislature and will be one of Colonel Smith's lieutenants. And if their plans do not gang agley, he will be Smith's collegue in the upper house of the nation's legislature three years from now, when he hopes to succeed Isidor Rayner to the seat which that astute independent kept Colonel Smith from filling. All of which looks as if the Gorman power had not so greatly waned but that a man of astuteness, ingenuity and resourcefulness in political combinations has been able to make it again a formidable force. This man is Col. John Walter Smith.

It is a fascinating game—that of politics, and Colonel Smith has never tried to resist its lure. A millionaire several times over, and one who made his own fortune, he has spent thousands to help the Democratic party in its campaigns. Few men have given so liberally. When he received the nomination for Governor in 1899 the Republicans, with Lloyd Lowndes as the State's Executive, had for nearly four years been in complete control of the State, as well as of the Federal offices. There was no Democratic assessment fund, and a candidate with a "bar'l" was a necessity. At that time it was said that Colonel Smith expressed a willingness, if nominated, to sign his check for $50,000 for the legitimate expenses of what proved to be a redhot campaign. His rival for the nomination at that time was Edwin Warfield, the Baltimore financier. "Handsome Ned," who having suffered defeat in the Baltimore primaries, laid the foundation of his later successful candidacy for Governor by a display of good sporting blood when on the convention's floor he made the speech which nominated Smith. Though political rivals, these men were at that time personal friends, and had been interested in the same business ventures, Smith being a stockholder and director in the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore, which Warfield had founded and of which he was president. Senator Platt, of New York; Senator Gorman and the Republican Governor, Lloyd Lowndes, who died in 1904, were other politicians who held stock in this enterprise.

On the State ticket with Smith when he was nominated and elected Governor were Dr. J. W. Hering, named for Comptroller, and Isidor Rayner, of Baltimore city, now United States Senator, who was named to fill the office of Attorney-General. Both Rayner and Hering were of the independents who were opposed to Gorman. They were nominated in order that a united Democratic party might wrest the State from Republican control.

Rayner's concession in accepting the office did not lessen his opposition to Gorman's rule, and his election as Senator, despite the organization's recognition of Smith as the candidate, was a blow which the regulars have not forgotten. Now that they are again in the saddle they are not likely to turn the other cheek.

Smith, Rayner and Warfield are all native Marylanders, and are about the same age. Colonel Smith, who was born in Snow Hill, Worcester county, in 1846, is the eldest of the three. Senator Rayner first saw the light in Baltimore five years later, while Governor Warfield's birth year was 1848 and his birthplace Howard county.

Senator Wm. Pinkney Whyte having served in the Senate by Governor Warfield's appointment since Senator Gorman's death, has been elected by the General Assembly to fill out the remainder of the dead Senator's term. He thus gains the distinction of having been twice elected and twice appointed to the highest lawmaking body of the nation. In 1868, when Reverdy Johnson left the Senate to serve as Minister to England, Senator Whyte was appointed to fill out his term. Returning to his home in Baltimore, he was elected Governor, which office he filled from 1871 until 1874, when he was elected United States Senator for the term ending in 1881. He was succeeded by Senator Gorman, whom he had offended. Later he became Mayor of Baltimore and Attorney-General of Maryland—H. B. Chamberlin in Chicago Record-Herald.

THE ORIGINAL IRON BRIDGE

It Was Designed and Consfructed by a Scottish-American.

Many readers of the Scottish-American will no doubt be interested to learn something about the first castiron bridge ever built in this or in any other county, as well as a few facts concerning the Scotsman who designed and superintended its construction. It is located at the south end of the main street in Brownsville, Fayette County, Pa., and spans a stream of considerable width called Dunlaps Creek, just as it is about to empty itself into the renowned Monongahela River, about fifty miles above Pittsburg.

Brownsville is one of the most noted, as well as one of the most ancient, towns west of the Alleghenv Mountains. It has been visited at least by two Presidents of the United States—George Washington and Andrew Jackson—the former having two brothers buried in its cemetery. Then it is the birthplace of that eminent statesman and apostle of reciprocity, James G. Blaine, who was once his party's choice for the Presidency; also of United States Senator Philander C. Knox, Pennsylvania's first choice for the chair to be vacated by "the people's Teddy." But among the great men who have either visited or been born in Brownsville we know of no brainier, cleaner or more honored than John Herbertson, the designer and constructor of the bridge which joins Bridgeport with Brownsville, the first of its kind in the world.

John Herbertson was born in the city of Glasgow in the year 1805. He must have been like George Howe, "a lad o' pairts," for on leaving school at a very early age he was apprenticed to learn the joiner and cabinet making trade. His evenings were chiefly spent in reading and attending lectures on scientific subjects. He had broad ideas and high ideals. He was ambitious to be something, and no doubt felt fettered by his iron-clad seven years' indenture of apprenenticeship. At any rate, we find him while still in his teens, smuggling his tools on board a sailing vessel called The Commerce as she lay anchored at the Broomielaw, and setting out with her for America—the land of his dreams and his hopes: thus violating the law by which they forbade skilled mechanics from moving outside the United Kingdom.

John landed in New York in the month of July, 1823, reaching Pittsburg a year or so later. He was persuaded by a scheming Scotsman to go further west into Ohio and rapidly acquire a fortune through farming. All he acquired, however, was fever and ague, so he was glad to return to Pittsburg, where he soon found employment in a machine shop, and spent several years there.

His next move was to Brownsville, to act as foreman in one of her machine shops. This was about the year 1830. It was shortly after this that the United States Government decided to bridge Dunlaps creek. The young Scotch foreman mechanic suggested that it be constructed of castiron. His suggestion was taken up, and he was invited to prepare plans, which he did. These were submitted to the Government authorities at West Point, and approved by them. He made his own patterns, superintended the getting out of the castings, as well as the erection of the whole structure, which when completed was the marvel of the bridge builders of that day. Although it has been in place for three-quarters of a century it still looks not only strong, but modern in design, and is likely to stand the test and serve all practical purposes for a century to come. It stands there as a fitting monument to the genius and skill of its young Scotch designer and constructor.

Shortly after the completion of the bridge Mr. Herbertson, in company with another mechan[illegible] began business for himse[illegible] Brownsville. This partnership lasted for a number of years, during which scores of engines and much machinery of different kinds were turned out. Subsequently his partner dropped out, and he took his two sons in with him, the firm taking the name of The John Herberston's Sons Machine Shop, by which it is still known. Mr. Herbertson, Sr., continued to take a practical interest in the firm almost up to the time of his death, which took place in 1890 He was highly respected and often honored by his fellow citizens during his litetime, and in death he is not forgotten, and never will be as long as men and women cross and recross the first cast-iron bridge ever constructed.

The business is now carried on at the old stand, on the eastern bank of the Monongahela by his two sons and grandson. They are chips off the original, being skilled mechanics and true gentlemen. We meet with them socially and otherwise now and again, and find they are jusily proud of their Scottish ancestry, and exceeding kind to the sons of Auld Caledonia. —Rev. Alexander Laird, in Scottish-American.

Marks for Murderers.

A French scientist has made a remarkable suggestion for the marking of murderers in France. He suggests that such criminals be branded on the face with a redhot iron and then released. The branding should be done in public, the letter "M" signifying murderer being stamped as an ineradicable mark on the forehead of the criminal. It would be a warning to others.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

Subscribe for The Republican.

THE LIMEKILN CLUB.

Gardner Laments Fact That the World Has No Use For Him.

MISSES THE OLD THINGS.

New Names and New Ways Do Not Appeal to the Noted President—He Recalls Changes That Have Taken Place In His Time.

[Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.]

"My frens," said Brother Gardner, president of the Limekiln club, at its last meeting, "I's been doin' a heap o' thinkin' fur de last few days, and I's about come to de conclusion dat de world ain't got no furder use fur me and odder old folks. We am outer date. We can't keep up wid de purcession. We can't catch on.

"It makes me lonely when I look around me and miss all de old fashioned things, and some nights I look up at de moon and de stars and wonder if dey have changed too. If dey haven't it's bekase a trust hasn't got hold of 'em.

"DE ODDER DAY I TOOK A WANDER."

"In de old fashioned days, when we built a church buildin'—dey called it a meetin' house den—we had to rake and scrape and build a kettle at a time. Ebery dollar was honest money. Ebery dollar was honestly airned. If we got 'nuff together to build a $500 buildin' we felt almost ashamed of de extravagance. If we could pay our preacher $200 a year he was almost ashamed to take it.

"Up my way dey am jist now buildin' what may be called a palace of de Lawd. De lot cost $20,000, de buildin' am to cost $40,000, de organ am to cost $5,000, de steam heat and cushions and odder fixins will cost as much more, and dey am gwine to pay de minister de same salary annually. Dar will be a choir of paid singers, and dar will be dozens of carriages roll up to de door on Sundays.

When the Church Is Built.

"When dat palace am finally completed and opened, when de organ peals out, when de choir stands up to sing, when de minister stands up to preach, what's he gwine to preach about to make men better? Jist de same things dat our preachers preached about in de long ago.

"He will ask men to be honest.

"He will ask men to love deir feller men.

"He will ask men to forgive deir enemies and praise de Lawd.

"He will ask men and women to help in de betterment of de world and to so lib yere on airth dat when dey come to die dey will go up higher.

"Dat's all he kin do. Can't add an odder word to it. And if he asked those things in a $500 meetin' house would de consciences of men respond jist as quick as in dat palace?

"But he won't ask it. It would be old fashioned to do so. It wouldn't be to date. It might hurt de feelin's of some of de congregashun who have come dar to show off deir clothes and hear de choir sing. He'll take a text and he'll talk, and when he gits frew talkin' meeting will be ober and nobody de better nor wuss off.

"In de old fashioned day any man who libed widin five miles of you was a naybur and a human bein'. In dis modern age de man libin' on de odder side of de wall dies and is buried, and you don't know his name nor care to.

"Fifty years ago dar was a feelin' of sympathy fur a man in misfortune, fur a widder in black, fur an orphan cryin' in its loneliness. Dat feelin' was too old fashioned, and it has been done away wid. We can't miss our street kyar to speak to a man who has been run ober and had his bones broke, and we figger dat widders and orphans will be taken care of at de poorhouses.

"In dose old days dar was some politics around, but men didn't look upon it as they do de politics of today. It didn't smirch men. It didn't make liars and thieves and rascals of 'em. Men didn't sell their votes, and officeholders didn't rob de people. It was decided dat de old way wasn't progressive 'nuff fur de American people, and so de present one was invented. De result am dat dere am not ober five men in high places today in all dis land dat de people thoroughly trust.

"In my time, when I considered myself in de swim, if I airned $2 I put away at least 50 cents agin sickness or old aige. Dat's what we preached to each odder—economy and saving. Dat looked like good policy, but I have libed to see how foolish it was compared to de up to date idea. De thing am to airn $2 and spend $3 and to figure dat you am gwine to lib a thousand years.

Man's Word Was Good.

"Dar was a time when a man's word was good fur somethin' in business. If you went to a merchant to buy he told you the truth about his goods. If you hadn't de money to pay he took your word and trusted you. How primitive! How silly compared to today! Find me a man who'll take a tradesman's word. Find me a tradesman who'll take a customer's word. We look upon each odder as liars and deadbeats, and as a matter of fact we are. We have to be to keep ahead of de odder feller. When a man says he will do thus and so you wonder if he hain't lyin'. When he gibs you his note of hand you worry fur fear dat he won't meet it. When he sends word dat he am ready to pay it you look for a nigger in de wood pile. When he has paid it and you have de money in your pocket you feel a sort o' contempt fur him dat he was honest.

"In de old days when I bought a hoe it was a hoe. De same wid shoes or a hat or groceries. De seller made his profit and his goods war honest. When you go to buy a thing nowadays under dis up to date system you am swindled first in what you buy and next in de price of it. Dar am swindles in eberything you eat, wear and use. We not only swindle our own people, but de world at large. We send de heathen Chinese Bibles and missionaries and tracts, and we also send him cottons filled wid clay to make 'em weigh heavier.

"Now and den, in de old days gone nebber to return, I used to ask a few nayburs to drap in of an evenin'. We had a pitcher o' cider, a pan of apples and some popcorn and all injoyed deirselves. I was invited ober to de house of Brudder Giveadam Jones de odder evenin'. He said it was gwine to be a simple affair. Dar was six kinds of cake, wine, ice cream and cigars, and when de eatin' and drinkin' was ober we had music on de phonograph. I hain't sayin' a word of criticism. Brudder Jones airns $15 a week and hasn't a cent in de bank, but de up to date programme must be followed or he would be out of de swim. Even if he can't get a doctor's prescription filled he must make a bluff.

What He Found In the Country.

"I hope it might be different out in de kentry, whar it used to seem to me dat God libed most of de time, and de odder day I took a wander to git near him. Waal, I found a farmer who charged me 5 cents for a glass of buttermilk dat was gwine to de pigs. I found a boy who called me an old nigger. I found a farmer's wife who said I looked like a thief. I found a country grocer who asked me 2 cents too much fur a paper of smokin' tobacco. I found a constable who wouldn't let me lie down on the green grass, and I found a farmer's hired man who wanted me to change a bogus half dollar fur him and cuffed me bekase I wouldn't. God wasn't out dar. It was all man, man, man—de same sort o' men dat you meet in de city, de up to date man.

"I looked and looked and looked, but I found nuthin' like it used to be. It was 'keep off de grass' bekase the grass was with money. You mustn't lean agin de trees, bekase de trees was sold. You mustn't wander in de woods bekase a trust owned them. You mustn't fish in de brooks, wander in de medders nor hunt fur blackberries.

"I come home disappointed and discouraged and wid tears in my eyes, but I'm not gwine to kick. Progress has dun all dis, and I have failed to keep up wid de purceshun. I'm a has been, I'm a back number. Let us break de meetin' in two and go home."

M. QUAD.

She Meant Well.

A teacher in a certain eastern school asked her class to draw a picture of that which they wished to be when they grew up. The pupils went diligently to work with paper and pencil, some drawing pictures of soldiers, policemen, fine ladies," etc. They all worked hard but one little girl, who sat quietly holding her pad and pencil in hand.

The teacher, observing her, asked:

"Don't you know what you want to be when you grow up, Anna?"

"Yes, I know," replied the little girl, "I know I want to be married, but I don't know how to draw it."

A Warning.

"Oh, I—I beg your pardon. I—I thought those were artificial—"

"Well, you'll wish you were an artificial member before I get through with you."—Brooklyn Life.

Quite Too Much.

"Why do you write?" I asked the bard
Whose [illegible] verse was never marred
By one false note, whose poems fine
Breathed gospel truth in every line.
With a calm smile he raised his head—
"They pay me for the stuff!" he said.

—E. M. Tobinson in Puck.

Defects of Our Present Anti-trust Laws.

By HERBERT KNOX SMITH, Federal Deputy Commissioner of Corporations.

OUR most conspicuous attempts so far at the solution of the trust question have chiefly taken the shape of laws prohibiting combination, the SO CALLED ANTI-TRUST LAWS. Those laws forbid in substance combination in restraint of trade. Inasmuch as it is hard to conceive of any sort of important combination which does not to a certain extent REDUCE COMPETITION and thereby in the technical legal sense RESTRAIN TRADE, it may be generally said that the antitrust laws forbid industrial combination.

WE MIGHT AS WELL RECOGNIZE THE FACT THAT INDUSTRIAL AND CORPORATE COMBINATION IS AN ECONOMIC NECESSITY; THAT IT IS NOT ONLY A NECESSITY, BUT ALSO AN ACCOMPLISHED FACT.

Suppose that we allow combination and see that the centralized power which it creates is PROPERLY used. If we are to do this, we must have SOME EFFICIENT SYSTEM OF REGULATION by permanent supervision. Such a control must be active and positive, not negative. It cannot be accomplished by simple prohibition or by the piling up of penal statutes. Our industrial machinery is so infinitely complex that it cannot be adjusted by the remote, inflexible, OCCASIONAL remedy of judicial procedure. It must be regulated by CLOSE ADMINISTRATIVE SUPERVISION on the part of the government, not by the process of the court.

THE ANTITRUST LAWS ARE WHOLLY UNSUITED TO ACCOMPLISH ANY SUCH RESULTS. THEY ARE NEGATIVE AND PROHIBITIVE. THEY CONDEMN ALL COMBINATION, WHETHER BENEFICIAL OR HARMFUL. THEY ARE ENFORCED ONLY BY COURTS. THEY ALSO FORBID NECESSARILY ANY CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT AND CORPORATE INTERESTS, BECAUSE THE ANTITRUST LAWS ARE AN ATTACK ON CORPORATE EXISTENCE ITSELF AND INEVITABLY PLACE CORPORATE MANAGERS IN OPPOSITION IN SPITE OF THEMSELVES.

Labor Unions and The Trade Schools.

By HENRY S. PRITCHETT, President of the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation.

AS a result of the disappearance of the apprenticeship system there is A DEARTH OF SKILLED WORKMEN, and boys are shut out of the opportunity of learning a trade. It thus comes about that thousands of boys leaving the schools of the grammar grade DRIFT ABOUT and waste the years in which they might be trained for a useful career.

I think there is today BUT ONE OBJECTION TO THIS PLAN of preparing boys for the trades, and this comes from some of the trades union leaders, who fear that the development of trade schools would produce such an army of skilled workmen as to lower wages, and they desire to RESTRICT the number of men who may enter a trade. They feel the trades may be flooded by this means with half trained men who believe themselves to be journeymen.

THIS APPREHENSION ON THE PART OF SOME OF THE LABOR LEADERS RESTS, AS I BELIEVE, UPON A MISTAKEN NOTION CONCERNING THE TRADE SCHOOL ITSELF, A MISAPPREHENSION NATURALLY ARISING FROM THE WORK OF CERTAIN INFERIOR AND ILL DIRECTED SCHOOLS.

Just here the labor organizations appear to have the opportunity to give most effective aid to the PRINCIPLE FOR WHICH THEY ARE SUPPOSED TO STAND, of advancing the standard of living. If they will stand intelligently for the trade school which gives THOROUGH instruction and help by their co-operation to eliminate the SUPERFICIAL trade school and will fix a definite place for the graduates of such schools, they will not only OPEN THE DOOR OF OPPORTUNITY TO THEIR OWN SONS, but will advance their own dignity and value as members of a skilled trade.

The reasons why the trades cannot be flooded by the graduates of trade schools are these: The economic difficulties, including the expense and loss of wages, involved in attending a PROPER KIND OF TRADE SCHOOL will always restrict the number who can attend it. The small percentage of men who will avail themselves of such thorough training will be a factor in raising the standard of wages.

TODAY MILLIONS OF AMERICAN BOYS ASK THE OPPORTUNITY FOR SOME MEANS BY WHICH THEY MAY BE LIFTED OUT OF UNFRUITFUL OCCUPATIONS. WHEN THAT DOOR IS OPENED ONLY A FRACTION OF THOSE BOYS WILL IN THE END AVAIL THEMSELVES OF IT, BUT THE OPPORTUNITY WILL BE AN INSPIRATION TO ALL.

Railroads Have Too Many Masters.

By EDWARD P. RIPLEY, President of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway.

WHAT the railroads are opposed to is this VARIED ASSORTMENT OF RULES, REGULATIONS AND LAWS under which at present they must operate. For instance, the Santa Fe runs through fourteen states and territories, and what is legal in one state may be unlawful in another.

IN OTHER WORDS, WE HAVE TOO MANY MASTERS. WOULDN'T IT BE MUCH BETTER FOR US IF WE HAD A SINGLE, CENTRAL SOURCE OF REGULATION THAN SO MANY?

The outcry against the railroads has done them MUCH DAMAGE. This antagonism is by no means a thing of the past, as it exists today and is deep seated. The censure and attacks of the press and the UNJUST strictures from other sources have kept it alive. The result is that THE RAILROADS HAVE BEEN NEARLY RUINED. They are now worrying along as best they can. They cannot do anything but serve the public even if the public is attacking them.

Old Home Week.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Billy Sugden read the pamphlet through from cover to cover, from the first glaring line, "Old Home Week," to the imprint of the "Blairsville Mercury Job Print" on the last page of the cover. Somehow the little booklet seemed to have almost the value of a message from home. He could even tell which part of the text Carr, the editor of the Mercury, had written and which portions were the product of the Rev. John Dudley, the Presbyterian minister, who has literary aspirations.

One paragraph in particular appealed to him. It ran, "We have set a date later than most of the old home weeks so that as we, the home stayers, bring to a happy and prosperous conclusion the harvest of the year so may the homecomers bring with them the first fruits of their prosperity and their talent."

Whoever had sent him the pamphlet had underscored this paragraph, and Sugden felt with a glow of pride that his new found fame had reached even to the old home. It was only in the last few months that he had gained the position as an illustrator for which he had fought, and fame was still very sweet to him. He could see visions of the old home, the quiet, shady streets, the trees now gorgeous in their autumnal tints, as he sat down and wrote a note of regret to the famous lion hunter who had sought to add him to her collection at Newport for that week.

As the train drew near the old town some weeks later he peered from the windows as eagerly as a boy.

On both sides of the car excited faces were pressed against the glass locating familiar spots, and when at last the long line of cars swung around the point and the gray old breakwater came into sight the car rang with cheers, in which Sugden's voice was by no means the least vociferous.

"ELIZABETH! IS IT REALLY YOU," HE DEMANDED.

It was pleasant to meet the reception committee with their pompous formality of welcoming speeches, which were followed by the more genuine handclasps. It was still more pleasant to make his way up the street and get a welcome on every hand, but through it all Sugden was conscious of one lack—the absence of one person who alone could make old home week a success to him. For the first time he realized that the week meant to him Elizabeth Grantley, and it was to see her that he had come.

As he crossed the foaming little river that cut the town in two he remembered the last time that he stood on the span. He and Elizabeth had leaned against the rail, watching the swirling waters in the uncertain moonlight, while gently she had put from her the hopes that had risen in her breast and had sent him on his way unfettered by matrimonial promises. "If you really want me you will come back for me without a promise," she had whispered. "I could not bear to think that I was holding you back in your career, Billy." He had protested and argued, but the girl had steadfastly held to her point. She would not marry him—she would not even consider an engagement. If he was to fight his way in the world he must be left free.

He had failed then to perceive her point of view. He had wanted her to marry him and go with him in search of a career. When she had refused he had flung himself away, and he had not written. Now he knew that she had been right, and he longed to tell her so. "There was a bureau of information through which visitors might locate their old friends, but the sweet faced girl in charge of the registry list shook her head regretfully. We tried to locate the Grantleys to reach them with an announcement," she explained, "but they appear to have dropped from sight completely. I will make a note of your address in case we do locate them." Sugden thanked her and went out feeling as though after all his coming had been a mistake. He slipped into the opera house to listen for awhile to the formal exercises for the opening day, but he found the prosy oratory tiresome and soon sought the open air. Bridge and Court streets were brought out brilliantly by arches of incandescent lights, and in the Indian summer warmth a pushing, perspiring crowd made their way up and down the streets and jostled each other into the gutter, while the confetti was scattered about and the feather ticklers were everywhere in evidence.

With a gesture of disgust, Sugden turned from the crowd. His mood was not atune to merrymaking, and he sought the more quiet parts of the town. Almost unconsciously he took the familiar paths that led to the little cottage where the Grantleys had made their home, and presently he found himself leaning against the fence that inclosed the well kept garden. Here he lighted a cigar, and with the soft gloom of the tree shaded yard for his screen he projected from his fancy scenes wherein he and Elizabeth had figured. He could see the gay hammock swung between the apple tree and the horse chestnut. He could picture the dainty figure in filmy white and could almost hear her hail of "I'm out here, Billy, in the hammock," as the gate clicked behind him.

Then his mind conjured the vision of the wistful faced girl leaning upon the railing of the bridge and pleading with him to keep his freedom that he might make his fight free handed. He remembered those last few moments when he had declared that he would have nothing more to do with a girl who feared to face poverty with him, and even now it seemed that he could hear her sobs as she had walked with tear blinded eyes down the street, while he had leaned against the wall and had watched her go without a single word of comfort.

Somehow the sobbing seemed strangely real. It was almost as though a woman there in the shadow of the trees was letting loose the flood gates of her grief. So real did the sound seem that he flung away his cigar and vaulted the low fence, making for the direction of the sound. But, though he expected to find a woman there under the trees, it was with a shock that he did come face to face with a bowed figure. With uplifted hat and a murmured offer of service, he advanced, but the woman moved away silently. Something in the poise brought Sugden's heart into his mouth, and, with a cry, he darted forward.

"Elizabeth! Is it really you?" he demanded. "Have I found you at last?" The girl was at the gate now, and in the light of the distant street lamp he saw that he was right.

"Listen, dear," he went on. "I don't blame you for wanting nothing to do with me, but hear me only for a minute.

"I did not know what you intuitively guessed—how hard the struggle would be. I did not know the conditions. I thought that with you to help me make the fight I could do better. I know now that I was wrong."

"I thought that knowledge would come in time," said the girl softly. "Genius in a garret is a thing of the past. Genius to be discovered must live and dress well. I could not make you understand that."

"But I know it now," he assured her. "I can see that alone I could live better and at least preserve the appearance of prosperity that was my greatest aid to advancement. And even as my error was great so is my penitence, Betty. Can you find it in your heart to forgive me, to admit me at least to your friendship?"

"To forgive is part of woman's life," she said wearily. "I had not intended to make myself known. I just wanted to see the old town and the old home again, but you have found me out."

"And this time I shall not let you go," he said, "not if I can prove how great has been my repentance. Look, dear, the old house is for sale. May I buy it in the hope that some day we shall call it home? I know I do not deserve forgiveness, dear, but—you said I would find you waiting when I came home."

"It has been a long wait," she said softly, "a very long wait, Billy, but I have kept my promise. I have waited alone."

Gently, almost reverently, he took her in his arms, and as his lips brushed the soft brown hair he realized what some men never come to know, the depth and beauty of a woman's loving forgiveness. Sugden had found the old home—and the new.

Taking No Chances.

"It is a rule to which good lawyers usually adhere," says a Philadelphia attorney, "never to tell more than one knows. There was an instance in England not many years ago wherein a lawyer carried the rule to the extreme.

"One of the agents in a Midland revision court objected to a person whose name was on the register on the ground that he was dead. The revision attorney declined to accept the assurance, however, and demanded conclusive testimony on the point.

"The agent on the other side arose and gave corroborative evidence as to the decease of the man in question.

"'But, sir, how do you know the man's dead?' demanded the barrister.

"'Well,' was the reply, 'I don't know. It's very difficult to prove.'

"'As I suspected,' returned the barrister. 'You don't know whether he's dead or not.'

"Whereupon the witness coolly continued: 'I was saying, sir, that I don't know whether he is dead or not, but I do know this: They buried him about a month ago on suspicion.'"—Harper's Weekly.

Degrees of Pity.

The Bachelor—Don't you pity us old bachelors?

Young Widow—Yes, but I don't suppose I pity you as much as the old maids do.—Chicago News.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, FEBRAURY 20, 1908.

MORE THAN ENOUGH.

There is only $30,000 difference between the original amount proposed to be appropriated by the legislature and the amount finally agreed upon, the latter being $170,000. Now, as this sum is far in excess of that needed, the nquiry, what becomes of the balance? s natural. The Emmittsburg Chronicle has undertaken to answer this question. The Washington Herald, commenting upon the Chronicle's computation says:

"The Maryland legislature has during the past few years devised a plan for the recompense of needy statesmen and the promotion of party welfare—the welfare of the party of the majority—that in some respects is an interesting political experiment, though it is viewed in quite another and less favorable light by a large proportion of the press and public. We refer to the appropriation of a lump sum for legislative expenses far in excess of those expenses, the difference constituting a fund which the legislators are expected to place "where it will do the most good" politically. At the present session it was proposed to appropriate $200,000 in this way, but former Gov. Warfield made so vigorous an onslaught on the scheme that the amount was reluctantly cut to $170,000. But even this sum is much more than is necessary to pay the legitimate expenses of the legislative session, making the most extravagant allowances for the varied wants of a modern statesman. The Emmitsburg Chronicle has done some figuring with the idea of finding out how much of this appropriation goes to actual and necessary expenses and how much to political uses. It says:

"Allowing $57,940 for the per diem of all the senators and delegates, or $79,405 for the per diem referred to plus the compensation of the forty-four employes, we have remaining $90,595. In our endeavor to spend the lump appropriation liberally let us assume that the 101 delegates and the 27 senators travel 500 miles, and allow each one mileage at the rate of 10 cents a mile; we then find that we have spent $6,400 more, which, being likewise deducted, leaves $84,195. If, in addition to this, we give each senator and delegate $100 worth of postage, making $12,800, we find, after deducting this amount, that there is still $71,395 in the treasury. But having a desire to keep the State-house clean, we will appropriate $16,000 for the purpose, and we then find that we still have left $55,395 to be applied on that 'miscellaneous' expense account. If we engross $10,000 worth of bills, and it would seem that this is about as many as can come up during one session, we have a balance of $45,395 to be placed where it will do the most good."

This balance of $45,000 or more is frankly a fund for the promotion of the political fortunes of legislators and the maintenance of the supremacy of their party. Probably the real sum actually devoted to this purpose is much larger than that computed by the Emmitsburg Chronicle. Be that as it may, the fact is that the legislature annually distributes a large sum of money, to quote the Baltimore Sun, "for encouraging activity in the Democratic party, giving it away in gratuities to politicians who have not earned it or performed any public service in return for it." All sorts of political hacks are given jobs of various sorts about the capitol, the cleaning of which, as our contemporary intimates, costs an extraordinary sum; and the members of the legislature are, we believe, paid a certain proportion of the slush fund in cash."

THE MEANING OF CHARITY.

Some confusion has been created of late years as to the meaning of charity when employed in religion. There were great movements during the latter part of the nineteenth century for the amelioration of the condition of humanity, and these movements have continued to the present time and are growing stronger and more productive of good. They are often called charitable, and in a worldly sense they no doubt are the very acme of charity; but for the sake of distinction it would be wiser to call them philanthropic. The men and women who abandon worldly hopes and ambitions to devote themselves to their fellow-beings, and who give direction to these movements, illustrate in no ordinary sense the meaning of charity. Their individual efforts should be distinguished from the machinery which they guide. But Christ in His teachings, and His apostles in their interpretations of His words and acts, did not speak to corporations or institutions of any kind. Their entire ministry was devoted to the salvation of the individual, and for that purpose they strove to develop or implant the great Christian virtues, of which charity is the chief. The only corporation in those days was the state, and Jesus avoided that as far as possible. His disciples followed this course as closely as possible.

Paul in his famous apostrophe to charity showed clearly that he regarded it as an individual virtue. The qualities which he declared to be necessary elements of charity cannot be transferred. It is impossible for any combination of persons to possess or illustrate them. This does not mean that these great philanthropic movements should be allowed to languish. It simply means that they are not the exemplification of Christian charity. They are something apart from the church and distinctly human. They have grown out of the misery and destitution of the ages and the general realization that man is his brother's keeper. To contend with this mass of wretchedness, combination and the great charity of self-sacrificing men are indispensable. Individuals are helpless in the face of it. Church members, while performing their religious duties, should freely contribute to these movements as enlightened citizens. Indeed, it is reasonable to expect that they will give more freely than other people. But the charity which Christ enjoined and which Paul and other disciples so strongly urged upon Christians is an individual virtue which cannot be exercised vicariously, and the church in moments of unusual destitution cannot too strongly impress its exercise—nay, its imperative necessity—upon Christians. The church can scarcely hope to rival the efforts of the great movements spoken of, but it can do a mightly work, and can very materially advance the interests of the Gospel at the same time.

The average person reads Paul's definition of charity with admiration for its rhetoric and seldom troubles himself to analyze it so as to perceive its full meaning. It would be exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to measure up to its requiremenls. "Charity suffereth long and is kind." "Charity envieth not." "Charity vaunteth not itself; is not puffed up." "Beareth all things; endureth all things." "Charity never faileth." These are a few of the qualities a person must possess in order to have in full measure the Christian virtue of charity, which is placed above all other virtues.

Those who devote themselves to the reclamation of humanity in its most deplorable stages approach nearer to the definition of St. Paul than any others. But the church can scarcely do better in moments of unusual depression than to make clear to its members the meaning of Christ in enjoining charity and the meaning of Paul in defining it. Half the troubles of this world come from lack of an understanding of that which is attempted. Nine-tenths of the lawsuits in the courts grow out of such misapprehensions.

The church has a more extensive mission than to relieve suffering by charity. It must also seek to bring those who are relieved into the fold. The mere gift of food and clothing will not accomplish this. Such doles must be accompanied by the qualities with which Paul invests charity. The givers, in order to do the most good to the church, must actually feel the language which Paul uses. His description is the essence of love of one's neighbor, which Jesus makes the cornerstone of Christianity. There can be no finer discipline on earth for the average man.

PARTY OF PROGRESS.

The Republican party moves with each year and advances with every Presidential election. It is the party of progress. Every national Republican platform is the immediate product of the needs and necessities, the duties and demands of each Presidential year. Republican principles and Republican policy are not linked to the fortunes of some perpetual candidate. They do not follow the commands of any one leader as the Denver Democratic platform will reflect the policy, preference and utterances of William J. Bryan.

Whoever the candidate be finally, the platform of the Republican party is visibly developing and taking shape and from the issues, utterances and national requirements of the day and the general opinion of the party as a whole.

The revision of the tariff will begin when the Presidential election is over. All Republicans are agreed to this. It will be a revision by the friends of the protective system and not by its enemies. It will look as much to the promotion of foreign trade by reciprocity as to the protection of domestic industry. The disturbances to trade will be as brief as possible. The benefits of change as great as possile.

The currency will be improved by making it elastic where the last panic proved it inelastic, and flexible. No flat currency will be permitted or accepted under any pretense. Solid value will rest behind every dollar, however issued. The base of the currency will be made more broad by including new classes of bonds as a basis for bank currency. This will reduce the rate of interest paid by public and semi-public corporations. It will increase the elasticity without reducing the stability of our banking currency. Financial convulsions will not again find our currency unprepared and the needs of commerce will find new issues accessible.

Legislation already passed upon the railroads will be enforced. Laws enacted must be obeyed. But neither vexatious burdens nor new interference will be laid on our railroad corporations. Instead, a period of peaceful adjustment will come in which the Interstate Commerce Commission will secure justice, protect equal private rights and stop any demand for new and radical leaislation by the efficient administration of existing laws.

Waterways on a great scale at home, international arbitration abroad, the early completion of the Panama Canal, a navy adequate to our needs, justice in trade and the tariff to our colonies and the exclusion of unfit immigration will be demanded. On this platform, using old principles for new needs, the Republicans will appeal to voters, certain of a majority.

FORMER UNITED SSATES SENATOR George L. Wellington and Congressmon George A. Pearre, who have been political enemies for several years, have buried the hatchet. They are said to have reached a friendly understanding as to their politics in Allegany county in future, the result of which will be, it is said, that Col. Pearre will be in control of the county and leave the city of Cumberland to Mr. Wellington. The latter says he has no political aspirations.

Two explanations of the treaty of peace between these very antagonistic leaders are offered by Republicans. One is that Wellington fears the nomination of B. H. Warner, of Montgomery county, for Congress, and he likes Warner less than he does Pearre, and the other is that he feels that in the last primaries young Lloyd Lowndes tried to defeat Wellington's man for County Treasurer. Under these conditions there was nothing else to do but make peace and an alliance with Pearre. Wellington, it is said, called on Pearre and held out the olive branch.

GRANTSVILLE.

Mr. Editor, it has been a long time since I saw any items from Grantsville in your columns, therefore will send you a few.

Miss Tibbie Shaw is spending her vacation with her parents at Hill Dale farm, east of Grantsville.

Miss Lula Shaw has returned from her trip to Berlin and Cumberland.

Miss Tenie Winterburg, who has been spending the winter with her mother and sister, has returned to Patterson, N. J.

Mr. Martin Winterburg, of Connecticut, is visiting his mother here.

Mr. Len Getty has gone to Meyersdale to get employment.

Mrs. Bevens who was burned so badly we are glad to say, is recovering.

Mr. Henry Baker is able to be out again and attend to business.

Mr. Charles Winterburg and little daughter, of Cresaptown, Md. and Mr. Henry Winterburg, of Cumberland, also Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, of Cumberland, attended the funeral of Mrs. William Winterburg of this place.

Rev. McCoy will begin his series of meetings at this place Monday night the 17th inst.

Mrs. Margaret Getty does not seem to be improving any.

We have just learned the sad news of the death of Mr. Milton Miller, son of Mr. Daniel P. Miller, of Chesnut Springs. He and his family went to Colorado some time ago for the benefit of their health. He was a resident of this place some years ago. The bereayed family have our heart felt sympathy.

BETHLEHEM.

The farmers of this community are busy opening the roads, which have been blokaded for the past week.

Our school, which has been small for the past month, on account of measles, is now progressing nicely, under the skillful management of Miss Mayme Baldwin.

Mr. Guy Harvey and Miss Dessie Callis were calling on Dr. Z. H. Moon, Sunday last.

Miss Victoria Moon is on the sick list.

Mrs. J. L. Harvey, who has been ill the past week, we are glad to state, is convalescing.

Mr. Ernest Hilleary of Oak Grove, was a pleasant caller at the home of J. E. Lish Sunday last.

Mr. J. E. Lish and family and Miss Mayme Baldwin, attended the grange literary meeting held in the grangers hall, at Kearney. All report a very pleasant time.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

Rain, snow and wind is the order of the day.

Mr. Columbus Paugh is cutting logs, with the assistance of Mr. Sidney Harvey, to build himself a large barn.

Mrs. Joseph Harvey is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mr. Granville Harvey, of South Fork, Pa., is visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity.

Our roads have been almost impassible but under the skillful management of Joseph Lee and C. L. Moon they are in much better condition now.

Prof. Charles Moore was visiting at Moon Bros'. last week.

James Lish and family were visiting friends near the White Church Sunday last.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. John Thomas is very ill. We hope for his speedy recovery.

We have had twenty five cases of measles in our vicinity, but we are glad to learn that they are all on their road to recovery.

PERISHED IN FLAMES.

C. W. Engle, Wife and Babe Met Horrible Death.

Rev. Albert Engle, pastor of the Swanton M. E. circuit, and serving a number of appointments in this county, received a telegram on last Thursday at Swanton announcing the sad death of his son, Charles W. Engle, wife and baby, near Preston, Minnesota. Mr. Engle, the victim of the disaster, was formerly a resident of this county and about two years ago went west and married.

The following account of the tragedy is taken from the Preston Times, of Preston, Minn.:

"About 12 o'clock last night the residence of Thomas Yeast, five and a-half miles south of town, was entirely consumed by fire, and Mrs. Rachel Yeast, aged 75 years, her daughter Orissa Engle and babe about a year old, and C. W. Engle perished.

"Just now it happened is not known, but the story as told by Mr. Yeast, who escaped after being severely burned about the head and hands, is as follows:

"The house, a story and a-half affair, was occupied by the two families, the old people sleeping down stairs. Mr. Engle had one room upstairs (the room through which the stove pipe passes) and his wife and baby occupied an adjoining room. It is supposed that the fire started from the chimney and, fanned by the high wind which was blowing, had gained rapid headway before Mr. Engle was awakened. He must have become bewildered for, instead of looking to his wife and baby, he rushed through the flames to the old people below and shouting that the house was burning down, begged to have someone throw something over him to put out the flames. Mr. Yeast promptly threw a quilt over him and made for a window which he broke out and called to his wife and Charley to follow him. Instead Mrs. Yeast started for the door saying just as he leaped through the window, "I am going after Rissa and the baby." The last seen of Mr. Engle was when he fell or threw himself upon the bed just vacated by Mr Yeast. The latter, barefooted and only clad in his underclothing, made several attempts to aid the ones left behind, but finally gave it up and hurried through the snow to the home of his son-in-law, Jesse Hurley, some 40 rods distant to summon assistance. A general alarm was sounded over the telephone line and neighbors and friends rushed to the scene, but could do nothing. As we go to press, the skulls and some bones of the unfortunate ones have been removed from the ruins.

"It is the saddest calamity that has ever befallen this locality and casts a gloom over the entire community whose sympathy goes out to the aged father and other relatives."

BITTINGER.

We all can be gay, when the season is May,
And skies all around us are clear;
But who can be sunny when hard up for money,
And "due drops" are terribly near.

F. M. Bittinger took a sugar pan over to Salisbury last week to have it repaired to be in readiness for the approaching sugar season.

Columbus Broadwater, of New Germany, was in this section last week looking up beef cattle.

The high temperature and frequent showers last week took much of the snow and caused some rise of waters in nearby streams.

W. H. Thomas, of Fike, spent last Monday with his son W. L. Thomas at this place.

Patterson Engle sold a fine young beef to Samuel Broadwater, of New Germany, last week.

Dr. R. C. Bowen, of Grantsville, was called to this place last Sunday afternoon to attend W. L. Thomas who was taken suddenly ill.

This week begins with another blizzard.

OAK GROVE.

Plenty of snow seems to be the order of the day.

Mr. C. E. Hilleary is off on a furlough for one week. The doctor forbade him to do work so he and his wife are visiting former friends at Piedmont and Keyser.

Mr. A. S. Moon, a former resident of this place, has recently moved to the Frazee farm near North Glade.

Mr. J. Timothy Moon, of this place, had a runaway Monday last. In spite of his bulldog tenacity, the colts carried him on the "bits" until they broke loose from the sled hurling him into a tie pile, cutting his head and face up somewhat, straining his shoulder, and breaking the check lines, thus freeing themselves. They were caught a quarter of a mile farther up the road by Clarence Rogers.

Timothy Moon has returned from a visit to his "alma mater" at Buckhannon, W. Va.

The Oak Grove Grange rendered an excellent public programme in Grange Hall at Kearney last Tuesday night. Every one was pleased with the performances and congratulated the Grange.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

WATERS ON A RAMPAGE.

Wilson Creek Rose Rapidly Saturday, But No Damage Resulted.

Last Saturday a decided thaw set in which, followed by a rain, resulting in the melting of the great body of snow and ice which had covered the ground to a depth of a foot or more for the past several weeks. Following the thaw and rain the waters in this section rose very rapidly and for a time Wilson's Creek, which flows through Oakland, threatented to flood the business houses along Second street. The property owners prepared for the invasion of the waters by removing their goods, and they had about completed their labors when the water begun to recede.

Many cellars were flooded in which heating plants were installed, quenching the fires under the boilers and making things extremely unpleasant for those who were compelled to remain in the buildings thus effected.

Saturday a Legal Holiday.

Next Saturday, the 22nd inst., being Washington's Birthday and a legal holiday throughout the country, the banks of Oakland and, we presume, the county, will observe the day as such, consequently no business will be transacted by these institutions upon that day.

The women of this town have labored earnestly and long in an endeavor to maintain truth and sobriety in the home, teaching their sons and daughters that these are cardinal virtues, and are to be prized far greater than rubies. They have recognized the fact that home-life is the foundation of all life, and that municipal, state and national existence is pure only as the home-life is pure. The women of this city have been the silent force, the under-current, that has been working so effectively through the years, the result of which has meant the ushering in of social conditions that are extremely wholesome.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

J. T. Patton Found Dead.

J. T. Patton was found dead at his residence in Tunnelton, W. Va. Death came supposedly from drinking wood alcohol. His wife and children had been on a visit to Mrs. Patton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Messenger, in Kingwood, and on their return in the evening the body of Mr. Patton was found in the house. Physicians were summoned and said life had been extinct six hours or more.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O.
Sold at Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. Offutt, John M. Davis, G. S. Hamill.
George W. Legge, John T. Mitchell, S. T. Jones.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE-PRES. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. RALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, was in the city Tuesday on business.

Rev. W. Taylor Sines, of Sines, was in the city Tuesday for a few hours.

Miss Nora Lantz, of Aurora, is here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bush.

Mrs. Joseph Martin, of New York, is in Oakland visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hinebaugh.

Miss Cleo Krantz, left for her home in Frederick county for a visit of a week or two yesterday morning.

Miss Gertrude Shirer, of this office, will go to Grafton tomorrow morning where she will visit relatives for a few days.

Dr. W. W. Davis, Superintendent of the Park, who was here a day or two last week, went to Baltimore Friday afternoon.

Mr. Edward J. Hamill, cashier of the Kitzmillerville bank, was in Oakland Sunday evening as the guest of his brother, Mr. M. R. Hamill.

Mr. Roy H. Hamill, superintendent of the Upper Potomac Coal Company, spent Sunday in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Claggett, who removed from Oakland a year or more ago to Hagerstown, will return here shortly to resume their residence.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Townshend and son Mr. Robert C. Townshend, left Oakland this morning for Parsons, West Va., to visit relatives for a short time.

Mr. J. P. Scott, a prominent attorney of Parsons, West Va., and Mr. C. D. Gillaspie, of Elkins, West Va., were business visitors in Oakland last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Horace Coddington returned to Oakland last Friday from a point in New Mexico where he had been working for the Santa Fe Railroad in the capacity of carpenter.

Mr. John T. Mitchell, accompanied by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Eva Mitchell, went to Cumberland Sunday afternoon to visit their relative, Mrs. Almira Mitchell, who is quite ill.

Miss Catharine Manges, who has been on an extended visit to friends and relatives in Philadelphia and other Pennsylvania cities, will return to her home in Oakland this afternoon.

A blizzard, the worst that has struck this country during the winter, which centralized itself over the middle west Tuesday, is eastward bound and will likely strike this section tonight.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

A RECORD BREAKER.

Fourteen Months Old Animal Netted Six Hundred and Ten Pounds.

Tuesday of this week Mr. W. J. Conneway, of District No. 8, this county, killed a fourteen-months' old Polled-Angus steer which dressed six hundred and ten pounds. The animal was allowed from birth to run with its dam which nourished it up to the time it was butchered. The meat was brought to Oakland yesterday and sold.

Miss Lulu Fringer, who has been at her home in Oakland for a few weeks, left here yesterday morning for Baltimore, from which city she will probably go south to accept a position in a millinery store.

The editor was in receipt of a postal from Mr. H. A. Rasche, station agent in Oakland, which was mailed from San Barnadino, Cal., a few days ago, which informs us that Mr. Rasche is in the land of flowers and he said that he is having a splendid time.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, president of the Kendall Lumber Company, on last Saturday started for Oregan and California to inspect the large timber holdings owned by the Kendall Company in those states. He expects to remain in the west for a month or more.

There is an aesthetic side to the good roads movement that is of no little importance. What is drearier, what more depressing than to drive along a country road deep with mud and furrowed by ruts the water standing in pools in the road and where ditches ought to be.

Mr. Irving R. Dickey, of the Cumberland bar, is in Oakland this week conducting the examination of witnesses in an equity case. The testimony is being taken before Court Examiner W. R. Offutt. Miss Robinette, a stenographer of Cumberland is recording the evidence.

Seven couples of Oakland's young people went to Deer Park Tuesday night as a sleighing party, returning to town at a late hour when they were entertained at lunch and a taffy pulling by Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Ward at their residence. The young folks had a most enjoyable time.

Mr. Roy Hammond, who was a student at Swathmore College, near Philadelphia, during the winter, returned to his home in Oakland last Friday night, owing to an injury he recently sustained to his eye which made it impossible for him to continue his studies. As soon as he recovers sufficiently he will return to school.

This is just the right size town to settle down in and enjoy life. Everything for the comfort of life can be bought here and $10 will go as far as $25 will in the large cities. When you want to leave the farm, come to our town and build a nice comfortable home and be among the best people in the world.

Messrs. William Callis and W. J. Kitzmiller, executors of the late John Kitzmiller's will, have advertised a sale of the personal property of the deceased to occur at his late home near Hoyes on Saturday, the 9th inst., when live stock, grain, hay, machinery, household effects, etc., will be sold at public auction.

Ex-Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, of Baltimore, came to Oakland last Saturday night in response to a telegram informing him of the serious illness of his little nephew, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Web Ravenscroft, of near Oakland, who died Sunday afternoon. Senator Ravenscroft returned to Baltimore Tuesday afternoon.

Ex-Sheriff Albert L. Lee, of Kitzmillerville, and ex-Sheriff W. Perry Lee, of Bayard, were in Oakland a day or two this week on business. The latter ex-Sheriff spent several months recently south of Richmond, Va., where he was employed as sawyer on a large lumber mill, returning to his native heath a month or two ago.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

Mrs. D. E. Offutt and son Mr. Wm. R. Offutt, who were in Cumberland a day or two last week, where on Saturday they attended the funeral of the former's sister, Mrs. Anna B. Frost, returned to Oakland Sunday evening. Mrs. Frost was the widow of the late Meshack A. Frost, and died at her home near Rawlings, Allegany county, on Thursday. She was aged 71 years.

Rev. Albert Engle, of Swanton, in company with Mr. A. F. George and Mr. Chauncy Glass, also of Swanton, was in Oakland yesterday afternoon a few hours. Rev. Engle, accompanied by Mrs. Engle, will leave here within a few days for Preston, Minn., near which town their son, daughter-in-law and little grandchild were burned to death a few weeks ago, an account of which will be found elsewhere in THE REPUBLICAN today. Rev. and Mrs. Engle expect to be in the west for upwards of a month.

HE DIED IN THE JAIL.

John Collins, Incarcerated in the County Prison on Criminal Charge.

Sometime between the midnight hour Sunday night and Monday morning of this week John Collins, arrested some weeks ago in company with "Bill" Purnell, charged with stealing hams from the smoke house of Mrs. Nancy Whetsell on Oak street, died in the hospital ward of the jail, alone and unattended, his body being found about seven o'clock Monday morning by Earl Durst, son of Jail Warden Durst, who went into the hospital to wait on the man should he want anything.

Immediately after the death of the man was made known to Sheriff Brown under direction of the proper officials, a jury was empannelled to inquire into the cause of death which body after viewing the remains and hearing the testimony of Dr. Legge, the jail physician, rendered a verdict that the deceased had come to his death by natural causes, heart disease being, according to the testimony of the physician, the immediate cause of his demise.

The dead man was ill at the time of his arrest, being a sufferer with heart disease and dropsy. While he was given as good attention as possible by the county authorities at the jail, surroundings in the hospital are such that it is almost impossible to make anyone comfortable.

The inquisatorial body summoned by the Sheriff condemned the Commissioners for not providing the necessities for the comfort of those confined to the hospital at the Jail and recommended that the attention of the Board be directed to the conditions of the beds, bedclothing and the utter lack of furniture in this department of the prison.

A few days before his death the prisoner sent for Rev. James E. Connell, pastor of the Catholic church in Oakland and was received into membership of that denomination, Rev. Connell conducting the funeral services Tuesday afternoon in the corridor of the Jail at which a number of persons were present, among them being one son of the deceased. The interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

At the jail on Tuesday Sheriff Brown summoned a jury for the purpose of inquiring into the mental condition of Charles Davis, son of Thomas Davis, Esq., of Kitzmillerville, who has been in jail here since shortly before last Thanksgiving day. The young man is aged 20 years and according to the testimony before the jury he has been suffering from epilepsy since eight years of age, and at present is of unsound mind. The jury adjudged him insane and Judge Henderson has ordered him taken to one of the state hospitals for treatment and care.

The man who wrestles with the cow and learns the calves to suck, who casts the corn before the swine, is now in greatest luck; for butter's on the upper grade, veal's higher that a kite, pork is climbing up the scale and beef is out of sight, eggs he gathers every day from his Poland chicken coop are almost worth their weight in gold and we are in the soup. His corn brings him a fancy price, its rising every day, and he rakes in all kinds of mon for a half load of hay. The farmers is in the saddle and when he comes to town the rest of us by right should go way back and sit down.

What might have resulted in a very serious fire last Thursday afternoon was happily averted by the quick action of Mayor McComas, who happened to be passing the house where the fire originated, it being the home of Mr. Scott T. Jones, on Second street. The fire had its origin in the furnace room, caused, in all probability by a live coal rolling out of the furnace door onto some paper lying nearby which communicated to a lot of kindling wood stacked under the the stairway. Mrs. Jones discovered the blaze, who ran to the door and gave the alarm. A house fire extinguisher being on the premises Mayor McComas, secured this and with the contrivance extinguished the flames before the arrival of the chemical engine which was on the way. Practically no damage was done to Mr. Jonea' home.

The local paper should be found in every home. No children should grow up ignorant who can be taught to appreciate the home paper. It is said to be the stepping stone of intelligence in all those matters not to be found in books. Give your children a foreign paper which contains not a word about any person, place or thing, which they saw or perhaps ever heard of, and how could you expect them to be interested. But let them have the home paper and read of people whom they meet and of places of which they are familiar and soon an interest is awakened which increases with every arrival of the local paper. Thus a habit of reading is formed and those children will read the papers all their lives and become intelligent men and women, a credit to their ancestors, strong in knowledge of the world as it is today.

Young Men's Meeting.

Meeting at Young Men's Christian Society rooms every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Everybody welcome, particularly those who are not connected with any church young men are cordily invited. Subject for Feb. 23 is "Jesus at the Pool of Bethseda."

THE DEATH RECORD.

ISAAC M. UMBEL.

Isaac M. Umbel, aged 74 years, 5 months and 7 days, departed this life on Wednesday, February 12, 1908, at his home near Fike, Garrett county, Maryland, after a very brief season of suffering from a combined attack of typhoid-pneumonia and paralysis. The last sad rites and burial of this useful friend and neighbor took place on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 13th, at 2 o'clock p. m. in the presence of an assembly of hundreds of persons, who attested by their presence the high esteem in which the deceased was held by his large circle of acquaintances. The funeral services were held in the German Baptist Brethren church at Fike and were conducted by Elder Jeremiah Thomas assisted by a number of his fellow ministers. The deceased was a faithful and consistent member of the Brethren church, was a deacon of his home congregation and was the oldest and most active Sunday school worker in his section of the county, and will be sadly missed for the helping hand that was always willing to help forward the cause of the Master, and will long be remembered by the many friends who knew and esteemed him. This taking away of one from our midst has left a bereaved widow and two sons as well as three daughters and other relatives to whom in this sad hour of trial the sympathy of the entire community goes out in unmeasured fullness.

J. B. E.

JAMES WEIR.

James Weir of Garrett county, died at his home a few miles from Lonaconing Thursday afternoon. Mr. Weir was born in Weshaw, Scotland, in 1840. He came here early in life and when the cival war broke out he joined Company A, Second Maryland Volunteers, and served three years. He participated in several general engagements and was on Hunter's raid. He dug coal the greater part of his life. His wife and seven children survive him. They are: Hugh, James, Thomas and Walter, Miss Rhoda, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Peter Smith, both of Lonaconing.

Deceased was a member of McPherson Post, G. A. R., and Garrison 109, Army and Navy Union, which organizations attended his funeral Saturday from the residence. Rev. William Rogers, pastor of the Lonaconing M. E. church officiated. At 11:45 a special car on the electric railway took the cortege to Westernport where interment was made in Philos cemetery.

ELVINA F. HAYES.

Elvina F. Hayes died near Fort Pendleton, Garrett county, Jan. 30, 1908, aged 61 years, 1 month and 4 days. Her life was one of trials and hardships from her youth. She lost her eyesight when she was fourteen years old, but struggled along for nearly fifty years in obscure blindness, and yet she was kind and patient and did not murmur nor complain. She was converted and became a christian when nineteen years old, and lived a consistent and beautiful life. In later years she suffered with a cancer. She bore it all patiently, and sometimes would rejoice even while suffering. She leaves two brothers and two sisters and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. We doubt not but their loss is her eternal gain. Her funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. P. Idleman at the Oak Grove church, and she was laid to rest near by, in J. M. White's family burying ground, where she awaits the Resurrection.

IANTHA MAGDALENE WARNICK.

At Fairview, District No. 11, of Garrett county, on February 10th, 1908, Mrs. Iantha Magdalene Warnick, wife of Ashford Warnick, departed this life, aged 65 years, 11 months and 28 days. For many months prior to her demise Mrs. Warnick had been a great sufferer with a complication of diseases, but she bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. She was a kind mother, an affectionate wife and a good neighbor. She was converted fifteen years ago under the ministry of Rev. J. H. Enlow and joined the M. E. church and was faithful until death. She was the mother of ten children, two sons having preceded her to the grave a few years ago, both dying at distant points and in hospitals where they were being treated. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. McCoy in the Fairview church and the remains were laid to rest in the Warnick cemetery.

CECIL RAVENSCROFT.

Died, at the home of his parents near Oakland on Sunday afternoon, February 15th, at 5:30 o'clock, Cecil, the infant son of Dr. and Mrs. Webster Ravenscroft, of inflammation. The little one was aged 17 days, but during its brief life upon earth the tender cords of love had become so strongly woven about the hearts of the loving parents that in their breaking it was like severing the cords that had bound them for years. The funeral was conducted from the home on Monday afternoon by Rev. J. B. Workman, of the M. E. church, with interment in the Oakland cemetery.

CLETE M'KENZIE.

Clete McKenzie, aged 49 years, a widower, residing near Pea Ridge, this county, died on Tuesday of this week. His funeral took place yesterday from St. John's church, Lonaconing.

DRINK RULE ENFORCED.

Of 20,000 Men Affected, Only 25 Dismissed by B. & O.

"It is too early to discuss the effect of the anti-drink order recently issued," said an official of the B. & O. yesterday.

"Third Vice-President George L. Potter, who issued the prohibition notice January 1, clearly outlined its purpose. He made the men to understand that it was intended for the betterment of the service, for greater safety in operation and for the ultimate credit and popularity of the company.

"The order is being rigidly enforced. No one in the prohibited class found violating the order is exempt from summary dismissal. This is well understood among the B. & O. superintendents along all divisions of the road. No shielding of the violators nor excuses will be accepted at headquarters.

"It is to the credit of the operating force in the company's service to note that after six weeks of enforcement the rule has resulted in the dismissal of only 25 men. When it is recalled that it applies to 15,000 or 20,000 men, this small percentage can be better appreciated.

Mortgagee's Sale OF Valuable Coal AND Mining Rights AND SURFACE In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in the Mortgage from Charles D. Gillespie and Minnie M. Gillespie, his wife, to The Lonaconing Savings Bank of Allegany County, dated the 13th day of August, 1907, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, follos, 128 &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said Mortgage, the undersigned Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in said mortgage, will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on SATURDAY, The 14th Day of March,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock P. M., in front of the the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following described Coal and Mining rights, surface of land and other rights located in Election District No. 8 of Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, on the Western Maryland Railroad:

1. An undivided two-third interest in and to all the coal, and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of a tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract called "Mount Pisgah", and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", South 83 degrees West, 34 perches, North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone, North 53 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the tract called "Elk Garden", then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing Three Hundred and Fifteen Acres

2. An undivided two-third interest in and to all that part of the surface of the aforesaid tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, course and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah", and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with part of the 12th line thereof, South 73 degrees West, 65½ perches to a stone, thence North 57½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", thence with part of said 14th line North 53 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone, standing at the end thereof, thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone-pile, thence due South, 75 perches to the beginning.

Containing One Hundred Acres.

3. All the rights of the said mortgagors used in conjunction with Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, the water from a spring upon her land adjoining the above described part of said tract called "Elk Garden", and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ said water in business.

This property adjoins the mining property of the Davis Coal and Coke Company and is underlaid with the same veins of coal now being worked by said Company at its great plant at Henry, West Virginia, and is almost in sight of the latter point.

The improvements consist of a dwelling house and necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE, As prescribed by said Mortgage—Cash on day of sale. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in Mortgage.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

A Berkshire Rebel.

By FRANK H. MELOON.

Copyright, 1907, by Frank H. Meloon.

IN the year 1930 rumors of an incipient rebellion in the Bay State reached the ears of the alert agents of the newly installed food trust government at Washington, whose rise to a complete assumption of the reins of power men could clearly foresee even in the beginning of the century. The affair threatened to come off on no less a scale than that of the bloodless whisky insurrection, the local outbreak occurring in opposition to the excise law passed by the congress of the United States in March, 1791, and against which President Washington was forced to call out an army of 15,000 militia. Deciding that the arrest of a few of the ostensible ringleaders would put a sudden end to the Massachusetts affair, a secret service man was assigned to duty in each county with instructions to find out the local heads of the impending uprising.

My order was brief and to the point. It read:

William Crummett:

Uprising against food trust threatened in Massachusetts. Proceed to Pittsfield, station headquarters and report as soon as possible Berkshire county end.

LESLIE KERMIT, Chief.

It was in the month of July. I therefore regarded the order as a special stroke of good fortune; also I had been planning a vacation in the heart of the Berkshire hills. This business, which in truth I regarded as far from serious, I could easily combine with pleasure, thus sugar coating my pill of a duty irksome only because it was ill named.

Instead of obeying orders to the letter, I was supposed to use my discretion. Consequently I passed through Pittsfield and the junction beyond, getting off the train at Coltsville. It was a notion of mine that beneath the rotundity and satisfaction of the gentleman who occupied the seat ahead lay something of the mystery I had set out to solve. When he alighted at Coltsville, therefore, I followed suit, saying to myself that this and not the ordinary criminal type of man would be the one most liable to concern itself in a rebellion against the authority of the great amalgamated food trust.

SHOWING THE OMNIPOTENT BADGE OF THE FOOD TRUST.

He went to Bald Mountain inn, and I, like Ruth, the Moabitess, in her pursuit of Boaz, followed. At Bald Mountain inn he ordered a room; so did I. Later I consulted the landlord, showing the omnipotent badge of the food trust, before which he bowed servile to the core, while I smiled grimly at the fellow's look of mortal fear. When interrogated, he said that the man, who had registered himself as J. S. Rookshaw, had insisted upon a well cur tained room. This confirmed my suspicions of mysterious concealment, fully arousing every detective instinct in my body.

During the next three days I worked as hard as a newspaper man. J. S. Rookshaw, I learned, kept high society hours, being heard moving about in his room when decent folk were trying to catch the fast express to the land of Nod. By day he slept, only once in those seventy-two hours going out for exercise. At that time his face had an expression betokening both exhaustion and anxiety. He kept an assortment of birds, which he paid the village boys to bring him occasionally, but which he soon released, buying more as opportunity afforded. Occupying the room adjoining his, my only regret was that there was no transom between us. Evidently J. S. Rookshaw was too sharp a bird to be trapped in such fashion.

Each night I was disturbed by a sound reminding me of the sawing of boards. At last I confronted my man in the hallway, asking him bluntly why he made such a noise when other folks were trying to sleep. He turned red in his apoplectic face, apologized and said he was troubled with insomnia. Although insomnia did not account for the sawing sound, I concluded he would, if questioned, ascribe that to the asthma.

Both the landlord and I were much perplexed by the man's purchase of birds, but the youth of Coltsville came and went, glad and unquestioning. What, I asked myself, could J. S. Rookshaw, a dignified, middle aged and evidently prosperous man, who seemed of sound mind and appetite when met at the dining table, want of fresh caught hawks, bluefays, robins and even ordinary English sparrows? Why, too, after he had got them, did he release them? I was loath to accept insanity as the solution since I prided myself on having scented a deeper mystery.

In my own mind I had a suspicion that they might be trained as carriers of messages. Yet I could see no reason why such secrecy should be exercised when a private code and the telegraph might be more safely and more conveniently used. Though the whole thing was, on the surface, inexplicable, I was convinced that in some manner J. S. Rookshaw was connected with the premeditated rebellion.

On the tenth day, during the absence of Mr. Rookshaw, the landlord admitted me to the room of his strange boarder. In one corner I found a few feathers; in another were feathers and sawdust. A hairbrush, afterward carefully cleaned, had been used to sweep up the debris. The contents of the well filled wastebasket I immediately seized and carried in triumph to my room, spending hours in sorting what seemed to furnish the only promise of a clew.

All the specimens of handwriting I found were torn into small bits. As, however, no two pieces of paper can be torn in exactly the same manner as regards fit, I managed to so piece them together that I could make out such terms as rising, flight, flee, bold stroke, triumph, difficulties overcome and a few others of no less suspicious import. Such incriminating fragments as these I carefully preserved to send to the chief at Washington with my report. The rest, which were of no valtie, I burned.

On the morning following my securing this evidence J. S. Rookshaw knocked at my door, which I opened, at the same time inviting him to enter. He did so, breathed a deep sigh of relief and wiped the perspiration from his brow with a red bandanna. After a few preliminary remarks he again tendered his apologies for having disturbed me from time to time and alluded with a sly wink to his "insomnia." He concluded by inviting me to accompany him after breakfast on a drive.

"Today," he exclaimed pompously, yet in a low tone, as if he were fearful of being overheard—"today sees the crowning of my labors with success!"

As he finished he stared at me very hard, and, in spite of myself, I started with surprise. Was the rebellion, I wondered, to so soon set up its daring standard? It did not seem probable. Yet I felt certain that I had within my grasp, as it were, the man who controlled whatever segments of the revolutionary circle lay scattered among the Berkshire hills. I determined to surprise my adversary.

"What?" I cried pointedly. "You expect success so soon?"

He jumped as if given a violent shock, at the same time turning that peculiar hue of red assumed by a lobster squirming in the boiling pot before the cover is put on.

"You have guessed! You know?" he whispered hoarsely.

"Yes," I responded grimly.

"And your advice?" he asked.

"Is for you to fly." I had no instructions to arrest the fellow. An ill advised arrest might influence the result of the coming state campaigns, for the food trust, powerful though it was, had not then dared to deprive the people of the voting franchise.

"I intend to do so," he admitted frankly in a tone I was at a loss to comprehend.

He ended the conversation by once more inviting me to accompany him on an after breakfast carriage drive, intimating that I should be a witness of his success. Still unable to catch the import of his promise, I accepted the invitation, being resolved at all events not to lose sight of my rare bird, especially on what promised to be so important a day to the plans I had been dispatched to frustrate.

TAKING NO NOTICE OF ME, HE BEGAN TO UNDO HIS BUNDLE.

In the neighborhood of Coltsville there is a certain tablelike cliff known as the Devil's leap. Not over eight feet high at the most, it was no terrible leap for a man, to say nothing of the devil, if his build were such as to permit the performance of an indifferent athletic feat. To the top of this wide spreading rock formation J. S. Rookshaw led me.

Could it be, I asked myself that he premeditated precipitating me from the top? I smiled at the idea of my fat and already puffing companion planning a personal conflict with a young man of my own muscular strength. He carried bundles which indicated that he was on a fishing expedition, but there was no pond, lake or stream near the Devil's leap.

At the verge of the cliff he stopped. Taking no notice of me, he began to undo his bundle, but suddenly paused.

"May I ask you," he said, seemingly aware of my presence for the first time—"may I ask you as a personal favor to go to the foot of this cliff and there await me? I am sorry to have led you up here and must plead preoccupation of mind. Of course if you do not feel like granting me the favor I cannot prevent your remaining."

For a second only I hesitated; then, convinced that the man was a harmless lunatic who could hardly escape me if he tried, I resolved to humor his whim. A walk of a couple of minutes sufficed to bring me to a point below J. S. Rookshaw and his bulk of two hundred and some odd pounds.

"I HAVE SOLVED THE PROBLEM OF AERIAL NAVIGATION."

There a strange sight met my eyes. The man had arrayed himself in the queerest costume I have ever beheld. The headpiece was kin to the topknot of a bluejay, the tail was like that of a sparrow, and the wings were as those of a hawk, many times enlarged.

"It is evident to me that I have solved the problem of personal aerial navigation," he explained floridly, chuckling and flapping his wings two or three times.

The movement was so indescribably comical and the outcome of my adventure so utterly unexpected that I was overcome by laughter which my chagrin was not sufficiently powerful to check.

"Don't laugh at me!" begged the fat J. S. Rookshaw, looking hurt. I could see that the man was very sensitive, yet I couldn't for the life of me control that laugh, which, like murder, would out.

The eyes of J. S. Rookshaw lit with heroic determination. Again the monstrous wings flapped comically and slowly, the sparrow's tail gave a little twitch, the bluejay's topknot a coquettish duck, and my friend, in all the majesty of his accumulated flesh, "clove the air"—to my feet!

There was a cracking sound as the woodwork and feathers of the sparrow's tail were crushed beneath him, but the humor of it was half lost on me as I caught the pathos of Rookshaw's half subdued sob of disappointment.

"The tail broke before you [illegible]" I declared, seeking to alleviate evident mental suffering as soon as I saw that no bones were broken.

"Do you think so?" he asked hopefully.

"I certainly do," I replied firmly. "Next time, though, I'd advise you to get a younger and a lighter man to make the first experiment. In case something goes wrong the world will then be in no danger of losing one of its greatest inventors."

J. S. Rookshaw took the compliment seriously and looked 99 per cent pleased.

"An eight foot fall is," he admitted, rubbing himself rather ruefully, "more than I care to take again."

On the strength of my adventure I reported that the rebellion in Massachusetts was a hoax. In this instance at least the trust was shown to have been without mistrust, for the story of the uprising turned out to be the invention of a clever newspaper man who had thus set all official Washington by the ears.

As the result of an invitation to visit Rookshaw at his city home I met his charming daughter Viola. Rookshaw is now my father-in-law, and I have made several descents from the Devil's leap in the interests of science. Rookshaw is still hoping that the next attempt will turn out to be an ascension.

Willing Hands.

There is a good story going the rounds in Pittsburg of a young man, formerly a stockbroker, who dropped many thousands in speculation during the early spring.

One night shortly after going to bed the Pittsburger was awakened by strange signs. At first motion to jump up he was greeted by a hoarse voice. "If you stir, you're a dead man!" it said. "I'm looking for money!"

"In that case," pleasantly answered the erstwhile speculator, "kindly allow me to arise and strike a light. I shall deem it a favor to be permitted to assist in the search."—Harper's Weekly.

BOWSER THE SAVANT.

Flies a Kite to Learn What Insects Inhabit Upper Air.

THE TEST ENDS IN DISASTER.

Experiment Attracts a Crowd of Small Boys, and Policeman Interferes—His Wife, as Usual, Shows Little Sympathy For Him.

[Copyright, 1907, by T. C. McClure.]

When Mr. Bowser came home to dinner the other evening he was fifteen minutes late and had that thoughtful look on his face that comes to a man who is given a lead nickel in change by a street car conductor. When Mrs. Bowser called attention to his lateness he made an ambiguous reply, and it was not until the meal was over that he woke up and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, this is a fine starlight night, with a breeze of about six miles an hour blowing. A more fitting night for the experiment could not have been made to order."

Mrs. Bowser looked at him and groaned.

There was to be an experiment.

She had thought all the time that he might have a headache.

What sort of an experiment? Was he going to try a patent fuel and melt the top off the range or some gas saving patent and blow up the house? She was wondering over it when he said:

"For the last year there has been a hot dispute between the savants as to the insects occupying the upper strata of the atmosphere. We know that the lower strata are teeming with house flies, horse flies, mosquitoes, moths, bugs and other things, and for the last 200 years savants have let it go at that. They have now turned their attention to the upper strata, however, and are anxious to ascertain the forms of life. What insects exist a mile high? Do they have legs? Do they have lungs? Do they have fangs or teeth? Do they exist for a day or a week or a month? Do they have sight or are they blind? All these are queries to be answered, and the man who answers them first is going to find himself famous."

"But what have you got to do with it?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Nothing except that I may be the man to solve the mysteries. I rather expect to be."

"Are you going up in a balloon?"

"No, ma'am. People have been going up in balloons for the last hundred years, and they have not brought down the information sought for. Indeed, they have rather muddled things up."

HE WENT INTO HIS OWN BACK YARD.

"If you don't go up in a balloon, I don't see how"—

"Of course you don't. A woman seldom sees anything except another woman's hat. It is not expected of her. The solution is dead easy, however, to a man—to me. It is so easy that I am amazed that there should be any reason for dispute. I hope to settle the thing in an hour."

"I hope you will," she demurely replied. "Now that I come to think of it, I have often wondered what sort of creatures were roaming around up there. I have wondered whether they were longtailed or bobtailed, whether they were cross eyed or not, whether they were lopeared and cockeyed or as handsome as angels. You will catch me three or four, won't you?"

His Face Gets Purple.

"By the seventeen bulls of Bull's Run, but are you talking such nonsense to me?" shouted Mr. Bowser as his face grew as purple as an old plum.

"I—I didn't mean it for nonsense."

"Then you are a born idiot! I might have known better than to sit down and talk on any serious subject with you. How could I expect you to understand and appreciate? This ends it. Not another word. I make my discoveries alone. When my name is heralded all over the country, as will be the case inside a week, I will even deny that there is a Mrs. Bowser. I will say that you died ten years ago of softening of the brain."

"But I thought from what you said that there might be insects in the upper strata with two humps on them, like a dromedary, and that it would be so nice to keep one under a glass case and feed him on bones from the table. If you were very good, you might feed him once in awhile yourself. We could call him Willie."

For the next sixty seconds Mr. Bowser was threatened with a stroke of apoplexy.

His eyes hung out. His ears worked. His bald head turned the color of raspberry ice cream.

There is hardly a doubt that he would have been a goner if he hadn't made the greatest effort in the world to hang on to himself and if he hadn't determined on killing Mrs. Bowser in her bed after he had made his experiments a howling success. He glared at her and glared and glared, but he didn't say another word. Her doom was sealed.

Out in the vestibule as he came in he had left a large box kite and a small lantern and a ball of stout twine. He now went out and got the lantern and lighted it. Mrs. Bowser wanted to ask more questions. She wanted to ask if he didn't think that the smell of fried bacon would bring most of the inhabitants of that upper strata down to earth long enough to be lassoed, but a look into his face kept her lips closed. He had become dangerous. One more word from her would have sent him off like a Du Pont powder magazine.

In five minutes she saw what he was at. He was going to send up a kite with a lighted lantern attached to attract the insects up there. He was going to do more. On one side of the kite he pinned a sheet of sticky fly paper so as to catch and detain any wandering inhabitant. The inhabitant must either come down or eat the kite up.

Mr. Bowser didn't propose to have his experiments perilled by the presence of a crowd. He went into his own back yard to send that kite soaring aloft. There was a good breeze for kiteflying, and, after galloping up and down the yard a few times and making a few failures, away she went toward the clouds, and then with the aid of the stepladder he climbed to the roof of the shed and sat down to let the fly paper do its scientific work. The secrets of the upper strata were about to be solved for the first time in the history of man, and the solver couldn't be blamed for feeling a warm glow stealing over him.

Mr. Bowser had taken the boys into consideration when he sought his back yard, but not sufficiently. He hadn't figured on the fact that when a boy sees a light bobbing around in the heavens he is bound to find out whether Mars has broken loose from its wharf or some one has sent up a lantern. His kite was not yet 200 feet high when twenty pairs of sharp eyes were watching that lantern and wondering where the string led to. In ten minutes they had located it and were running down the alley and taking seats on top of the fence and calling to each other:

"Say, now, it's Mr. Bowser, and he's got hold of a great idee!"

Offered Money to Vanish.

The first comers were offered 10 cents apiece to vanish, but they indignantly refused. If there was anything in the shape of a messenger coming down from the upper strata they wanted to be there to see. It was inevitable that a policeman should get on to the boys soon after they had got on to Mr. Bowser. He followed the crowd down the alley, and men and women followed him. It was reported that another "crime wave" had set in, and they wanted to help hang somebody. Mr. Bowser was seen sitting on the shed and holding the string of the kite. Just as he felt a nibble from some creature of the clouds the cop climbed the fence and called out:

"See here, old man, what's all this about?"

"In the interest of science," was the reply.

"In the interest of bosh! You get that kite down at once. Can't you see that you are drawing a crowd and disturbing the peace? There'll be a thousand people here in no time."

"I am on my own land, sir," protested Mr. Bowser.

"That makes no difference. You either bring that kite down or I'll bring you."

Mr. Bowser rose up to protest anew and in more vigorous language, and in his excitement he slipped and went falling from the roof upon the grass. There was an awful yell from a hundred throats. The kite began to fall, and everybody rushed for the string. They ran over the prostrate man; they broke down fences; they snapped clotheslines. A minute later the yard was cleared as the crowd ran up the alley to catch the falling kite. Then the dazed and trampled Mr. Bowser sat up to hear some one saying:

"Poor man! He will never try it again, and I shall never have a two humped insect and call him Willie!"

M. QUAD.

Probably.

"I've just been thinking," said Willieboy.

"Thinking what?" demanded Silliman, to whom the idea of Willieboy's thinking was somewhat disconcerting.

"That in Adam's case it must have been a real re-leaf to change his clothes," said Willieboy.—Harper's Weekly.

Enterprise.

"Sell ye a nice air cushion cheap."—Browning's Magazine.

A Safe Pursuit.

It's got to be I dursn't go
Out in the woods to shoot
Fur fear I'll be mistook fur game
By some gash-dern galoot.

But I kin set upon the "crick"
Ez often ez I wish,
I guess they ain't nobuddy round
Will take me fur a fish!

—Joe Cone in Puck.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, if taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Harsh, probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. 25c for 5o boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes at Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT, DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST, OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m., Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m., †6.45 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland.

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; 2250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.
Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.
New Buildings with modern improvements.
Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees. All included in an annual charge of $300 payable quarterly in advance.
Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.
Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.
Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.
Write for particulars.
Term commences September 19th, 1907.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
College Park, Md.
22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others." J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Oakland, Md.

DECIDED NOT TO PERMIT OF FURTHER DELAY

Democrats in the Senate Rushed Through the Disfranchising Amendment.

REPUBLICANS TAKEN BY SURPRISE

The Republican Senators Had a Verbal Agreement With the Opposition That the Measure Was Not to be Acted Upon Until Tuesday.

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 14.—The Constitutional amendment designed to disfranchise the colored voters of the state was finally passed by the Senate this morning under suspension of the rules. Every member of the Senate was in his seat when the bill came up, and the vote was on strict party lines. Eighteen Democratic Senators voted for the bill and nine Republicans against. Only 17 votes were needed to make the three-fifths majority required by law for Constitutional amendments. The measure will be submitted to the people for ratification at the general election in November.

The Republicans did not expect the bill to be put in its final passage this week, as it came from the House only yesterday. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Senate Committee on Constitutional Amendments met and took up the measures. Senator Baker is the only Republican on the Committee, and at his suggestion it was decided to make the bill the special order for next Tuesday at 1 o'clock after reading it, the first time last night and the second time this morning.

After agreeing to the proposal of Senator Baker the Democrats found that several of their members would be in Richmond, Va., next Tuesday on Legislative business. As 17 votes were needed, the Democrats decided not to take any chances by delaying action, and late last night decided to suspend the rules and pass the bill this morning.

Senator Baker, the minority member of the Committee, was much displeased at the decision to dispose of the bill on such short notice, and he so expressed himself in the debate in the Senate today.

Senator Linthicum spoke in opposition to the proposed postponement, and he was followed by Senator Gorman, who said there was no agreement to postpone action till Tuesday. He thought Senator Baker was reflecting on the Committee. Mr. Baker replied that he meant to cast no reflections.

The motion for making the bill the special order was then defeated by a party vote and a parliamentary mixup followed. When this had been straightened out by President Seth a motion to strike out the enacting clause of the bill was made by Senator Baker.

Senators Lancaster and France also spoke for the Republicans, but as the Democrats had decided not to have any debate on their side there was no reply. Senator Baker's motion to strike out the enacting clause was lost and then Senator Gorman moved to suspend the rules and put the bill on its final passage. The bill was immediately passed.

Subscribe for the Republican.

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

ELGIN'S LOSS $100,000.

This Was In the Six Years the Town Owned Its Electric Light Plant

A municipal electric light plant was installed in 1888 and leased to a private company in 1904. It is estimated that the loss during this period was at least $100,000 as compared with what it would have cost to light the streets by contract. A city official, quoted in "The Business of Municipalities and Private Corporations Compared," gives $106.73 as a moderate estimate of the annual cost per arc. He says:

"The electrician's report shows that the city has been selling light for from 25 per cent to 50 per cent less than the cost of manufacture. Members of the electric light department admitted they could not run economically for less than $35,000 per year, but they wanted $45,000. Under our contract with the private company we light the same number of lamps and more hours per year for $15,654, a saving of $29,000 per year, figuring operating expenses only. Information from another source makes these figures $42,000 and $14,326 respectively. Statements from the light department show that if proper attention had been given to repairs of lamps at least $2,000 in coal would have been saved. Hardly a joint in our whole forty-five mile circuit is soldered or wrapped; they are simply twisted together. There is no estimate of the enormous loss of current over such loose joints, and yet it has been so for sixteen years."

The following story shows how this plant was made to serve the private ends of the politicians: A mayor who was a candidate for re-election attended a dance given by a local lodge. Noticing how brilliantly the hall was lighted with electric lamps the mayor said, "How much do you boys pay for those lights?" He was told $25 per month. "I will do it for $10," replied the mayor.

CHANGE IN WILMINGTON. O.

Municipal Lighting Plant Abandoned After Ten Disastrous Years.

A responsible citizen of Wilmington sends the following information:

"In the year 1892 the village of Wilmington built an electric light plant at the cost of some $10,000. The municipality from year to year made changes and additions and had accidents from bad management until in the year 1902 it decided to sell the plant, it having cost on an average over $10,000 per year to operate same, frequently being entirely without light for from one week to three months at a time. The service was very inferior, and current was furnished customers from 4 to 5 o'clock in the evening until midnight. The number of street lamps varied from 80 to 100.

"The plant was sold, together with the franchise for light and water, for the sum of $12,000, the plant being worth as junk about $7,000, the other $5,000 being for the rights and privileges under the franchise. The company that bought it constructed a new plant and furnishes an all night service."

At present the total cost to the village for the lighting of the streets (123 arcs), city hall and other public buildings, together with fire protection from eighty-one hydrants and water for the public buildings, is less than the cost of operating the electric light plant for an average of ninety arcs under the municipal regime, without any allowance for lost taxes and depreciation, the latter item alone amounting to $1,200 a year.

Didn't Even Need Raking.

During the discussion of the Meden bill for cheaper gas in the Michigan legislature Congressman Legare told the following story of a cook he had brought from home with him. She was a splendid servant, but she didn't know anything about gas to cook with, so he went to the kitchen with her to explain about the range. So that she could see how it operated he lit each of the many burners. While still explaining a message called him from the kitchen, and he left her, saying, "I guess you will find it will work all right now, Martha." He didn't see the cook again for four or five days; then upon entering the kitchen he said, "Well, Martha, how's that range doing?" To his utter consternation she replied: "'Deed, sir, that's the best stove I ever did see. That fire that you kindled for me four days ago is still a-burning, and it ain't even low-ered once."—Progressive Age.

Municipal Markets In Berlin.

Municipal ownership, or municipal trading, as it is termed in England, has had several hard jolts of late. The most recent blow was reported last week from Berlin, Germany, the mayor of which city declares that owing to the lower prices at which the department stores are now selling foodstuffs the municipal market halls in Berlin are being operated at a loss. The question of leasing to private concerns these halls, of which there are fifteen in Berlin, is being seriously considered.—Dry Goods Economist.

Never Operated by the City.

An electric light plant was installed in Hudson, Wis., nineteen years ago, but, according to the mayor, has never been operated by the city, having been leased successively to various parties. The city also contracts for the pumping in the waterworks, which it owns.

A Good Rule For Corporations.

Show to the voters that you have the interest of your section at heart as much as they have; that you are investing large sums of money in order to serve them properly and let your service testify for itself.—H. M. Moore in Progressive Age.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms, good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

REPORT NOT TAINTED

Civic Federation Investigators Not Influenced by Subscribers.

Professor Parsons, an M. O. Member of the Commission, Denies That Corporation Contributions Had Any Influence on Its Report — Resents Newspaper Criticisms.

Professor Frank Parsons, president of the National Municipal Ownership league, was recently interviewed by a representative of the Boston Herald in regard to the testimony before the public service commission in New York to the effect that the Metropolitan Securities company had contributed $15,000 to the expenses of the commission which studied the problem of municipal ownership here and abroad.

"The testimony before the commission," said Mr. Parsons, "contained nothing that in any way reflects on either the Civic federation or the committee of investigation. The sensational elements presented by the press were read into the case by an erroneous interpretation of some of the facts stated in the evidence in connection with some remarks of August Belmont in relation to the investigation.

"A large part of the funds were contributed by various corporations and industrial interests, the Metropolitan company among the number, and Mr. Belmont is quoted as saying that the result of the investigation was very satisfactory. Some newspaper man put those two facts together and concluded that the corporations had got what they expected and paid for.

"As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Belmont's remark meant merely that the work had been thoroughly done and a valuable mass of facts brought out. How far wrong is the impression that corporation contributions had any influence on the character of the results may be seen from the fact that the final resolutions of the commission, summing up the investigation, are signed by every municipal ownership member of the commission.

"Another fact which has a strong bearing on the case is that the supervision of the engineers and experts in Great Britain and the disbursements of all the funds across the water were intrusted to Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, now a member of the New York public service commission and well known as a writer strongly favorable to municipal ownership.

"The truth is that the idea of investigating municipal ownership took form in the Civic federation as early as 1900, or long before Mr. Belmont became president of the federation.

"About half the funds, or over $40,000, was raised by scattered subscriptions from persons all over the country in amounts ranging from $5 up, and the remainder of the fund was contributed by large industrial interests or men connected with them.

"All the money was spent under the supervision of a committee of five, on which there were two well known municipal ownership representatives and the chairman of which was Professor Goodnow of Columbia university.

"Chairman Ingalls of the committee on investigation, who is also chairman of the board of directors of the Big Four railroad, is one of the fairest and most honorable men in the United States, and the investigation from start to finish was conducted without a shadow of influence from the corporation contributions which were made to the finance committee.

"In fact, the committee on investigation did now know where the money came from nor who the contributors were, with a few trifling exceptions, until the investigation was all finished and the report was in type.

"I wish to say further in all fairness that while I personally do not at all approve of many things in the history of Mr. Belmont's corporations there is no question in my mind but that he and the Civic federation have acted with perfect fairness toward this commission on public ownership.

"The engineers and experts worked in pairs, one of each pair representing municipal ownership and the other representing private ownership. This nearly doubled the cost, but resulted in securing a body of facts, signed by experts of the highest character and representing both sides of the question. This gives the report a very unique character and confers on the statements of facts so agreed upon a degree of authority far beyond that which attaches to any previous investigation."

More Profitable to Sell.

The mayor of Harrisville, W. Va., states the situation there as follows:

"Some eight years ago this little city purchased a (natural) gas plant at a cost of some $10,000. The revenue from the plant paid for it and left a surplus. Two years ago we leased the plant to a private corporation at a generous rental."

So far as we know this is the only lighting plant transferred to private parties while being operated at a profit, as this one apparently was. It is noteworthy, however, that the people evidently believed that they could get better results from the plant if it were under private management or they would not have leased it.

Ordered Sold by the Voters.

The lighting plant owned by the incorporated village of Waddington, N. Y., was sold after the voters had so ordered at a special election. The president of the village writes briefly, but eloquently:

"The property was sold for $3,000; cost, $8,000; five years used. The village was sore on the property."

RYAN'S GLADE.

Mr. Editor, although our pen has become rusty from non-use, we will attempt to pen you a few lines hoping they may find space in your valuable paper and prove of interest to your many readers.

We have snow in abundance.

The groundhog prophesy is holding good so far.

Rev. E. P. Idleman preached a very helpful sermon here Sunday to an attentive congregation. The congregtion was small owing to bad roads, inclement weather and much sickness.

Measles has been raging in this community since the holidays. We think they have about made a clean sweep this time.

Mr. S. G. Steyer, who has been housed in nearly all winter with la grippe and asthma, we are glad to say, is improving at this writing. May he soon fully recover.

Mr. James E. Lish and family, of Bethlehem, were visitors at Mr. Elisha Harvey's Sunday.

Mr. Ernest Moreland, of Oak Grove, still makes his weekly visits to this community, regardless of weather conditions. Surely there is some special attraction.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Dessie Callis.

The Epworth League is doing nicely under the watchful care of its new president, Mr. John W. Steyer. May the good work go on.

Our Sunday school closed for the first quarter of the year and will resume again with the opening of the second quarter when a new board of officers will be elected.

Mr. D. O. Harvey with his blushing young bride were in attendance at church Sunday.

Mr. Wm. G. Riley is very jubilant over his success last week with his poultry at the poultry show in Cumberland. He carried off most the first prizes.

Mr. Harry Martin captured a large groundhog last week the first one we have heard of being captured this season.

Mr. C. G. Harvey was a pleasant caller at J. D. Harvey's Sunday.

Miss Ruby Shockey has just recovered from an attack of measles.

Now, Mr. Editor, we would just like to add one word of comment on the temperance question, of which we see so much in your columns lately. It is just this we, don't think we need any third political party in Garrett county to settle the saloon question, but what we need is the Christian element to rise in unison and demand of our representatives at Annapolis to give us a chance with our ballots and with our influence we can settle this all important question. We heartily endorse what has been said in your columns, both by yourself and your correspondents and wish to hear from others on this subject for we think the time to strike is when the iron is hot and the time is now.

SELDOM.

Church Services.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Class meeting, at Mt. Lake Park at 10 a. m.; Sunday school, 2.30; Junior League, 3.30; Epworth League, 6.30, and preaching at 7.30 p. m.

Deer Park—Sunday School at 10 a.m.; preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League 6.30 and preaching at 7.30 p. m.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Deep Creek at 11 a. m., and at Elder Hill at 7.30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:

Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

Preaching 10:30 a. m.

Catechise Saturday at 2 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

Preaching at Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 7.30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.; Sunday school at 2.15 p. m., and Epworth League at 6.30 p. m.

All are cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. Thos. Q. Castur, Ed. Thomas.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

Situate in Garrett County.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county wherein James E. Lish, et al., are plaintiffs, and Thompson Lish, et al, are defendants, the same being No. 1496 Equity of said Court, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, on

MONDAY,

The 9th Day of March, 1908,

at two o'clock p. m., all that piece or parcel of land situated, lying and being in District No. 8 in Garrett county, Maryland, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a stake standing at the bars or entrance through a line fence South 50½ degrees West, 28 perches from a large White Oak tree standing at the end of said fence and running thence with the old rail fence North 64 degrees and 30 minutes West, 36 rods and 22 links to corner of said fence, then with old fence South 56 degrees 15 minutes West, 15 rods and 12 links to corner of said fence, then leaving the fence to the left North 23 degrees 30 minutes West, 10 rods to a large rock marked "A," then South 80 degrees 25 min. West, 44 rods to a stake standing beside a rail fence then South 19 degrees 40 minutes West, 13 rods 6 links to a stake and stone pile beside an old fence, then with said fence South 88 degrees 30 minutes East, 18 rods 23 links to corner of said fence, then crossing old fence leaving it to the right South 8 degrees 10 minutes West, 45 rods and 22 links to a stake standing on the South side of an old rail fence, then with said fence North 84 degrees 25 minutes East, 50 rods to corner of rail fence, then with said fence North 52 degrees 45 minutes East, 65 rods and 14 links to the beginning, containing 25 4-10 acres, more or less.

The property is improved by a small house and outbuildings and good orchard.

TERMS OF SALE—, cash, ⅓ in 6 months and ⅓ in 12 months, or all cash at option of the purchaser. The credit portions to bear interest from day of sale, and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett County, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY-NINE, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES, MORE OR LESS, excepting therefrom the quantity of two acres, which was conveyed by John E. Winebrenner to Floyd Winebrenner by deed dated the 15th day of November, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 557, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning at the North corner of the stable on said Military Lot No. 599 and running thence South 12 rods to a stake, thence West 26 rods to a stake, thence North 22 rods, thence by a straight line to the beginning, containing two acres. Said portion of said lot hereby intended to be sold contains forty-eight acres and is fully described (as a whole) in a deed for the same from Isaac Winebrenner to John E. Winebrenner dated the 15th day of November, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 555, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in name of the said John E. Winebrenner.

No. 2. ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SUGAR TREE FLAT," located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county, and standing on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of Henry Wolf. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Henry Wolf.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annun and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE.

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, and being the same land which was conveyed to Jeremiah J. McKenzie by Samuel Johnson and others by deed bearing date the 11th day of October, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 16, folio 311, etc. one of the Land Records of said Garrett county saving and excepting therefrom 10 acres and 80 perches conveyed by said McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated September 30th, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, said residue containing the quantity of THIRTY-NINE AND ONE-HALF ACRES. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books in the name of the said Jeremiah J. McKenzie.

No. 4. ALL THAT PORTION OF MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, CONTAINING TEN AND ONE-HALF ACRES, it being the same land which was conveyed by Jeremiah J. McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated the 30th day of September, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and more particularly described therein as follows: Beginning for the same at the southeast corner of said lot and running thence North 4½ degrees East, 62 perches to a stake, thence North 85½ degrees West, 5 perches to a stake, thence South 37 degrees West, 74 perches to a pine stump, thence South 85½ degrees East, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land (minerals excepted) will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Ella C. McKenzie. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county.

No. 5. TWENTY-FIVE ACRES OF MILITARY LOT FIVE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-NINE, known as the nothern half of said lot, which was conveyed to John Fadley by deed from Charles H. Johnson and others dated the 10th day of September, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 380, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John Fadley.

No. 6. LOTS NUMBERS THREE, TWO, TWENTY AND NINETEEN as shown on the plat of Sarah Wright's land as recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland and being the same lots which were conveyed to Horace R. Hamilton by John B. Wright and others by deed dated the 14th day of February, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 181, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Horace R. Hamilton.

No. 7. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND ONE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWO, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES EACH, being located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county and described in a deed for the same to Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham, duly of record in the Land Records of Allegany county, Maryland. The said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the heirs of said Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham.

No. 9. PARTS OF MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE, CONTAINING FORTY-TWO AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Mary Willison to Jacob P. McKenzie by deed dated the 11th day of September, 1902, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 42, folio 307, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 and the whole of the taxes for the year 1905 due and in arrear thereon as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jacob P. McKenzie.

No. 10. LOT NUMBER ELEVEN OF THE SUB-DIVISION OF THE TRACT OF LAND KNOWN AS "LOCHIEL," CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF TWO HUNDRED AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES, and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green, dated the 17th day of August, 1893, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folio 247, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jefferson S. Green.

No. 11. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING TWO AND ONE-TENTH ACRES and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Belle Klipstein Field and others to John E. Klipstein and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 49, folio 171, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, by the following metes and bounds: Beginning for the same at a ten-inch beech tree standing near the new county drive road, and marked with three hacks on two sides, and running North 38 degrees 10 minutes East, 248 feet to a maple standing on the South bank of Mill Run, thence North 50 degrees 15 minutes West, 54 feet along and near the South bank of Mill Run, thence South 48 degrees 3 minutes West, 84 feet to a maple, thence South 33 degrees 50 minutes East, 583 feet to the beginning. Said land is located in Election District No. 4 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John E. Klipstein.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice That the subscribers of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JOHN KITZMILLER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of August next: they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 13th day of February 1908.

WILLIAM CALLIS,
W. J. KITZMILLER,
Executors.
Hoyes, Md.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Tuesday, March 3th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business. Road supervisors who have not filed their bonds are requested to do so at once.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Executor's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

BARBARA YODER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 23rd day of July, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 23rd day of January, 1908.

EMANUEL HERSHBERGER,
Executor.
Grantsville Md.

Administrator's Notice.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix.
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,

Successors to Charles A. Tower.

General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 31. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1908. NUMBER 52

BRAKEMAN ROBERT BROWNING INJURED.

Lost Portions of Both Feet a Few Miles East of Grafton Tuesday Morning.

Tuesday morning at an early hour Robert A. Browning, eldest son of Mrs. Mary Whetsell-Browning, of Oakland, who was employed at the time of the occurrence in the capacity of brakeman on a west bound freight train, met with an accident, whereby the young man lost a portion of both feet.

From what can be gleaned concerning the accident young Browning was engaged in performing his duties and was in the act of tighten a brake on a car while descending the grade at Austin, three miles east of Newburg on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, when the chain broke which threw him between the cars. He struck upon the bumpers with his hands and endeavored to swing himself clear of the rails, but in this he was only partially successful, the toes of his shoes striking the inside of the rail which threw him upon his face outward, the wheels of the car passing over the forward portions of his feet, terribly mangling some of the toes of each foot.

The young man was picked up by the train crew and was taken into Grafton where he was placed in the hospital and his injured toes amputated.

Mr. Browning is well known and a popular young man of Oakland. The news of the accident which befell him will be learned with sincere regret by his large circle of friends here.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies that are able to pay their losses, and that have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

Bursted Wheel.

Passenger train No. 8 of the B. & O. railroad had a broken wheel under the express car and ran across the bridge without accident, near Bloomington, on Tuesday morning. The car was taken from the train, and it proceeded to its destination about three hours late. The car did not leave the track.

SUES FOR DAMAGES.

$5,000 Wanted In Each of Two Cases for Selling Liquor to Person Blacklisted.

On last Thursday Mrs. A. C. Whetsell, through her attorneys, Messrs. Renninger & Offutt, entered two suits in the Circuit Court for Garrett county one against S. A. Nally and the other against C. A. Hesen, both of whom are saloon keepers in Oakland, claiming damages to the amount of $5,000 in each case.

In her declaration Mrs. Whetsell alleges that she had served upon both parties sued the required legal notice not to sell or give to her husband, A. C. Whetsell, intoxicating liquors or beverages, but that in the face of said notice they have continued to do so, hence she brings the suits.

The statute provides that a relative may have any person placed upon the "blacklist" by serving notice upon a saloon keeper not to sell or give liquor to a person addicted to its use, and further provides that damages may accrue should the person so blacklisted procure liquor, either by purchase or as a gift from saloon men thus noticed.

These are the first cases in Garrett county growing out of the "blacklist" law and will be watched with considerable interest by the public generally.

GRANTSVILLE.

Rev. McCoy has been preaching some very able sermons during the past week. The meetings are growing in number and interest. Come out and help; you are needed.

Mr. William Baker has moved to Shade Hollow into the house Mr. Conrad Burkholder vacated.

Miss Vernie Shrock, of Mt. Lake Park, was in Grantsville Saturday calling on relatives.

Miss Nellie Hoering, of Frostburg, was spending Saturday and Sunday here.

Presiding Elder Ward preached here Sunday night. The people are always delighted to hear the Elder.

Mr. Floyd Durst, of Oakland who has been working at the Cambria Iron Works of Johnstown, Pa., is visiting at his Grandma Beachy's.

Mr. Henry Shaffer is moving out of town, and Mr. John Miller is moving into the house he vacates.

Mr. Nicolas McMurphey, who has been quite ill, we are glad to say is better.

Now that the great fight for temperance is on, let every christian be up and doing and save the boys from the great curse of intemperance, or else forever hereafter hold your peace when they trample your hearts and bring pain and disgrace to your homes.

Surscribe for The Republican.

GOVERNOR IS DETERMINED TO CURB SOLONS.

Formulating a Plan to Prevent Graft and Waste by The Assembly.

LARGE CROWD VISITED CAPITOL

Seven Hundred Saloonists Call Upon the General Assembly to Oppose The Local Option Bill. Crothers' View on "Contining Appropriations"

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 25—Governor Crothers is determined to put down legislative graft and the waste of the people's money in needless expenditures, if it is possible to do so. He is not able to curb the expenditures of the legislature, but he will put it up to the General Assembly now in session to curb its successors and run the State's affairs on a more business-like basis than has been done heretofore.

The Governor has taken the first step in this important movement by arranging for the drafting of a bill limiting the number of employes of the legislature. As the law now stands, only a very few employes are provided for, and these are far from enough.

In the bill to be drawn it is proposed to provide enough employees to carry on the State's work expenditiously and pay them well; but there will be a provision against the extra-pay grafting that has been a feature of the legislature time after time. Those who work will be paid so much a day and no more, and their pay will not begin until after they are sworn in and enter upon their duties.

The $100 for extra engrossing clerks, at the end of the session, who never engross will be abolished, and the legislature will be so hedged about by law that there will be little opportunity for waste.

The State of Maryland, according to information received here, is now paying something like $150,000 a year on what are known as continuing appropriations made by past legislatures and so framed as to continue on from year to year indefinitely. These appropriations have grown from session to session of the legislature until they now aggregate the sum mentioned.

Governor Crothers today said: "All the continuing appropriations ought to be repealed, and I shall advocate this. The State should start over again with a clean sheet. Then the people can see each just where their money is going. They have a right to know. No appropriations should be made for more than two years."

About 700 persons, representing the liquor interests of Baltimore city, descended upon Annapolis today. They came here on a train which left Baltimore at 12:40 o'clock this afternoon to protest against the passage of the local-option bill and also the high-license bill, which are being advocated by the members of the Anti-Saloon League. The excursion was under the auspices of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Protective Association, and many members of the organization were represented in the crowd.

The protest made by the delegation which came to the State Capitol today is virtually a reply to the arguments which were advanced by the Anti-Saloon League delegates in favor of local option last Tuesday. On that day the last-mentioned organization had its hearing before the Legislature, and something like 1200 or 1500 people came here to advocate the passage of the locol-option bill. The delegation from the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, while perhaps somewhat smaller than that of the Anti-Saloon League, made just as determined a fight, and it did all in its power to convince the members of the Legislature of the soundness of its policies.

The constitutional amendment bill received the signature of Governor Crothers today.

He also signed the local measure amending the game law of Garrett county.

In the Senate, a bill relating to local option for Garrett county, introduced by Mr. Green in the House and passed by that body, was amended and passed and sent back to the House for its concurrence in the amendment made.

Mr. Myers has introduced in the House a measure giving the Sheriff of Garrett county power to appoint a deputy, who shall also be warden to the jail.

A fight against Mr. Myers' bill for the repeal of the mortgage tax law applying to Garrett county has been inaugurated, but the heaviest tax payers and those having an interest in the developement of the county are standing with the author of the measure, which will probably pass this week.

Last Friday night when Mr. Myers' bill to divide election district No. 2 and create a new district with the polling place at Selbysport came up for final passage Mr. Green, his colleague, tried to have it recommitted, alleging that Dr. Hayden, the third member of the special committee to which the bill was referred, had made a favorable report without consulting him. Both he and Mr. Myers made speeches pro and con, in the course of which Mr. Green, declared that the passage of the bill would keep 50 citizens of the county from voting. The motion was lost, after which the bill was passed by a vote of 60 to 3.

The Temperance Wave.

To the Editor of The Republican:

It is very gratifying to see the temperance cause begin to show itself in the columns of THE REPUBLICAN. Surely the temperance cause is one of the greatest friends that humanity has and the liquor traffic the greatest enemy; then why oppose the right and uphold the wrong. Why not step in the temperance ranks and dethrone the liquor business and we believe the time is fast approaching when saloons must go. To this let every righteous thinker say speed on, oh, time, speed on, when the saloon must go, nevermore to return.

Some writers claim the best way to promote the temperance cause is by high license and thereby limit the number of saloons. That would mean a compromise with the devil as the open saloon is the devil's stronghold in this world. We believe the only safe way to promote temperance is to put the saloon out of existence.

The saloon in any form means debauchery and crime. Some will tell you that to have a smaller number of high license saloons and keep them respectable that drunkenness would be greatly done away with. There could be such a thing as having a fewer number of high license saloons, but to have a respectable saloon would be an utter impossibility as one has never existed, never can, as their very intent is evil, because they are of their father, the devil.

Now, fellow citizen, looking things square in the face, what are going to do? Brother church member, what are you going to do? Mr. Preacher what are you going to do? We feel glad to know there is are number of the called ones who are striving to destroy the saloon, root and branches. Again we find a number of the said-to-be-called ones who oppose. This class puts me in mind of the man that met the bear and excitedly began to pray: "Oh, good Lord, oh, good devil," and was overheard by another party and upon being asked why he prayed to both God and the devil he answered he didn't know if the bear killed him whose hands he would fall into, so he thought it best to be friendly with both. It seems as if there are a number of would-be prominent people who would like to be friendly with both the church and the saloon. They have met the bear and are on one side or the other. Did you ever read "he that is not for me is against me and he that gathereth not with me scatereth abroad." Some will say they are running the church into politics. You never will get rid of the saloon any other way but for the Christian church with all its branches to raise up in the power of its might and vote the saloon out of existence. That is what has alarmed the brewers and saloon keepers. The church has begun a new to shake off the dust of her feet. I verily believe the church with the friendly cooperation of those out side of its pale means to rid our American soil of its curse, the licensed saloon. The two old parties have had warning after warning for nearly a quarter of a century and many opportunities for a longer period than that and what have they done? They tell you they need the internal revenue collected from the liquor traffic to help run our government. They never tell how many thousand souls are sent to a drunkard's grave annually nor how many go to the penitentiaries, asylums and poor houses besides the many thousands of crimes committed that is never let out to the public and the rum demon is the origin of nine-tenth of them. We hope to see the time when the saloon must go.

A. J. L.

Mt. Lake Park, Feb. 22, 1908.

To Be Wedded.

Invitations for the marriage of Miss Agnes Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fleckenstine, of Oakland, and Mr. Matthew Franklin Powers, of Bristol, Va., have been issued. The wedding is to take place in St. Peter's Catholic church in Oakland on Tuesday morning, March 3rd, at nine o'clock. The couple will reside at Bristol and will be home to their friends after March 15th.

TRACK DAMAGED.

Freight Car Left Rails And Ran On Ties For Nearly Half a Mile.

Tuesday morning an east bound freight train drawn by engine 1838, had a narrow escape from almost total annihilation at a point a mile and a-half west of Oakland, when one of the cars composing the train jumped from the rails near the site of the Offutt mill, located west of Youghiogheny River bridge, and ran along on the ties from that point onto and partly across the bridge above referred to.

The train, so reported by railroad men, was traveling at moderate rate of speed when the flanges on the front truck of the car derailed became destroyed which allowed it to leave the track. The car ran along on the ends of the ties from the point of derailment to the center of the bridge, a distance of about half a mile, when the engineer discovered the trouble and brought the train to a stop. The ties on the bridge as well as the guard timbers, immense pieces of heavy oak held in place by massive bolts, were totally destroyed and as a consequence the east bound track was put out of commission until the necessary repairs were made by a force of bridge men from Grafton and Piedmont. Trains bound in both directions used the west bound track until the repairs were completed.

Had the coupling attaching the derailed car to the one preceding it parted, there is no telling what the consequences would have been, but in all probability the entire train would have been thrown over the side of the bridge into the river, a distance of some twenty feet.

At the same point some years ago train No. 2 left the track and went down into the river, killing one man and injuring quite a number of other passengers.

DEEP CREEK.

Fine sleighing.

A sled load of our young people attended the meeting at Swanton Tuesday night.

Misses Anna and Edith Smith were visiting Mr. C. K. Groves Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith were visiting relatives at Green Glade Sunday.

The ground-hog prophecy has proved true so far.

Miss Sallie Beckman and Miss Annie Steiding were pleasant callers at Calvin Glotfelty's Sunday.

Mr. Clarence Hardesty is visiting his parents at present.

Miss Lucile Bernard was a caller at Deer Park Monday.

Miss Lucile Bernard is able to take her place at school again after an illness of grip and rheumatism.

Miss Edith Smith was calling at Herman Steidings Sunday evening.

STATE FOREST RESERVE ADVOCATED.

Senator Brown of Garrett Introduced a Measure of That End.

Senator Brown of Garrett county introduced a bill in the Senate on Monday night giving the State's consent to the establishing of a national forest reserve in Maryland. A bill is now pending in Congress and is expected to pass giving the Secretary of Agriculture authority to acquire for national forest purposes by purchase or gift timber lands on the watersheds of navigable streams in the Southern Appalachian mountains. The territory mentioned in the bill includes the headwaters of the Potomac river which lie partly in Garrett county. The object of acquiring the lands is for timber production and the regulation of stream flow, and the territory affected includes nine states in the South.

Senator Brown's bill gives the consent of the State to the acquisition of the land and retains the State's jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases Two years ago Senator Brown introduced and secured the passage of an act creating State forest reserves in Maryland, and under this measure the State now owns four tracts, aggregating nearly 2000 acres. Three are in the vicinity of Oakland, and the fourth containing 40 acres, is located on the Patapsco, near Catonsville. The State reserves are in charge of a forest warden, who looks after them to prevent fires and trespassing.

Fell and Was Seriously Injured.

Last Friday Newton Geis, who was engaged at work on the saw mill of Mr. Mahlon Glotfelty near McHenry, stepped on a roller lying on the floor of the mill and was thrown suddenly against a pile of timber lying nearby, striking upon his side and stomach, which brought about an internal hemorrhage and excruciating pain. For several hours Mr. Geis was delirious and it was feared for a time that he was fatally hurt. He has recovered to some extent, however, but is still suffering from the effects of his fall.

Diesolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership between George W. Cover and William J. Cover was dissolved on the 22nd day of February, 1908, so far as relates to the said George W. Cover. All debts due to said partnership are to be paid and those due from the same discharged at Salt Block, in Garrett county, Md., where the business will be continued by the said William J. Cover as William J. Cover.

GEORGE W. CONER & SON.

Friendsville, Md., Feb. 26, 1908.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. J. W. Briscoe, Mr. Ofeffer, S. Offler, Mrs. Sallie I. Melse, Mrs. Nettie Mills, T. A. Wiemer, Mrs. Wright, Miss Young.

DIXON & KELSO

PRICE CURRENT FOR GROCERIES

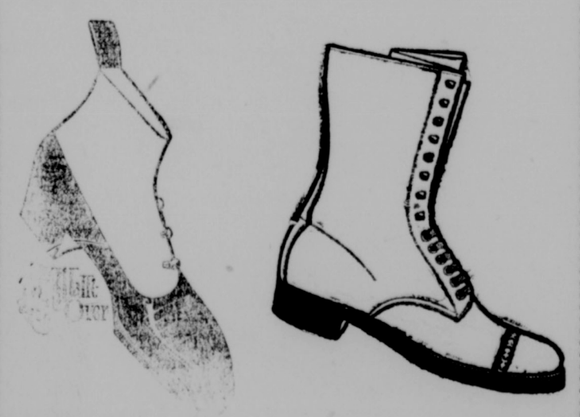
2 bars Laundry Soap,	05
2 cakes Toilet Soap,	05
Good roasted Coffee,	12½
California Hams,	10
Best Side Meat,	10
Small Hams,	12½
Large Hams,	12
Fancy large Florida Oranges,	25
Fancy large Lemons,	25
Fancy large Apples per bu,	1 00
Tomatoes per can,	09
Corn per can,	08
Granulated Sugar,	05½
Brown Sugar,	05
Leggetts 2 lb. Premier Oats,	10
Fish,	05
Best Winter Flour, Bag,	65
Best Spring Flour, Bag,	75
Navy Beans,	05
Lima Beans,	08
Hominy,	03

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST It Costs No More.



WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price, bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

AN IDEAL MARYLAND COMMUNITY.

A Picture of The Domestic and Agricultural Life of The Quaker Settlement of Sandy Springs.

Does an ideal agricultural community exist this side of Paradise? The reader must answer the question after he has read what follows. Suffice for me to say in passing that if I read the account correctly the original Paradise was hardly ideal, with its domestic troubles and eye enticing fruits.

In Montgomery County, Md., twenty miles north from Washington and some thirty south from Baltimore, is a Quaker community of some two hundred families, occupying a stretch of country about ten by six miles. There is no village in the neighborhood, just three little centres, with a store, postoffice and blacksmith shop. In one of these is a bank, with $25,000 capital stock, and a savings department, with $1,000,000 deposits, and a fire insurance company which does business over the whole state.

About 1720 the ancestors of these people—thrifty, industrious, law abiding Quakers—came into this county and bought these lands, which had been large plantations, largely devoted to tobacco, the property of slave owners. The land was much reduced in fertility. The large holdings were divided into small farms of about one hundred acres.

The first generation have long since been gathered to their fathers, but their works do follow them. It is conceded by all that in no part of the state are more prosperous farmers than these Sandy Springs Quakers. One will find the original plantation houses, still in good repair, with many more modern ones that have been erected on the smaller farms. Most times they stand quite a distance from the road, with green fields in front. Steam heat and bath-rooms, with hot and cold water, often a section covered with glass and full of flowers, are in most of them. Books, papers and periodicals of the highest class are on the tables. One gentleman remarked: "None of us is very rich and none poor; we have spent our money for the best things." Surely this is true. In my opinion they are the richest people I know of. Rich in things worth while. Their sons and daughters have been educated in the best schools and colleges, and yet imbued from their youth up with the dignity of labor. One young man, the son of my host, while waiting for supper entertained us with excellent music on the piano. Afterward he donned his old clothes and spent most of the evening in fixing a dirty gasolene engine that had refused to work. Whether in the farmyard, kitchen or parlor, I have never found more real culture or more true ladies and gentlemen. Industrious, cultured, God fearing people. Each farm has a name, and they speak of them not by that of the owner but as one would of a village. They are all connected by telephone and by fine macadamized roads. The fact that they are ten miles from the railroad has had no apparent effect in standing in the way of progress.

They have for years maintained three granges. In addition to this, they have a lyceum, with a building especially devoted to it and containing a library. There are two women's clubs, one for the young and one for the matrons. In these are discussed not only matters pertaining to the household but those of broader scope, such as "Conditions in Russia" and "Italy, Its History and People." These are plain farmers' wives and daughters, mark you, city reader—if such there be—who can and, if need be, do their own work. In no community in proportion to the population have I found so many people who have travelled, both in our own country and abroad. They have a horticultural society and a poultry association. Once each year all these various associations come together in a three days' meeting, where are discussed not only agricultural topics but such as are of vital interest to the community. One interesting feature of this meeting is a record of events that have occurred in the community during the year, compiled by an historian previously appointed. Once in three years these annuals are published in book form, and make a most interesting and valuable history for reference.

There are three farmers' clubs, limited to sixteen members each. Members are eligible only by election when a vacancy occurs. The oldest of these has been in existence since 1844, the second since 1866. The latter has never missed a regular monthly meeting since its establishment, the former never but a few during the trying days of the Civil War, for they met not far from the scene of action. General "Jeb" Stuart's cavalry passed through Sandy Springs on one of its raids. The sound of the firing at both battles of Bull Run, to the south, and the booming of cannon at Antietam, thirty miles to the north, shook the houses.

These clubs always meet at the farmhouses. It was my good fortune to attend one of the meetings of the second club. They met at 4 p. m., organized, and then, under a "foreman," went over the place, making notes and observations on what they saw. Then we returned to the house and sat down to a bountiful supper always provided by the hostess. Afterward the minutes of the previous meeting were read, including comments on what had been seen at the last place of meeting. Then an essay was read on a subject selected at the last meeting. The essayist is always the one who was host at that previous meeting, and the subject one suggested by something seen on his farm or what he is doing. After the reading each in turn was asked to express himself, and did. Then each was asked if he had a question. Most had one. A variety of subjects were freely and intelligently discussed. I have been associated with all sorts and conditions of men in various walks of life, but I have never heard sixteen men express themselves more freely and intelligently and in better English than did these farmers. The farmer who presided would have graced the Speaker's chair in any legislative body. These were not city men, but working farmers, living from income derived from the farm.

It struck me as not unlikely that these clubs during the years have been no small feature in maintaining the dignity of agriculture and a feeling of "noblesse oblige" that has kept a proper portion of the young men on the farms, for these homes are in possession of men in the third and fourth generations, whose brothers have gone out into the great world. Were it proper I could mention names of bankers, lawyers, physicians and others prominent in the business world who point with pride to the fact that they come from these Quaker farm homes.

In most rural neighborhoods there is no class of men who are more jealous of one another and his family than the country doctors. Too often their respective patients are equally jealous of the standing each of his own particular physician, until they change doctors. Here are four practising physicians, with two retired, who have a local medical association which meets once a week to discuss matters relating to their profession and their respective neighborhood cases. I was a guest at a home where a member of the family was sick, and while I was there the doctor called. The next morning I met another doctor. When he learned where I had stayed the night before he at once began to eulogize that family, even though another was their physician. Was it strange I thought I had found Arcadia?

They practise mixed farming. Dairy, some sheep for early lambs, swine, wheat, corn, hay, potatoes, and tree and small fruits. All produce must be hauled from ten to twenty miles to market. Wheat is worth about $1 a bushel; corn $3 a "barrel." A barrel means a tobacco hogshead, holding ten bushels of ears. They always speak of the yield an acre as twelve, fifteen or twenty "barrels," as the case may be. Potatoes are worth 60 cents a bushel in the Washington market; milk, from 20 to 22 cents a gallon in the same, which market is very particular as to sanitary conditions. Many sell cream. Strawberries, which are grown quite extensively, are largely shipped over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Pittsburg. Four to six horse or mule teams do the hauling. These teams are broken to drive with one line, which runs on the left side of the driver, who has a saddle on the near horse of the wheel team. Except for loss of time they doubtless transport about as cheaply as they could by rail. There are no better markets for most crops than Washington and Baltimore. Land sells for about $100 an acre. Men who pay that price are paying for their farms. I doubt not that much of the foregoing will seem like a fairy tale to the average reader, and I do not wonder. Yet I have not painted the picture in more glowing colors than are true to nature. I could easily and truthfully have said more. To the doubting Thomases I can only say, as Philip said to Nathaniel, "Come and see," "Be not faithless, but believing." This is my fourth visit, and more than ever have I been impressed that this is an ideal community. What is the secret? It is hard to say. When I sum it up as it has impressess me I should say that they come of an ancestry which has most nearly followed the precepts of the Golden Rule, and the present generations are following in the footsteps of their fathers.—Edward Van Alstyne, In N. Y. Tribune.

CONCRERE BUILBING STONE.

Now Being Used in Many Structures Throughout The Northwest.

All through the Northwest concrete building stone is being widely used for the construction of residences, schools, churches and stores. Some of the buildings are elaborate structures, ornamented with railings and balconies of the same material.

A pattern of wood, mental or plaster is made in the form the stone is desired. These patterns can be used time after time. Around these patterns a saturated moulding material is tamped, and into this impression is poured a thin stone composition, which is allowed to remain there until perfect crystallization is effected.

Absolute uniformity is claimed for the new material, each block being uniform and of the same high grade material. This block can be carved. Stone of almost any shade or color can be made by this process.

C. A. P. Turner, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, who has made an extensive study of this subject, says it is not a cheap process, as so many concerns advertise. He says it is foolishness to argue that it can be manufactured for from thirty-five cents a cubic foot.

"It may be questioned whether inducing through misrepresentation ten or twelve new concerns to engage in the business," he continues, "where but one or two of the lot will ultimately make a tolerable success, does not result in more injury to the industry than persuading a single concern to enter the field on a basis of fair and conservative statement of facts and showing of actual profit. A good criterion for those engaging in this line would seem to be a question as to the extent of the confidence which the promoter of any process has in his methods, measured by the amount of his own money he is willing to invest in the demonstration of its commerical advantage and the amount of stock which he himself has seen fit to hold in any plant which he claims to have established."

SHIP SIBERIAN TIMBER OVER 8000 MILES.

The Nocessity of Cultivating Timber Lands In This Country.

An Australlian corporation has just received a concession from the Russian Government to take out thirty million feet of timber a year from a forest in Siberia, nine hundred miles from Vladivostok, to be delivered in Melbourne, Australia, approximately eight thousand miles away, and nearly three times the distance from New York to San Francisco.

It is likely that a lumbering operation of recent years more strongly illustrates the pinch in the timber supply in all parts of the world. In the news of the concession, told in an American lumber journal, is the suggestion of the difficulty that all countries may have to encounter in getting the wood which they need in the future. Every year timber crûisers are going further and further afield and cutting trees which, in former times of abundance, they passed because of the inacessibility of the forest.

In taking out the Siberian timber the Melbourne lumbermen will have to ship the entire year's cut in July, August, September and October, for during the remainder of the year there is no open water at the point of shipment.

What makes this unusual feature of transporting bulky logs 8,000 miles quite feasible is that such unmanufactured stock is admitted free, while there is a heavy duty on all manufactured wood brought into Australia, the duty on lumber, for instance, being nearly $5,00 a thousand board feet. At Melbourne, a new mill is being erected to manufacture these logs into dressed stock, such as flooring, ceiling and other products, as well as into lumber.

These Siberian operations differ from the lumbering methods in the United States, in that and in this country it is possible and customary to have new mills conveniently near the place of production, though, with the continually decreasing supply, the larger mills often find it profitable to haul their timber by trains and railroads many miles away from their saws. Forest experts in this country say that the United States for a steady supply of timber lies in the application of forestry to all timberlands, private and public, and the careful study of the economical and better utilization of product. Even so, a severe shortage in twenty to twenty-five years must be expected.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

Currency System Not to Blame For Trouble.

By Senator SHELBY M. CULLOM of Illinois.

IT IS NONSENSE TO SAY THAT OUR PRESENT CURRENCY SYSTEM IS RESPONSIBLE IN ANY SENSE OF THE WORD FOR THE RECENT FINANCIAL FLURRY WHICH WAS MOSTLY CENTERED IN NEW YORK CITY. THAT PANIC WAS DUE LARGELY TO THE MANEUVERS OF MEN WHO DISREGARD THE LAW AND WHO DISREGARD THEIR OBLIGATIONS

It was that rather than any deficiency or inadequacy of statutory currency conditions. In other words, if certain financiers in New York would keep closer to shore or maintain their operations WITHIN THE BOUNDS OF REASON the country would be better off.

In my judgment the disposition on the part of certain financiers to reach out for that which they cannot reasonably control is GROWING, and the instant they get into trouble they run to the government. It is a great misfortune that conditions should allow such access to federal assistance to remedy mistakes which are palpably of a nature reprehensible upon their begettors, WHO ARE ALONE TO BLAME. These men in Wall street ought to understand that they shall and must do business ON THEIR OWN CAPITAL.

* * *

It is all right that the government should afford PROPER CURRENCY AND BANKING FACILITIES for people who are in trouble, and we have at present an ADEQUATE currency system which is capable of maintaining an equilibrium quite to the satisfaction of SANE MINDED people financially.

I do not believe there is any occasion for general reform at this time.

Is Child Training Woman's Only Normal Sphere?

By President ELIOT of Harvard University.

HIGHER education in the future should recognize the fact that the MAJORITY OF WOMEN TAKE UP THE OCCUPATION OF TRAINING CHILDREN, the married ones as mothers and many of the unmarried ones in the interest of the mothers.

TRAINING OF CHILDREN IS THE NORMAL OCCUPATION OF WOMAN, AND ITS IMPORTANCE IN EDUCATION HAS PROBABLY NOT BEEN RECOGNIZED BECAUSE IT HAS HITHERTO BEEN REGARDED AS AN UNINTELLECTUAL PURSUIT. YET IT IS THE MOST INTELLECTUAL OCCUPATION IN THE WORLD, IN NO MATTER WHAT WALK OF LIFE. IT CALLS ALWAYS FOR GREAT MORAL AND CAREFULLY TRAINED MENTAL POWERS.

What a great power a reading mother has to train the minds of her children! This NORMAL OCCUPATION of woman should be the main object henceforth in the education of woman.

* * *

By Mrs. JOHN SHERWIN CROSBY, President of the Women's Democratic Club, New York.

I question whether the education of man is yet sufficiently far advanced to qualify him to decide upon the education that woman SHOULD have. There is of course a broad fundamental education that is just as necessary to develop the powers of a woman as of a man. There is also little in regard to the training of children that THE MAN AS WELL AS THE WOMAN ought not to learn.

IF WOMAN WERE RESTRICTED TO REARING AND TEACHING CHILDREN SHE WOULD BE DEPRIVED OF MANY OF THE BEST OPPORTUNITIES FOR LEARNING HOW TO DO THAT VERY WORK.

The greatest idea in education, as in other things, is FREEDOM, and any restriction placed upon the education of woman would tend to render her less efficient in any special service to which she may be by nature adapted BETTER than man.

More Poverty In England Than Here.

By JOHN HODGE, Member of Parliament.

WHEN we ask for concessions in the old country we are up against the claim of the manufacturers that they have AMERICAN COMPETITION to contend with. After I came to this country I found that the manufacturers made the SAME CLAIM about British manufacturers and that the labor men were up against the plea of British competition.

* * *

THE PROBLEM OF DESTITUTION AND LACK OF WORK IN THE OLD COUNTRY IS A MUCH BIGGER ONE THAN IT IS HERE. THERE IS NO SUCH DESTITUTION IN THIS COUNTRY AS IN ENGLAND AND NO SUCH ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED.

In this country you do not know the EXTREME POVERTY that exists in England. In London alone statistics showed that 200,000 children WENT BREAKFASTLESS TO SCHOOL EVERY DAY. Labor saving machinery is driving thousands of people out of work.

Money Does Not Carry Disease.

By Dr. ALVAH H. DOTY, Health Officer of the Port of New York.

THE theory that money acts as a medium of infection is a PLAUSIBLE one, particularly as it deals with an agent which is being constantly transmitted from one person to another and among ALL CLASSES OF PEOPLE. Clothing, rags, merchandise, cargoes of vessels, etc., are also regarded as means by which disease is commonly transmitted.

This belief is popular because it offers an explanation for outbreaks of infectious diseases the origin of which is unknown. Modern sanitation, however, does not regard as valuable theories which are UNSUPPORTED BY FACT OR PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE.

THE THEORY THAT MONEY ACTS AS A MEDIUM OF INFECTION CARRIES WITH IT NO SATISFACTORY OR EVEN REASONABLE PROOF.

A Broken Vow.

By JANE LUDLUM LEE.

Copyright, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"Shall I put this gray dress in the trunk, Alice, or do you think it will be too thin?"

This remark was addressed to a disconsolate looking girl who sat huddled up in a big armchair at the window day dreaming. Her dark, red brown hair had not been combed, and her dress consisted of a pink silk wrapper carelessly tied around the waist. No answer was forthcoming to the question.

"Alice, do you hear me?"

"Yes—that is, no, auntie—that is, I don't care. I don't want any clothes."

"But, my child, you can't go to a hotel without clothes. Come; you must help me with the packing. I'll attend to the body of the trunk, and you pack the tray."

Alice moved leisurely from her corner and languidly threw some trifles

"THIS IS NOT MY TRUNK AT ALL!"

in the trunk. She went over to her desk and scratched off a hasty note while her aunt finished her part of the packing. Finally the task was finished, and Alice offered to lock the trunk. This she did, putting the key in her purse.

"Thank you, auntie. I'll be ready promptly at 2, and ask Mary to mail this letter, please."

At about the same hour Willard Kean was walking the floor of his handsome bachelor apartment in a fashionable district of the city.

"I'll be darned if it was my fault, and I'll be darned if I apologize. She can just sulk it out, and I'll leave town where I'll not be tempted. Perry, Perry!" he called, and a little Japanese servant appeared.

"Throw a few of my duds into a trunk, will you? I'm off for a few days at Hot Springs. You know what I'll need—dress suit, dinner coat and a few togs for loafing on the plazza. And, Perry, be quick about it, for I'm going on the first train out."

Perry began his task, bobbing in and out of the room, his arms laden with linen, fancy vests, suits, etc. When the packing was finished he asked for the key.

"I'll lock it," replied his master. "You call a cab. That train leaves about 2 o'clock, and if I miss it there will be just one less Jap in this town tomorrow."

Kean walked to the mantelpiece, picked up something, threw it in the trunk and locked the latter. He caught the 2 o'clock train and settled himself in his section.

Alice and her aunt made the same train and were soon comfortably fixed in the stateroom of the adjoining car. Orders were given that meals should be served to them there, while Kean ate in the regular diner.

After a half hour of absolute silence auntie opened the conversation.

"Alice, dear, you must pull yourself together. Willard Kean is not the only man in the world. We really cannot afford this trip, and you must try to get some benefit from it. Hot Springs is full of young people, and I simply cannot have you going about with that long face."

"I didn't want to take the trip. I didn't want anything except to be let alone. I don't want to get any benefit, and I simply will not try to be pleasant to anybody, so there now."

Auntie dropped the conversation for a time more propitious. The next day brought them to Hot Springs, where they got off and drove to the hotel. The clerk assigned them to a room, and they asked that their trunks be sent up at once. Two trunks were soon delivered, and Alice stopped to unlock hers. The key went in rather hard, it turned harder, but finally it gave to the strength of her hand. She opened the lid, and her own photograph stared her in the face.

"Auntie, did you put that picture in here?"

"Certainly not, my dear. Why should I? Besides, I have none like that."

"Auntie, this is most peculiar. This is not my trunk at all! Why, see, it is full of men's shirts, vests, ties, etc. It's all a mistake except the picture. There's no mistake about that. It's mine, all right enough. But what is it doing in a strange man's trunk?"

"Maybe the photographer sold it to him."

"Maybe he did, auntie, but look on the back: 'To the dearest sweetheart in the world—Alice.' That picture I gave to Jack just after we were engaged. The owner of this trunk is a common thief, and I'll report him to the hotel management. Help me fix my hair, auntie. I am going right to the office and have this matter adjusted at once."

* * * * * * * *

Kean dropped off the car at Hot Springs, sauntered up to the hotel and went to his room, where he lit his pipe and began walking the floor. A knock at the door interrupted his thoughts, and he opened it to let in the men with his trunk.

"That's not my trunk, you muttonhead! Get out of here with it!"

"Marked with your name, sir, on the tag. Just try your key and see if you are sure it's wrong."

Kean took out his key ring, all the while talking as he fitted the key in the lock.

"Sure it's wrong! Why, you thick headed chump, don't a man know his own baggage? What is this—a hotel or a batty house? Holy Moses!" he exclaimed as the key fitted and the trunk opened upon a large photograph of himself in a leather frame.

"All right, boys, my mistake," he added as he handed each man a dollar bill.

Left alone, he picked up the photograph and walked with it to the window, pinched himself to see if he was alive, then laughed, then swore. Examining the trunk, he realized it was not his, as he had no use for silk petticoats and lingerie dresses.

"I'll keep this photo, all right, all right, but the lady can have her trunk," he mused as he made his way to the office. The clerk smiled as he made the complaint.

"Come right with me, will you, Mr. Kean? A lady just came down from room 411 who, I think, can explain this mistake and give you your rightful belongings."

"All I want is my trunk. I'm not anxious to see the lady."

"But I'd rather you came along to make it easier for me," and Kean followed in silence.

The clerk's knock at the door of 411 was answered by "Come in," and they entered.

"Here is the gentleman whose trunk you have and who can return yours, Miss Buckingham, and"—

"Billy!"

"Alice!"

"Mr. Kean!"

"Miss Buckingham!"

Auntie seemed to have something private to say to the clerk, for she asked him to step into the hall for a moment with her, thus leaving the two culprits alone.

Alice looked like a wilted flower, and tears came to her eyes. What could a man do, even if it was not his fault, even if he had taken a solemn oath not to apologize? He reached out his arms, and she slipped into their embrace and cried just a few happy tears on a shoulder very dear to her.

"Please don't cry, Alice. Of course I was to blame. It was nasty of me to tease you about that Benton girl; but, really, dear, I only did it just to see how much you cared."

"And I cared so much. But, Billy, dear, how can you explain about those trunks? My key opened yours."

"Easy enough, darling. We bought those two trunks on that shopping expedition when auntie chaperoned us in Paris at the Bon Marche, and evidently the locks were the same. We won't have that trouble again, Alice, for the next time we take a trip there will only be one trunk for both of us. Where is your ring, dear—consigned to the ocean or the ash barrel?"

"Oh, Billy, you're horrid to find me out! Here it is around my neck. You see, I wrote you saying the engagement was all off, but I kept the ring just for a day or two, you understand, thinking maybe—oh, don't be so mean!"

"Well, I'll forgive you this time, but don't take it off again until the plain gold one goes on under it."

And she promised to do as he said.

Foiled Again.

The stout man opened the door of the small waiting room at Bushby station and looked cautiously into the room. As he saw it was apparently empty, he entered, closed the door softly behind him and tiptoed over to the weighing machine. "I guess I've got my chance at last," he muttered as he hastily thrust a cent into the slot and stepped gingerly on the platform at the same instant.

He settled himself firmly and was adjusting his glasses to decipher the number of pounds registered when the door of the ticket agent's room opened, and out he came, rubbing his chilled hands.

"Have to warm up at the stove once in awhile," he said genially and was surprised at the [illegible]

"Any excuse [illegible]" muttered the [illegible] ped heavily [illegible] chine without [illegible] figure.

"You [illegible] weigh to [illegible] vestibule [illegible]

"This is [illegible] to use [illegible] but now I [illegible] position. [illegible]

Youth's Companion.

[illegible]

Elderly Bachelor [illegible] married to young wife, to his friend—And what do you think of my wife?

Friend—Lovely. She will make a perfectly stunning widow.

Parcels Posts and Postal Savings Banks Needed.

By Postmaster General GEORGE VON L. MEYER.

WHAT we desire is to enable the people of our country to send parcels through the mails to domestic points AS CHEAPLY AS THEY CAN TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES and even foreign countries that are far distant from our own. Just now any person can send a package weighing eleven pounds or under to any part of the world at the rate of 12 cents a pound except from one point in the United States to another, when the rate becomes 16 cents a pound for four pounds. That hardly seems to be the thing.

Support of the plan is GROWING FAST. The national grange is with it, and we have had much encouragement everywhere as far west as Omaha. It is asserted that the great express interests are opposed to the betterment of the parcels post service.

WELL, I HAVE DISCOVERED THAT THE PEOPLE DESIRE THE IMPROVEMENT AND THE PEOPLE ARE EXPECTED TO SPEAK THROUGH CONGRESS WHEN A BILL IS PRESENTED FAVORING THE REDUCTION IN THE COST OF TRANSMITTING PARCELS BY MAIL AND LIMITING THE WEIGHT, OF COURSE.

Retail merchants everywhere are coming to the point of recognizing the BENEFITS of the plan and already are supporting it in many sections in the east.

THE PEOPLE OF THE COUNTRY SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO OPEN LIMITED ACCOUNTS WITH THE GOVERNMENT THROUGH THE POSTOFFICES IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE LAND.

As I see it at present the plan is to limit such accounts and to limit deposits to a definite amount in a year—say a $500 limit to each account and allowing $200 to be deposited in the first year. POSTAL SAVINGS HAVE BEEN A SUCCESS WHEREVER TRIED. THE INCENTIVE TO SAVE IS GREAT. Canada, with a population of nearly 7,000,000, has the postal savings system in force for the benefit of the people, and there is $45,000,000 on deposit.

The postal savings bank which I propose would not conflict with the present savings institutions of the country and would not compete with them. Savings banks are paying 3 per cent interest or more. I would confine the interest paid by the government on savings deposited in the postal savings to 2 per cent. I would also LIMIT a deposit for any one person in the postal savings bank to $500.

In this way the postal savings bank would not be used by the great majority of the people except in times of FINANCIAL EMERGENCY, when depositors in savings banks get foolishly frightened and withdraw their savings deposits without knowing what to do with them.

IN SUCH CASES THE POSTAL SAVINGS BANK WOULD FURNISH A REPOSITORY IN WHICH ANY DEPOSITOR WOULD FEEL THE GREATEST CONFIDENCE.

Hoarding of Money Unpatriotic and Unwise.

By Secretary of the Treasury CORTELYOU.

IT IS A TIME WHEN EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD ASSUME HIS SHARE OF THE BURDEN. THE HOARDING OF MONEY, THE EXACTION OF UNNECESSARILY HARSH REQUIREMENTS IN BUSINESS DEALINGS, BUT RETARD OUR RETURN TO NORMAL CONDITIONS. THE HOARDED MONEY SHOULD BE PUT BACK IN THE BANKS, AND THE EXACTIONS OF BANKERS AND MERCHANTS SHOULD BE PROPORTIONED ONLY TO ACTUAL BUSINESS NECESSITIES. TO DO OTHERWISE IS NOT ONLY UNPATRIOTIC, BUT UNWISE.

I believe that if this money of the country, wherever hoarded, were at once put back to FULFILL ITS FUNCTIONS IN THE CHANNELS OF TRADE there would be within twenty-four hours an almost complete resumption of business operations.

I doubt whether we can in any way estimate the loss that has fallen upon those who have, either through SELFISH OR MISGUIDED MOTIVES, thus drawn their money from places of MORE THAN REASONABLE SAFETY to put it where it has been lost through robbery or fire or other misfortune.

The various plans advocated for currency reform must be subjected to RIGID scrutiny, to the end that the citizens of every section shall be fairly treated, their needs and requirements consulted and, above all, that whatever action is finally taken it shall be so SOUND AND WHOLESOME as to enhance our commercial standing among the nations of the world.

As a people we have this and many other grave problems before us. Their solution will not be a thing of a month or a year. We must approach them with the determination to exercise DISPASSIONATE JUDGMENT and to seek as our ultimate aim justice as between man and man.

Filipinos Pleased With the Outlook.

By EMILIO AGUINALDO, Former Leader of Insurgents.

IT IS MY BELIEF THAT THE BENEFITS TO FOLLOW MR. TAFT'S VISIT TO THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES WILL BE GREATER THAN THEY CAN RECOGNIZE AT THE PRESENT TIME. I AM AT PRESENT UNABLE TO FORM AN OPINION OFFHAND OF THE POSSIBLE FUTURE ADVANTAGES, BUT I AM CONFIDENT THAT IT HAS DONE GOOD.

The opening of the assembly has gone a long way to CEMENT THE FRIENDSHIP of my people with the people of the United States.

As a fulfillment of a solemn promise, which many thought would not be fulfilled, the secretary of war DID NOT BRING INDEPENDENCE for my people in his pocket, but he brought the means of attaining it. He told us how we can get it.

The Filipinos are thankful for the information and pleased at what the assembly has done, especially in the interests of LEGISLATION, EDUCATION AND AGRICULTURE.

NELSONVILLE M. O. BUBBLE.

Startling Results of an Investigation by State Examiners.

Under the heading "This Town Is Easy Pickin'" a Nelsonville (O.) paper reprints from the Columbus Citizen the following account of the results of an investigation of that town by the state examiners:

"The examiners say that Auditor John Lax looked after his private affairs and that Treasurer Aumiller signed both his own name and that of the auditor to all vouchers.

"The police department kept no record of arrests, the fire department no record of fires, and the sinking fund had no minutes.

"Mayor James Sharp did the plumbing for the city, Councilman Price sold all the supplies, and Member of Board of Service Silcott furnished the coal to the light plant.

"Councilman Emmett Keenan is also city engineer, and his office kept no records of plats, and nothing could be found out as to the cost of street improvements."

The examiners also reported that the electric lights cost Nelsonville $88.14 a year. When asked for more detailed information a citizen of high standing wrote:

"Figures of Examiner Smith do not include depreciation, interest, insurance or water. Arcs are supposed to be 2,000 candlepower burning on moonlight schedule. Few nights if any pass without some lights out, and often all are out the entire night. I understand that the local electric light company agreed to furnish the same lights for $60 per year each, with a percentage off for outage.

"When the waterworks were operated alone the net profit per year was about $900. Since the light plant was started the waterworks have run in debt and this in the face of the fact that they are pumping less water at higher prices than before, the advance in price amounting to about $1,000 per year."

"ESTIMATE" VERSUS BID.

Curious and Instructive Experience of Ashland, Wis.

Last January Ashland, Wis., voted in favor of installing a municipal electric light plant. Votes were secured on the basis of an "estimate" that the complete plant would cost $80,000, this "estimate" being made by Professor W. C. Kirchoffer of the University of Wisconsin, who the lighting committee stated had been employed by over forty cities of Wisconsin as a consulting engineer. This committee thus continued its report:

"After thoroughly going over the estimates the committee can state that the outside cost of this entire proposition, including everything, will be $80,000, divided as follows: Concrete and earth dam, spillway and power house, $19,850; turbines and electrical machinery at power house, $15,430; electric transmission line, $4,330; substation building and equipment, $5,400; arc lighting system, $8,075; incandescent lighting system, $15,080; land necessary for dam and flowage rights, $7,500; engineering plans, superintendence, incidentals, $3,735; total, $80,000.

"In every case these figures represent the highest possible cost for the work, as it has been the intention of this committee to let the people of Ashland understand whatever estimate is made that, in fact, the actual cost will be under rather than above."

Before the election the mayor published a letter from "one of the concerns the committee has been in touch with" (name withheld) agreeing to erect a complete plant for $50,000, to be in operation on or before the 1st of July. This has not been mentioned by the mayor recently, for when the city advertised for bids the only bid received was for $130,000, and this did not include transformers, meters or anything pertaining to commercial lighting except a power circuit.

Sold For Half Price.

The mayor of Leon, Ia., tells how the city's electric light plant was sold for half price as follows:

"Original cost $10,000; sold for $5,000—sold because the city was getting in debt worse every year on account of plant. At one time the city had to issue bonds in the sum of $5,000 to pay outstanding warrants. This was four years ago. Two years ago, when the city sold the plant, there were about $3,000 outstanding warrants. Cost of light about the same now as when the plant was owned by the city, but service much better."

Another authority states that $13,000 had been spent on construction and equipment before the plant was sold.

No Provision For Contingencies.

The condition of the Maywood waterworks seems to be the same as in many other villages. The plant was installed, paid for in ten yearly installments by the people, and everything went lovely until the machinery began to wear out or increased capacity was needed, when it was discovered that no provision had been made for such necessary expenditures—the water had been furnished to the people at cost and nothing laid by for rehabilitation.—Maywood (Ill.) Herald-Recorder.

High Point's Experience.

The city of High Point, N. C., installed an electric light plant at a cost of $20,000. Ten years later the generating plant was sold. A former member of the electric light committee of the board of aldermen writes that this was done because a private company offered to sell current at less than the operating cost of the city's plant. He further states that if the city had sold its distributing system it would be far better off financially than it is.

NOT TO BE CAUGHT.

Mandy's Excuse When She Found Herself Cornered.

An east end lady has a colored maid who is a clever worker when she wants to work, but who had sudden attacks of what would be called spring fever if it came in April or May, and she always has an excuse ready.

"I's gwine to quit workin', Miss Brown," she said the other day. "I's goin' to git married."

"Indeed! Who is the man?"

"His name is Erastus Greenly."

The lady of the house didn't say anything, but the next time Mandy's chum came to call on Mandy she took occasion to see her alone in the kitchen.

"Mandy says she's going to be married. Do you know anything about it, Tilly?"

"Mandy married! Who did she say she was goin' to marry?"

"A man named Erastus Greenly."

"Erastus Greenly! Why, he's married already!"

"Perhaps there's another Erastus?"

"No, dere ain't but one."

So the mistress cornered Mandy.

"You can't marry Erastus Greenly because he is already married."

"Who says so?"

"Tilly Jones."

Mandy hesitated.

"Can't dar be two Erastus Greenlys?"

"Tilly says there's only one."

Mandy was cornered. Then she looked up suddenly. A gleam of triumph sparkled in her shining eyes.

"Wh-what was de middle name of de Erastus Greenly dat Tilly knows?" she demanded.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A New Disease.

Young Featherhead soon after purchasing his elegant new touring car was taken with a swelling on the back of his neck. He went and consulted his physician about it.

"Doctor," he said, "are there such things as automobile diseases?"

"It is not unlikely," was the doctor's response. "At least automobiling may develop tendencies to disease that lie dormant under ordinary conditions."

"Well, I wish you would look at that spot on the back of my neck and tell me if the excessive use of my motor car has anything to do with it."

The doctor complied.

"H'm," he said gravely, "that looks as if it might be either a car-buncle or an automo-bile."—Youth's Companion.

What He Left.

A man wrote to a lawyer in another town for information touching the financial standing of a man there who owed him a considerable sum of money.

"What property has he that I can attach?" he asked.

The reply was as follows:

"The person to whom you refer died a year ago. He has left nothing liable to attachment except a widow."—New York Times.

Insuring Remembrance In the Will.

Little Willie (to his chum, who has fallen down the well)—George, I say, if you don't come up after the third time can I have your black and white terrier pup?—Sketch.

On the Jump.

"Hello, Cassidy!" said Casey. "An' how's things wid you?"

"Busy," replied Cassidy; "very busy, indade."

"Is it so?"

"Aye, shure, ivry time I'm at laysure I have somethin' to do."—Philadelphia Press.

"A Pleasant Walk."

"A pleasant walk," said Herr Sausenheimer after a strenuous climb to the top of the mountain, wiping the perspiration from his brow; "my wife couldn't speak a word all the way up."—Fliegende Blatter.

Its Peculiarity.

"There is one peculiarly inconsistent thing about hay fever."

"What is that?"

"All are afraid of it, and yet everybody who has it sneezes at it."—Baltimore American.

One Phase of It.

"Doubtless the servant girl problem is very annoying to you."

"Very," responded the housewife. "I have a really desperate time getting maids my clothes won't fit."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Its Second Childhood.

Nellie—Has she reached the age when her hair is getting gray?

Flossie—Worse than that. She's reached the age where it's getting golden again.—Kansas City Times.

The Kind He Knew.

"What are motor nerves?"

"I suppose the kind that get busy when the policeman is chasing you for exceeding the speed limit."—Baltimore American

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, FEBRAURY 27, 1908.

MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS.

The qualified Republican voters of the Town of Oakland are requested to assemble in convention at the town council chamber in the opera house, on Thursday evening, March 5th, 1908, at the hour of 7.30 o'clock for the purpose of nominating

One person for Mayor to serve for the term of two years; and

Three persons for Members of the Town Council to serve for a term of two years.

Every Republican voter is earnestly requested to be present and assist in naming the ticket.

A. G. STURGISS,
Chairman Republican County Com.

THE SPEECH of Delegate Myers the other day when he made his position plain relative to the language he used on a former occasion when he is alleged to have asserted that "undue influence had been used to pass a bill prohibiting the sale of liquor in District No. 5," was the manly thing to do. His language had been erroneously construed. His earnestness in removing suspicion against any one having an interest in the measure has made him friends not only at home but throughout the State. He did not "crawfish," as alleged by the Journal last week, but had the manhood to make a plain, honest, straightforward statement, something that is entirely foreign in the Journal's composition. Jake never sidesteps; when he is wrong he graciously acknowledges his error.

THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908

Will the 1908 legislature go down in the annals as one that has performed conspicuously high average public service, or will it be measured and recorded as a session devoted chiefly to partisan scheming? If the legislature is yet to do something in the way of conspicuously high average public service, it is highly time, in the language of the street, that it should "get a move on." The controlling majorities of the two houses need make no further exertion, however, to enhance the reputation that has already been assured for skill and persistency in the enactment of legislation designed to promote partisan purposes. The care and attention that were devoted to shaping and putting through the disfranchisement amendment are sufficient to assure that an observant public will not fail to measure and properly appraise the amount of effort which the controlling influences of the two houses have given to the accomplishment of partisan legislation.

The 1908 legislature affords the people of the state a most impressive object lesson of how a legislative body, under the control of the dominant party by overwhelming majorities in the two branches, can grow callous concerning and contemptuous of public opinion, which always exercises a wholesomely modifying influence, when majorities are so evenly balanced that a few courageous votes swinging away from the support of a bad measure can serve to defeat it, The controlling influences of this 1908 legislature have seemingly interpreted the big majority in the two houses as signifying a complete indifference on the part of the people how their chosen representatives use the power that has been delegated. Either that or else it must be thought by those who are "leading" the controlling majorities that the public is not capable of judicious discrimination—is not acute enough to properly apprise the meaning of the roles which some conspicuous Democratic statesmen have been playing at Annapolis. There is, perhaps, a greater percentage of the adherents of both parties, not to mention that large aggregation which does not classify itself as being adherent to any party, that correctly interprets the meaning of the doings at Annapolis than the confident and self-centered statesmen who are following their own untrammeled bent are aware of.

The records of the Maryland legislature of 1908 are, of course, not yet complete. But is there much reason for entertaining hope that the majorities in either branch will break away from the influences which seem to be dominant and in large degree paralyzing all individuality of action? The record is not complete, but it is nearly two-thirds made up, and the results to date are not such as shine with the lustre of lofty aims. "By their fruits shall ye know them." It will be one of the most remarkable transformations in all political history if the majorities in the two legislative branches bear a crop of good fruits, in spite of the blighting indications which have been thus far in evidence.

GRAFT.

According to the Journal graft has been rampant in the office of the Supervisors of Elections, but the Journal veils its language and fails to specify who participated in the graft.

The charges are serious ones and the Journal may be called upon to prove them in a court of law and justice.

The only graft, or rather, attempted graft, THE REPUBLICAN has ever learned of in connection with the Supervisors' office, was that alleged against the Journal itself when it approached a member of the late Board and attempted to obtain an additional sum over and above the contract price for printing the ballots used at the election last fall.

For many years the Journal has been posing as the watchdog of the public funds, and it may be interesting to have the Journal explain this alleged deviation from its straight (?) and narrow way.

FARMERS' INSTITUTES

To Be Held in Grantsville, Accident and Oakland, March 2, 4, 6, and 7.

From the Director Department Farmers' Institutes, Mr. W. L. Amos, The Republican has received a copy of the program for the Farmers' Institutes to be held at Grantsville March 2nd; Accident, March 4, and Oakland March 6th and 7th.

The Institute at Grantsville will be held in the Hall and will convene at 10 o'clock a. m., and adjourn at 4 o'clock p. m. Mr. Edward Van Alstine, who is well known to all institute goers in Garrett county will address the meeting on the subject "Feeding and Care of the Calf," in the morning, and in the afternoon on the subject "Planting an Orchard." John Jeannin, Jr., will talk on "Potato Growing, Seed Selection and Results of Spraying," in the morning. In the afternoon his subject will be "Poultry Keeping for the Farmer."

At Accident the institute will be held in the school house, convening at 10 o'clock and adjourning at 4 o'clock, with an intermission for dinner. Here the same speakers will appear, Mr. Van Alstine addressing the institute in the morning on the "Care of the Orchard," and in the afternoon on "Butter Making." Mr. Jeannin's addresses will be the same as those to be delivered at Grantsville.

The Institute at Oakland will be held in the opera house where a two days' session will be held, beginning on Friday morning at 10 o'clock with an afternoon session both days.

The program in full for the Oakland sessions follow:

FIRST DAY.

Conductor's Announcement. Edward Van Alstyne "Planting an Orchard." John Jeannin, Jr. "Potato Growing, Selecting Seed, and Results of Spraying."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Question Box.

Edward Van Alstyne—"Care of the Orchard." John Jeannin, Jr.—"Strawberry Culture."

SECOND DAY.

Conductor's Announcement. Edward Van Alstyne—"Handling the Crop." John Jeannin, Jr.—"Influence of Good Seed."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Question Box.

Edward Van Alstyne—"Hay Crop and Methods of Seeding. John Jeannin, Jr.—"Poultry Keeping for the Farmer." By Patrons—Resume of the subjects treated.

Church Services.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Preaching at Pleasant Valley next Sunday at 3 p. m.; and Loch Lynn at 7 p. m.

Cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Class meeting, at Mt. Lake Park at 10 a. m.; Sunday school, 2.30; Junior League, 3.30; Epworth League, 6.30, and preaching at 7.30 p. m.

Deer Park—Sunday School at 10 a.m.; preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League 6.30.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

ST. PAUL S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: At 10.30 a. m. the Sacrament of The Lord's Supper will be administered.

Sunday school 2.15 p. m.

At 7.30, an address on State-Wide Local Option by Marna S. Poulson, Assistant Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of this State.

Epworth League, Monday, 7.30 p. m.

Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.

Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.

All are cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Preaching at Ferndale at 11 a. m.; Loch Lynn at 3 p. m. and at Deer Park at 7:30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

At 10:30 a. m., Mr. Marna S. Poulson, assistant superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland, will make an address upon the subject of the State Wide Local Option Measure now pending in the State Legislature, to which all are most cordially invited.

Services Sabbath evening at 7:30.

Catechise Saturday at 2 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

A HASTY MARRIAGE AND ITS SEQUEL.

Young Couple From Cumberland Married in Oakland Friday Morning.

Last Friday morning at the Frantz Hotel in Oakland, there was more than the usual stir among the guests who arrived and departed on the morning trains, the reason being the arrival at that hostelry of an irate father and an indignat daughter on No. 3 from Cumberland on the hunt of a runaway couple from that city. The story is best told in the following from the Cumberland News of Saturday morning, which was reported to that paper from this office Friday evening:

George R. Chapman and Miss Mabel Clark, the latter the seventeen year old daughter of Mr. Walter B. Clark, proprietor of "The Inn," eloped to Oakland, Thursday evening, as passengers on board B. & O. train No. 7, were met at the station by a clergyman by pre-arrangement and at an early hour yesterday morning were married in the parlors of of the Frantz hotel.

Mr. Chapman and Miss Clark, eluded the vigilance of the young lady's parents who suspected that their daughter was matrimonially bent. The nuptial ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Workman, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Oakland. The youthful couple were at the hotel when Mr. Clark and his eldest daughter, Mrs. Clarence Smallwood, arrived in Oakland on the next train from Cnmberland at about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. Clark, it is understood, intended to have his new son-in-law arrested on a charge of perjury, claiming that his daughter was under age, but not being sure he could prove that matter he preferred a technical charge of assault, had Mr. Chapman arrested, and started for Cumberland with both daughters, intending to return on another train in time for the trial, which was set for four o'clock yesterday afternoon before Justice Gonder. Upon Mr. Clark's failure to return the charge against Mr. Chapman was dismissed and he was released. He returned to Cumberland on train No. 14 last night, and going at once to the Olympia Hotel, where he is employed as clerk, Mr. Charman telephoned his father-in-law, Mr. Clark, and the latter informed Chapman that he was waiting to hear from him in the matter. Later last night Mr. Chapman, accompanied by his attorney, called on Mr. Clark at the latter's new hotel, "The Inn," and demanded that his wife be given into his care. This Mr. Clark refused and habeas corpus proceeding were instituted this morning by Mr. Chapman, through his counsel.

The elopement was well planned and as carefully executed. Mr. Chapman visited Oakland several days ago, secured a marriage license and arranged with Rev. Workman to meet him and his bride-elect at the train Thursday night. Thursday afternoon the bride attended a matinee at the Academy of Music in company with her grandmother, and after supper she met Mr. Chapman by appointment and they took a train shortly afterwards for Oakland.

The sequel to the elopement was the issuing of a writ of habeas corpus requiring the father to produce the girl in court at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

When the case was called Mabel was not present. Mr. Clark through his lawyer, A. A. Young, stated that he had asked his daughter to be present but that she had refused. The court told Mr. Clark that he must use his parental authority and command Mabel to appear. The first question asked her was if she was the wife of George R. Chapman. She replied: "Yes, sir."

She was asked if she wanted to live with her husband, and she replied: "No, sir. I will go home with my father." Asked if she was being detained by her father or any one else, she replied "No, sir." After her answers to the questions, Mr. Donnelly stated to the court that he had no more testimony and the petition was dismissed.

After the case was ended Mr. Chapman and his wife left the court house and walked down the hill together, both seemingly greatly pleased at being thrown together. They separated at the corner of Baltimore and Mechanic streets, and conversed for some time on the corner.

Railroad Men After Potter.

Reports from various points along the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad state that trainmen employed by that company are prepairing a petition which will be presented to President Oscar G. Murry, asking for the resignation of G. L. Potter, third vice president, in charge of operation. This is said to be the result of the number of drastic orders issued by Mr. Potter and to which the men object.

We take it for granted that parents are as much if not more interested in the advancement of their children at school than are the teachers, and no teacher takes delight in a pupil's failure. The management simply wishes to call the attention of the parents to the facts in the case and urgently request, not demand, that nothing be allowed to interfere with the progress of their children in school work.

Subscribe for The Republican.

ALEX. R. HAGNER IN THE FIELD

Prominent Hagerstown Lawyer Candidate For Congress to Succeed Pearre.

Mr. Alexander R. Hagner, a leading member of the Bar of Washington county, and attorney to the Board of County Commissioners since 1903, has announced his candidacy for the nomination for Congress at the hands of the Republicans in the Sixth District of Maryland. Mr. Hagner, who is a native of Calvert county, has been engaged in the practice of law in Hagerstown since 1882. Since becoming attorney for the county Mr. Hagner, through his zealous efforts, succeeded in bringing to a satisfactory conclusion a controversy of long standing between the county and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co. The matter was settled by the railroad company paying to the county the sum of $45,000 in cash and relinquishing a claim of $25,000 against the county, the result being a big saving to the citizens of Washington county.

Speaking of his candidacy for the nomination for Congress to succeed Colonel Pearre, Mr. Hagner said:

In the year 1896 I was a candidate before the Republican nominating convention of the Sixth District of Maryland and when the convention met at Oakland there were three candidates in the field Capt. John McDonald, Col. George A. Pearre and myself. I received twelve votes, one short of nomination, for fourteen hundred ballots. The convention then adjourned from Oakland to Rockville, where Captain McDonald was nominated, and later elected by a large majority

At the next Republican Congressional nominating convention of the district in 1898 Colonel Pearre was nominated, and this election followed, and he has every two years thereafter received the nomination and election at the hands of the Republican party, and is today the representative in Congress from the Sixth District of Maryland.

Of these gentlemen who were aspirants before the Oakland convention, which was in session four days and parts of four nights, each candidate has obtained his coveted desire save and except myself. It was at that famous convention that my candidacy started, and I have waited patiently ever since, hoping that I too might obtain the goal of my ambition. It would seem, therefore, that my time comes next, and as a number of my friends think likewise I have determined to enter the race for the nomination, and shall put into the fight all the fair and honorable means I possess to obtain the prize.

Allegany county has this year several candidates. Montgomery and Frederick, I understand, have candidates, and certainly Washington county should have a candidate also. I submit my candidacy to the Republicans of the Sixth District of Maryland, and should I receive the nomination and be elected, I shall exert every effort to further the interest of the people of this district, the state of Maryland, and the nation at large.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

Were you ever "rolled"? Would you like to be? If you have any inclination in that direction all that you will have to do is to visit Bloomington and display a little money in a careless manner and then take a walk down the B. & O. to the stone bridge, and you can be accommodated in a way that will make you remember it for years to come. To enjoy the thing to the fullest extent you should be "tanked up" a little. This will make the affair go off easier. You will likely be met at either end of the bridge by two parties. One will engage you in conversation, while the other chap will drop behind and upset the rear end of your cranium and make an estimate of how much energy and force it will require to put you to sleep for about a half of an hour. After the calculation is made he will proceed to "swipe you one" hard enough to floor you instantly. You then proceed to dream, and when you awake "presto change"—your change is gone, so is your watch and your companions, too, all gone, you are alone. You have been "rolled." Mr. John Fox, of Hampshire, a miner employed by the Masteller Coal Co., claims to have met with this experience on last Friday night.—Bloomington Correspondent in Piedmont Independent.

As will be noticed elsewhere in this paper today Chairman A. G. Sturgiss of the Republican County Committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the Republican voters of Oakland to be held at the council chamber in the opera house on next Thursday evening, March 5th, at 7.30 o'clock for the purpose of nominating candidates for Mayor and members of the Town Council to be voted for on Monday, March 9th. Every Republican voter should endeavor to be present at this meeting and participate in naming the ticket to be voted for.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

NOTES FROM FLORIDA

Springtime Has Arrived In That Section.

LEESBURG, FLA., Feb. 22, 1908.

Springtime is here with all its glory. Orange trees are coming in blossom while many are still loaded with golden fruit.

Truckers are busy marketing their cabbage and lettuce, which is shipped North in considerable quantities. Potatoes, corn, oats, etc., are up and growing nicely, but not much grain raised here. Melons, cucumbers and all the tender vegetables are being planted, also velvet beans, which is an important farm crop here.

This town is about half the size of Oakland; quiet, prosperous, at the head of navigation on the Ocklawaha river and has two railroads.

All the hotels are full of northern tourists at this time. The chief attraction for tourists is the fine boating and fishing.

There are several families living here whose former homes were in the mountains of Western Maryland and West Virginia, consequently we have a West Virginia colony. The secretary of the colony, Mrs. Dick, of Elkins, W. Va., called a meeting and we all got together for a good time, this being Washington's Birthday, and celebrated the occasion by having a fish fry. We met at Love's Point on Lake Harris, about two miles from town, each family taking a basket well filled with good things to eat, also frying pans, salt and pepper, for the fish. We go plenty of fish, too. After all had partaken to their capacity a vote was taken to determine who had baked the best cake, Mrs. Wilson winning the prize.

Rowing, fishing, romping was the order of the day. The old and young joined in the fun, one of the most amusing incidents being races by some of the stout women. The sun was getting low when it was proposed to come home.

Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Aronhalt, from near Gorman, are here and may make this their home, as Mr. Aronhalt is a sufferer from asthma and cannot stand the severe winters of his former home.

M. N. Wilson is also dodging snowstorms; he has been at Tampa, Ft. Myers, St. Petersburg, but there seems to be more attraction for him in Leesburg.

Altho the climate here is so mild and the sun shines nearly all the time there is just as much complaint about the weather. The farmers are dependent on their orange groves and their winter crops of vegetables. A little frost does great damage and a temperature low as twenty degrees is fatal to orange trees.

We have been here since early in November and are enjoying it very much but after all "there is no place like home," so we will soon bid good-bye to the alligators, snakes, mosquitoes and the long hot summer of the Southland and return to good old Garrett county.

BURT WILSON.

Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of Yough River Oil and Gas Company of Garrett county will be held on Saturday, the 4th day of April, 1908, at the Court House, Oakland, Maryland, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of 12 Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Stockholders who cannot attend in person are requested to send their proxies.

J. M. BURNS, President,
N. S. HEINDEL, Secretary.

No Longer to Be Tolerated.

Judge Keedy has notified those attending court at Hagerstown to please leave their whiskey bottles on the outside. This thing of finding the window sills and corridors of the temple of justice decorated with empty but vile smelling bottles by the janitor in the morning is no longer to be tolerated. Hagerstown always did lack refinement in its dissipation.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

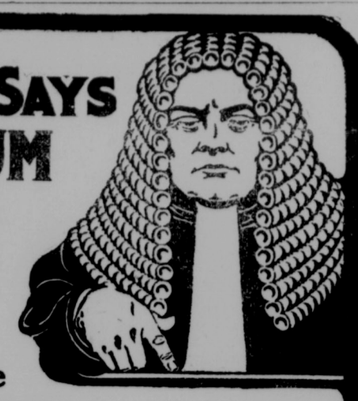
It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS; 50c. AND $1.00.

ENGLAND SAYS NO ALUM IN FOOD



and strictly prohibits the sale of alum baking powder—

So does France
So does Germany

The sale of alum foods has been made illegal in Washington and the District of Columbia, and alum baking powders are everywhere recognized as injurious.

To protect yourself against alum, when ordering baking powder,

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

and be very sure you get Royal.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar. It adds to the digestibility and wholesomeness of the food.

Mr. Silas F. Cuppett, of Elder, was in Oakland on business Tuesday.

Mr. U. N. Bond, of Bond, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. Fred T. Martin, of Grafton, spent Sunday in Oakland with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder spent last Sunday in Terra Alta with friends.

Miss Nell Offutt went to Cumberland Monday morning for a brief visit to friends and relatives.

Attorney D. Lindley Sloan, of Cumberland, was in Oakland a day or two this week on professional business.

State Senator Brown will arrive in Oakland Friday night and remain here during all of Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. Henry W. McComas went to Washington, D. C., Friday night to which city he was called on professional business.

Mrs. Eva Mitchell returned to her home in Oakland Saturday afternoon from a week's visit to friends in Cumberland.

Attorneys A. T. Matthews and G. Semmes Hamill spent several days last week in Friendsville on professional business.

Miss Gertrude Shirer, of this office, who spent a few days with Grafton relatives, returned to Oakland Sunday evening.

Rev. James A. Enlow, of Cumberland, was in Oakland on business last Saturday, having spent the week in West Virginia.

Misses Mary and Josephine Browning and Dolly Enlow, of Sang Run are the guests this week of Prof. E. A. Browning at his home "Bruceland," near Oakland.

Buy of your home merchants and you are increasing the value of your property. This is a fact, the better the town the more demand there will be for property.

Mrs. Martha Delawder, who visited her daughter, Mrs. W. L. Boughner, at Morgantown, several weeks, is now here as the guest of her son, Mr. King Delawder.

Mr. C. W. Beamer, Standard Oil's representative in this section of Maryland and the adjacent counties in West Virginia, spent Sunday in Oakland with his family.

Mr. John Arnold, who was engaged last week in plastering a house at Piedmont, fell from a scaffold on Friday and sustained a very painful injury to his right arm.

Farm for Sale—I offer my firm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six-room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. S. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13

Mr. A. V. Cuppett, of Grafton, came down to Oakland from that place Sunday afternoon and on Monday went to his old home near McHenry to visit his parents for a week or two.

Many of the Oakland business men are complaining bitterly of the dullness in their respective lines, owing, they allege to the condition of the weather and bad roads leading into town.

Time was not far back when the boodler was called a statesman, or, at worst, a shrewd politician. It is to the great advantage of this country that he is now known by his right name.

The local lodge Knights of Pythias is making arrangements for a banquet to be given in the lodge room, on the evening of March 3rd. A very elaborate menu will be prepared for the occasion.

Mr. D. E. Bolden has had the interior of his store room on Second street repapered and painted. The improvement is a decided one and adds materially to the appearance of his establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ellwood Offutt, and Miss Bess Offutt went to Cumberland Monday afternoon where they witnessen the play presented by Mrs. Patrick Compbell in the Maryland, Monday evening.

We are proud of the fact that we are all laborers in this community practically every citizen is included, for who among the number is there who does not, to a greater or less extent, perform manual labor.

Master William Scherr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Scherr of Charleston, West Va., who spent a week or two in Oakland with his sister, Mrs. Julius C. Renninger, returned to Charleston Saturday evening.

Mrs. G. W. Haulenbeck returns to her home at Deer Park on Sunday next. She has been absent in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, since the middle of last December. Her daughter, Miss Irene, will accompany her.

Capt. James W. White, one of the old soldiers of District No. 8, was in the city Tuesday, being his first visit here in a number of weeks, having been confined to his bed for more than a month with an aggravated attack of the grip.

Mr. John Ault, who was in Pittsburg several months this winter, returned to his home near Oakland Saturday morning, having been summoned here by the illness of his three daughters, who have been suffering with an attack of measles in an aggravated form.

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

A BOARD OF TRADE.

Will Be Organized In Oakland on Next Monday Evening.

A meeting preliminary to the organization of a Board of Trade for Oakland was held on Monday night of this week at the show rooms of Mr. D. E. Bolden on Second street, which was attended by many of the business and professional men of the town, all of whom expressed themselves as being in hearty accord with the project and pledged themselves to give it their support and to further the ends of the organization after it has been formed.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Messrs. D. M. Dixon, Henry Lauer, Scott T. Jones, H. C. Sincell, Julius C. Renninger, Austin Brown and others.

A committee composed of Messrs. W. A. Sturgiss, H. C. Sincell and D. E. Offutt, Jr., was appointed to secure copies of the bylaws and constitutions of other Boards of Trade so that something tangible toward the permanent organization of the local board could be presented at a meeting to be held on next Monday night when it is expected a permanent organization will be effected.

Superintendent W. W. Davis, of the Park, returned to that place on Friday morning from a brief visit to Baltimore and other points east on business. Friday afternoon he went to Grafton where he addressed a meeting in one of the churches of that city the same evening.

The bed linen, silverware and other property contained in the Allegany House and owned by Rev. Preston, was sold on last Friday under a number of foreign attachments sued out by creditors of Preston, who left the Park last fall and failed to pay a number of bills. Rev. Preston, so it is said, is now located in New Mexico.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

Mr. W. H. Tapscott, representing the Antietam Paper Company, Hagerstown, was in the city Tuesday calling upon the patrons of his house. This office purchased a large line of stationery at a bargain, which will be disposed of to our customers at prices below those that have been in effect since the late rise in the paper market. Now is the time to place your orders for printed stationery.

By reference to another column our readers will notice an advertisement calling for a meeting of the stockholders of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company to be held in the court house in Oakland on Saturday, April the 4th, 1908, at the hour of two o'clock for the purpose of electing a board of directors of twelve men and for the transacting of other business that may properly be brought before the meeting. All who are interested in the matter are requested to be present.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

Tuesday evening several very enjoyable hours were spent by more than fifty people at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association in the Mitchell building on Second street, the occasion being a box supper arranged by the members of the Association. The boxes presented by the ladies were auctioned and sold to the highest bidder the prices received varying from 60 cents to $1.50 each, the net proceeds from the sale being more than $25, which will be used by the Association.

Dr. Mahlon C. Hinebaugh, accompanied by his brother, Mr. Wade H. Hinebaugh, went down to the home of their uncle, Mr. Mahlon Glotfelty, on last Friday, where Dr. Hinebaugh was called professionally to attend his relative, who had developed a severe case of blood poisoning in his finger, which he injured a week or two ago. It was feared that amputation of Mr. Glotfelty's arm would have to be resorted to in order to save his life, but he is now better and it is thought by his family that the danger point has been passed.

The good housewife gets the meals, dresses the children, sweeps, bakes, mends, does the washing, and when the shades of evening gather she finds that human possibilities and endurance have reached the limit. The banker, after the morning meal, goes to the counting room, delves in facts and figures all day, and when he goes home it is often with a feeling akin to nervous prostration. The doctor, dentist, dry goods man, grocer, newspaper man, implement dealer, druggist—all of these, after displaying a liberel amount of Rooseyelt strenuosity all day and many times until long after the bats have had their frolic and gone to roost—well, they feel as though life, at the very best, is made up of toil.

MUNICIPAL
Notice of Election.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified voters of the town of Oakland that an election will be held on Monday, March 9, 1908,

for the purpose of electing—

One person to serve as Mayor for the Town of Oakland for the term of two years; and

Three persons to serve as members of the Town Council of the Town of Oakland for the term of two years.

The polls will be held in the office of the Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett county in the West building on Alder street from eight o'clock a. m., until six o'clock p. m., of said day.

By order of the Council.

JOHN C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT FRIENDSVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business February 14th, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$126,577 43
Overdrafts		366 36
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, securities, etc		60,943 54
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		6,098 51
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		4,218 81
Due from State Banks and Bankers		174 17
Due from approved reserve agents		9,544 31
Checks and other cash items		9 63
Notes of other National Banks		620 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		207 71
Lawful money reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$2,571 75
Legal-tender notes	11,720 00	14,291 75
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		1,250 00
Total		$251,036 59

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	23,597 43
Undivided profits	443 80
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to State Banks and Bankers	4,804 82
Individual deposits subject to check	82,265 74
Time certificates of deposit	89,924 80
Total	$251,036 59

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of February, 1908.

ORVAL A. WELCH, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: W. H. H. FRIEND, D. S. CUSTER, W. W. SAVAGE, Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT OAKLAND,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$183,226 85
Overdrafts		34 49
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		5,540 00
Bonds, securities, etc		29,617 83
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		42,997 19
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		617 76
Due from State Banks and Bankers		60 01
Due from approved reserve agents		19,412 86
Checks and other cash items		187 18
Notes of other National Banks		325 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		118 07
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$17,223 85	17,223 85
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund		600 00
Total		$403,461 09

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	28,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	393 95
National Bank notes out standing	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	1,296 20
Due to State Banks and Bankers	111 69
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	33 89
Dividends unpaid	99 00
Individual deposits subject to check	72,427 17
Savings Department	132,230 94
Time certificates of deposit	6,302 95
Certified Checks	10 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	132 30
United States deposits	50,000 00
Notes and bills rediscounted	12,423 00
Total	$403,461 09

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of February, 1908.

JAMES P. TREACY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: F. A. THAYER, A. G. STURGISS, E. H. SINCELL, Directors.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indiam Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O. Sold at Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE P. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The Garrett National Bank

AT OAKLAND,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$283,301 15
Overdrafts, secured		21 38
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		122,455 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		13,000 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		861 34
Due from approved reserve agents		42,098 83
Checks and other cash items		96 40
Notes of other National Banks		635 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		395 47
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$25,416 80
Legal-tender notes	6,340 00	31,756 80
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Total		$548,531 37

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,193 28
National Bank notes outstanding	49,500 00
Due to other National Banks	8,191 75
Due to State Banks and Bankers	288 91
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	4,563 58
Dividends unpaid	70 00
Individual deposits subject to check	169,258 58
Time certificates of deposit	229,867 83
Certified checks	50 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	547 44
Total	$548,531 37

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of February, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT KITZMILLERVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$54,922 87
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		6,250 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		218 75
Bonds, securities, etc		9,321 39
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		3,347 95
Other real estate owned		400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		855 21
Due from State Banks and Bankers		349 36
Due from approved reserve agents		6,918 44
Notes of other National Banks		25 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		17 49
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$4,120 95
Legal-tender notes	650 00	4,770 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		312 50
Total		$87,709 91

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	2,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	263 77
National Bank notes outstanding	6,245 00
Due to other National Banks	3,360 97
Individual deposits subject to check	24,468 00
Time certificates of deposit	26,075 61
Cashier's checks outstanding	212 10
Total	$87,709 91

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of February, 1908.

GEO. J. POOL, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH, WADE SAPP, CHAS. M. WILSON, Directors.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF Valuable Coal
AND Mining Rights
AND SURFACE
In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in the Mortgage from Charles D. Gillespie and Minnie M. Gillespie, his wife, to The Lonaconing Savings Bank of Allegany County, dated the 13th day of August, 1907, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, follos, 128 &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said Mortgage, the undersigned Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in said mortgage, will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,
The 14th Day of March,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock P. M., in front of the the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following described Coal and Mining rights, surface of land and other rights located in Election District No. 8 of Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, on the Western Maryland Railroad:

1. An undivided two-third interest in and to all the coal, and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of a tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract called "Mount Pisgah", and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", South 73 degrees West, 345 perches, North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone, North 53 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the tract called "Elk Garden", then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing Three Hundred and Fifteen Acres

2. An undivided two-third interest in and to all that part of the surface of the aforesaid tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, course and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah", and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with part of the 12th line thereof, South 73 degrees West, 65½ perches to a stone, thence North 37½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", thence with part of said 14th line North 53 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone, standing at the end thereof, thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone-pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing One Hundred Acres.

3. All the rights of the said mortgagors used in conjunction with Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, the water from a spring upon her land adjoining the above described part of said tract called "Elk Garden", and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ said water in business.

This property adjoins the mining property of the Davis Coal and Coke Company and is underlaid with the same veins of coal now being worked by said Company at its great plant at Henry, West Virginia, and is almost in sight of the latter point.

The improvements consist of a dwelling house and necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE, As prescribed by said Mortgage—Cash on day of sale. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in Mortgage.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Jasper Price's Corner Lot

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1907, by Frank H. Sweet.

"I'S done wid you, Jasper Price! Yes, sah, I's done wid you for good an' all!"

A woman's voice rose, loud and shrill, from a little tumbledown cabin by a Georgia roadside. Evidently the person addressed had no response to make, for after a little silence the woman's voice rose again.

"I jes' wants you to pack your traps an' cl'ar out, Jasper Price! An' don't you nebber show your face heah no mo' long ez you lib an' breave! I wants jes' zackly what I sez, an' I doan' want to fin' you heah w'en I comes back from de spring!"

A moment later a short, solidly built elderly black woman came from the cabin, holding a tin pail in each hand, and hurried away toward a little spring in a ravine some distance from the house.

Her face was both wrathful and tearful, and she had a worn, tired look. A flapping old calico bonnet, drooping about her face, added to her dejected appearance.

A few minutes after she had left the house a black man not much taller than the woman, but stouter and slightly gray, came out of the cabin and walked slowly and with an evident attempt at dignity down the dusty road.

"I JES' WANTS YOU TO PACK YOUR TRAPS AN' CL'AR OUT!"

In one hand he carried a small bundle tied up in a faded red cotton handkerchief and in the other a cane, curiously carved, of a piece of gnarled wood. A green cotton bag was on his back, and within it could be seen the outline of a violin.

It was Jasper Price who had at last been stung to take this well deserved rebuke from his wife in earnest.

Jasper had been born with a constitutional tendency toward slothfulness, which his will power was quite too weak to overcome.

His wife, on the other hand, was a very industrious and energetic woman. She worked early and late, providing by far the greater part of the support of their large family of children. She had provided for her husband's wants as well until her patience had been quite exhausted by several weeks of needless idleness on Jasper's part.

There had been a most vigorous outpouring of wrath, ending with this command to "cl'ar out for good an' all!"

But she did not suppose he would take her at her word and go.

"Dar ain't no sich good luck for me as dat," she said when she returned to the cabin and found that Jasper was not there. "He'll be back 'bout supper time. Maybe he'll lay out until he gets uncommon hungry, but he'll come back home den, sho' 'nough. I 'clar' if I ain't a mind nebber to give him anudder bit to eat!"

She had no opportunity to refuse him food. He did not come back to ask for it. He did not come back at all. Days, weeks and months passed without a word of tidings of Jasper from any quarter.

His wife, kindly at heart, though overworked and worried, began to reproach herself. She discovered in her memory traits of excellence in her husband's character for which she had never before given him credit.

"I reckon I was too ha'sh wid him," she said. "He comes f'm a lazy family. His daddy befo' him was too lazy for to draw his bref, an' some t'ink he died on dat 'count. I reckon Jasper's no 'countness was bawn in 'im, an' I done druv 'im 'way for what he couldn't he'p!"

She found excuses to talk about him.

"He was mighty willin' an' 'bligin' 'bout some t'ings," she told a neighbor. "He'd ten' to de baby by de hour. He'd allers carry home de washin' I done fo' de ladies in de town, an', my, couldn' he play de fiddle beautiful! Dar ain' nobody roun' heah dat could bring out 'Moneymusk' and 'De Swanee Ribber' an' git out'n de way 'Ole Dan Tucker' like Jasper could. I done miss his fiddle a-jiggitin' away out on de po'ch ob a summer even'."

Four months after Jasper's departure from home a stout, travel stained black man, slightly gray, walked slowly and wearily up the trail leading to a new and promising Rocky mountain mining camp.

He carried a little bundle tied up in a red cotton handkerchief. The outlines of a violin could be traced within a green cotton bag on his back, and he gave his name, at the mouth of a shaft where he stopped to get a drink of water, as Jasper Price.

"Well, old partner," said the man who gave him the drink of water, "you look as if you had walked all the way from Georgia."

"You done struck pretty close to de trewf, sah," said Jasper ruefully. "I's walked many weary miles ob de way, an' I'd 'a' done walked de hull of it ef it hadn't 'a' been for dis yer fiddle."

He had heard wild stories of the ease and quickness with which fortunes were made in this mining camp, and in his simplicity he almost expected to find nuggets of gold and silver unregarded on the streets.

He found quite a different state of things. People here had to work hard for their living, as elsewhere, only the reward of energy and industry was perhaps larger and more prompt than in the older parts of the country.

Jasper could get no farther, and presently he found himself possessed of some share of the restless energy of the people around him. His dormant powers seemed to be aroused by the spirit of activity that was in the crisp and exhilarating mountain air.

No one could be suplnely idle long in such a place as this great mining camp. Jasper was soon busy with ax and saw and hammer, putting up a little cabin for himself on a corner lot he had staked out as his own.

When the cabin was done Jasper nailed a pine board over the door on which was the one word "LAWnDry." He could not read or write, but he had induced an acquaintance among the miners to paint his sign for him.

In his spasmodic hours of industry when at home Jasper used to help his wife with her daily washings and ironings and had in this way acquired something of the wonderful skill that had given her the reputation of being the finest laundress in all the country roundabout her home.

Since Jasper did not know how to do anything else, and as there was a great demand for the one industry in which he had some skill, he had resolved to open a laundry.

His success was great and immediate. There were no girl in the camp very few women, and the prejudice against Chinamen was so great that it was not safe for one of that race to come into camp.

Before the end of the first week Jasper was so overwhelmed with work that he hired a poor boy who had strayed into the camp as an assistant. Another helper was needed early in the second week and still a third before the month was done.

Jasper had a flourishing business and found it necessary to enlarge his shanty. He developed a capacity for business that he himself had never suspected.

His industry increased with his success. There was plenty of money in the camp, and it was not long before Jasper was possessed of ten times as much money as he had ever seen before. Moreover, his head was not turned by his success.

He had a queer habit of going about chuckling to himself and saying: "I mus' write a lettah one of dese days—for a fac', I mus'. Hi! I bet hit'll be a mighty welcome lettah to de pusson what gits hit kase of what'll go along wid hit. Oh, I's gwine write a lettah by'n by, 'deed I is!"

HE STOPPED TO GET A DRINK OF WATER.

Even tempered as he had been in the midst of steadily increasing prosperity, Jasper almost lost his head when he was one day offered $5,000 for his corner lot. It was needed for a business block.

So fast had the town grown and so speedy and great had been the rise in real estate that Jasper's lot had become so valuable as this in less than three months. Fearing a possible decline in values, Jasper prudently sold his lot and removed his laundry.

It was then that he wrote his letter, or, rather, had it written for him. Among his patrons was a young lawyer who had befriended Jasper upon his first arrival in the camp and who had taken an interest in him afterward. It was this friend to whom Jasper applied when he was ready to have the letter written, and the lawyer kept his secret.

It was a month after the letter had been sent that the crowd which always assembled to await the arrival of the stagecoaches which came together from the slowly approaching line of railroad in the valleys below noted the restlessness and peculiar actions of Mr. Jasper Price, who was by far the most prominent figure in the throng.

Newly shaven and spotlessly clean, he was arrayed in a shining suit of black and wore a glossy high silk hat. He had given a bootblack 25 cents for an extra shine on his large shoes. His wide expanse of white shirt front shone in the sunshine, and upon it were a huge breastpin of red and green glass and a gorgeous necktie of blue and yellow.

"JINNY, HEAH I IS!"

On his hands were kid gloves of a saffron hue, while a watch chain of mighty and shining links was stretched across his waistcoat front.

His black face was beaming with kindly smiles, and he frequently chuckled softly to himself as he moved around restlessly in the crowd.

His excitement grew intense when some one called out: "There they come!" and a great cloud of dust arose at one end of the long, stony street.

The second of the two coaches bore such a load as it had never before carried. The driver, with his hand at the side of his mouth, had told the "boys" as he came up that all Africa had "broke loose."

At the side of the driver sat a short, well knit, dust covered negro woman, with a black and happy baby in her lap. Her face was mottled in smiles as she looked down on the crowd, and a great responsive shout came from her lips when Uncle Jasper called out:

"Jinny, heah I is! Doan' you see me, Jinny?"

From every window and door of the coach grinning black heads of all sizes and ages and in all sorts of caps and hats and bonnets were now thrust with cries of "Daddy! Daddy! We's come, daddy! Heah we is, daddy!"

"Hit's my family!" cried Jasper as he pushed his way through the crowd. "Dem's my folks in dat stage. Halla-lowyer!"

Down and out they came into his outstretched arms.

"Glory!" he cried. "You's all heah! Heah's Jacky an' Lotty an' Libbutty Ann an' Ab'aham! Laws, how dey has all growed! An' de baby! Bless my soul, I'd nebbah knowed dat chile in all dis world—he's growed so! An' dis ain't Washin'ton? How he am changed too! An' heah's Matildy an' Minty Jane! Yo' ain't feard of yer daddy kase he's dressed up so fine! I's yer daddy, all de same! William Henry ain't feared, is yo', boy? Is yer all out? No, dar's little Moses. I hardly knowed de chile—he's got so big! Well, well, well, if dis ain't de happiest day I ever see!"

They made a queer procession as they walked away from the smiling crowd. Jasper led the way with the huge baby on his shoulder. His radiantly happy wife walked by his side loaded with baskets and bundles, while the nine older children followed, each carrying a pot or a pan or a teakettle which their mother had foolishly seen fit to bring all the way from Georgia.

Fortunate days had dawned for the reunited family. Jasper's industry did not flag, and he and his thrifty wife showed great good sense in the use of the little fortune that had come to them.

When the decline of the camp's prosperity came and the laundry business was no longer profitable they went to fertile valleys below and bought a ranch, that their numerous boys and girls might be trained to habits of industry.

Vanity, Saith the Preacher.

During the French revolution a priest rode in a tumbrel to the guillotine with two persons—one a marquis, the other a common thief.

As the car jolted through the crowded streets the citizens shouted maledictions on its occupants.

"Down with the beasts of the aristocracy!" they cried.

The marquis smiled proudly, but the criminal was vexed.

"My good friends," he cried, "I am no aristocrat. I am a thief."

Then the priest touched his arm gently, murmuring:

"Ah, my son, this is no time for vanity."—Woman's Home Companion.

BOWSER'S HEALTH FAD

Returns to Habits of His Ancestors and Plans Simple Life.

DROPS IT AFTER ONE DAY.

Eats Vegetables and Meat Raw and Sleeps Outdoors Until Drenched With Rain—Comes Home Mad, but Conceals Feelings.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.]

"I have got your favorite dish for dinner this evening—Maryland chicken and corn fritters," announced Mrs. Bowser when Mr. Bowser reached home from the office the other evening.

He had a package under his arm, and, laying it down and hanging up his hat, he replied:

"Thanks, but I am sorry you put yourself out. No Maryland chicken for me."

"Don't you feel well?"

"I am in the best of health, and I propose to remain so. I will take a seat at the table, but shall choose my own food. It is here in this package."

"Then—then you've got another fad," she said as they went down to the dining room.

"No, ma'am, I haven't. I never have a fad. There is no man in the country more clear of them. I have simply decided to take care of my health hereafter and live to be a hundred years old."

Parsnips and Onions.

And he opened his package and brought out three onions and two parsnips and proceeded to make them ready for eating. As Mrs. Bowser watched him he said:

"Only about thirty men out of every hundred live to reach the age of sixty.

HE THOUGHT OF CODFISH BALLS.

Only twenty-eight out of every hundred children born reach the age of twenty. There are not ten healthy women in a hundred. We are fast becoming a weak and feeble people, not only in this country, but all over the civilized world."

"And the cause of it is eating Maryland chicken and corn fritters?" sarcastically queried Mrs. Bowser.

"To some extent, yes. The cause is that we eat too much. We run too much to taffy. We eat too much, and we coddle ourselves too much. We have entirely lost track of the way our ancestors lived. Two thousand years ago a case of indigestion was unknown. Colds and coughs were unknown. No one heard of gastritis or catarrh. There were no doctors and no drug stores. Now how is it? This flapdoodle way of living has sapped the manhood of the world, and the end is not yet.

"And you are going to make a change?"

"I am. I have already made one. I had a raw potato and four glasses of water for my lunch this noon. I shall eat an onion and a parsnip and drink three glasses of water for my dinner. I have felt better this afternoon than for months before. Mrs. Bowser, I am going back five or six thousand years and live as our ancestors lived."

"But we have no tree in the back yard for you to climb into and make your bed at night," she protested.

To Sleep on the Grass.

"Our ancestors slept in trees or on the ground, just as suited them best. I shall make my bed on the grass. We know that the dew of heaven is a greater remedy than any yet invented by man. I have now made my dinner. What I have eaten nature intended for me to eat. It will make me strong. It will give me new life. It will clear away these pains and aches. You may still continue this flapdoodle way of living, but no more of it for me."

Mrs. Bowser sighed. She knew that it was useless to argue with him when he got hold of a new idea. He must work it out before he would let go of it. When they went up to the sitting room he did not make a dive for a cigar, as was his usual wont. He saw her looking at him with elevated eyebrows, and he explained:

"Our ancestors did not smoke tobacco. Instinct taught them that it was vicious and weakening. It is responsible for thousands of ailments and thousands of deaths every year. No more cigars for me. I shall chew sassafras root instead."

"How did you happen to make this change?" she asked.

"I was talking with Professor Swift, who happened to drop into the office. He said that a man with a frame like mine ought to live a hundred years."

"And then he wanted to borrow $5 didn't he?"

Defends Professor Swift.

"Woman, can't I broach a single subject to you but what you try to be sarcastic over it?" shouted Mr. Bowser, his face got very red. "Of course I didn't want to borrow any money. It was simply interested from a professional standpoint."

"And he knows as much about it as our old cat. Every day or two you see an article in the papers about what to eat and how to eat it and when and how long to sleep and a lot of other nonsense. One doctor says we must chew our meat very fine. Another says to bolt it down in hunks. One says look out for sweets, and another says eat half a pound of candy per day. One says that white bread contains no nutriment, and another declares it the very germ of wheat. When have they experimented, on whom? One doctor says that mashed potatoes are unwholesome. Another says they should be prepared for the table in no other way. You have lived for almost fifty years in this flapdoodle way, as you call it, and I don't see how your health could be any better. You are as strong as an ox, and if you would only let these fads alone you might live to be 500 years old instead of 100. What makes you let men stuff you with such ideas?"

Mr. Bowser had kept his eyes on her as she spoke. His face had flushed from red to white and back again half a dozen times.

"Stuff me! Stuff Bowser!" he almost yelled when she had finished. "Mrs. Bowser, the man does not live who can stuff me. He never has lived and never will. To hear you talk, one would think I was a six-year-old kid who didn't know enough to get out of the way of a street car. Discussion is useless, however. You are never in sympathy with any of my ideas. I will go my way about this matter, and you can go yours. Stuff me! Stuff me!"

Resents Her Sarcasm.

That ended it. Mr. Bowser was dying for a smoke, but he couldn't go back on his ancestors. When they hankered for anything they went out and dug roots. After he had wandered to and fro and up and down for an hour he went over to the drug store and asked for some licorice root.

"What's up now?" queried the druggist.

"I've stopped smoking."

"Glad to hear it. I've thought for the last year that your brain is more or less affected."

If there hadn't been a couple of ladies in the store Mr. Bowser would have called the druggist a liar. As it was, he had to battle up his wrath. He hadn't gone ten feet from the door when he met his family butcher and halted him to say:

"Smith, didn't the ancients used to eat their meat raw before they found a way to cook it?"

"I guess they did."

"And wasn't that why they were so strong and healthy?"

"I presume it was. Shall I send you over a neck piece from an old bull to chew on? After devouring it you may be able to pull up a telegraph pole."

Concealed His Feelings.

Mr. Bowser got home mad, but he concealed his feelings from Mrs. Bowser and chewed away at his supply of root. When 10 o'clock came he went upstairs and took a quilt off his bed and passed out into the back yard without a word to her. The dewy grass awaited him, but there were cats around and the night was dark as he felt himself wishing that his ancestors had slept on hair mattresses. As he lay down and stretched out and the dew of heaven glistened on his bald pate his vitals gearned for fried Maryland chicken and corn fritters. He thought of coffee and chocolate. He knew that his ancestors had none of those things, and he began to have a contempt for them.

The professor hadn't asked to borrow $5 of him, and he had told Mrs. Bowser no lie. It was ten that the man got, and the lender now wished he had it back. Mr. Bowser had about made up his mind to change back and eat a hearty breakfast in the morning when he fell asleep. He didn't get to sleep as soon as one of his ancestors would have done, but he did well for the first time. He had slept and dreamed and hungered and hankered for an hour when there was a flash of lightning, a peal of thunder, and the rain descended in a perfect cloudburst. Three minutes later a limp and bedraggled form entered the family bedroom, where Mrs. Bowser sat reading and waiting.

"Our ancestors laid out in the rain and got soaked, and that toughened them," she remarked.

"D—n our ancestors!" was his vigorous reply as he began to peel off his wet garments to get into bed.

M. QUAD.

Worry.

"How did you lose your hair?"

"Worry."

"What did you worry about?"

"About losing my hair."—Harper's Weekly.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Prevention is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but take up early—at the sneezy stage—they break, or head off three early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe for. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, take Preventics. Promptness may also save half the usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herald [illegible] by Ills Preventics' greatest efficiency. 5 cents for 25 boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 5. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, MD.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyar .ng
Investigation of land titles and collection o claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m., Arrive *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland.

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine.

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
SIX Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practic work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's worl
Boarding Department supplied wi modern improvements—Bathrooms, Heat and Electricity.
New Buildings with modern improvem
Location unsurpassed for health. Tui , Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees. All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance.
Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.
Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.
Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.
Write for particulars.
Term commences September 19th, 1907.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
22-8t College Park Md.

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others."

J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It Destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery
Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Oakland, Md.

HIS COURSE IN LOVE.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

On the whole, Treadway thought it rather nice of him to be willing to marry Marion Hitesman. He was possessed of an income of half a million a year, the income from his mother's estate, and when his father died—well, it required the services of two men to keep track of the Treadway investments.

Marion was a dainty little country woman, but she would need a lot of social training, of course. Perhaps a year in a finishing school might be a good thing to fit her for the place in society she was destined to fill. It might be a bother to wait a year before marriage, though, so on second thoughts perhaps a social secretary would be a better plan. Treadway decided upon the social secretary as the lesser of two necessary evils.

Marion Hitesman was only a little country girl, the belle of Wichfield, a village of a few thousand persons. Treadway had been forced to stop over there for repairs to his automobile, and before these were made he had seen Marion. After that the automobile was called upon only for little trips to nearby points of interest, and Treadway paid his easy going court to the girl.

Perkins, his father's lawyer, made his summer home in Wichfield, and the introduction was easily accomplished, but Treadway found courtship according to Wichfield notions rather complicated. In town he would have left a standing order with the florist and confectioner. There would have been an occasional motor excursion and finally a proposal of marriage in the conservatory at some one's dance and a note in the society columns of the papers.

Here it was all different, and, while he enjoyed the novelty of it, he found it rather awkward at times. In town mammas with marriageable daughters were willing to do more than half the courtship for him. Here he found himself on the same level of equality in the Hitesman home as Ben Taylor, who clerked in Luscomb's grocery.

TREADWAY WATCHED HER WISTFULLY.

Even this fact did not serve to warn him, however, and his declaration was entirely characteristic. The two were returning from a ride in the country. A score of couples had gone out to the home of a farmer host, and the road was dotted with buggies. At Marion's command Treadway had not thrown on speed to outstrip the others, as he usually did, and the car rolled along as quietly as though it were under the observation of a string of traffic police.

Marion, leaning back against the upholstered cushions, gave a luxurious little sigh.

"I love automobiling," she said, "when the car does not run too fast."

"You shall have an automobile for your own," he promised, "when we are married."

"Are we to be married?" she asked, with a touch of coldness in her voice.

"I hope so," was the prompt reply. "I've got a lot of money, and in time I shall have a lot more. I can give you everything you want and introduce you into society. Of course you'll have to coach up a little, but you'll make it all right. Is it a go?"

"No, thank you," said Marion very quietly. "I admit that the proposition you make is glittering in the extreme, but I must decline."

"Decline!" he gasped in amazement. "Why, I know a hundred girls in New York who would just jump at the chance!"

"In that case," was the quiet retort, "I shall omit the customary expressions of regret. No doubt you will find quick consolation."

Treadway was too stunned to argue. He busied himself with the steering wheel until the big black car drew up in front of the Hitesman home. He helped her out and opened the gate for her.

"It is goodby as well as good night," he said as she held out her hand. "I shall be gone in the morning."

She stammered something he could not catch and hurried up the walk to the house. Treadway watched her wistfully until the door closed behind her; then he went away carrying in his heart the memory of a slender figure silhouetted against the light from the open door.

In the early dawn the big touring car slipped down the dusty road. There was the usual gossip, and then Wichfield forgot Treadway in the excitement of a revival meeting at which a famous evangelist exhorted. But Treadway did not forget, even though he put the width of the Atlantic between himself and the little town where he had met defeat. He dawdled in London and loafed miserably in Paris, but he could not forget the girl with the big brown eyes, and he was glad when at last he turned his steps homeward.

The summer had passed, but the brisk autumnal air made touring a delight, and presently for a second time the big black car rolled into Wichfield. Perkins, the Treadway lawyer, had closed his house and gone back to town, but there was an excellent hotel, and presently Treadway found himself installed in a comfortable room. Once settled he sallied forth to find Marion.

She was not at home, they told him at the house, but Mrs. Hitesman added minute directions by which he found the patch of woods where Marion had gone in search of nuts.

Evidently her nutting was but an excuse for a walk in the woods, for he came upon her day dreaming at the foot of a huge chestnut. As he approached the looked up wonderingly; then, after a moment's pause, she sprang to her feet with outstretched hands.

"For a moment I thought you must be a vision," she cried as he hurried toward her. "Mr. Perkins told me just before he left that you had gone abroad for the winter."

"I did go across," he confirmed, "but I couldn't stay. I wanted to come back and ask you if your decision was final."

"My decision?" she echoed.

"Yes," he explained. "I know you told me that you would not marry me, but I could not be content until I asked again. I went to London and Paris to try to forget you, but the farther from home I got the more I seemed to want you, and so here I am."

"But the hundred or more who were ready to accept you and your millions?" she reminded.

"There might be a million or more who would be ready to accept my hundreds," he replied impatiently, "but the whole million in one big seraglio would not be you, dear. It was a silly, braggart speech that I am heartily ashamed of now. It was that which brought me back. I wanted to tell you how well I realized what a fool I had been. I love you too much to give up without another appeal. I've a whole lot to learn, Marion, but will you be the teacher, dear, and show me that the cursed money is not everything?"

"I think I should like to try," she whispered as he caught her hand.

"And I came over here prepared for the argument of my life," he said wonderingly.

"You said this time what you should have said before," she replied. "The last time you offered me wealth and position. This time you have offered me your love. It is love that a girl wants, Tom. It's not always the money she seeks. I liked you before, but I could not be bought."

"But I loved you then," he cried.

"Not in the same way," she explained, "or you would have told me so. You wanted me to teach you. That was the first lesson."

"Then here endeth the first lesson," cried Treadway, with a laugh, as he bent to touch the soft brown hair with his lips. "Let's hope the others will not be so drastic. You've been pretty hard on your pupil, sweetheart."

Tricking a Jeweler.

A fashionably dressed woman once alighted from a brougham in west London and stepped into a hairdresser's shop. She informed the barber that she had a son who was of unsound mind and that the doctor had ordered his head to be shaved.

Her son, she said, was violent, and she instructed the barber to get a couple of assistants and seize him when he was brought round, to tie him in a chair and shave his head in spite of anything he might say. The barber did not relish the job, but an advance fee of a guinea tempted him, and he fell.

Then the lady drove to the jeweler's, bought some expensive rings and jewelry and expressed surprise at having left her purse at home. She offered to drive the jeweler home with her, together with the jewels, and pay him at her residence.

On arriving once more at the barber's the two alighted, and the unfortunate jeweler at a sign from the lady was seized and bound to a chair, and in spite of his angry yells and expostulations his head was shaved. Meanwhile the lady drove off with £300 worth of gems and was never heard of again.—London Mail.

Not Necessary.

He laughed loud and long as he put aside the paper.

"What's the matter?" asked the man who was sitting at the next window of the club.

"Here's an article about training a dog," replied the man who had been reading the paper. "It says the first thing to do is to attach the dog to you."

Thereupon the man laughed some more.

"Well, what of it?" persisted the man at the next window.

"Why, hang it all," exclaimed the man who was so amused, "it seems so absurd, you know. My experience is that a dog will attach himself to you if you give him any provocation."—Exchange.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department
Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85.000.000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

A Statement.

In justice to myself I wish to make the following statement:

The statement that is being circulated about Oakland that I refused to visit the late John Collins during his last illness, while confined in the Garrett county Jail, is absolutely false and wholly without foundation. I visited him daily until he asked for the Roman Catholic priest and received the rites of that church, then my sense of ministerial etiquette forbade me making further visits as I never make pastoral visits to members of other churches when their own pastors are at hand, unless by special request.

J. B. WORKMAN,
Pastor St. Paul's M. E. Church.

Lecture on India.

Rev. Victor McCauley, a returned missionery from Southern India, in which field he has been laboring since the year 1898, lectured in the auditorium of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church last night to a fairly large audience on India, its people, their beliefs and the work being accomplished by the Lutheran missionaries in that country. In the immediate section of India in which Rev. McCauley has been laboring a mission has been in existence for more than 65 years and at this time there are more than 36,000 members of the church, the number having doubled in the past eight years. Rev. McCauley's address was interesting, instructive and the earnestness shown by the speaker evidenced deep concern in the work in which he is engaged. He returned to his native country several months ago on a vacation. Rev. McCauley will be remembered by many in Oakland as an instructor in the public school here about twelve years ago. After the close of the services in the church last night he met quite a number of his former pupils, who were in the congregation.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. ARTHUR I. KELSO.

Died, on Tuesday of this week, at her home in Las Crucas, New Mexico, of grip and complications, Mrs. Arthur I. Kelso. The news of this lady's death was contained in a telegram received here yesterday by relatives and conveyed no information as to the place or time of the funeral.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

Located four miles south of Swanton, 2½ miles east of North Glade, known as the Edward R. Lee farm, containing 93 acres. 25 acres cleared; 40 acres under good fence; 7 acres in young orchard; house; small barn and other outbuildings; one-half mile to public road; land is smooth and well adapted to farming; easy terms; apply to Joseph H. Lee, Deer Park, Md., care James L. Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1.

OWN A HOME.

No Matter where you live, we will build or buy you a home. You can pay for it in monthly payments, which will average less than rent. A positive gusrantee, secured by first-class real estate, is given every subscriber. Every rent payer should send for our free booklet at once which fully explains the plan.

MUTUAL HOME UNION
33 Builder's Exchange Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
W. R. McCLANAHAN,
Piedmont, W. Va.
Agent for Western Md.

BITTINGER.

Smile when the bright sun is shining,
Smile when some cloud hides the sky—
For you can't change Fate by repining,
Nor win modest Fame with a sigh.

Jacob Sechler and wife, of Kime, Pa., were visiting Chas. Sechler, of this place, this week.

Gil. Broadwater and Baker Johnson, of Grantsville, were in this village on business last Saturday.

Chas. J. Sechler, of this place, has contracted to run David Bittinger's farm near Accident, and expects to move his family to that place this week. We shall miss Mr. Sechler from our midst, but we earnestly wish him success in his new home.

W. L. Thomas, principal of the public school at this place, was forced to resign his position on account of sickness and at present the school is closed.

Miss Effie Bittinger, who has been spending some time with her sister in Grantsville, returned to her home in this village last Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brenneman were visiting relatives near Meyersdale, Pa., last Sunday.

Mrs. F. M. Bittinger returned to this village last Monday, after spending a month with her parents at Kime, Pa.

E. S. Brenneman made his regular weekly inspection of the telephone central office at this place last Saturday evening, to the entire satisfaction of the hello girl.

STOYER.

Fine winter weather, with plenty of snow, sunshine and sleighing which, of course, we all enjoy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shockey, of Ryan's Glade, are visiting Mrs. Shockey's parents Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stoyer, of this place.

Mr. Alderton spent Sunday with friends in Gormania.

Mr. Elwood Sollars, who has been visiting relatives in Wallman for a few days, was here Monday.

Mrs. J. J. Lantz has been on the sick list for a few days.

Mr. Tom Melvin went to Cumberland Saturday on business.

A crowd of young folks went out sleighing Saturday night, the parties being Messrs. Charles Kidd, Willie Stoyer, Virgil Stoyer and Victor Foley, Misses Bessie Stoyer, Lizzie Melvin and Ida Harvey. They report having had a fine time.

Mr. W. G. Riley was seen in our town Monday. He seems to be very much interested in raising chickens, having a fine lot of the best there is.

Mr. Foley is in this town quite frequently, we cannot help but think there is some great attraction here for him.

"No work," is the cry of many in this town.

Mr. Willie Stoyer spent Sunday with Mr. Chas. Kill.

Mr. Gilbert Friend, of Maybell, W. Va., was in town Saturday.

PANSY.

SWANTON.

We certainly are enjoying the fine winter weather in this section.

Mrs. C. M. Miller returned home Saturday evening from Oakland where she has been attending her daughter who has been very ill.

Rev. Engle opened the revival meeting in the M. E. church here last Wednesday, and stayed with us until Friday when he went to his home, and from there he will be accompanied by his wife to Minnesota. The meeting in his absence has been conducted by Messrs. George, Sweet, and others, and as a result may souls have been saved. Let all the christians here join this movement and work together in unity and a great and good work will be accomplished.

By invitation the school here led by the teacher, Miss Margaret Keirns, attended the Washington birthday exercises which were given at the Painter chool, on Friday afternoon by the teacher Geo. H. Rodeheaver and the pupils. All report a nice time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Barker, of Meyser, were visiting this place this week.

McComas George and Walter Tasker, two employes of the B. & O. R. R. at Cumberland, were visiting their parents over Sunday.

Miss Percie George, organist in the M. E. church, entertained us with some excellent music at Mrs. Barker's last Sunday.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

TRUSTEES' SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
Situate in Garrett County.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county wherein James E. Lish, et al., are plaintiffs, and Thompson Lish, et al., are defendants, the same being No. 1496 Equity of said Court, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, on

MONDAY,
The 9th Day of March, 1908,

at two o'clock p. m., all that piece or parcel of land situated, lying and being in District No. 8 in Garrett county, Maryland, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a stake standing at the bars or entrance through a line fence South 50½ degrees West, 28 perches from a large White Oak tree standing at the end of said fence and running thence with the old rail fence North 64 degrees and 30 minutes West, 36 rods and 22 links to corner of said fence, then with old fence South 76 degrees 15 minutes West, 15 rods and 12 links to corner of said fence, then leaving the fence to the left North 23 degrees 30 minutes West, 10 rods to a large rock marked "A," then South 80 degrees 15 min. West 14 rods to a stake standing beside a rail fence then South 19 degrees 40 minutes West, 13 rods 6 links to a stake and stone pile beside an old fence, then with said fence South 88 degrees 30 minutes East, 18 rods 23 links to corner of said fence, then crossing old fence leaving it to the right South 8 degrees 10 minutes West, 45 rods and 22 links to a stake standing on the South side of an old rail fence, then with said fence North 84 degrees 25 minutes East, 36 reds to corner of rail fence, then with said fence North 52 degrees 45 minutes East, 63 rods and 14 links to the beginning, containing 25 1-10 acres, more or less.

The property is improved by a small house and outbuildings and good orchard.

TERMS OF SALE—¼ cash, ¼ in 6 months and ½ in 12 months, or all cash at option of the purchaser. The credit portions to bear interest from day of sale, and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett County, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,
the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY-NINE, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES, MORE OR LESS, excepting therefrom the quantity of two acres, which was conveyed by John E. Winebrenner to Floyd Winebrenner by deed dated the 15th day of November, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 557, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and described as follows: Beginning at the North corner of the stable on said Military Lot No. 599 and running thence South 12 rods to a stake, thence West 26 rods to a stake, thence North 22 rods, thence by a straight line to the beginning, containing two acres. Said portion of said lot hereby intended to be sold contains forty-eight acres and is fully described (as a whole) in a deed for the same from Isaac Winebrenner to John E. Winebrenner dated the 15th day of November, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 555, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in name of the said John E. Winebrenner.

No. 2. ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SUGAR TREE FLAT," located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county, and standing on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of Henry Wolf. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Henry Wolf.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annun and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE.
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,
the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, and being the same land which was conveyed to Jeremiah J. McKenzie by Samuel Johnson and others by deed bearing date the 11th day of October, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 16, folio 311, etc. one of the Land Records of said Garrett county saving and excepting therefrom 10 acres and 80 perches conveyed by said McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated September 30th, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, said residue containing the quantity of THIRTY-NINE AND ONE-HALF ACRES. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books in the name of the said Jeremiah J. McKenzie.

No. 4. ALL THAT PORTION OF MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, CONTAINING TEN AND ONE-HALF ACRES, it being the same land which was conveyed by Jeremiah J. McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated the 30th day of September, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and more particularly described therein as follows: Beginning for the same at the southeast corner of said lot and running thence North 4½ degrees East, 62 perches to a stake, thence North 85½ degrees West, 5 perches to a stake, thence South 37 degrees West, 74 perches to a pine stump, thence South 85½ degrees East, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land (minerals excepted) will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Ella C. McKenzie. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county.

No. 5. TWENTY-FIVE ACRES OF MILITARY LOT FIVE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-NINE, known as the nothern half of said lot, which was conveyed to John Fadley by deed from Charles H. Johnson and others dated the 10th day of September, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 380, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John Fadley.

No. 6. LOTS NUMBERS THREE, TWO, TWENTY AND NINETEEN as shown on the plat of Sarah Wright's land as recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland and being the same lots which were conveyed to Horace R. Hamilton by John B. Wright and others by deed dated the 14th day of February, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 181, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Horace R. Hamilton.

No. 7. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND ONE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWO, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES EACH, being located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county and described in a deed for the same to Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham, duly of record in the Land Records of Allegany county, Maryland. The said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the heirs of said Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham.

No. 9. PARTS OF MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE, CONTAINING FORTY-TWO AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Mary Willison to Jacob P. McKenzie by deed dated the 11th day of September, 1902, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 42, folio 307, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 and the whole of the taxes for the year 1905 due and in arrear thereon as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jacob P. McKenzie.

No. 10. LOT NUMBER ELEVEN OF THE SUB-DIVISION OF THE TRACT OF LAND KNOWN AS "LOCHIEL," CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF TWO HUNDRED AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES, and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green, dated the 17th day of August, 1893, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folio 247, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jefferson S. Green.

No. 11. ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING TWO AND ONE-TENTH ACRES and more particularly described in a deed for the same from Belle Klipstein Field and others to John E. Klipstein and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 49, folio 171, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, by the following metes and bounds: Beginning for the same at a ten-inch beech tree standing near the new county drive road, and marked with three hacks on two sides, and running North 38 degrees 10 minutes East, 248 feet to a maple standing on the South bank of Mill Run, thence North 50 degrees 15 minutes West, 54 feet along and near the South bank of Mill Run, thence South 48 degrees 3 minutes West, 84 feet to a maple, thence South 33 degrees 50 minutes East, 583 feet to the beginning. Said land is located in Election District No. 4 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John E. Klipstein.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JOHN KITZMILLER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 13th day of February 1908.

WILLIAM CALLIS,
W. J. KITZMILLER,
Executors.
Hoyes, Md.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., December, 26, 1907.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Tuesday, March 3th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business. Road supervisors who have not filed their bonds, are requested to do so at once.

By order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANDREW J. TEATS,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of August, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of February, 1908.

ANASTASIA TEATS,
Administratrix.
Oakland, Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

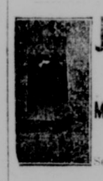
Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix.
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.
We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1908. NUMBER

LuCAL OPTIONISTS WERE BEATEN AGAIN

Order Fixing Day For Vote Defeated In Honse.

LABOR UNIONS AGAINST MEASURE

While Vote Does Not Indicate Real Attitude Of Members Toward Bill, it Seems to Show Anti-Liquor Sentiment Weakening.

State House, Annapolis, March 3.—When a vote was taken today on an order fixing March 11 as the day upon which the Temperance Committee was to report the local-option bill in the House, the members lined up strongly in opposition to it, the vote having been 63 to 32.

Two city members—Messrs. Godwin and Parks—indicated a kindly sentiment to the local-option cause, but the remainder of the city delegation voted solidly against the order, and they were reinforced by six men from Baltimore county and such strength as the foes of the order could muster on the plea that its adoption would be a reflection on the members of the House Committee.

While the vote on the order does not indicate the attitude of the members toward the bill, as some who voted against the measure, still it is accepted as a straw, and its seems to indicate that the local-option sentiment is not as strong as it was supposed to be.

Cecil is a local option county, and when the bill finally appears Mr. Squires will, it is said, ask that Cecil be exempted from its provisions on the ground that his county now has a law that works satisfactorily. As Mr. Squires comes from the Governor's county, the and he is expected to take is thought ome to indicate on the part of the rnor the belief that the local-option n is something every county to be allowed to settle for itself.

As the order was brought up Mr. Jones of Wicomico offered his amendment and Mr. Dawkins opposed it. Mr. Dawkins read letters from Mr. Edward Hirsch, president of the Baltimore Federarion of Labor, representing, he said, 109 unions and 40,000 men in Baltimore city, and another from the Baltimore Property-Owners' Protective Association, in which it was stated that while the high-license sentiment was overwhelming in Baltimore city, there was, it was understood, considerable local-option sentiment in Annapolis. It asked for a hearing during the latter part of next week.

It is practically certain that Senator Biddison and Delegate Benson, both of Baltimore county, will get together on a good roads bill, and that the result will be a measure creating a paid commission entirely independent of the present body known as the Geological Survey Commission. Governor Crothers today declared himself in favor of a paid commissisn. He said:

"The administration is pledged to build a system of good roads, and the people are deeply interested in the plan. The work will be a great one, and it will be too much to require of an unpaid commission. We do not want a board that will simply hold meetings, but we want a body that will see that the work is done. We want the members of this commission to keep right on the coattails of the men who are building the roads.

"The people want to have a say in the building of these roads, but the plan should not be made political. I am as much opposed to that as any one. But it is necessary to have a board representing the various sections of the State.

"The new commission will have plenty to do without interfering with the work of the present Geological Survey Commission. The new commission will build the main highways, while the Geological Survey Board will have $20,000 a year to spend in building roads under the Shoemaker act in conjunction with the counties. The State highways will serve to educate the people, and they will show more interest in taking advantage of the Shoemaker act and will build roads in connection with the main thoroughfares to be built under the new law.

"The men to be put on the new commission must be able to devote their time to the work. The president of the Agricultural College has work enough on his hands without taking up the road question, and it is so with anyone else who has other important administration work on hand. I have no time for the work, and neither has the Comptroller. We must have men who do have the necessary time. This is a vast work, and we must find the best way of doing it."

It is reported that considerable criticism of the work of the present Commission has reached the Governor, but there is no disposition to legislate the present Board out of office.

FIKE.

The snow is very deep and we surely are having enough winter.

A. M. Chisholm kills from one to two foxes per day.

F. T. Fike has been on the sick list for some time.

John H. Thomas, of Markleysburg, Pa., will start for Oklahoma on March 3rd.

Dr. H. P. Meyers has returned from Pittsburg, Pa., where he took Wm. L. Thomas to have an operation for appendicitis. He reported on his return it was one of the most critical cases known to the medical profession.

LOCAL OPTION BILL FOR GORRETT COUNTY.

Local Measure Introduced in The Legislature Yesterday by Delegate Green.

Yesterday during the session of the House of Delegates Assemblyman Lawrence F. Green, of Garrett county, introduced a measure giving to the qualified voters of Garrett county the right to vote upon the local option question at any general election hereafter to be held.

The bill provides that the Supervisors of Elections, upon petition of twenty-five per cent. of the qualified voters of any municipality, district or the county at large, shall cause to be placed upon the official ballots to be used at that election the question whether or not the territory covered in the petition shall become anti-saloon territory.

THE DEATH RECORD.

KAMP—Died, on Saturday, February, 26th, 1908, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Andrew Shartzer, near Oakland, after an illness of six weeks of diseases incident of advanced years, Mrs. Henrietta Kamp, widow of the late Judge Henry Kamp, who died fifteen years ago. Mrs. Kamp was a native of Germany, where she was born more than eighty years ago, emigrating to this country while yet a young woman. She was the mother of a number of children, those surviving her being Mr. Henry Kamp, Jr., of Accident; Frederick, of Friendsville, and Lewis, of the Cove. She was also the mother of the late Mrs. Andrew Shartzer, who died several years ago. Mrs. Kamp's funeral took place on Monday, the interment being made in the German Lutheran cemetery at Accident, where the remains were deposited by the side of those of her deceased husband.

DESSIE D. BOYER.

Died, on Saturday, February 29th, of tuberculosis, in Aricona, where he had gone in search of health, Dessie D. Boyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Boyer, of Accident, this county. The announcement of the death of this highly esteemed young man comes as a decided shock to his many friends in Oakland where he was well known a few years ago.

EDNA LORETTA WILT.

Edna Loretta, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilt, of Mountain Lake Park, died Feb. 21, 1908, aged one year, eleven months and six days. She had suffered from an attack of measles which was followed by an abscess on the brain. All was done for her that could be done, but it was God's will to take her. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved father and mother from out of whose lives this ray of sunshine has gone. May they not grieve as those who have no hope. God has but transplanted this flower from His earthly garden to that fairer garden on high. She cannot return to them, but they can go to her. May they trust in the Lord who chasties those whom he loves and scourges those whom he receives.

C. W. HUDSON.

MRS. LYDIA MATTHEWS.

At the home of her daughter near Selbysport, on Saturday, February 22nd, as a result of an attack of the gript and infirmities incident to extreme age, Mrs. Lydia Matthews, aged 93 years. The deceased lady was the mother of Mrs. U. S. Frazee of Selbysport district, at whose home she died, and was the grandmother of Mr. A. Totten Matthews, of Oakland. Of Mrs. Matthews last week's Meyersdale Republican says:

"Mrs. Lydia Matthews, of Selbysport, Md., is confined to her home by illness, and on account of her advanced age the members of her family fear that she cannot recover. Mrs. Matthews, who is the mother of W. S. Matthews, of Somerset, is a very remarkable woman. She is a native of Berlin, and although in the 93rd year of her life, last week was the first time a physician was called to her aid in sixty years. The aged woman was a playmate of John O. Kimmell, of Somerset, and Levi Shoemaker, of Berlin, two nonagenarians, who lived at Berlin when Mrs. Matthews was a school girl.

If you have Catarrh, rid yourself of this repulsive disease. Ask Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., to mail you free, a trial box of his Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. A simple, single test, will surely tell you a Catarrh truth well worth your knowing. Write to-day. Don't suffer longer. All dealers.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BANQUET.

Annual Gathering of Brave Knights and Fair Ladies Tuesday Evening.

The annual banquet, which has been a feature of Garrett Lodge, Knights of Pythias, for a few years past, was given on Tuesday night in the lodge room when nearly one hundred and fifty Knights and their ladies occupied seats at the festive board.

The lodge room was handsomely decorated with emblems of the order, the National colors and here and there a palm.

Dr. Henry W. McComas was toastmaster. Those who responded to toasts were Messrs. G. Semmes Hamill, A. T. Matthews, S. F. Hamill and J. M. Jarboe.

The banquet was served by Mr. W. G. Hinebaugh and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I would like to give a few thoughts in answer to the liquor men's argument at Annapolis last Tuesday. In the first place the people showed their sentiments by the fact that they had only one half as many friends at their meeting as the Anti-Saloon League. The attitude of Rev. Hurtz surprise me more than anything else. He said: "If you let local option go thru you will have hell in Baltimore." Friends wouldn't it be better to "have hell in Baltimore" than several hundred hells in Baltimore as they now have.

Any minister who is in favor of the saloon ought to retire from the high office or be kicked out.

Mr. Strasser said, "If the saloon is wrong or unjust and if it unlawful or degrading, why not close up every saloon in the state?" Isn't that true?

We know and Mr. Strasser knows in his heart that it is wrong, so a saloonkeeper is literally asking us to close the saloons.

Mr. Monroe said the Anti-Saloon League's advertisements in the Baltimore papers were "a very weak squeal."

The squeal is so loud and long that it is still echoing from all parts of the United States and from the lips of Mr. Monroe. If it is weak why does he bother about it?

He also read an extract from the Constitution of the Liquor Dealer's Association to the effect that "intemperance is degrading and injurious."

That is all very well, but why do they furnish the material for intemperance. Do they they expect to put out the fire by putting on fuel?.

He also said we should not neglect our homes to agitate the temperance cause but teach our sons sobriety at home.

And yet not long ago a large firm devoted an entire column to scoffing at the "twaddle" of the school teacher.

Fellow-teachers it is time for us to be up and doing. Let up instill the value of temperance into their young minds so forcibly that it will never be forgotten.

Yours in the work,
A SCHOOL TEACHER.

GORTNER.

Jacob Shettler is visiting relatives at Johnstown, Pa., this week.

Guy Sanders and Miss Bertha Schlosnagle spent several days of last week at Brookside, W. Va.

S. J. Lichty was badly injured by being kicked by a horse last Thursday evening.

Noah Lichty made a business trip to Piedmont Monday.

L. J. Swartzentruber is preparing to open his sugar camp soon.

Quite a number of people from here attended the Literary at Sunnyside last Wednesday night, and all report a good time.

Lee Gortner is visiting his brother J. C. Gortner, at Albrightsville, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Nicholson, of near Underwood, were calling on Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dodge Sunday.

Services Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. by the Mennonite Brethern.

WILLIE.

Trade Exhibition.

J. M. Davis & Sons have arranged for a big display of their leading specialties during the month of March commencing on the 9th and lasting until the 21st. Their plan is to show the various lines they are handling in actual operation. Their display promises to be very interesting to the public. There you will find many things worthy of your attention. The demonstrations will take place from ten to twelve in the morning and from two to four in the afternoon and from six to eight in the evening, each day. Remember the date, March 9th to March the 21st.

TAFT WAS NOT INDORSED BY COMMITTEE.

But The Administration of President Roosevelt Was Strongly Upheld.

COMMITTEE MET AT THE RENNERT.

The Republican State Central Committee Held a Meeting in Baltimore Wednesday District Congressional Convention Date Fixed.

The Republican State Central Committee held a meeting at the Rennert Hotel last Friday.

The business of the meeting was the selection of a date for the State Convention, which will elect delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, and April 30 was set, with Baltimore city as the meeting place, but the chief interest lay in the committee's action on the Taft matter. The resolution finally passed was a compromise one, which let everyone down easily, but it did not indorse the bulky Secretary of War. Moreover, after the meeting it was said, even by Taft men, that the delegation to Chicago would go there unpledged.

This is the wording of the resolution, which was passed unanimously:

"The Republican State Central Committee declares its belief that the Republicans of Maryland now, as at the time of the last State Convention, indorsed the statemanlike policies of our esteemed President and demand as his successor one who can be trusted without misgivings to persevere in those policies and harvest their fruits in the nation's welfare.

"Recognizing that the recent tribute of certain members of the General Assembly to the eminent merits and public services of Hon. William H. Taft was fully within the scope of their rights as individual Republicans, the Committee feels that for it to make as such any declaration for a Presidential candidate would transcend its powers and be liable to misconstruction as seeking to forestall the decision of questions committed for determination to State and district conventions of the party and their duly elected delegates.

"For this reason the Committee refrains from any further expression on this subject, confident that the Republicans of Maryland will at the proper time support such a candidate as they demand in the party's last State Convention."

The committee was in session hardly more than five minutes. All the details had been settled beforehand by a conference in which Mr. Mudd, Collector Stone, Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough and Chairman Thomas Parran. Congressman Pearre was at the Hotel but was not closeted with the elect. Congressman Jackson did not appear and former Congressman Wachter seemed as far from the thoughts of every one present as if he had never been a thorn in the flesh on the organization.

Chairman Parran called the meeting to order and announced the absence of Secretary Dickey, whereupon Mr. Mudd's confidential secretary, Mr. William Gilchrist, was elected secretary pro tem. He called the roll and it was found that representatives were present from every county and city ward except the Fifth ward of Baltimore and Caroline county. Then Mr. Mudd offered this resolution:

Resolved, That the Republican Convention for the selection of four Delegates and four Alternates at large to the National Republican Convention to meet at Chicago on June 16, 1908, and for the nomination of eight candidates for electors for President and Vice President, shall be held in Baltimore city on April 30, at a place to be named by the Chairman, and that the regulations for primaries and conventions for the election of delegate shall be left to the respective local committees in the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city; provided, however that it is the sense of this committee that in the event of any bona-fide delegation in either county or city desiring to run a ticket at any such primaries, it shall be the duty of the proper committee to appoint for such delegation a judge and clerk and permit them to name a challenger and watcher for such primaries.

Then the committee adjourned.

The Sixth district delegates got together after the meeting and selected April 16 as the date of their district convention, which will meet at Hagerstown. April 4 was set as the date for the primaries in the five counties for the district.

Dr. McComas In Grafton.

Dr. Henry W. McComas, mayor of Oakland, Md., was in the city today on professional business having come to assist at the operation for the removal of the limb of Robert Browning at the Grafton sanitarium. Dr. McComas is one of the most eminent physicians in the state of Maryland and has a great practice, his patients being among some of the leading families of Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia, who spend their sumers at Oakland and whom Dr. McComas also attends during the winter when they are at home in the East. With all of his extensive practice Dr. McComas still finds time to devote to the welfare of his native city and he has served as Mayor of Oakland for many terms, his party, the Republican, renominating him for the office year after year and he is always elected. He has made as good an officer as he has made a famous physician.—Grafton Sentinel.

Surscribe for The Republican.

DIXON & KELSO

PRICE CURRENT FOR GROCERIES

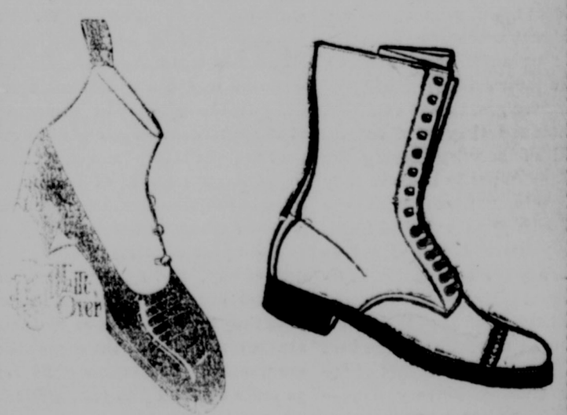
2 bars Laundry Soap,	05
2 cakes Toilet Soap,	05
Good roasted Coffee,	12½
California Hams,	10
Best Side Meat,	10
Small Hams,	12½
Large Hams,	12
Fancy large Florida Oranges,	25
Fancy large Lemons,	25
Fancy large Apples per bu,	1 00
Tomatoes per can,	08
Corn per can,	08
Granulated Sugar,	05½
Brown Sugar,	05
Leggetts 2 lb. Premier Oats,	10
Fish,	05
Best Winter Flour, Bag,	65
Best Spring Flour, Bag,	75
Navy Beans,	05
Lima Beans,	08
Hominy,	03

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST
It Costs No More.



WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price, bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

... SHORE.

... of Maryland And
... ess a New York
... armer.

... k finds me in a region ...story and romance—rich its soil and products, as ... the abounding sea food in ...bays and rivers. The oyster ...dustry alone, with its fleet of ...oats in every cove, is yielding wealth equal to that of many of the mines of the Klondike. This was the home of the diamond-back terrapin. So plenty were they that there is still a law on the statute books prohibiting a man feeding terrapin to a slave whom he had hired more than twice a week. Alas! there is little danger of this now, for they are rare indeed. Too often what is served in the popular restaurants as such is muskrat, dignified here by the name of "marsh rabbit," and quite a popular dish. On one of my former visits one whole-souled boniface used to have some of the genuine "stall fed" ready for the farmers' institute.

There are nine counties on the shore, with Cecil on the north, along the Susquehanna, and Worcester on the south, along the bay, in Maryland, with two Virginia counties further south. These two counties, while as low as those just north of them in Maryland, are of a light soil. The abundant water makes this land exceedingly productive. The population is twice as dense and the people are very prosperous. I was told that their annual crop of potatoes, including both sweet and white, was about five million bushels. Delaware, with its three counties near by, is a part of this shore, and formerly belong to Maryland.

The Pennsylvania Railroad system runs a direct line through the central part of Delaware to Cape Charles, with various branches running to the bay shore or to the flourishing towns on the rivers run in from the bay. There a number of such towns of from ...000 to 4,000 inhabitants. These towns are distributing centres for the outlying country. Snow Hill, from which I am writing, has three banks, the stock of the best one of which sells for $275 a share of $100 per value. There are lines of steamboats running between Baltimore and these river towns. My own experience in one of these boats was not pleasant. Starting from Baltimore for Crisfield at 5 p. m., we were overtaken at midnight, when about forty miles down the bay, by a gale which broke up the lower deck and caused several passengers to part with their supper. Fortunately we were near the mouth of the Pawtuxent River, "where we put out an anchor and longed for day." This boat had an immense load of fertilizer and "the odor of the ointment filled all the house." I was told by an officer on the boat that the bulk of the freight until the middle or last of March would be fertilizer, and not half the manure made from the domestic animals on the farms ever does their soil any good.

These were great slave counties. Partly because they were beyond the field of activity during the Civil War and partly because they were in closer touch with the North, with good railroad facilities, they have not suffered as much as have those on the Western Shore. Many of the old families have gone from the farms, and a large proportion of the best farmers are the descendants of the overseer class of slavery days—men who knew how to make a crop and to work, and were not ashamed to do so. They rented at first and afterward bought many of the old farms. The whole family worked. They made money, educated their children, and to-day they are the most prosperous farmers.

I was surprised to find that of those nine Eastern Shore counties all but one have local option; and ...e prophecy is that the nine will vote that way next spring. How is this, among a people who have been accustomed to using liquor freely, and with a large negro population and vote, which of course is opposed to restricting liquor? The negro is the real cause of this. Even the unscrupulous politician finds it safer to put liquor out of the negro's way, even if he has to put himself to some inconvenience. In consequence party politics is largely laid aside at an election on local option. Is liquor wholly prohibited? Probably those who are addicted to the habit find a way to get it. I have not seen a drunken man since I have been here, and the barroom in the country hotel—that sink of iniquity and school for loafers—does not force its offensive head in the face of the wayfarer like myself. I am told by drummers that in the towns where local option has been longest in force their trade has materially increased and their collections are much better. Further inquiry shows that there has been a large increase in bank deposits—both national and savings banks. The arrests for various crimes have materially decreased.

The whole of these counties are very flat, the lower counties from four to eight feet above sea level, the upper ones about seventy-five, and the rise is very gradual. These lower ones thus have an excessive amount of water, and their corn, potatoes and strawberries have to be ridged up. They grow many strawberries. Seaford, in Delaware, last summer shipped fourteen cars of them daily, with other places not far behind. Sweet potatoes are largely grown, with a good many white ones, both first and second crop. Tomatoes are coming to be more and more a leading crop. Doubtless Delaware, Maryland and Virginia will be the places where tomatoes for canning will be most largely grown. Their long season enables them to grow a large tonnage, and they are not restricted to early varieties, which are small yielders. As we reach the highest levels we find many growing melons, both musk and water. Corn and wheat are staple crops from one end of this territory to the other.

At Berlin, in Worcester county, is the large nursery of J. G. Harrison & Sons. They began less than twenty years ago with a few acres. By economy, industry and fair business dealings they have built up one of the largest nurseries in the country, consisting of over one thousand acres. They are the introducers of the "rosy" peach, which bids fair to rival the Elberta in popularity. North from here we begin to find orchards of peaches, pears and apples. The Delaware peninsula was formerly the great peach section. While many are still grown and there are some fine orchards, the most profitable orchards in the state are on the mountain slopes in Western Maryland. The San Jose scale is abundant and has destroyed many trees. The thorough work done by the experiment station inaugurated by Professor W. P. Johnson—now assistant editor of "The American Agriculturist"—when he was State Entomologist has put the growers in command of the situation. I am glad to report that predatory insects, including a large number of ladybugs, have been quite abundant the last season feeding on the scale.

The upper counties raise a good deal of hay, and a goodly number of cows are kept. In the lower ones they are conspicuous by their absence, and most of the cornstalks are wasted. Yet butter sells for 30 cents a pound the year around. There is a strip of country north of Doyer, Del., from the Chespapeake to Delaware Bay, about sixty miles across and some twenty miles north and south, which I believe is as fine farm land as any in the United States. This may seem a strong statement, but I make it understandingly. A growing season extending from March to well through October, with mild winters; a rainfall seven inches above the average of New York State, yet with abundant sunshine; level land, sandy loam, easily worked and adapted to all crops grown in this latitude; within easy reach of the best markets in the world—where will we find its counterpart? Not in the much vaunted prairies of the Middle West, nor in California, far distant from our Eastern markets; nor in our much loved and justly prized Empire State, with its short seasons and cold winters.

What is land worth? In the lower counties, where the land is low and restricted to a few crops, and some of it further north which is light sand and unimproved, from $10 and $30. In the section just described, with not very good buildings other than the houses, about $60. All this land is rising in value and will continue to rise as better methods and men are coming to the fore. One reason why this favored region has not come into greater prominence, aside from the economic conditions growing out of the manumission of the slaves and the adjustment of conditions referred to in a previous article, is the effect on the people of the mild climate and naturally favorable surroundings. Such never stimulate effort. "Smooth seas never made good sailors." A gentleman remarked to me last night, "If laziness was a crime our penitentiaries would be full. Any man who will hustle can get rich here." This is exemplified by the Messrs. Harrison, above referred to, and by W. F. Allen, of Salisburg, who started fifteen years ago with $30 and today has hundreds of acres under cultivation in melons, tomatoes, strawberries, as well as peaches, and is one of the strong, prominent men in his county today; not to speak of scores of others less prominent.

It would have required little stretch of the imagination (except the temperature was too low) to have made one think he was in Florida this morning as we sailed up the Pocomoke River to Snow Hill, the county seat of Worcester county. The river extends from Pocomoke Sound, off the bay, some sixty or more miles inland. While not more than two hundred feet wide at any point, the channel is from twenty to thirty feet deep. The thickly wooded shores come down flat to the river bank. There is very little current, and except at an unusually high tide the water is fresh. A line of steamers runs up to Snow Hill. The upper part of the river for twenty miles or more is not navigable for large craft because of obstructions, but a good deal of lumber is floated down, mostly shook timber. In summer it must appear like the tropics.—Edward Van Alstyne in N. Y. Tribune.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

AND THIS IS IN MARYLAND.

Insane Wretchedly Cared for In Many Places.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 28—Physicians and laymen alike who are interested in the welfare of Maryland's insane look with high disfavor upon the bill which was recently introduced in the Legislature by Senator Gorman, the object of which is to repeal the law enacted in 1904, which provided that after January 1, 1909, the State should take care of the indigent insane. They argue that the passage of Senator Gorman's repealing bill will be a step backward, which the State cannot afford to take if it intends to make any attempt to keep pace with other States, and assert that the present method of caring for the insane in county almshouses is inhuman, if not disgraceful.

By those in a position to know it is said that the conditions which exist in some of the county almshouses are deplorable in the extreme. Many of the institutions are dilapidated and illkept, unsanitary and foul-smelling. In many of the houses the patients have been allowed to mingle indiscriminately together, without regard to sex or color.

In speaking of the conditions in some of the county almshouses, Mr. N. G. Grasty, secretary of the Supervisors of City Charities, who made an inspection of all the county almshouses about two and a half years ago, said:

"No one who has not visited these institutions can imagine what the conditions in them were when I saw them, more than two years ago. What changes have been made since then I do not know, but at the time-conditions were deplorable. In the insane department of the Somerset county almshouses, for instance, there were at that time about 15 female patients, some of them just reaching womanhood. Instead of being under the care of a competent matron, I found that they were being looked after by a man, who slept in the same building.

"The bathing facilities were very meagre. When I asked the man in charge how the patients managed to bathe he replied that every now and then he took them out and gave them a good washing. The negro patients were confined in a building set apart for them. This structure was dilapidated, and was really nothing more than a little shanty. It was poorly furnished and dirty, and in it men and women occupied adjoining rooms.

"The Worcester county almshouse impressed me as being the dirtiest place I ever saw. Some of the rooms were extremely foul-smelling, and the faces of the patients living in them were caked with soot and grime. Some of them told me that they had not washed their faces for a year. The inmates did their own cooking, notwithstanding the fact that they were mentally unbalanced. And such cooking as it was—dirty does not describe it. There was no supervision maintained over the inmates, and the sexes were allowed to mingle together indiscriminately.

"At another one of the almshouses I found that the party who was entrusted with locking up the patients at night was a negro man, who was himself an inmate of the institution. Upon inquiry I was told that three of the female patients in the almshouse, representing both colors, had given birth to children, of which he was the father."

Mr. Grasty's statements with reference to the county almshouses confirms the detailed report made several years ago by the secretary of the Lunacy Commission. It was Dr. Geo. J. Preston who made the report, and yesterday he stated that few improvements have been made at the county almshouses within recent years because of the expectation that the State would soon begin taking care of the indigent insane."

THE REAL AND FAKE DIAMOND.

Tests by Which the "Paste" Gem May Be Dectected—The Largest Found.

Now that there has been so much written recently about the manufacture of diamonds, it may be interesting to recall a few facts about this "prince among gems." The largest diamond ever discovered is the Cullinan, found on January 25, 1905, in the Premier Mine, about twenty miles from Pretoria, South Africa. It was the half of an enormous octahedron, which had probably split owing to internal strain. This gem was recently presented by the Transwaal Government to King Edward. It measured before cutting 4 inches by 2½ inches by 2 inches, and weighed nearly a pound and a-half (622 grams).

The diamond is the hardest material known, although carbide of silicon, commercially known as carborundum, approaches it very closely. Although exceedingly hard, the diamond is very brittle, that a sharp blow will often fracture it. Sir William Crookes who has made a study of diamonds for many years, showed that if a good one was placed between the steel jaws of an hydraulic press, and the pressure was applied gradually, the jaws might be made to meet without the slightest injury to the diamond, the hard steel closing around it and taking an impression of the much harder diamond just like so much wax.

The diamond possesses the greatest power for refracting light of all known colorless substances. One of the most interesting of all the wonderful properties of the diamond is its phosphorescence in the dark after exposure to the sun or friction. The phosphorescence is sometimes great enough to read by when the diamond is subjected to the high tension electric discharge in a vacuum tube.

Besides its phosphorescence the diamond is distinguished from "paste" imitatian by its perfect transparency to Rontgen or X-rays, highly refractive as well as ordinary glass being more or less opaque to them.

Sea Fight by Moonlight.

Near the end of December, 1814, the United States frigate Constitution, commanded by Capt. Charles Stewart, put to sea from Boston harbor. Crossing the Atlantic, she entered the Bay of Biscay and cruised off the harbor of Lisbon. Stewart next sailed southward toward Cape St. Vincent, and on February 20, 1815, discovered two strange sails, which toward evening, flung out the British flag.

Stewart at once displayed the American flag on the Constitution, which was equipped with 52 guns and had a complement of 470 men and boys. By skillful management Stewart soon gained an advantageous position and began an action with both of the British ships. The battle was fought by moonlight, and after it had continued about 10 minutes both vessels of the enemy became silent. As the smoke cleared away Stewart poured a broadside into the leading ship, which soon thereafter struck her flag. She proved to be the frigate Cyane, 36 guns, commanded by Capt. Falcoln and manned by a crew of 180.

Steward then sought the other vessel, whose commander was ignorant of the fate of the Cyane. About an hour after the latter had surrendered she met the Constitution searching for her. Each delivered a broadside and for a time there was a brisk running fight. The British vessel was soon forced to surrender, and proved to be the Levant, 18 guns, commanded by Capt. Douglas. The loss of the Constitution in the battle, which lasted but 45 minutes was three killed and 12 wounded; that of the two captured vessels was 77 in killed and wounded. The Constitution was so little damaged that three hours after the conflict she was again ready for action.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Subscribe for The Republican.

SAD STORY OF THE ORIENT

Told and Illustrated By a Turk Lecturing For The Christian Cause.

At St. John's Lutheran church at Cumberland last Thursday night the Rev. Mr. George Daniel, Ph. D., a minister of the Thomas Christian church of Turkey, told the story of the laborious effor... that are being made among the unhappy Turks and tribes of the Oriental countries, to establish a knowledge of Christ. His teachings and the eternal truths of the Christian religion Rev. Daniel has learned to master the English language quite well and his lecture is given in a pleasant, convincing speech. The illustrations aid in a description of the inhabitants of the Eastern country as well as in the portrayal of the massacres and other upheavels by the Mohammedans in the name of religion. Rev. Daniel has traveled extensively and will leave this country for his native land early in April. He is a regularly ordained minister of the Nestorian or St. Thomas Christian church which claims to trace its origin to apostolic times and its founding direct to St. Thomas. Rev. Daniel stated that the doctrine and teaching of the St. Thomas Christians were in harmony with the catechism of the Lutheran church. Of the Mohammedans he tells this interesting story in the course of his lecture:

The Mohammedan doctrine teaches that there is one God and Mohammed is his Prophet; it teaches a hell for the punishment of the wicked and an heaven for the reward of the righteous. But none will go to heaven but Mohammedans. They pray five times a day and often their prayer is as follows: "My God help me to steal and rob." They have Priests which are called Mullahs. In a village of fifty families there are at least fifteen Mullahs, many whom are making their living stealing and plundering, especia... in Kurdistan. There are bands of robbers and they are always about their business and they never forget a big share to the Mulleh and, when he gets it, he turns to the thief and says: "God bless you, my son, go and do it again."

The Mohammedans believe and teach that women have no soul. All men marry from one to many wives, there is no limit set. Some of them have 40 to 160, such as the Shah of Persia and the Sultan of Turkey.

All girls must marry from the age of 10 or 12 years. Girls over 13 years old and not married can hardly be seen.

A girl costs $25 and if a young man has $100 he can marry four wives with that money. No young man is allowed to see his sweetheart before marriage, or before the money is paid. Some of the men have four wives but no home to keep them in.

"Any man can send his wife away. They say, God has given one king to all people and one judge to a city, but for each woman there is a judge, which is her husband. He can kill her or do anything with her, just as he sees fit.

"It does not take long for a man to get a divorce, the only thing he does is to go into the street and pick up three small stones, put them in his wife's right hand and say, "go away, you are no more my wife"; and thereupon she is divorced and can not marry again because she is a divorced woman. The women are considered the lowest of human creatures in the world and widows especially. A widow has a hard time in the Mohammedan and heathen lands. In India there are 20,000,000 widows, and among these there are 100,000 under 12 years of age."

Rev. Daniels states there are ten million persons who know of Christ and at least five mil... Kurds are equally ignorant. The appeal to the foreign mission societies of this country, England and Germany to continue the work of carrying the gospel to these unhappy people.

John Smith, Clerk.

By Frank H. Sweet.

Copyright, 1905, by Frank H. Sweet.

ONCE there was a man. He was a clerk in a bank at $45 a month. His name was John Smith. At a directors' meeting one day after the discounts had been passed upon and the portly directors were laboriously getting up to go the president, who had the oldest and most expansive vest of any of them, stopped them. "By the way," he remarked, "I have a note from John Smith—one of our young men, you know; some of you know him—but I guess I have lost it. Anyhow, he wants his salary raised. Says the business of the bank is four times what is used to be and his work has increased accordingly. Says with increase in the amount of money handled comes increase in the strain on his integrity. Seems to think he ought to be paid for not robbing us. Besides, he says he can scarcely keep his family on his salary. I suppose I can answer it without calling another board meeting," he concluded facetiously.

"Tell him he oughtn't to have such a big family," suggested one. "Quote the law against embezzlement to him," said another, and so on, as they buttoned their overcoats and went out about their businesses.

By and by John Smith got a note like this, signed by the president and written on the note paper of the bank, bearing the imposing array of directors' names in neat engraving at the head of it:

Mr. John Smith:

Dear Sir—In answer to yours of even date I am instructed by the board of directors to say that they cannot agree with your view of the case. It is true that your work has largely increased with the growth of the bank under its present successful management, but it is no more than you are able to do and no more than we can find others to do for the salary we now pay you. The other phase of the matter you present—that we should pay you for the moral wear and tear incident to resisting temptation to steal as well as for the physical and mental work you do—has no weight.

Our relations, however pleasant personally, are purely a business affair on both sides. We pay you so much money for so much work. Your honesty is presumed. If you should prove dishonest, we would discharge you and the law would send you to prison.

With your family affairs we have nothing to do, but I may suggest to you that careful economy in small household expenditures will result in an annual saving which will perhaps surprise you.

Without referring especially to you—for I never endeavored to pry into your private affairs nor inquired how you lived—I may say that, in my opinion, the prevailing tendency of young people nowadays is to live too high instead of being careful to lay up something for a rainy day. Yours truly, etc.

The directors hadn't been in session long the next day when John Smith opened the door, handed in a slip of paper and walked back to his desk. There was silence for a minute, then a murmur; then the clerks outside heard a clatter of moving chairs in the board room, and then the door opened and two or three voices called "Smith!"

"In a moment," answered Smith, cheerfully laying a blotter between the leaves of the book he had been writing in and carefully tucking the pen behind his ear as though he were making his toilet.

"What do you mean by this," they demanded when he appeared in the directors' room—"telling us there is only $9,647.80 available cash and suggesting that we get some for the company?"

JOHN SMITH HANDED IN A SLIP OF PAPER.

"It's so," responded Smith, "and I thought you ought to know it before the money is all checked out. The bank oughtn't to have to close its doors in the middle of the day."

"But, according to your statement of yesterday and your showing of today's business, there ought to be $259,648. Where is the quarter of a million? We were just discussing an investment for it."

"I've invested it myself," responded Smith coolly, "in a safe place—$250,000 of it. The other 20 cents I took for street car money. I took a quarter of a million away with me last evening."

"You what?"

"I stole it, in plain English. When I got this response to my note to the president I—but really I must renew my suggestion about the advisability of getting some cash on the counter. You are very short, and you ought to attend to it at once."

Two of the directors drew their checks on other banks and sent them out, although the signatures were very shaky, and then, quite at his ease, Mr. Smith leaned up against the carved mantelpiece, read the president's note refusing his request for an increase and went on:

"When I got this note it set me to thinking whether, as our relations were a purely business affair, I couldn't do better than go on as I had been doing. There was $250,000 in convenient shape that I could get my hands on. I might have skipped to Canada with it, but I don't like the climate. I took the money away with me and concealed it"—pausing for a moment and smiling down in their eager faces—"in a place known only to myself. I shall give myself up, and as our relations, in the language of the president, have been 'personally pleasant,' I will save you the expense of a trial by pleading guilty. The maximum sentence for my offense under the laws of the state is ten years in the penitentiary. With the commutation off for good behavior it will be about eight and a half years. It will be dull, but I shall not be idle. I have never had leisure to cultivate the graces of the mind. I have a taste for music. I will cultivate it. I will learn a modern language or two. When I have served my term and am clear of the law I will come out of prison thirty-nine years old, with a cultivated mind and a comfortable fortune of $250,000 awaiting me. I can afford to go away, to travel in foreign countries and enjoy life. Of course I lose the interest on my $250,000 while I am in prison, but if I were to live on air and go naked and save all my salary I wouldn't have one-fiftieth as much at the age of thirty-nine. On the whole I think I have made a good speculation. Don't you?"

"ON THE WHOLE, I THINK I HAVE MADE A GOOD SPECULATION."

The opinions of the directors were not very coherent just at this moment. They made various appeals to him, on the confidence they had had in him, on the good name he bore, on the dishonor he would incur, etc., but he responded that all these had not helped him to an increase in salary and relentlessly quoted the language of the president's note to him that "their relations were purely a business affair on both sides." Finally he said:

"Our relations have been personally pleasant, and I have no unconquerable desire to spend the next eight and a half years in jail. I will make you a proposition. If you will sign a bond not to prosecute me and publish in the daily papers a set of resolutions setting forth that, whereas your valued and trusted employee, John Smith, by the receipt of a legacy from a deceased relative has been relieved of the necessity of further service, resolved, that we part with him with extreme regret, etc.—if you do this I will bring back $125,000 and content myself with the other $125,000. The interest will make up a good part of the loss to me."

It was hard to give up $125,000 and hitch it to a set of resolutions complimenting the thief, but it was a choice between getting half the loaf or nothing. Was the satisfaction of sending him to prison for eight and a half years worth $15,000 a year to them? They figured on it and agreed that it wasn't.

They accepted his proposition, drew up the bond and signed it.

"You can get the resolutions in shape by tomorrow," he said, "and have them ready when I bring the money. It would scarcely be delicate for me to be present when they are adopted."

"Couldn't you bring it today, Mr. Smith?" asked the president, in a perspiration.

"No. I haven't time to do so after it. The work at the bank keeps me busy until then, including the bank. You tomorrow, you have compound trust you affair."

They next day. Smith without the president inquire for him at the bank. Smith had gone out to get his lunch.

He was asked [illegible] a dozen times before he came. Every few minutes the door of the directors' room would open, a perspiring face would be thrust out, and Smith would be inquired for. Then the face would be withdrawn, and the directors would fall to discussing whether, after all, Smith hadn't taken their bond and given them the slip. At the stroke of 12 the door opened and Smith walked in. He picked up the resolutions, read them with approval, and, with a "Thank you, gentlemen; this is handsome," he handed a package to the president, saying:

"Here's your money."

Then he took his former stand by the mantelpiece and watched their eager faces while they bent over to count it. A hundred crisp $1,000 bills, then $25,000, some of it in small denominations; $25,000 more yet, and then, to their amazement, another hundred $1,000 bills.

"Why, it's all here. You've brought it all back."

"I never meant to steal it," said Mr. Smith coolly. "I made you believe I did merely to convince you that you were conducting your bank on the wrong principle in keeping a man on a starvation salary with a fortune within his grasp. I wanted to make you understand that there is something more in the relations between a bank and its trusted employees than cold business. I suppose you have no further use for me. I am ready to turn over my books as soon as you name my successor. He will find them all right. Good day."

He walked back to his desk. Pretty soon they called him in again, and the president made a little speech. He said the lesson had been an unpleasant one, but they were disposed to take it in the spirit in which it was given. Perhaps he was right.

They had no desire to punish him, but—here he hesitated and stammered a little—they were also unwilling—that is to say, they had no desire—to keep a financier of his capacity in the humble place in which he had hitherto been employed. Therefore one of their number, Mr. Wilkins, who was the agent of an insurance company at a salary of $4,000 a year, had decided to resign that position and would have Mr. Smith appointed his successor.

They had thought to keep the whole matter a profound secret. It was not a good thing for the public to know—that is, not good for the bank and its officials nor perhaps for John Smith.

But there were too many in the ring, and after the first dazed feeling of consternation and resentment had passed the humor of the situation grew more apparent. Some of the directors had intimate friends; some of them even confided business matters to their wives. The president himself under a ban of strict secrecy related the story to a fellow clubman who was president of another bank.

Rumors of it began to float out to the public—not the whole story, but enough of it to intimate that a man of extraordinary business capacity had been employed in the bank, so extraordinary that even the president had recognized it and helped him to a position offering greater opportunities.

In time some of the rumors crossed into another city and found their way to the ear of the insurance president. He looked over a few late entries in the company's books and found that John Smith was doing remarkable work for them.

WATCHED THEIR EAGER FACES WHILE THEY COUNTED IT.

Now, extraordinary men are scarce in all kinds of business, so much so that the insurance president soon went down and personally interviewed his agent. He found him a quiet, self possessed man of good business capacity, but not showing evidence of anything unusual. But the power was there. The president knew that from the business being done, and, besides, there were rumors in the air. Coming from such sources, they stood for a good deal. What he did not know was that these same mysterious rumors were almost wholly responsible for the ex-bank clerk's sudden popularity and patronage. Given a clear mind to grasp things, after all, it is often opportunity that does all the rest. When the insurance president left John Smith had been advanced to a far more responsible position, with a corresponding increase in salary. After that his rise was rapid.

Two years later the bank president resigned, and the directors came together to elect his successor. Oddly enough, their thoughts went almost unanimously to their former clerk. His honesty had been tried, and his business foresight was a matter of common talk on the street. They offered him the position, and he accepted.

How to Train Citizens of the Future.

By Dr. EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Chaplain of the United States Senate. Author, Editor, Etc.

REAL DEMOCRACY DEMANDS FROM EACH MAN THAT HE LIFTS WHERE HE STANDS, THAT THE MAGNIFICENT SWAY OF PUBLIC OPINION IS TO BE MAINTAINED. EVERY BOY AND GIRL IS TO BE CONSECRATED IN YOUNG LIFE TO SERVE THE PEOPLE. TO BE TAUGHT TO BE COURTEOUS TO STRANGERS, TO BE RESPECTFUL TO THEIR SUPERIORS, TO UPHOLD TEMPERANCE AND PURITY—ALL THIS WITH CONSCIENTIOUS PURPOSE EVERY DAY—AND ANY MAN OR WOMAN AMONG US WHO IS NOT WILLING TO TAKE A SHARE IN THIS RULE OF THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PEOPLE AND BY THE PEOPLE OUGHT TO BE PUNISHED.

They should be excluded from the familiar confidence of other men and women as lepers were among the Hebrews or as pariahs were in Hindustan. THEY DO NOT BELONG HERE. Such persons are to be rooted out as poison ivy is to be rooted from the pleasure ground. They have no foothold in a real republic.

It is not simply by attending a primary meeting and ONCE A YEAR marking a ballot in which I show my preference for that one man in a hundred who is to sweep my streets for me or light my lamps for me that I show myself as a TRUE citizen of a Christian city. I am TO DO MY SHARE and to know I do it in opening the eyes of the blind or the ears of the deaf, in welcoming the stranger and in encouraging the prisoner, in clothing the naked or in feeding the hungry and in setting on their feet those who have fallen down or in casting out devils from those who are possessed.

Water for the thirsty, health for the sick, air for those who are stifled, companionship for those who are lonely—here are A FEW ONLY OF THE PRIVILEGES some one of which demands definite action all along the line in the workaday life of every consecrated man and woman. EACH FOR ALL AND ALL FOR EACH.

Commercial Supremacy Of New York Is Waning.

By JAMES J. HILL, Railroad Builder and Financier.

NEW YORK HAS REACHED THE CLIMAX OF ITS COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY. No city can maintain its control when its chief claim is that it is the DEAREST place in which to do business. The cost of everything relating to trade and commerce has increased in New York beyond the point of profit. Traffic will be forced to seek other outlets, business other locations.

The tax imposed upon business in New York is ENORMOUS. Real estate, docks, means of communication, all are burdened with point of profit. The budget this year is somewhere about $140,000,000. That is MORE than the cost of running the federal government before the civil war.

THE PRICE TO LIVE AND TO DO BUSINESS IN NEW YORK IS GROWING BEYOND THE ABILITY OF THE PEOPLE TO STAND. THEY WILL BE FORCED TO GO ELSEWHERE, SEEKING PLACES WHERE THE COST IS MORE REASONABLE. IT IS EASY TO DISINTEGRATE COMMERCE, MUCH EASIER THAN TO CONCENTRATE IT. WHAT HAS TAKEN YEARS TO ESTABLISH MAY BE LOST QUICKLY.

TRAFFIC CANNOT BE DAMMED UP. It will seek an outlet somewhere by going around the edges or making for itself entirely new channels. The enormous products of this country flow outward toward the markets of the east and of Europe. They have moved toward New York only to find two great obstacles—DELAY IN TRANSIT AND HIGH COST.

To many parts of the west St. Louis is as convenient and as easily reached as Chicago. FROM THERE TO NEW ORLEANS IS THE MISSISSIPPI. Can you imagine the effect of fleets of modern steel barges carrying thousands of bushels of grain running down a fourteen foot channel in the Mississippi?

The products of the west are bound to reach their markets. Therefore if they are blocked and overtaxed on their way through New York they will find NEW CHANNELS for themselves.

The Future of Life Insurance.

By DARWIN P. KINGSLEY, President of the New York Life Insurance Company.

THE FUTURE OF LIFE INSURANCE IS MENACED BY REFORM THROUGH DESTRUCTION. WHEN WILL THE JUSTICE OF STATESMANSHIP, WHICH WOULD REFORM BY CONSERVATION, TAKE THE PLACE OF THE ACTION OF THE POLITICIAN, WHO THINKS HE HAS REFORMED WHEN HE HAS DESTROYED?

What shall we say of the political leader who fashions a cunning appeal to all the baser passions of the human heart? What shall we say of the organ of public opinion which DELIBERATELY MISSTATES FACTS, garbles testimony, destroys reputations and cultivates suspicion and hate, which always lie near to the surface of human feeling, and DELIBERATELY brings on a social tempest in order to sell its wares? What shall we say of the great magazine which, professing to put before the world a dispassionate review of life insurance and life insurance companies, REFUSES TO SEE RESPONSIBLE LIFE INSURANCE MEN, apparently from fear that the truth in possession might deprive its article of certain sensational features?

THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN LIFE INSURANCE IS AS CERTAIN AS THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN CIVILIZATION. IT MUST GO ON BECAUSE CONJUGAL AFFECTION WILL GO ON. IT FITS INTO THE PLANS OF A BUSY WORLD, AND THIS IS A VERY BUSY WORLD.

Life is more productive, more generous, more effective, sweeter, HAPPIER; values are more certain, securities more abundant and better than ever before. American life insurance, with all its faults, HAS SEEN THE OPPORTUNITY AND THE NEED and splendidly answered both. Therefore it must go on. It DESERVES to go on because when subjected to the severest tests it is found to have been HONEST, SOUND AND IN THE HIGHEST SENSE USEFUL. It must go on because it performs now and is able to perform a function in civilization which has not been given to any other business.

MUNICIPAL LUNACY.

By JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.

Over in Boston a little while ago they put a successful undertaker in charge of the supplies department, with the result that the Hub has been buying inferior grade coal at high grade prices, and the honorable superintendent didn't know it until the facts were brought out by an investigating committee. We are not at all surprised and for two reasons—first, a man may be a first rate undertaker and know the quality of what he puts into the ground without necessarily being an expert on what comes out of the ground, and, second, Boston should have known what we all know—that an undertaker is not the right kind of a man to have charge of a civic coal plant. Under the most approved municipal ownership ventures it is the custom to have such things attended to by milliners and delicatessen men.

* *

Matthew Arnold ought to be a popular author with those municipal ownership advocates who believe that a gas works can be successfully managed by a confectioner. He wrote an essay once on sweetness and light, which would seem to show that the two things are not incompatible.

* *

Paris, France—to distinguish it from Paris, Ky.—has gone into the undertaking business and is said to give great satisfaction to both mourners and to the deceased. Just how this would work in this country we cannot say. Philadelphia would doubtless make a first class undertaker, as would also Boston, but we fear New York, Chicago and St. Louis would prove too frivolous for the job.

* *

New York's combined garbage incinerator and electric light plant which was used to provide light for the Williamsburg bridge has faded away like the last rose of summer. Even under the city's liberal system of free garbage for all so pleasingly insisted upon during the warm days of last July, by which fuel cost the lighting plant nothing, the loss was $25,000 a year as compared to the cost of a similar service under private contract. And there wasn't anything the matter with the garbage either.

* *

Over in France, where they have government ownership of the telephone, the "subscriber" has to yell himself so hoarse to get central that when the desired connection is finally made he is too husky to make himself heard. This of course has its advantages if it be true that men are prone to talk too much and as a restraint upon a too impulsive speech, but we cannot help wondering how long an American telephone company unsupported by the army and navy, the president, the supreme court and both houses of congress would last under similar conditions.

* *

The privately owned department stores of Berlin are underselling the municipal market halls so decidedly that the latter are being operated at a loss. We wonder that his honor William H. Kaiser of Potsdam permits such cold blooded butchery.

It Sounds Logical.

It was after changing a meter, an old one, for one of more recent manufacture that one of the inspectors was called to the house of a German. The complainant wanted that meter changed again at once. "For what did you change my meter except to make me pay more gas bill?" he asked. His bill had increased. The inspector tried to explain that the winter months and the earlier darkness were responsible, but he couldn't fool the old German. "You take out my leetle meter and put in that big box," he remarked sagely. "Big box, lots of gas; leetle box, leetle gas." And all the explaining in the world could not move him.—Progressive Age.

This Plant Was Given Away.

The mayor of Fulda, Minn., writes with regard to the electric light plant in that city:

"Our plant was not sold, but given away in 1902, but the deed was not executed until five years later, as according to contract the present owner was to run it for five years in payment for it. The reason for giving it away was that it ran $1,000 behind every year. The original cost was about $5,000."

The original cost must have been increased by later additions, as in January last the superintendent reported the cost as $10,000.

Petty Despotism.

The Hackensack (N. J.) letter carriers have been ordered by the postmaster general to resign their membership in the various fire companies. They are looked upon by the federal authorities as paid, because they are allowed $12 a year for damage to their clothing in service. It is this that the postal authorities declare to be "pay." The firemen letter carriers say they never have left their routes to attend a fire, and they can't imagine how the postoffice authorities became so interested in so small a matter.—Fire and Water Engineering.

One Method of Control.

On the board of directors of the Louisville (Ky.) Gas company are four men representing the city's interests. They must be residents of Louisville, must own not less than ten and not over a hundred shares of the company's stock and be elected by the boards of aldermen, the gas company furnishing a list of eligibles.—Progressive Age.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1908.

MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS.

The qualified Republican voters of the Town of Oakland are requested to assemble in convention in Townshend's Hall, Townshend Building, Alder-st. on Thursday evening, March 5th, 1908, at the hour of 7.30 o'clock for the purpose of nominating—

One person for Mayor to serve for the term of two years; and

Three persons for Members of the Town Council to serve for a term of two years.

Every Republican voter is earnestly requested to be present and assist in naming the ticket.

A. G. STURGISS,
Chairman Republican County Com.

PLACE OF MEETING CHANGED.

Deeming the city council chamber too small to accommodate the crowd that will in all probability be in attendance at the Republican municipal convention this evening when candidates for Mayor and Town Council are to be named, Chairman Sturgiss, upon request of the candidates in the field for Mayoralty, has changed the place of meeting from the council chamber to the Townshend building on Alder street which will accommodate quite a large number of people. To this meeting all Republicans are earnestly invited.

A NEW FACTOR in Maryland journalism, in the person of Mr. Frank A. Munsey, proprietor of the Munsey Magazine and other well-known publications, entered the arena on Monday, upon which day he took charge of the Baltimore Evening News, Maryland's best afternoon daily. The News, established many years ago, has adhered to the principles of clean journalism, good government for the State and city and has been a power in moulding public opinion on matters appertaining to decency and and order throughout Maryland. These principles, Mr. Munsey stated in his leader published in the News Monday evening, the paper will adhere to. May the News continue to prosper and remain a power for good in Maryland politics is the wish of THE REPUBLICAN.

HIGH-PRICED DEMOCRACY.

It is not very cheering news which comes from Denver in regard to the rates for bed and board which will be charged by the hotels of that city during the time of the national Democratic convention. It seems that the landlords of the Colorado city have not shown a very patriotically democratic spirit in the manner in which they have uplifted prices.

The Chicago Tribune has been investigating conditions out in Denver with a view to informing the eager Democrats of both wings of the party (if there are but two) who would desire to be on the scene of battle when the encounter takes place.

The Tribune makes the following revelation:

"In one instance inquiry as to the cost for four rooms brings the information that, as the hotel management figures that rooms will hold 18 persons, the rent of these rooms will be $90 a day, even if they are occupied by less than half that number of individuals."

This means that the Democratic enthusiasm is not going to be as free, if it is as unbounded, as the ambient atmosphere. And yet it must be confessed that the hotel-keepers of Denver have not shown any distinctive traits. Since the people of that city put up $100,000 to get the convention to come to their city it is not to be presumed that they will not make some effort to get at least a part of it back. They are hardly in business for their health, as the well-known saying has it.

The good folks of Denver may be enthusiastic Democrats who wanted the convention for Democracy's sake, but they are also human.

TAFT IN THE FIELD

The Baltimore American is tooth and toe nail, to use a common expression, in favor of the nomination of Secretary Taft for the Presidency at the Republican convention in Chicago in June. The American not only desires his nomination, but under the above editorial caption predicts his triumph in the contest at Chicago. The American says:

During the month of March the situation of the presidential election campaign, in so far as it concerns the prospective action of the Republican convention, which meets in Chicago next June, will be practically settled. During this current week Republican state conventions are to be held in Ohio, Kansas and next week in Nebraska and Oklahoma and during the week following in Iowa. At all of these important state conventions, with the exception perhaps of that representative of Oklahoma, there will be an emphatic declaration favoring the choice of Secretary Taft as the presidential candidate of the party. In Oklahoma, where a contest is in anticipation for control of the delegation that will be sent to the national convention, it is worthy of note that the four district delegates that have been selected have been instructed for Secretary Taft. The state convention of Missouri has already declared for Taft and the delegation from that state will be for him in solid array. Up to date, the clearly outlined indications accredit Mr. Taft with a ratio of more than two votes to every one that can be counted against him; and "against him" embraces the field the entire "favorite son" aggregation.

The indications of Taft strength are of much more sweeping and impressive proportions, however, than may be gathered from a mere summary of the delegates that have been instructed or declared for him, as compared with the number that has been chosen for other candidates. Six weeks ago, the belief was general that seventy-five per cent. of the New England vote would be concentrated in favor of some other candidate; just now it looks more likely that the New England vote may be practically solid for the man who has been accepted in the public thought as standing for a continuation of the Roosevelt policies. There is no longer room for doubt that the party popular sentiment in the New England States, as in every other section of the country, favors the choice of the present War Secretary as the presidential nominee of the party. It is a sentiment which is being so emphatically indicated that various political forces, supposedly organized to oppose the candidacy of Mr. Taft, are being neutralized or silenced. In Massachusetts the trend Taftward has grown enormously during the past few weeks. In New York State while the delegation will, by common agreement, be declared for Governor Hughes, it is not in the least likely that the vote of New York can be swung to any other candidate than Taft in case the name of the New York governor should be dropped.

The favorite son candidates do not seem to be developing any large degree of strength outside their state areas, and, according to reports of a seemingly reliable nature, there is both in Pennsylvania and Illinois a general sentiment favorable to Secretary Taft, that is with difficulty restrained from open expression. Thus far the developing indications point unmistakable to Mr. Taft as the presidential nominee of his party. There has rarely been in any previous presidential campaign a more conspicuously indicated drift of popular sentiment toward a particular candidate than there is now in evidence as favoring the selection of Secretary Taft as the party representative in the pending presidential contest.

HOUSE BREAKING AT THE PARK.

A Number of Dwellings Broken Into But Little Stolen

Tuesday night, Feb. 25, some of the young men returning home from church at Loch Lynn, discovered a light in the Maxwell home, at Mountain Lake Park. They investigated the matter and found that there was a man in the house. He came out of the kitchen door and ran toward the Little Yough. He fell after running two hundred feet or more and was captured by the young men who started with him to the depot. At the bowling alley he broke away from them and started for Oakland. The young men telegraphed to the operator at Oakland to notify the policeman to look out for this man, and fully described him. The policeman saw the man in the waiting room at the station, but did not arrest him, feeling that he had no authority to do so. Neither did he show the telegram to Sheriff Brown, who was at the station.

Investigation shows that more than thirty homes were broken into. Some of the houses were entered with keys, slats were broken out of shutters and window glass was broken.

It is remarkable, that as far as is known, nothing was taken out of the cottages, except the Maxwell cottage, from which some plated silver ware was taken, which was found in Mr. U. G. Clayton's house.

Felty & Co's. store was entered, as was also the lunch stand opposite the auditorium. One or more houses in Loch Lynn were broken into. It is supposed that this housebreaking has been going on for the past two or three weeks.

Last Friday night Mrs. Landon was awakened by some one trying to get into the Mountain Lake Hotel. She wakened her husband, who scared the party away. Two men about a week ago tried to get into the Loch Lynn Hotel. Mr. Hart, the watchman was aroused from his sleep by the noise, and went to the door and spoke to the men as they were leaving the porch.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

POLITICS HAD THE RIGHT OF WAY.

Record of the Maryland Legislature to Date.

Two-thirds of the legislative session at Annapolis is in the past. The record to date has a far more political than business flavor. Not a single measure of paramount importance to the state has been passed.

The Incorporation Bill, over which two preceeding legislatures has struggled, has passed the House, but is tied up in the room of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. Its pigeon hole may become its grave. If reported back to the Senate it will be so emasculated that it will fall far short of the public demand for legislation as outlined in the original bill. The Senate committee displays an absolute indifference to public needs in its treatment of the measure.

The amendments to the oyster culture law are in an embryonic condition. They are still in the hands of the House Committee on Chesapeaks Bay and its Tributaries. That committee is disposed to trifle with the recommendations of the Shellfish Commission, which, after 18 months' practical work, ought to know what is best for the advancement of oyster culture in the state. Members of the committee from tidewater counties seem to think that they are rendering the friends of the Haman law great service by not repealing the law, and that advocates of the amendments to facilitate a revival of the oyster industry ought to be gratified at the nonrepeal of the law.

The banking bill, indorsed by the Maryland Bankers' Association, did not make its appearance at Annapolis until last week. It, too, is in its beginning stage.

The Benson Good Roads Bill, which aims at good things, though steeped in politics, was introduced Thursday in the House. At the same time Mr. Biddison introduced a bill with the same object in the Senate. The Benson bill opens the way to political play and to "graft." Choice of berths are provided for the faithful. The Biddison bill has the support of the promotors of good roads in the state. There will be a clash when the two bills meet. Governor Crothers says that he does not care so much for methodf and systems set forth in bills as he does for results. The Benson bill provides for a paid commission, while the Biddison bill's commission is unpaid.

In every fight which has thus far taken place between the city and the counties, the city has lost. The most notable fight of last week was over the license bill. The city was willing that the state should receive $151,000 per annum, the maximum amount received during any year since the high license law was enacted in 1890. The state, however, exacted its full pound of flesh and got it. It will continue to receive one-fourth of all revenues derived from the tax. The higher license bill has passed the House and is now in the Senate where, it is said, will be so amended as to provide for a flat license fee of $600 instead of the graduated license provided in the present bill.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House, and the Finance Committee of the Senate will give no hearings to delegations in quest of appropriations for institutions. With these hearings out of the way the committees will begin to formulate the state tax rate for 1909 and 1910. The rate will be determined largely by the fate of the good road bill. If it does not become a law there may be no change. Some of the State's financial officers believe it possible to lap two cents off the tax for public school purposes, with out destroying the efficiency of the schools. If this can be done provision can be made for good roads without increasing the tax rate for at least two years. Governor Crothers has set his heart on the good roads idea and is seeking necessary fund every available source of taxation. One of these is the trader's license, an increase in which he favors. This imposes another burden. Merchants are resisting the proposed increase. They will state their protests this week to the House Ways and Means Committee, which has the bill in charge.

The bill directed against Christian Science healers passed the House without any violent opposition. Its opponents claim that they will be able to defend it in the Senate.

Governor Crothers scored a notable point in securing a Democratic caucus in the Corrupt Practice Act. He realized that his party was committed to the proposition, and when the Senate Committee on elections showed a disposition to hold it back he got busy and the caucus was held. The bill will probably become a law dispite the fact that it is not approved by campaign managers, who are accustomed to handle the funds. While there is a demand for the law in some quarters, there is no pressing need of it. There are enough statutes now to put a stop to the bribery of voters, if enforced. It is reasonable to suppose that this new act, if it becomes a law, will share any other fate. A healthy public sentiment against bribery is needed more than new and cumbersome laws. The primary election bill has a thorny path to travel. It will probably fall by the wayside. The counties do not want it—certainly not, in its present shape, because of the heavy expense which it carries with it. The Democrats are pledged to it, and how they will wriggle out of their predicament of broken promises will be an interesting spectacle.

SWANTON AS A LUMBER CENTER.

A Corresdondent Writes of Industry, Politics and Religion.

To the Editor of The Republican:

More than once, yes, many times more than once, have I declared to you what a marvelous town is Swanton, without extracting from you even a word of affirmation or a wink of approval. Many towns have their day, then the light of that day goes out with the exhaustion of this or that commodity once giving vitality to its life. Not so with Swanton; no sir, not so. When Garrett came into being, more than thirty-five years ago, she found Swanton not only already here but the nucleus of, perhaps, the most extensive and thrifty lumber trade in the county's limits. White pine timber of the rarest grade and highest value covered as a dense cloud, vast areas; were tapped by tramways, and other devices of transportation, with this modest little station as their terminal. These forests of mammoth pine trees, many as straight as an arrow and not infrequently measuring the distance of one hundred feet from the stump to the first branches, were supplemented by many varieties of other valuable timber waiting the woodman's axe for market. In all this time at the end of each succeeding ten years it has been thought that these productive regions had been stripped of their timber, and saw mills would "shut down" and move away only to be followed by other mills of closer gathering. And so the recurring changes have followed each other down to date, and it may be safe to say the end of the present winter will leave in Swanton as much sawed lumber, crossties, mine props, etc., as at any time or year in all of its forty or fifty years as a lumber mart.

Last Friday we had in our midst the Rev. Mr. Workman, of Oakland, who preached in the evening an earnest and dignified sermon, no little to our refreshing. The scriptural tailoage of the discourse was from the last chapter of Ecclesastes "because man goeth to his long home." In tracing his theme the preacher kept well before the minds of his auditors a contrast between the transitory home, even at best, on earth to its immutability and unaltering felicities of the home contemplated in the text.

Referring to preaching, when, if ever, in the history of the American church has one city, as is the case with Washington, in the brief time of a single month lost two Prelates so distinguished as Father Stafford and Bishop Satterlee? These were churchmen rich in culture, in the front rank of the foremost at the gateway of human betterment, at the chancel rail and in the dominion of letters, and in their death two stars of brilliant lustre have passed from the Western skies.

Mr. Editor, this writer is a Democrat. How surprised you are to hear it and has always believed the dependencies in the Orient a grave venture and an unjustified departure from sound traditions observed from our beginning as a government, but were he in this crisis a Democratic member of Congress, he would actively support the policy of the Administration in its judicious design for the enlargement of the navy. Other great and influential countries are constructing enormous navies and we must not only keep abreast with them to preserve prestige upon the high seas but keep in a position to cope with an ambitious power, flushed with recent victories in the east and now assuming an air of indifference to us.

RELIAW.

Condolences.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom to take from our worthy Brother, John Wilt, his beloved child, In manifestation of our grief and fraternal sympathy for our brother, in this his hour of deep sorrow, be it

Resolved, by the members of Youghiogheny Tribe No. 151, Improved Order of Red Men, that we extend to our bereaved brother and his family our heartfelt sympathy in their hour of affliction and grief and commend them to Him who said, "Call upon me in the time of trouble and I will deliver thee," and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved brother and family, spread upon the minutes of the Lodge and furnished to the county papers for publication.

E. E. FRIEND,
W. C. READY,
C. F. DAWSON,
Committee.

SHERIFF BROWN IN CHARGE.

Proporty of Felty & Co., General Merchants, Taken Under Attachment

Yesterday Sheriff Brown, under attachment proceedings sued out by the Rowlesburg Grocery Company, took possession of the general store of Felty & Co., located on Alder street in Oakland, and also the property of the firm at Mountain Lake Park, consisting of lumber, live stock, etc.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:
L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
L. E. Friend, Merchant. W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal. Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
W. W. Savage, Merchant. R. C. McCandlish.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

BOARD OF TRADE TO ORGANIZE.

Second Preliminary Meeting Held Monday Night in Opera House.

On Monday night about fifty representative business men met in the opera house, which had been placed at their disposal by Manager Bockwith, for the purpose of organizing the proposed Board of Trade, but owing to the fact that no by-laws had been prepared and other necessary preliminaries arranged it was thought best by those interested to postpone the organization of the body until matters had taken definite shape in this respect.

The committee appointed at a previous meeting to procure copies of by-laws, etc., from other cities where Boards of Trade have been organized and brought to a successful conclusion matters vitally affecting the municipalities where they exist, presented them, secured from Clarksburg, McKeesport and other cities, when it was suggested that a committee of three be appointed to draft by-laws for the government of the Board to be organized here and to report the same at a meeting to be held not later than the 16th inst. when a permanent organization will be made. The committee having the drafting of the laws in hand is composed of Messrs. Samuel Lawton, J. C. Renninger and Benj. H. Sincell.

Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of Yough River Oil and Gas Company of Garrett county will be held on Saturday, the 4th day of April, 1908, at the Court House, Oakland, Maryland, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of 12 Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Stockholders who cannot attend in person are requested to send their proxies.

J. M. BURNS, President.
N. S. HEINDEL, Secretary.

HIS LEG WAS AMPUTATED

Robert Browning, Injured More Than A Week Ago, Underwent Second Operation.

At the Grafton Hospital, Robert Browning, son of Mrs. Mary Whetsell Browning, of Oakland, who was injured more than a week ago while in the discharge of his duties as a freight brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, an account of which was published in this paper last week, underwent a second operation Tuesday morning of this week. When portions of his foot were amputated last week it was feared by the surgeons that his leg was more seriously injured than was apparent on the surface, but they were unwilling to amputate the limb until they were sure that it was necessary.

Monday afternoon Dr. Henry McComas, of Oakland, was called to Grafton in consultation with the Grafton surgeons and it was decided that a second operation was necessary to save the young man's life, blood poisoning being imminent. The operation was accomplished with the assistance of Dr. McComas, the limb being amputated at a point just below the knee.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $65,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t-c Oakland, Md.

Condolences.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom to take from our midst our beloved brother, Jesse Wilt, and

WHEREAS, We desire to express our sympathy for the bereaved family in their hour of affliction, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Youghiogheny Tribe No. 151, Improved Order of Red Men, extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in their hour of affliction and grief and commend them to Him who said, "Call upon me in the time of trouble and I will deliver thee," and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved family, spread upon the minutes of the Lodge and furnished to the county papers for publication.

E. E. FRIEND,
W. C. READY,
C. F. DAWSON,
Committee.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

Almost housecleaning time.

Miss Ellen Connell, of Terra Alta, spent yesterday with friends in Oakland.

County Commissioner A. C. Smith was one of our early-morning visitors Tuesday.

WANTED—A good team suitable for farm work. Apply to Wm. M. Kelley, Coketon, W. Va.

Mr. J. Wilson Humbird, of Cumberland, spent a few days last week with his daughter, Mrs. W. E. Offutt, in Oakland.

Mr. Charles E. Hilleary, of near Garrison, was in Oakland Monday, on business. Tuesday morning he left for Philadelphia.

Mrs. M. L. Scott and Miss May Bickers are now in the eastern markets selecting a spring stock of millinery for the Baltimore Store.

The Board of County Commissioners, in session Tuesday and yesterday, adjourned last night. Routine business only was transacted by the Board.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Franklin, of Romney, Va., are here as the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Mitchell, at their home on Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Devereux, who have been on a visit to Mt. Clemens, Mich. and other points in the west for several weeks, returned to their home in this city last evening.—Grafton Sentinel.

Chester and Charles Browning, of Oakland, arrived in the city last evening to attend the bedside of their brother, Robert, who had his leg amputated at the Grafton Sanitarium this morning.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. Harry Loar, of Oakland, and his brother, Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, left here Monday night for Baltimore and New York. From the latter city they expect to sail Saturday for the Jamaican Island where they will spend a few weeks.

Farm for Sale—I offer my farm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six-room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. S. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

Mrs. J. A. McClelland, of Grafton, and her sister-in-law, Miss Tillie McClelland, were in Oakland a few days last week, the former as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Mason and the latter the guest of the Misses Manges.

Mr. Stephen G. Ashby, who has been for a year or two assistant superintendent at the Bond Mill will relinquish his position on the 15th inst. and embark in the commission business, handling lumber exclusively. He will open offices in Oakland and will give his entire time to the work.

Mr. Harry A. Rawlse, who was on a five weeks' vacation from his duties as station agent at the B. & O. depot in Oakland, which time he spent on a trip to the Pacific coast, returned to Oakland Friday morning last. He report a very enjoyable trip and the western country a garden spot.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, who had expected and fully intended coming to Oakland on last Friday night and spending Saturday and Sunday here, was called to his home over at Bayard Friday afternoon and did not arrive in Oakland until Saturday night, leaving here Sunday afternoon for Annapolis.

The average farmer is probably not aware of the fact that an average mule sells for $10 a head more than horses. Such is the case, and the price has been gradually rising for a number of years. There has never been what would be called an over-production of mules, while the market has often been unable to fully supply.

The fellow who stops his paper because he becomes offended at some item that does not suit his fancy, always imagines he is getting even with the publisher, but he is never missed. This only happens occasionally, for there are only a few people in any community who imagine a paper should contain nothing but what they approve of.

A number of the representative men of District No. 12 were in Oakland Tuesday morning where they appeared before the Board of County Commissioners asking for the opening of a new road in that section of the county. Among those who were here and interested in the matter were Messrs. Amos Recknor, Charles Stark, John H. Stark, F. M. Bittinger, Jerome B. Emory and ex-Sheriff Andrew Oester.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 THE SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

MUNICIPAL CONVENTION.

Several Prominent Men Have the Mayoralty Bee Buzzing Under Their Hats.

The municipal nominating meeting to be held tonight in the Townshend Hall on Alder street (the place of meeting having been changed as per notice elsewhere in THE REPUBLICAN today), promises to be quite an interesting event in the local political circles, as a number of prominent gentlemen have announced their candidacy for the position of Mayor and are hard at work assembling their forces for the contest tonight.

Interest seems to be centered about the office of Mayor, that of Councilmen being a secondary consideration. Three vacancies will occur in Council, the retiring members being Messrs. Joseph E. Harned, Republican, and Charles Liller and J. M. Stanton, Democrats.

The avowed candidates for the Mayoralty are Messrs. D. E. Bolden, D. M. Dixon and F. G. Hyde. Dr. Henry W. McComas, the retiring Mayor, who was approached yesterday to accept renomination, positively declined, stating that he had stepped aside in favor of Mr. D. E. Bolden.

The Democrats will hold their meeting tonight also. Mr. James D. Hamill, of the Journal, is spoken of as a candidate for Mayor, while for Council it has been generally understood that Messrs. Liller and Stanton will be renominated, with the third candidate yet to find.

Subscribe for The Republican.

The Lenten Season Is Here.

Yesterday (Wednesday) inaugurated the season of Lent for the present year. The day is known as Ash Wednesday, when ashes were placed on the foreheads of the faithful in the Catholic church as a reminder that man was made of dust and unto dust he must return. This ceremony is very old, dating from the earliest ages. Toward close of Lent, forty days hence, comes the great season of Holy Week, with its sad observances, and then Easter, when all rejoice at the resurrection.

Assemblyman J. S. Myers, who spent a few days at his home near Friendsville last week, arriving there from Annapolis coincident with the arrival of Mr. Stork, who brought with him a bright little son to bless the lives of the happy parents. Mr. Myers left Friendsville Monday morning, coming to Oakland that afternoon and spending the balance of the day here with his friends who are interested in proposed legislation. Mr. Myers left for Annapolis the same evening.

Mr. Ralph Thayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. A. Thayer, who has been a student during the winter at the West Virginia University, Morgantown, came home on Friday night suffering with blood poisoning in his foot, the infection having been produced some time ago. Mr. Thayer was treated for the trouble by one of the University staff, but the disease not yielding to treatment he was sent home. His condition, while serious, is not alarming and we hope for his speedy recovery.

The "big head" is a popular way of expressing a common and very frequent ailment. It arises from various sources, but the real foundation is a lack of sense. A little money develops it in some people; a few good clothes gives it to others; a little office, where a chance is given to exercise a little authority, is often the cause of it, while others get it having a little better job than their associates. The truth is no sensible person gets the "big head." The one who became stuck up and stiff-necked from sources of any kind, are weak in the intellectual caliber.

Young men, you are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your star, self-reliance. Don't take too much advice—keep at your helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Think well of your self. Strike out. Assume your own position. Put potatoes in a cart over a rough road, and the small ones go to the bottom. Rise above the envious and jealous. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that move the world. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Be generous. Be civil. Read the papers. Advertise your business. Make money, and do good with it.

Last Sunday was the first day of March and the month was introduced with weather of all brands and descriptions. The day was neither lionlike nor did it approach the docility of the lamb. The forenoon was rainy and about eleven o'clock a distinct flash of lightning illuminated the overcast sky, which was followed almost momentarily with loud peals of thunder; then it begun to snow, which lasted a few minutes, followed by a sleet. The afternoon was a repetition of the morning except that no electrical storm was visible. Toward night a heavy fog prevailed which grew denser as the night advanced, indication that weather conditions would change by Monday, which did not materialize, the day began wet and warm, melting the accumulated ice and snow very rapidly.

Subscribe for the Republican.

MUNICIPAL
Notice of Election.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified voters of the town of Oakland that an election will be held on Monday, March 9, 1908,

for the purpose of electing—

One person to serve as Mayor for the Town of Oakland for the term of two years; and

Three persons to serve as members of the Town Council of the Town of Oakland for the term of two years.

The polls will be held in the office of the Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett county in the West building on Alder street from eight o'clock a. m., until six o'clock p. m., of said day.

By order of the Council.

JOHN C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT FRIENDSVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business February 14th, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$126,577 43
Overdrafts		366 36
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, securities, etc		60,943 54
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		6,098 51
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		4,218 81
Due from State Banks and Bankers		174 17
Due from approved reserve agents		9,544 31
Checks and other cash items		9 63
Notes of other National Banks		620 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		297 71
Lawful money reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$2,571 75
Legal-tender notes	11,720 00	14,291 75
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		1,250 00
Total		$251,036 59

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund		23,597 43
Undivided profits		443 80
National Bank notes outstanding		25,000 00
Due to State Banks and Bankers		4,804 82
Individual deposits subject to check		82,265 74
Time certificates of deposit		89,924 80
Total		$251,036 59

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of February, 1908.

ORVAL A. WELCH, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: W. H. H. FRIEND, D. S. CUSTER, W. W. SAVAGE, Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT OAKLAND.

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$183,226 85
Overdrafts		54 49
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		5,540 00
Bonds, securities, etc		29,617 83
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		12,997 19
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		617 76
Due from State Banks and Bankers		60 01
Due from approved reserve agents		19,412 86
Checks and other cash items		187 18
Notes of other National Banks		325 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		118 07
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$17,223 85	17,223 85
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund		600 00
Total		$403,461 09

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund		28,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid		387 95
National Bank notes outstanding		50,000 00
Due to other National Banks		1,286 20
Due to State Banks and Bankers		111 69
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks		33 89
Dividends unpaid		99 00
Individual deposits subject to check		72,427 17
Savings Department		132,230 94
Time certificates of deposit		6,302 95
Certified Checks		10 00
Cashier's checks outstanding		132 30
United States deposits		50,000 00
Notes and bills rediscounted		12,423 00
Total		$403,461 09

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of February, 1908.

JAMES P. TREACY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: F. A. THAYER, A. G. STURGISS, E. H. SINCELL, Directors.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles. It absorbs the tumors, allays itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared for Piles and itching of the private parts. Sold by druggists, mail 50 and $1.00.

Williams' M'f'g. Co., Props., Cleveland, O. Sold at Sturgiss' Pharmacy Oakland, Md.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE P. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The Garrett National Bank

AT OAKLAND.

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$283,301 15
Overdrafts, secured		21 38
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		122,455 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		13,000 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		861 34
Due from approved reserve agents		42,008 83
Checks and other cash items		96 40
Notes of other National Banks		635 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels, and cents		395 47
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$25,416 80
Legal-tender notes	6,340 00	31,756 80
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Total		$548,531 37

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund		45,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid		1,193 28
National Bank notes outstanding		49,500 00
Due to other National Banks		8,191 75
Due to State Banks and Bankers		288 91
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks		4,563 58
Dividends unpaid		70 00
Individual deposits subject to check		169,258 58
Time certificates of deposit		229,867 83
Certified checks		50 00
Cashier's checks outstanding		547 44
Total		$548,531 37

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of February, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT KITZMILLERVILLE.

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, February 14, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$54,922 87
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		6,250 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		218 75
Bonds, securities, etc		9,321 39
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		3,347 95
Other real estate owned		400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		855 21
Due from State Banks and Bankers		349 36
Due from approved reserve agents		6,918 44
Notes of other National Banks		25 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		17 49
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$4,120 95
Legal-tender notes	650 00	4,770 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		312 50
Total		$87,709 91

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund		2,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid		263 77
National Bank notes outstanding		6,245 00
Due to other National Banks		3,360 97
Individual deposits subject to check		24,468 00
Time certificates of deposit		26,075 61
Cashier's checks outstanding		212 10
Total		$87,709 91

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of February, 1908.

GEO. J. POOL, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH, WADE SAPP, CHAS. M. WILSON, Directors.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF Valuable Coal
AND Mining Rights
AND SURFACE
In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in the Mortgage from Charles D. Gillespie and Minnie M. Gillespie, his wife, to The Lonaconing Savings Bank of Allegany County, dated the 13th day of August, 1907, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folios, 128 &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said Mortgage, the undersigned Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in said mortgage, will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,
The 14th Day of March,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock P. M., in front of the the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following described Coal and Mining rights, surface of land and other rights located in Election District No. 8 of Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, on the Western Maryland Railroad:

1. An undivided two-third interest in and to all the coal, and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of a tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah", and also at the end of the 15th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", South 23 degrees West, 78 perches, North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone, North 55 degrees East, 72 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the tract called "Elk Garden", then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing Three Hundred and Fifteen Acres

2. An undivided two-third interest in and to all that part of the surface of the aforesaid tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, course and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah", and at the end of the 15th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with part of the 12th line thereof, South 23 degrees West, 65 perches to a stone, thence North 87½ degrees West, 108 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", thence with part of said 14th line North 55 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone, standing at the end thereof, thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone-pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing One Hundred Acres.

3. All the rights of the said mortgagors used in conjunction with Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, the water from a spring upon her land adjoining the above described part of said tract called "Elk Garden", and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ said water in business.

This property adjoins the mining property of the Davis Coal and Coke Company and is underlaid with the same veins of coal now being worked by said Company at its great plant at Henry, West Virginia, and is almost in sight of the latter point.

The improvements consist of a dwelling house and necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE, As prescribed by said Mortgage—Cash on day of sale. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in Mortgage.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

NEW BATTETY WORKS WONDERS

May Have Lighting and Power Plants in Every House.

A VERY SIMPLE CONTRIVANCE.

Will Run Fans, Sewing Machines and Play the Piano—Will Be Introduced in Every County and City Very Soon—A Great Discovery.

Messrs. F. R. Bagwell, Alexander Erskine, Jr., and W. F. Russell are in Hagerstown, where they are demonstrating the Decker Primary Battery, manufactured by the Decker Electrical Manufacturing Company, Philadelphia, an electric invention to which Franklin Institute has awarded a medal, and which seems fraught with great possibilities of development in many directions.

For more than seven years, laboring day and night, and begrudging himself the time essential for sleep and meals, Frank A. Decker kept at the task before him as the one goal of his existence. The inventor, a watchmaker by trade, 33 years of age, since early boyhood had been enamored with the study of electricity. Keeping doggedly at his task, success at last crowned his efforts, and the primary battery that came to the notice of the Franklin Institute is likely to enter into competition with the storage battery in a field the latter has had all to itself.

This battery will generate power for 25 to-candle incandescent lights. For anyone living in the country the advantages are apparent. The present known primary batteries, in order to accomplish the same as this, would occupy 15 times as much space and would cost 15 times as much to operate.

The battery is suitable for the running of fans, sewing machines, can be attached to the piano and can be used for other domestic purposes. Then comes a train lighting unit, with its control mechanism. The central apparatus composes the largest primary battery in the World. The current discharge is 2000 amphers. It would be useful for the welding of iron and other metals, and as an electroplating appliance it would find an especially suitable field. They have also a dental outfit, with a modern dental engine attached to the wall. There is also a battery for a telephone exchange, which does away with the dynamo, moter and storage battery.

As for the generating force, when the latter is at rest the fluid runs into a tank, whence it is again brought forth through a pumping sostem that acts at once when the bulb is pressed. Similar in operation is the battery used for the automobiles. Here the supply tank is under the hood in the front part of the vehicle, and is made to raise or lower by revolving the steering wheel, the whole operation requiring but a few minutes, and the machine is off the moment the wheel is turned. The tank is provided with enough of the electric fluid to run 150 miles, after which it is necessary only that a fresh supply be put in the tank. Sufficient power is generated to operate the heaviest transfer trucks loaded to their capacity.

The purpose of the gentlemen demonstrating the battery is to supply the public through a local jobber. Hagerstown has the distinction of being the first city outside of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore to receive a demonstration of the batteries.

Advertiser.

Moses was the first journalist, because he wrote on the tablets of stone—but Noah went him one better and advertised. Noah built the ark and announced the day for sailing. He whooped 'er up lively and made a great display. The non-believers scoffed at him and died in the wet water. Thus did the man who advertised triumph. You can't keep a good man down, especially if he advertises.

"THE PASSING OF THE STEAM ENGINE."

W. E. Symons Discusses Conditions Around Chicago in Paper on This Subcect.

Wilson E. Symons read a paper at the last meeting of the Western Society of Engineers in the society's room in Chicago on "The Passing of the Steam Engine." The paper dealt particularly with conditions in Chicago. He did not say that the steam engine was doomed. Speaking of the electrification of railroads with respect to Chicago he said:

There are at the present time entering the city of Chicago about twenty-six trunk line railways operating with steam locomotives. These lines have an aggregate mileage of 90,285, or about 40 per cent of the total mileage in this country; 22,523 locomotives, or 40 per cent of the total; 845,106 cars, or about 42 per cent of the total, and a valuation of $5,324,062,000, or a little over 31 per cent of the valuation of all railways in the United States, which is placed at $16,926,105,204. These companies operate in Chicago with a few exceptions steam locomotiees using bituminous coal for fuel, and not infrequently contribute to the evils properly chargeable to the smoke nuisance. There are in service in the city of Chicago approximately 650 locomotives each day, and assuming that each engine consumes five tons of coal a day; and we have the sum of 3,250 tons a day; and if 1 per cent of this total amount permanently adheres to buildings, structures, etc., or contributes to the death or destruction of trees, grass, flowers, etc., or to the injury of clothing, people's health, etc., then the steam locomotive, it would seem, stands properly arraigned under a very serious indictment.

Before rendering a verdict, however, let us take evidence from both sides, after which we can better determined the proper degree of responsibility. That there are hundreds, and I may say thousands, of chimneys in Chicago daily contributing to the evils of the smoke nuisance no one familiar with the subject will dispute. The public mind, however, has of late been systematically and thoroughly poisoned against corporations, especially railway companies, and on this account the author is inclined to believe that a proper division of the responsibility has not been made. Approximately, 1,129,567 tons of coal a year pass off from chimneys as smoke or soot, and about 1 per cent of this volume of smoke or soot adheres permanently to buildings, structures, etc. A division of responsibility serves to indicate on whom the burden of relief should rest with respect to abatement, and in this connection it should be remembered that the schedule of miles, engines, cars and valuation railways entering Chicago also applies to many other cities and industrial centres. In other words, many of these lines have small interest here as compared to the sum total of their interests at other points, while the stationary plants are each one a unit in Chicago's sum total of asset, and in which we have seen that the steam locomotive contributes only 13 per cent of the smoke nuisance. The author suggests consideration of an electric zone and submits a tentative plan from which all steam locomotives using bituminous coal after a certain date will be prohibited from entering. And in the residence districts steam locomotives, regardless of the kind of fuel used, should be reduced to a minimum in numbers on account of the noise their operation produces.

It would seem a conservative proposition and one that would not impose unnecessary financial burdens on the people, or present any unusual complex engineering problems, to consider the introduction of electricity as a means of transportation in the adjacent to all large cities or commercial centres where the demand or the conditions are similar to those which have been and are being successfully met in New York City. Chicago is snffering more from the smoke nuisance than New York ever did. It is also suffering from lack of adequate transportation facilities, and the substitution of electricity for the steam locomotive would provide relief in the matter of transportation and contribute relief with respect to the smoke nuisance in proportion to the degree of its responsibility. Both problems are easier of solution in Chicago than they were in New York, presenting no engineering or financial difficultics which cannot be reasonably and satisfactorily met, and it would seem there is really no excuse for further delay in securing necessary relief in this direction.

WOOD BLOCK FOR YOUTH

Mrs. Post Wheeler Talks Of Japanese Secret Of Beauty.

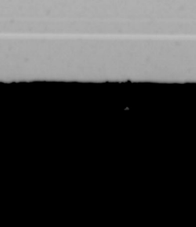
Mrs Post Wheeler who is known to the world of literature in her more familiar name of Hallie Erminie Rives, and who now lives in Tokio, Japan, where her husband holds the position of Secretary to to the American Legation, says that from the Japanese women she has learned the trick of perpetual youth, and that one of the greatest accessories to it is the little hollow, wooden block which the Japanese use instead of burying their heads in feather pillows when they rest or sleep.

The authoress takes with her wherever she goes the block which she brought from Japan. Upon it she rests her head, whether it is for a siesta or for a night's sleep.

Mrs. Wheeler said: "Throwing the head over the block and lying flat on one's back has a tendency to take the pressure from the brain and to relax the body, which, of course, means rest. Repose means lack of worry, and the whole result means youth and smooth, mobile skin. When I want to take a half hour's rest I lie down upon the floor on a Japanese bed mat with my block under my head, and I get rest that I believe is almost unknown to the modern New York woman. I wake up even after a few moments of such relaxation feeling ready to undertake any social function or of writing as the case may be." When at home Mrs. Wheeler says she always wears the Japanese kimono. Mrs. Wheeler says no women in the world have more graceful or beautiful hands than the women of Japan. "The texture of their skin is wonderfully fine and smooth, and yet a Japanese women never wears gloves. It is because of that fact, I believe that their skin has grown to be so fine. Changes in weather do not affect it as it does ours, for we are always coddling our skin with cold creams and gloves. I would advise women who begin to see crow's feet in their reflecting mirrors to secure a Japanese "pillow" and to get into kimonos."

Whether it is the Japanese block or just her native Virginia air that is responsible, there is no denying the fact that Mrs. Wheeler is a very beautiful woman. Her white skin with it delicate pink tinge in the cheeks is the envy of all her friends.

A Business Proposition



Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

BOWSER GETS A JOLT

His Sympathy With Mankind In Trouble Is Not Wanted.

MIXES UP IN FAMILY ROW.

Thought He Was Succoring a Despondent Woman Who Had a Design to Drown Herself—Mrs. B. Helps to Pile on the Agony.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.]

Mr. and Mrs. Bowser had taken a seat on the front steps after dinner when a young woman poorly dressed passed the gate with slow steps. He watched her until she disappeared around the corner and then said:

"That poor woman is in trouble, and I wish I had gone down to the gate and spoken to her. She is making for the river, and so far as we know it is with the intention of committing suicide."

"I think that same woman called here the other day and was intoxicated," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"I don't believe anything of the kind. No one with that hopeless, dejected look gets it from whisky. You could see by her very walk that she was tired of life and its troubles. I wouldn't have such a flinty heart as you for all the money in the world. Haven't you got a spark of sympathy for any human being?"

"Plenty of sparks for those who are worthy. If I wanted that woman to wash or iron she wouldn't come for $2 a day. There was a man here today asking for an old coat, and I offered him a quarter to cut the grass. He turned away as if I had insulted him."

"YOUNG WOMAN, I SHOULD LIKE TO SPEAK A FEW WORDS TO YOU."

"But he wasn't hungering for human sympathy," protested Mr. Bowser. "He was a man and a tramp. The other was a woman who was crushed with troubles. I shouldn't be the least surprised to see by the papers in the morning that she had leaped into the river and ended all."

"That may be the best thing she could do."

She Needed Kind Words.

"Well, if that isn't brutality then I don't know the English language, Mrs. Bowser, if that poor woman does commit suicide then you are a murderess! Who can say that a few kind words from you would not have saved her, and yet you saw her dragging her weary way along and never even gave her a look of pity."

"What had I to do with it any more than you?" asked Mrs. Bowser. "You could have stopped her and assured her of your sympathies. In fact, I was waiting for you to do so."

"You were waiting for nothing, unless it was to see her fall down in a faint. Even then you would have begrudged her a smell of a camphor bottle. It is a few people such as you that make this world cold and cruel. Imagine the feelings of that poor woman on her way to the river! Here you sat, stiff as a poker, well dressed and looking content, and as she surveyed you with pleading eyes she received only a cruel stare in return. She will have a picture of you right before her eyes as she goes to her death."

"But she hasn't gone yet. She's standing down there on the corner thinking it over. You might go down and assure her of your pity and interest and offer her a quarter not to commit suicide. If you walk around for an hour you will meet with several other cases."

Mr. Bowser Decides to Act.

"By the ten tons of beeswax," shouted Mr. Bowser as his face got red and his hair began to curl, "but I'll do it! I'll not have this house pointed out as the residence of two barbarians. I am not a rich man, and I can't found hospitals nor give thousands to the poor, but I can let my fellow men know that I have a heart and am willing to do my mite. Mrs. Bowser, when I return I want a talk with you—a long talk. If I have been living with a savage all these years I want to know it and make a change. I think you can hold yourself in readiness to take the 10 o'clock train for your mother's tomorrow."

With that he walked down the steps and out of the gate. The dejected young woman saw him coming down the street and went her way, but he soon overtook her. Her humped shoulders and dragging feet excited new pity, and as soon as near enough he said:

"Young woman, I should like to speak a few words to you."

She stopped and turned to face him. He looked for tears in her eyes, but there were none. He looked for lines of grief in her face, but they were taking a late summer vacation.

"Well, what's the row now?" she asked as he hesitated.

"There is no row. You are in trouble, and I am one who would help you out."

"How am I in trouble?"

"I don't know. I am going to ask you to tell me. If you feel that life is no longer worth the living and if you are contemplating suicide"—

"G'wan with you!" she interrupted, with a wave of her hand. "I'm having a bit of shindy with my husband, who has left me and is passing himself off as a single man to a hired girl along here. I'm looking for her. She's red headed and has a mole on her chin. If I get hold of her I'll give you enough of that red hair to stuff a sofy pillow with."

"Then—then you are not crushed down?"

"I'd like to see the man that could crush me!"

"And you are not thinking of suicide?"

"What d'ye take me for, old man? What's all this jabber about anyway? What is it to you if Jimmie and me have a bit of a row? I don't like your talk, and I don't like your looks."

"But you passed my house back there," replied Mr. Bowser.

"And what if I did? Is there any law to forbid me passing your house?"

"But you looked so dejected and forlorn that I told my wife she ought to have spoken to you and let you know that you had her sympathies."

"If she had I should have thought her a bigger fool than you are. Now get along with ye. There are people looking at us, and I don't want them to understand that I'd pick up with the likes of you."

"Woman," I felt sorry for you and thought"—

"And who asked you to?"

"But the other day you called at my house, and my hard hearted wife turned you away without a kind word."

His Sympathy Rejected.

"Was that your house? I was pretty full, and I thought it was the place where the red headed girl lives. Yes, the lady told me to get a hustle on me, and I'm not blaming her a bit. You'd better be trotting along now."

Mr. Bowser trotted. He wanted to tear pickets off the fences as he passed along. His sympathies had been wasted and his kindness rebuffed. He was wandering along, absorbed in thoughts of Mrs. Bowser's barbarianism, when a woman he had been following almost without knowing it turned on him of a sudden and demanded:

"Look here, you old masher, who are you following and for what?"

"Madam, I am not following you," he replied.

"But you have been following me for five blocks, and I won't have no more of it. I'll call the police."

Mr. Bowser looked at her more closely and thought he detected grief in her face and hopelessness in her eyes. He was about to offer his sympathies and fatherly interest in case she had made up her mind to leave the cruel world behind her when she stepped forward and brought a closed umbrella down on his head and then uttered shouts for assistance. For a few seconds he was too dazed to realize the situation. Then she gave him a second blow, and he took to his heels. Boys and men and dogs pursued him, but they stood no show. He had come out to sympathize and had been called hard names. He had been ready with a fatherly interest and had been whacked over the head and his hat broken.

It was two hours later when he entered his house. Mrs. Bowser waited for five minutes for him to speak, and as he did not she inquired:

"Well, did you prevent the crushed from committing suicide?"

"Mrs. Bowser," he replied after a moment, "as I said before leaving the house this evening, I want to talk with you—a long talk."

"Yes, you said so, and now I want to say that I want a talk with you—a short talk. If your heart has got over aching for the general public please lock those back windows and come to bed."

M. QUAD.

In the Right Mood For Speed.

Nervous Friend—Your chauffeur seems to drive very recklessly.

Host—Yes. He doesn't care what happens when he's the worse for drink.—Black and White.

Not to Be Thought Of.

There was once a multimillionaire (he was very "multi" indeed) who spent immense sums of money on his children. They had everything, including four automobiles and a steam yacht each.

Still they were not satisfied.

"Can you not," they implored, "spend a little time with us now and then?"

"Time!" cried the multimillionaire, greatly shocked. "No, no! You are dreaming. It is impossible."

This fable teaches that time is not money in any practical sense.—Puck.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herald Baby has Preventics' greatest sufficiency. 10 cts. 50 boxes for the pocket, also in 250 boxes at 25 cts. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *5.31 a. m., *1.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m., Arrive *2.12 a. m., *5.35 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *5.31 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.31 p. m., *10.26 p.m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.

1 Hay Baller,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE
COLLEGE PARK, MD.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering. Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SYLVESTER, Pres't.
College Park Md.
22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others."

J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signatnre of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,

Okland, Md.

Bewitched by a Blond Fairy.

By LESTER ROSE.

Copyright, 1905, by Homer Sprague.

Under ordinary circumstances the trip across the Atlantic would have been quiet indeed. The eastbound traffic was light, and most of it went to the newer and faster boats. There were less than fourscore passengers in the first cabin, and Dorsey Adams looked forward to a long, quiet week with Nell Sommers.

For more than a year Dorsey had sought to win Nell's hand and with fair prospect of eventual success. When he heard that the family was going to Europe for the winter he planned to take the same boat, and the evident pleasure with which Nell greeted the announcement greatly cheered the anxious Adams.

But the boat had not reached the banks before the course of true love showed its customary unwillingness to move smoothly. They had, in fact, been out less than twenty-four hours when the love course began to resemble the serpentine windings of the Mississippi and evince a far greater roughness than the November seas.

Miss Sommers had spent her first night aboard in the agonies of seasickness, and it was late the next morning when a careful steward and a sympathetic stewardess helped the exhausted girl to the deck and comfortably installed her in a deck chair, where Dorsey presently found her.

Dorsey seated himself on a stool beside her chair and prepared to make himself diverting, but it was Miss Sommers who found the diversion. Against Dorsey's dark coat her sharp eyes spied a golden strand. She leaned forward to remove it, and the next moment she was holding it accusingly before his eyes, while her glance sought the sunny haired soubrette who was crossing to play the London music halls.

"You must have missed me last night, as you say," said Miss Sommers bitterly.

"But look here, Nell," declared Dorsey miserably. "I swear to you that I spent the whole evening in the smoking room except for a few minutes on deck just before I turned in. I was alone all the evening."

SHE WAS HOLDING IT ACCUSINGLY BEFORE HIS EYES.

"Do not add perjury to your other offenses," said Miss Sommers coldly. "I hate a man who does not tell the truth. Therefore I hate you. Please go away."

Dorsey went, miserably enough, while Nell Sommers sank back in her steamer chair lost in her bitter thoughts. She liked Dorsey, and it cut her to the quick that he should have spent the evening flirting with the little soubrette, while she herself lay in her berth vainly wishing the ship would run aground if only the awful rolling of the vessel might stop.

Dorsey, manlike, made for the solace of the smoking room. At the head of the companionway lounged one of the men who had been engaged in a poker game the night before. Now his face was wreathed in smiles as he followed the miserable lover to the deck below.

"I see you were caught with the goods," he said, with a laugh, as he took a seat at Dorsey's table. Adams looked at him savagely.

"I wish you'd mind your own blamed business!" he growled. The stranger only smiled pleasantly.

"Don't be nasty, old man," he counseled. "I'm not trying to rub it in. I want to help you out."

There was real friendliness in the tone, and Dorsey colored as he held out his hand.

"You might go and tell her that I was here in the smoking room all last evening," he suggested. "That was the row."

"A lot of good it would do to say that," said the intruder, with a smile. "She would simply declare that I was bolstering you up in an untruth. You've got to do better than that, old chap. By the way, my name's Greyson—Ben Greyson. What's yours?"

Dorsey made reply, and over the highballs they planned a campaign. The first gun was fired at luncheon when Greyson leaned across the table and advised Dorsey that there was a hair on his coat. Dorsey carefully removed a long golden strand while he made the retort courteous and pointed out to Greyson the fact that there was a hair upon his own coat. The little soubrette at the end of the table beamed mirthfully upon the abashed men.

"I'm glad they are so long," she declared. "If it wasn't such a long one, folks might think it was one of mine. Ain't it funny that I'm the only blond on board?" she ran on. "It's real blond, too," she said proudly as she shook her yellow curls.

Greyson passed her the hair he had removed from his coat. "If your hair was that long," he said, with a smile, "you could work in a museum instead of on the stage."

"Gee!" said the small soubrette admiringly. "I guess one of the 'hair tonic' sisters must be aboard. That hair's five feet if it's an inch."

"Let's ask the purser," suggested Greyson. "He knows the passenger list, and I guess he knows the blond too. There's a hair on his coat."

The purser, who was flirtatiously inclined and who had been making himself very attractive to the little soubrette, blushingly denied that there was any such person as a blond with long hair aboard, but the others at his table refused to believe his statement and kept up the joke.

The joke became a mystery when long golden hairs continued to be found on the coats of the men passengers and even occasionally on the dresses of the women. Even the gruff old captain swore softly under his breath when one of the incriminating hairs was found on his coat to the great glee of his officers, who knew him to be a woman hater of the most pronounced type.

As the days progressed the mystery deepened and in default of matters of greater moment became the chief topic of talk. Through it all Dorsey was coldly courteous to Nell, and she returned the coldness with interest.

It was not until the last day of the run that he ventured to reopen his case for a second pleading. Miss Sommers had come on deck after dinner and had sought a place in the bow where she could watch the swirling waters slip past all afoam from the impact with the prow. The clouds were breaking up after a storm, and great billows of vapor filled the sky, which rode serenely in the heavens.

So engrossed was she with her thoughts that she did not hear footsteps until a form loomed beside her and a hand lightly clasped her own.

"Am I forgiven yet for what I did not do?" asked Dorsey softly. "Believe me, Nell, I did not spend that first evening with Miss Clarence. I don't know how that hair got on my coat; honestly I don't. There seems to be some mystery to the whole affair."

"I was wrong," confessed Miss Sommers. "Do you know, Dorsey, I believe that this boat is bewitched by a blond?"

"That's it," cried Dorsey. "It must be witchcraft, and you will have to help me exorcise the spirit."

"How?" asked Miss Sommers wonderingly. "I am not versed in the casting out of spirits."

"Make me proof against their charms by marrying me," he explained. "Will you, dear?"

"I think I shall have to," said Nell softly as the moon discreetly went behind a cloud.

It was late that evening that Adams and Greyson sat together in a corner of the smoking room.

"Here's to the spirit of the blond bewitcher," said Greyson as he lifted his glass, "and here's long life and happiness to the happy pair. I'm glad that I helped to straighten out the trouble even though it did cost me my very best sample of the wonderful effects of Hairy's hair healer. It's wonderful stuff, grows hair on the baldest pate and heals wounded feelings. It was a hard job, though, to plant all those hairs without the victims finding out the trick and spoiling it all."

An Exalted Yawn.

"When I went to church last Sunday," said a young woman visiting Washington, "I sat directly behind a high executive officer for whom I have always had the greatest veneration and whom I have regarded as almost more than mortal. I tried hard not to be rude and stare at him too much, but I could not help my eyes wandering toward him occasionally. I glanced at him just once, near the end of the sermon, and what do you think he was doing? He was yawning, and he yawned a large and vigorous yawn, which came to him so suddenly that he did not have time to hide it behind his hand. I must confess that I was delighted. My veneration for the executive officer is just as great as it ever was, but I am glad I found out with my own eyes that he is subject to ordinary human weaknesses and cannot help yawning during a sermon."—Washington Star.

Heat Tests of Clothing.

An interesting experiment made in June by a physician proved conclusively that for the sake of coolness only white should be worn in hot weather. The physician spread out in an intense sunshine a large piece of white cloth, another of dark yellow, another of light green, another of dark green, another of blue and another of black. Then, with the help of six thermometers, he made the following table of the various heats which each color received from the sunlight: White, 100 degrees; dark yellow, 140 degrees; light green, 155 degrees; dark green, 168 degrees; blue, 198 degrees; black, 208 degrees. Thus the physician proved that in July or August the man in white is a little less than twice as cool as the man in blue and a little more than twice as cool as the man in black.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

ICE HARVEST COMPLETED.

Nearly Six Thousand Tons Cut From Lake at The Park.

Yesterday witnessed the close of the ice harvesting season in Garrett county when the last of more than a hundred and fifty cars of ice cut from the lake at Mountain Lake Park was loaded and shipped to Paw Paw, West Va., for the use of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company. In addition to the ice sold to the railway the Association filled its ice house at the Park, which has a capacity of more than a thousand tons.

Superintendent Davis has estimated that the total cut will approximate nearly six thousand tons.

Bought Felty Building.

Last Friday Mr. Herman Creutzburg, the Second street meat and grocery dealer, purchased at private sale the Felty building on Alder street and will take possession about April 15th. In the meanwhile many improvements will be made to the property by Mr. Creutzburg.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

ACCIDENT.

Not seeing any news from our town for some time I will try to pen a few items which I hope will be of interest to the readers of your valuable paper.

The old groundhog's prediction is still holding good here as we have plenty of snow and cold weather but his days must be numbered as it is much warmer and raining.

Mr. Newton Geis, who fell and hurt himself on a sawmill, thought at one time fatally, is improving slowly.

Mr. Samuel Mosser filled his ice house last week. Sammie is preparing to handle the butter in this section next summer.

Mr. George Shueble expects to leave soon to locate in Caroline county, Md. We are sorry to see him leave us as he is an excellent neighbor and a good citizen. We wish him success in his new home.

Messrs. F. C. Reis and Philip Georg attended the sale of John Kitzmiller on Saturday last.

Mr. C. J. Sechler, of Bittinger, moved on his uncle's farm near here.

We hear with regret of the death of Mrs. Henrietta Kamp, wife of ex-Judge Kamp.

Mr. H. J. Speicher sold a fine team to Mr. Bender at Grantsville last week.

Mr. Asa Beeghly and family returned home last Sunday from an extended visit in the vicinity of Oakland and points in West Virginia.

Rev. Samuel Stouffer, the newly elect Lutheran minister, preached a very able and interesting sermon at this place, on last Sunday.

A team belonging to Mr. Henry Schlossnagle broke loose from a hitching post and after running a half-mile or more came in contact with Mr. Adam Schneider's team which might have caused a bad accident were it not for Mr. Albert's presence of mind, who jumping from their sled and caught the runaway team just in time to prevent the accident.

Our public school is making the best progress this winter that it ever made in it history under the able management of Prof. J. C. Beahm and Miss Olia Mattingly.

Diesolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership between George W. Cover and William J. Cover was dissolved on the 22nd day of February, 1908, so far as relates to the said George W. Cover. All debts due to said partnership are to be paid and those due from the same discharged at Salt Block, in Garrett county, Md., where the business will be continued by the said William J. Cover as William J. Cover.

GEORGE W. COVER & SON.
Friendsville, Md., Feb. 26, 1908.

Church Services.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Preaching at Crellin next Sunday at 10.30 a. m.; and Underwood at 3 p. m. Cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Preaching at Elder Hill at 11 a. m., and at Deep Creek at 7.30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

SWANTON M. E. CIRCUIT.

In the absence of the Pastor I will hold services next Sunday as follows: Bray 10.30 a. m.; Dodge 3 p. m.; Thayerville 7 p. m.

Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

A. F. GEORGE.

Miss Annie Loewenstein entertained a number of friends at her home on Oak street on last Friday evening. An enjoyable time was reported.

HOME BURNED.

Dwelling of John A. Williams, Near Deer Park, Consumed Friday.

The dwelling of John A. Williams, located two miles from Deer Park, was burned to the ground on Friday night of last week. The family, consisting of Mr. Williams, his wife, daughter, three sons and his father-in-law, Luke Male, who is eighty-five years of age, and one of the pioneer settlers of Garrett county, was forced to tramp through the snow to the home of a neighbor for shelter.

Mr. Williams lost nearly all his household goods and clothing. He is a hard working farmer and much sympathy has been expressed for him.

Married.

POWERS—FLECKENSTINE—At a nuptial high mass celebrated Tuesday morning in St. Peter's Catholic church in Oakland, Miss Agnes Elizabeth Fleckenstine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fleckenstine, became the bride of Mr. Matthew Franklin Powers, of Bristol, Va. The couple had no attendants. Messrs. R. F. Bartlett and Edward Shaffer were ushers at the church. Immediately following the ceremony a repast was served at the bride's home to a few friends. The couple left here for Washington on an evening train, from which point they will go to their future home at Bristol.

$100 REWARD.

A reward of one hundred dollars will be paid by the County Commissioners of Garrett County for the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who burglarious broke open and entered various houses located at Mourtain Lake Park during the month of February, 1908.

JULIUS C. RENNINEER, State's Attorney.

HOYES.

A meeting of the directors of the Garrett County Telephone Co. was held at Hoyes last Friday and some very important business was transacted. The payment of a note of eight hundred dollars was very gratifying to the directors.

Joseph McRobie, of Oakland, attended the telephone meeting last Friday, and returned to his home Saturday.

Messrs. Willie Mattingly and James Wilburn just returned from Ohio, where they purchased a fine blooded two year old animal.

The sale of personal property of the late John Kitzmiller last Saturday was largely attended, and the majority of the property brought good value.

Miss Florence Dewitt, of Armstead, was calling on friends and relatives in Hoyes last Saturday.

Jacob Knox and wife, of McHenry, moved into our neighborhood quite recently and are now occupying a house of Wm. Callis'.

Miss Viola Durham and two other friends, of Barnum, W. Va., were guests of Misses Olia and Bernadette Mattingly last Saturday and Sunday.

James Willison, traveling salesman for J. C. Orrick of Cumberland, was in Hoyes Monday evening.

Rev. H. E. Friend and daughters, Misses Sudie and Sadie, are making an extended visit to relatives at Oakland, Mt. Lake, Keyser and other points.

Miss Pearl Bishoff left this place last week to visit her sister at Oakland. Before returning she will visit relatives and friends at Piedmont and Barnum.

Mrs. Emma Dewitt returned to her home last week after spending two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Friend, at Elder. Mr. and Mrs. Friend are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine boy at their home.

Constable W. A. Maffett passed through Hoyes one day last week.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

OWN A HOME.

No Matter where you live, we will build or buy you a home. You can pay for it in monthly payments, which will average less than rent. A positive guarantee, secured by first-class real estate, is given every subscriber. Every rent payer should send for our free booklet at once which fully explains the plan.

MUTUAL HOME UNION
33 Builder's Exchange Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
W. R. McCLANAHAN,
Piedmont, W. Va.
Agent for Western Md.

Revival at Swanton.

The revival an M. E. church, at Swanton is still in progress. Up to Monday night there had been twenty-seven conversions, several at the altar with quite an interest. This has already been a great meeting. God's spirit is being poured out upon the people and great good is being accomplished. To God be all the honor and glory.

G.

Financial Statement.

Report of the Receipts and Disbursements of the Corporation of Oakland, Maryland, from the 1st day of March, 1907, to the 29th day of February, 1908:

RECEIPTS.

Bal. in hands of Treasurer, as per last report	$ 884 18
G. W. Legge, bal. taxes 1904 and interest	68 28
Same, on account taxes 1905	256 26
Same, on account taxes 1906	805 51
D. M. Mason, on account taxes 1907, int., discount	2,339 55
Licenses	2,567 34
County Levy, 1907	800 00
Town Scales	245 80
Platform and lumber bills	94 11
Fines	7 00
Lumber	5 76
	$8,073 79

DISBURSEMENTS.

Old drafts 1904-06	$2,365 47
Interest paid on same	241 31
Bal. on chemical engine, 1905	216 67
Lights, wiring, &c	1,378 77
Street Commissioner	471 20
Police Protection	966 00
Election Expenses	11 00
Lumber	157 14
Weighmaster	137 02
Officers Town Council 1907	340 00
Streets, Road Machine &c	191 86
Brick for Crossings	193 03
Rent Fire Dept. and office	58 00
Painting and cleaning chem. engine	26 40
Printing	31 80
Cement wall at opera house	629 25
Collector and Atty's commissions	189 42
Police supplies	59 28
Pauper car fare	2 60
Platform over run at Mrs. Burke's	14 66
Collector assessments	20 00
Blacksmithing and repairing clocks	9 85
Other small items	9 50
Discount allowed taxpayers 1907	92 18	7,812 41
Balance on hand Mar. 1st, '08		$ 261 38

LIABILITIES.

Draft No. 300, First National (Kennedy)	$	750 00
City Hall lot drafts		900 00
Int. on same to Mar. 1st '08		169 50
Drafts Nos. 799 and 824		28 65
Total		$1,848 15

ASSETS.

Balance on hand Mar. 1st 1908	$ 261 38
Uncollected taxes 1905 due general fund	92 62
Uncollected taxes 1906 due general fund	642 31
Uncollected taxes 1907 due general	1,645 98
Platform bills	46 06
Real estate	2,500 00
Chemical engines and equipment	1,500 00	6,691 35
Assets over liabilities		$4,843 20

SINKING FUND.

Balance on hand as per last report	$ 975 78
Recd. from taxes 1904 and int.	30 32
Recd. from taxes 1905	113 88
Recd. from taxes 1906	357 96
Recd. from taxes 1907	998 92
Total	$2,476 86
Bond No. 10 paid by Treasurer	$ 500 00
Int. coupons paid by Treasurer	680 00 1,180 00
Balance Mar. 1, 1908	$1,296 86

ASSETS.

Uncollected taxes 1905 6 due this fund	$ 326 60
Uncollected taxes 1907 due this fund	731 56

Bonds Nos. 7, 8, 9, $500 each, due Jan'y 1, 1907 '08, not presented for payment.

Bonds outstanding $17,500.

HENRY W. M'COMAS, Mayor.

Test: J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JOHN KITZMILLER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 13th day of February 1908.

WILLIAM CALLIS,
W. J. KITZMILLER,
Executors.
Hoyes, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE.

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M. at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2. MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, and being the same land which was conveyed to Jeremiah J. McKenzie by Samuel Johnson and others by deed bearing date the 11th day of October, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 16, folio 311, etc. one of the Land Records of said Garrett county saving and excepting therefrom 10 acres and 80 perches conveyed by said McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated September 30th, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, said residue containing the quantity of THIRTY-NINE AND ONE-HALF ACRES. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books in the name of the said Jeremiah J. McKenzie.

No. 4. ALL THAT PORTION OF MILITARY LOT NUMBER FIVE HUNDRED AND FIVE, CONTAINING TEN AND ONE-HALF ACRES, it being the same land which was conveyed by Jeremiah J. McKenzie to Ella C. McKenzie by deed dated the 30th day of September, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 65, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and more particularly described therein as follows: Beginning for the same at the southeast corner of said lot and running thence North 4½ degrees East, 62 perches to a stake, thence North 85½ degrees West, 5 perches to a stake, thence South 37 degrees West, 74 perches to a pine stump, thence South 85½ degrees East, 45 perches to the beginning. Said land (minerals excepted) will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Ella C. McKenzie. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county.

No. 6. LOTS NUMBERS THREE, TWO, TWENTY AND NINETEEN as shown on the plat of Sarah Wright's land as recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland and being the same lots which were conveyed to Horace R. Hamilton by John B. Wright and others by deed dated the 14th day of February, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folio 181, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Horace R. Hamilton.

No. 7. MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND ONE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWO, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES EACH, being located in Election District No. 9 of Garrett county and described in a deed for the same to Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham, duly of record in the Land Records of Allegany county, Maryland. The said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the heirs of said Richard and Dr. Thomas Graham.

No. 9. PARTS OF MILITARY LOTS NUMBERS FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE, CONTAINING FORTY-TWO AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES, and being the same land which was conveyed by Mary Willison to Jacob P. McKenzie by deed dated the 11th day of September, 1902, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 42, folio 307, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the balance of taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1904 and the whole of the taxes for the year 1905 due and in arrear thereon as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Jacob P. McKenzie.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title, "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett County, Maryland, will on

FRIDAY,

the 6th day of March, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2. ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR AND ONE-QUARTER ACRES OF A TRACT OF LAND CALLED "SUGAR TREE FLAT," located in Election District No. 9 of said Garrett county, and standing on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of Henry Wolf. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1905 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Henry Wolf.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annun and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

E. A. WEIMER,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

Situate in Garrett County.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county wherein James E. Lish, et al., are plaintiffs, and Thompson Hoyle, et al., are defendants, the same being No. 1496 Equity of said Court, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, on

MONDAY,

The 9th Day of March, 1908,

at two o'clock p. m., all that piece or parcel of land situated, lying and being in District No. 8 in Garrett county, Maryland, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a stake standing at the bars or entrance through a line fence South 50½ degrees West, 28 perches from a large White Oak tree standing at the end of said fence and running thence with the old rail fence North 64 degrees and 30 minutes West, 36 rods and 22 links to corner of said fence, then with old fence South 76 degrees 15 minutes West, 13 rods and 12 links to corner of said fence, then leaving the fence to the left North 25 degrees 30 minutes West, 10 rods to a large rock marked "A," then South 80 degrees 25 min. West, 44 rods to a stake standing beside a rail fence then South 19 degrees 40 minutes West, 13 rods 6 links to a stake and stone pile beside an old fence, then with said fence South 88 degrees 30 minutes East, 18 rods 23 links to corner of said fence, then crossing old fence leaving it to the right South 8 degrees 10 minutes West, 45 rods and 22 links to a stake standing on the South side of an old rail fence, then with said fence North 84 degrees 25 minutes East, 36 reds to corner of rail fence, then with said fence North 52 degrees 45 minutes East, 63 rods and 14 links to the beginning, containing 25 4-10 acres, more or less.

The property is improved by a small house and outbuildings and good orchard.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash, ⅓ in 6 months and ⅓ in 12 months, or all cash at option of the purchaser. The credit portions to bear interest from day of sale, and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANDREW J. TEATS,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of August, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of February, 1908.

ANASTASIA TEATS,
Administratrix.
Oakland, Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator,
Swanton, Md.

Administratrix's Notice.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Md., deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JONAS TEATS,

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

CATHARINE TEATS,
Administratrix,
Friendsville, Md.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HANNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 16 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,

Successors to Charles A. Tower,

General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1908. NUMBER 2

DEMOCRATS ELECTED THE MAYOR, TWO COUNCILMEN

While Republicans Got One Conncilmen, Who Will Be Extremely Lonesome.

ELECTION WAS HOTLY CONTESTED

Mr. Truman West, the New Mayor, Will Have With Him Five of the Six Councilmen, Mr. E. G. Naylor Being the Only Republican Member of that Body.

Election day in Oakland last Monday, judging from the stir and hard work put in by the candidates for Mayor and Town Councilmen and their friends, resembled that of a contest involving the the future welfare of the nation more than it did the election of municipal officers for a community so small as this.

The two dominant parties held their conventions coincidently on last Thursday night, the Republicans meeting in the Townshend building on Alder street and the Democrats holding their convention in the opera house. Both conventions were well attended. At the former one hundred and thirty-five voters were present, while at the Democratic meeting but sixty-six took part.

The Republicans had a three corner fight on the nomination for Mayor, Messrs. D. M. Dixon, D. E. Bolden and F. G. Hyde being in the field. Mr. Dixon was nomiuated on the first ballot, leading both his opponents, although Mr. Bolden showed considerable strength, while Mr. Hyde's total vote numbered but a dozen.

The Councilmanic ticket was composed of Messrs. Scott T. Jones, Elsworth G. Naylor and Joseph E. Harned, these three gentlemen being the only ones resented as nominees.

In the Democratic convention a contest was also made for the nomination for Mayor between Messrs. Truman West and James D. Hamill. The former won the nomination by an overwhelming vote. The Councilmanic nominees were Messrs. J. M. Stanton, Charles Liller and Charles A. Deffinbaugh.

On Monday the election was held. Party lines were cast aside in many instances and the floating vote, which numbers sufficient to throw the election either way, was captured early in the contest by the Democrats and those who stood with them in the fight. The price obtained by this class of voters, it is alleged, ranged from the promise of a drink to something of a more tangible character. In any event the non-taxpayers had the deciding vote and exercised it.

The balloting resulted in the election of the Democratic candidate for Mayor, two Democratic Councilmen and one Republican member of the Council.

The vote in detail follows:

For Mayor, Truman West, Dem., 151; D. M. Dixon, Rep., 131.

For Councilmen, Republicans, Scott T. Jones, 130; Ellsworth G. Naylor, 134; Joseph E. Harned, 124. Democrats, J. M. Stanton, 179; Charles Liller, 133; Charles A. Deffinbaugh, 149.

Mr. E. G. Naylor, the only Republican elected, won out over Mr. Chas. Liller by one majority.

Funeral of Dessie D. Boyer.

To the Editor of The Republican:

On Saturday, February 29, there was a sad meeting of Garrett countians in San Francisco when from Halstead's undertaking parlors, on Fillmore street, one of its number, Desmond D. Boyer, was borne, covered with roses, amidst sorrowing friends, to his last resting place in Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

Mr. Boyer, as his eastern friends well know, was an exemplary young man who had been ailing for a number of years and his early death was not altogether unexpected. If the writer is correctly imformed his constitution was attacked by that slow and dread disease, consumption, shortly after he had spent sometime in Alaska in the quest of gold. Knowing that he was thus attacked, he has for several years lived the greater part of his time in Arizona, endeavoring to regain his health, where in Tucson on February 22, 1908, he departed this life, and his loyal and respected brother, W. E. Boyer, manager and vice president of the Byron Jackson Machine Works, brought his remains from Tucson to San Francisco and gave him an appropriate and impressive funeral service and then had him interred in one of the most beautiful cemeteries on this coast—there where such a beautiful life may peacefully await the Great Judgment Day.

E. E. ENLOW.

San Francisco, Cal., March 4, 1908.

A Rare Occurrence in Domestic Life.

There is a family in Garrett county who have 10 living children, six sons and four daughters, all now married. "The baby son," so called by the devoted by the devoted mother, Louis E. McComas Swauger, was suitably married two weeks ago to a young lady in Pennsylvania. He was about 21 years of ago. There are but few, if any such marriage incidents. The parents are Wm. H. Swauger and Martha Swauger. These two parents are both living, and only a few points above three score years in age. The father not quite 62, tho' he was a veteran soldier in the civil war, volunteering when he was in "legal infancy," surely is a basis for family pride and happiness.

Subscribe for the Republican.

MR. LLOYD LOWNDES TO RUN AGAIN.

Wants To Go To Congress From Sixth District.

WILL FIGHT PEARRE ONCE MORE.

Latter's Aspiration To Be Judge in Fourth District Sale To Be Opposed By Wellington—Mr. Hagner Will Carry Washington County.

Mr. Lloyd Lowndes Saturday formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth Maryland district, which was at one time represented by his father, the late Gov. Lloyd Lowndes.

Mr. Lowndes contested with Congressmen George A. Pearre two years ago in the Allegany Republican primaries, but lost. He had great odds against him, the fight marking his entry into politics against an old and seasoned general. At that time Mr. Lowndes stated that he would come into the contest again. In the meantime he succeeded in wresting the control of the Republican State Central committee and the county committee from Colonel Pearre. Mr. Lowndes named the delegates to the last Republican Convention.

Having the organization back of him, Mr. Lowndes is stronger than he was two years ago. The friends of Congressman Pearre claim that he has also strengthened his lines since a year ago. Mr. Lowndes is hopeful. He states that he is thoroughly in accord with Roosevelt policies. Mr. Horace P. Whitworth, chairman of the county committee; Mr. F. Brooke Whiting, chairman of the State Central Committee; Mr. Benjamin A. Richmond and Mr. Charles H. Holtzman will be among the leaders in the campaign of Mr. Lowndes. Mr. Lowndes has mailed 5,000 announcements of his candidacy to Republican voters in the county.

Mr. Lowndes recently became president of the Cumberland Savings Bank, in South Cumberland, and he has become actively identified with that prosperous manufacturing section. He sold his interest in the Second National Bank, of which he was vice-president, to his brother, W. Bladen Lowndes, who succeeded him as vice-president. Mr. Lowndes has acquired a prominent business identity. He is vice-president of the Real Estate and Security Company, which deals in real estate and conducts as insurance agency. Mr. Lowndes is also vice-president of the Daily News Company, which publishes the Daily News, the Republican paper there, owning a plant valued at $65,000. Mr. Lowndes in an extensive owner of real estate in Cumberland and is interested in many enterprises. Recently he removed his family to his farm at Rawlings, Allegany county, where he has about completed a commodious home costing $15,000. Mr. Lowndes is a breeder of fine horses and cattle at his farm, known as Blooming Fields, and he conducts an extensive dairy. His stock wins many first prizes at county fairs.

Mr. Alexander R. Hagner, of Hagerstown, who was at Annapolis last week for several days, stated that he would secure the delegation from Washington county for the Republican nomination for Congress; that the delegates would be pledged to him without contest. It is understood that Mr. Charles D. Wagaman, of Hagerstown, who two years ago had Congressional aspirations, has sidetracked them in the hope of receiving the Republican nomination for chief judge in the Fourth Judicial circuit of Maryland. The Democratic nominee will be Judge A. Hunter Boyd, incumbent, who is Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals. The election takes place in 1909. Congressman Pearre, who is said to have the judicial bee in his bonnet, has been advised by some of his friends to give up the idea of being a candidate. It is understood that ex-Senator Wellington insists that Colonel Pearre will not be a candidate for judge.

"Oh, the Villian!"

A low, contemptible sneak thief, who is barren of a soul and without a grain of charity in his heart, entered our chicken coop on Wednesday and appropriated to his own use three of our finest hens that were each laying an egg every day. To have to have our egg supply cut off right here in lent is a is a serious loss when eggs are 30 cents a dozen. Oh, the villian! Words cannot express our indignation.—The Williamsport Leader.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE MEASURE KILLED.

Lower House of the General Assembly Defeated it By a Vote of 56 to 43.

State House, Annapolis, March 11.—The local option measure, better known as the Anderson or State-wide Anti-Saloon League bill, was killed in the House today by a vote of 56 to 43. The bill was reported unfavorably to the House by the Temperance Committee and a motion to substitute the bill for the unfavorable report resulted in the loss of the motion by the vote above stated. The Garrett county delegation was divided on the issue, Mr. Myers voting to sustain the committee report and Mr. Green voting for the substitution of the bill.

Governor Crothers Tuesday signed the bill amending the liquor law for Garrett county. This law requires seven tax payers, each worth at least $2000 of taxable property to sign each application for a liquor license, save in Accident district, where twelve such subscribers are required.

The Garrett county local option bill, introduced by Delegate Green and having passed its first reading, has been recommitted to the House Temperance Committee for a further hearing.

The bill enlarging the powers of the Sheriff in appointing a deputy and for the employment of a cook, has passed the House.

No Excuse For Mistakes.

This is the way the editor of the Old Town (Me.) Enterprise bears up under the tribulations of newspaper life: "We apologize for all mistakes made in former issues and say they were inexcusable, as all an editor has to do is to hunt news and clean the rollers and set type, sweep the floor and pen short items and fold papers, and write wrappers, and make the paste, and mail the papers, and talk to visitors, and distribute type, and carry water, and saw wood, and read proofs, hunt the shears to write editorials, and dodge the bills, and dun delinquents, and take cussins from the whole force, and tell our subscribers that we must have money—we say that we've no business to make mistakes while attending to those little matters and getting our living on hopper-tail soup flavored with imagination, and wearing old shoes and no collar and a patch on our pants and obliged to turn a smiling countenance to the man who tells us our paper ain't worth a dollar anyhow, and that he could make a better one with his eyes shut."

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

A Lemon Social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will be held at Haydenhurst Saturday evening next, at 8 o'clock.

Among the cottages rented for the season we note the Snyder cottage to Mrs. Annan, of St. Louis, Mo.

Street Supervisor Echard has a force of hands putting down the main walk from the station to Felty's store building. This last section of about three hundred feet completes an eight foot walk from the station to the center of the Park, about one-fourth mile long.

We are pleased to annoence that Mr. C. W. Dunnington has again leased the Chautauqua Hotel. This hotel was very popular last year under Mr. Dunnington's management.

Mr. C. W. Hopkins, who spent part of the winter in Cincinnati, has been here for for about two weeks and is ready to rent or sell houses to all who may call on him.

Dr. B. Frank Laughlin is visiting his parents here. His wife is with her mother at Blaine, W. Va., who is critically ill.

We are sorry to lose from our community Dr. J. W. Laughlin and family, who will return to Deer Park. This change seems necessary on account of their large property interests in Deer Park. We shall miss them in our social and church life.

We understand that John D. Hayden will have charge of the Park electric light plant this season.

The ground is being cleared for the erection of a new postoffice building on the foundation of the one destroyed by fire last fall.

Mr. Chance has moved into the May cottage on K street, and Mr. Adam Long now occupies the lake house.

TO OPERATE IN GARRETT COUNTY

Western Maryland Coal Mining Co. Will Install Modern Plant.

The Western Maryland Coal Mining Company, which owns and controls 750 acres of coal land in the Potomac basin of the Georges Creek-Potomac region, in Garrett county near Westernport, has recently been incorporated in Allegany county, and the company, on whose land there outcrops several valuable veins of well known coal has arranged to develop this spring by installing thereon a modern mining plant. At a meeting held last week the following directors were elected: W. C. Devecmon, Lloyd Lowndes and J. S. Devecmon, of Cumberland; M. P. Gannon, of Westernport; and J. K. Wimbrough, of New York City. Mr. Wimbrough was elected president of the Company, and Mr. M. P. Gannon was elected secretary and treasurer.

THE DEATH RECORD.

JOHN W. THOMAS.

John W. Thomas was born near what is now Elk Garden nearly 73 years ago. He belonged to the old stock of Thomases. When a young man he engaged in the mercantile business at Hartmonsville, W. Va. About 35 years ago he married Hester Moon, daughter of the late Isaac Moon, of Bethlehem community. About 25 years ago he moved to the Moon farm, where he died March 5th, 1908. He leaves one sister, Mrs. J. R. Idleman, of Mt. Storm, W. Va., who is the mother of the Rev. E. P. Idleman, of Gormania, W. Va., and one brother, Silas Thomas who lives on the old Thomas' farm near Elk Garden, W. Va. He also leaves a widow and four children. The children are Mrs. Fannie Coughle, of Bethlehem community; Mrs. Arletta Beechy, of Bittinger; Mrs. May Kidwell, wife of Rev. Jonathan Kidwell, of near Pittsburg, Pa., and James at home. Mr. Thomas was known by most of the old settlers of Mineral and Garnt counties, W. Va., and Garrett county, Md. He was a member of the U. B. church. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Clary at his late home.

HAL SMOUSE.

Hal, the surviving twin son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Smouse, of Fairmont, died at the residence of Mr. H. A. Loraditch in Oakland Tuesday morning at an early hour, aged seventeen months. Mr. and Mrs. Smouse brought their child to Oakland on last Saturday in the hope that the change of air would be beneficial to its declining health, and it did improve to some extent, but a few hours preceding death the child suffered a relapse. The kindly sympathy of a host of friends in Oakland and elsewhere is extended the sorrowing couple. The funeral will take place from Mr. Loraditch's home this morning.

LEE LOWMAN KILLED AT CRELLIN MILL YESTERDAY

Band Saw Carriage Fouled and Ran Away, Crushing Victim's Skull.

LIVED BUT AN HOUR AFTERWARD

Unfortunate Young Man Married Less Than A Year—Portion of Mill Wrecked and Will Not Resume Operations for a Week or More.

Yesterday morning a few minutes prior to the starting of the lumbering mill of the Kendall Lumber Company at Crellin, one of those unfortunate and unforseen circumstances often attending the operation of machinery where numberless men are engaged, took place which exacted the toll of a human life, the victim in this instance being Lee Lowman, just in the prime of young manhood, happy in the love and affection of a devoted wife and the favorite among his fellow-wonkmen.

From what could be learned over the phone yesterday morning concerning the accident the following facts were gleaned:

Mr. Lowman was seated near the carriage on the band saw side of the mill when from some unknown cause, probably on account of a valve of the piston controlling the movement of the machine having sprung a leak, it started to move. Another workman, nearby seeing the danger Mr. Lowman was in and in the excitement of the moment jumped to the throttle with the intention of closing it, when he moved it in a contrary direction, throwing it wide open. The carriage, which is a mammoth piece of machinery constructed almost wholly of steel, under the impulse of the steam in the pistol jumped and striking the buffer, recoiled. In the recoil Mr. Lowman was struck in the head, fracturing his skull and producing death within an hour afterward.

The machinery on the mill was damaged to the extent of five hundred dollars as a result of the accident and that portion of the mill will be in enforced idleness for a week or ten days until repairs can be obtained.

Mr. Lowman was a native of Pennsylvania and has been with the Kendall company for some time. He has two brothers, Messrs. Arthur and Victor Lowman, the former superintendent of the Kendall interests at Kendall, and both residents of this county. He was married about a year ago to Miss Mary Fike, daughter of Marshall Fike, Esq., of near Blooming Rose, this county. His age was twenty-five years.

Arrangements for the funeral of the deceased are yet undetermined, but the interment will probably be made near the home of Mrs. Lowman in District No. 2.

DIXON & KELSO

PRICE CURRENT FOR GROCERIES

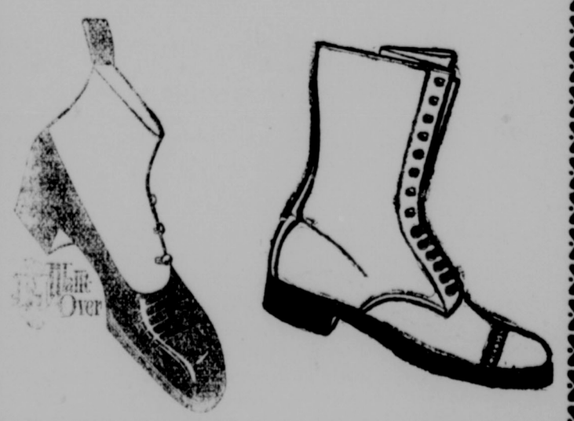
2 bars Laundry Soap,	05
2 cakes Toilet Soap,	05
Good roasted Coffee,	12½
California Hams,	10
Best Side Meat,	10
Small Hams,	12½
Large Hams,	12
Fancy large Florida Oranges,	25
Fancy large Lemons,	25
Fancy large Apples per bu,	1 00
Tomatoes per can,	08
Corn per can,	08
Granulated Sugar,	05½
Brown Sugar,	05
Leggetts 2 lb. Premier Oats,	10
Fish,	05
Best Winter Flour, Bag,	65
Best Spring Flour, Bag,	75
Navy Beans,	05
Lima Beans,	08
Hominy,	03

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST
It Costs No More.



WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price. bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

AMONG MARYLAND FARMERS.

Silage Preserved in a Stack—The Industrious and Thrifty Dunkards.

Westminister, Carroll County, in Western Maryland, is a thriving little city of three thousand people, set in the midst of a populous, thrifty farming community. The land is somewhat rolling, well adapted to a variety of crops and well farmed. Through here in the early summer of 1863 marched the Federal battalions on their way to the frightful carnage at Gettysburg, the turning point in the war and in the world's history. In front of the courthouse where we held our institute are two iron tablets commemorating the march and the camping ground where many a Northern boy slept before he lay down the next day at Gettysburg to the sleep that knows no waking. These things are pregnant with suggestion to the thoughtful, but to this generation, thank God, they are only history! "They have hung the trumpets on the wall and study war no more."

There is a large amount of sweet corn raised here for the canneries. The Messrs. Striver own several canning factories as well as farms. They are feeding between seven hundred and eight hundred steers this winter, largely from the refuse from these factories. This they have been doing for a number of years. When the corn is cut from the cobs the latter are broken up by running them through a spike machine; these, with the husks, are put in immense piles out in the open. They are spread in alternate layers, but with a large amount of the husks on the outside. At first the teams drive right on the pile, which is made convenient to the stable. After it gets too high a carrier is rigged and the stuff is elevated. All is thoroughly trodden down, and a pile perhaps one hundred feet long and some twenty feet across and twenty feet high is made. Will it not rot? One would naturally think so. To my surprise I found that about one foot on the outside was entirely rotten; inside of that it was as free from decay and as sweet as any silage I ever saw. Doubtless the large proportion of cobs lying so compactly helps to keep it. These men at first used silos, but they found that the proportion of loss in these large piles amounted to less than the interest on the cost of the silos. When fed it is cut down like cheese, so that there is a good admixture of cobs and husks. These cobs, of course, from such corn, contain a good amount of sugar, as well as a good bit of the chit of the corn. The cattle are fed all they will eat in two feeds daily, the freshing beginning in November.

There is no other coarse fodder used except peavine silage, the vines from the factories being used and put up in the same way in jutes. This helps in some way to balance up the ration, but the supply of the cutter is limited. A bunch of seventy that are being finished for export are getting in addition six pounds of cottonseed meal and four pounds of wheat bran a day. From that amount down to a couple of pounds to those just being started is fed. I was told that with growthy steers for the first two months there has been a gain of between sixty and seventy pounds a month an animal. After that the gain is much less, but a more thrifty, healthy lot of steers I have never seen.

Through this part of the state one finds a great number of farmers belonging to a sect called Dunkards. They do not believe in ornament in dress; the men wear straight-cut coats, broadbrim hats, with full beards. The women's dress is void of ornament or bright colors. They wear very unbecomming Shaker bonnets, They disapprove of secret organizations and of marrying outside of the sect. They have no especially educated ministry. One of their number is elected to preach, which he combines with his farming. Once a year they have a unique but withal impressive ceremony in commemoration of Christ washing his disciples' feet. This is held in their plain church. After appropriate exercises the men on one side of the house wash each other's feet, and the women, on their side, do likewise. They are Godfearing folk, but without pretence—thrifty and industrious. There are few better or more progressive farmers anywhere, and they are among the most regular and interested attendants at the institutes in their locality. In driving through the country one will note the well kept farms and tilled fields, the good, substantial houses and barns, sometimes sandwiched in between those that are the reverse in every respect. One man is prosperous, the other complaining of adverse conditions; yet the same sunshine and early and later rains fall on both—another evidence that surroundings do not make men prosperous. The right sort of a man always rises superior and makes his own conditions. Soon we come to the plain, unsteepled Dunkard church, but we knew before that the well kept farms were owned by Dunkards.

I am wondering, as I notice a tendency on their part to adhere less rigidly to the prescribed dress, and that "the old order changeth" and the external difference between them and "the world's people" becomes less apparent, whether this change will affect them disadvantageously in their farming. Personally, I think not. Broadmindedness, when it goes hand in hand with industry, never means retrogression.

It is not often one finds those who are eminently successful in two lines at the same time, yet I believe Miss Anna Brennan, of Baltimore, has accomplished this. She is one of the most successful teachers in the public schools of that city, and also has acquired more than a local reputation as a successful raiser of chickens. I heard her ask the question: "Which do you make the chief thing, school teaching or poultry keeping?" She replied, "neither. In the morning I get up at 5 o'clock, prepare my feed for the day, feed and water the fowls and clean the house. When it is time I go to school and put in my best time. My mother feeds the chickens at noon; at night I feed again and gather the eggs. Saturday forenoon I have a general cleaning up. The diversity of work makes each a help to the other."

Was much interested when I learned that Miss Brennan was keeping four hundred fowls on a two-acre city lot in the outskirts of Baltimore. I called at her home and found she had, from a start of three hens, built up her present flock—beautiful Plymouth Rocks, some of which had been prize winners. They were also good layers. She had cleared about $2 a hen from sales of eggs, cockerels and surplus hens, keeping none above two years. In seven years she has introduced only two male birds from outside. From her best laying, strongest hens she had selected vigorous cockerels to breed from, thus maintaining one type and superior laying qualities. The flock certainly showed no signs of deterioration. Her coops, or hen houses, are very primitive affairs, quite largely of her own building, with a small amount of masculine help for the heavier posts. The material was largely old packing box stuff. These were in the yard in the rear of the house, which lies next a vacant lot of two acres, which afforded a run and place to rear the young chicks. The freedom from disease and healthfulness of her flock in this confined space is due without doubt to the fact that every thing is kept scrupulously clean. The feed is purchased at retail and in small quantities. The whole grain consists largely of buckwheat and oats. These are soaked in hot water for eight or ten hours, when they swell to nearly double the natural size. She claims that fed in this way the hens relish it more, and she obtains more eggs than when fed dry and whole. The growth of the city has encroached on her vacant lot, therefore she will be obliged to move. She has secured seven acres on the Hartford Road, and expects to increase her flock to one thousand hens, and thus afford an assistant. It is apparent that the secret of her success under disadvantageous circumstances lies in her care and attention to details. "Little things are little things; out faithfulness in little things is great."

The Pennsylvania & Maryland Railroad, that runs from Pennsylvania on the north into Baltimore, carries more milk into the city than any other road running through a like stretch of country. There are many fine dairies in these rolling lands, and their owners are sending their milk to private dealers in Baltimore. There are no large firms handling milk in that city, such as Abbotts, of Philadelphia. They are receiving from 10 to 18 cents a gallon for it. Until recently Baltimore paid very little attention to the cleanliness of her milk supply. I have it on good authority that the rate of infant mortality in Washington, Baltimore and New York was some 250 in every 1,000. Washington in the South and New York in the North have been paying a good deal of attention in the past decade to the character of their milk, with the result that the death rate among infants in these two cities has decreased to about 125 a 1,000, while that of Baltimore has remained the same. Now Baltimore is taking hold of this, and, as often happens when starting out in an advanced line, they are inclined to go too far and to be impractical, and the producers are much exercised thereby. Mr. Connors, the director of the institutes in the state, proposes on February 17 to start a railroad car up this road for a month. This car is especially fitted up to accommodate the lecturers and seat fifty people. From the car lectures will be given for three days at a place. Jared Van Wageners, jr., of New York, will take up the dairy subject from the standpoint of a practical, progressive dairyman. Dr. August Stabler, of Sandy Springs, Md., a farmer as well as a physician and the president of the Board of Health in his locality, will give a series of lectures on cleanliness, bacteria and the effect of impure milk on the health of a community. Surely this is practical work and ought to be productive of much good both to the producer and consumer. — Edward Van Alstine in New York Tribune.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF ALAMO BATTLE

Tragic Battle in Which a Number Of Famous Frontiersmen Yielded Up Their Lives.

San Antonio, Tex., March 6.—Today is the anniversary of one of the greatest battles in the history of America—the final scene in the tragedy of the Alamo, when David Crockett, William Travis and James Bowie with their few fearless followers, yielded up their lives. It was seventy-two years ago, on March 6, 1836, that these heroes wrote their names in blood on their country's roll of honor in letters that time and change will never dim.

Interest in today's anniversary is heightened by the warfare that is being waged over the custody of the historic old church building and which recently led Hiss Adina de Zavala, leader of one of the factions of the Daughters of the Texas Republic to maintain a siege of three days and nights in this cradle of Texas liberty.

The Alamo still stands pretty much the same in appearance as it was seventy-two years ago, or a hundred years before that. From time to time movements have been set on foot to make some special use of it, with a view of making it a national memorial, and there have been several attempts by "enterprising" persons to get hold of it, turn it to some sort of money making purpose; but these have all been defeated. The latest is a tentative proposition to construct a handsome park about the historic spot with a tourists' hotel. In every one of these efforts to profane what is now a sacred spot patriotic women have been instrumental in defeating the vandalism.

Now the patriotic women are fighting among themselves, and the end of the battle is not yet in sight.

The Alamo is now in the hands of W. C. Day, state superintendent of buildings and grounds, who will hold it until a Texas court decides which of the factions of the Daughters of the Republic is to manage it.

The fight for the possession of the building began about two years ago, when the Legislature appropriated $75,000 to repay Mrs. Clara Driscoll-Sevier. Just preceding the session of this legislature a portion of the old Alamo structure was threatened with destruction and Mrs. Sevier advanced a part of her fortune to save it.

At that time Mrs. Sevier was regarded as the leading spirit in the councils of the Daughters of the Republic. In appropriating the money the state became the owner of the building and Alamo property, although the custody thereof was to remain in the hands of the Daughters of the Republic. Then came a split in the organization.

Both factions had keys to the doors of the old building. At nightfall, on February 10, Miss de Zavala slipped within the walls and sent out her declaration of war.

Telephone and electric light wires leading into the building were cut, and the first night in the building she spent in darkness, without food or water. The following day her supporters came with food, which was passed to her through a small opening in a door.

And so she maintained a siege of three days and three nights. Then she surrendered and turned the Alamo over to the state.

The siege of the Alamo seventy-two years ago began on February 23, 1836, when the Mexican general Santa Ana, surrounded the old church with an overpowering force and began a cannonade.

Everyone in the Alamo realized the defense could have but one end. Yet none would yield. They knew what mercy they might expect from Santa Ana. At last, on March 6, the cannon tore a breach in the walls and the Mexicans rushed in. Worn out as they were with fatigue, starvation and constant fighting, the Americans twice drove back their assilants, with heavy losses. But at the third charge the Mexicans, by sheer weight of numbers, gained a foothold inside the inclosure. There was no surrender. Every American fought like a hero, knowing how hopeless was the battle. All fell fighting, except five, who were overpowered and captured. These were butchered by Santa Ana in cold blood. Women as well as men were slain. Some reports say that three women and two babies survived the slaughter. Others that one baby was left aliye.

In less than a month afterward the battle cry of the Texas, "Remember the Alamo,' rang out as General Sam Houston took an awful revenge at San Jacinto. The Mexicans were routed with terrible loss and Santa Ana captured.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Subscribe for the Republican.

OPENING OF FIRST HUDSON TUNNEL.

Big Problems Overcome By Engineers in Building Subaqueous Tubes.

With the opening to travel last week of the first of the Hudson River tunnels, after a history of discouragements and delays without a parallel, a new transit era began in New York city. Though of particular interest to the thousands of people who travel between Manhattan Island and the neighboring New Jersey cities, it is also of more than ordinary interest to engineers. The tunnel under the Harlem River and the one under the harbor to Brooklyn have been in operation some time, but the new Morton street route has a special interest.

This subaqueous tunnel is part of an extensive system of passenger subways and tunnels on both sides of the Hudson River, with approximately eighteen miles of single tube, having connections with the Pennsylvania, Erie and Lackawanna stations on the west bank of the Hudson and reaching northward in this city to 33d street and Sixth avenue. The system includes not only the twin river tunnels at Morton street, but also another pair of single track tunnels extending from the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City to a large new terminal building at Cortlandt and Church streets, in the downtown section of the city.

In November, 1874, work was started on the Morton street tunnels. These plans were laid down by DeWitt C. Haskins, who was president and manager of the Hudson Tunnel Railroad Company. It was his plan to build a double track brick tunnel, but later he decided on two tubes. A brick shaft thirty feet in inside diameter was sunk on the New Jersey side and an opening cut through it to start the tunnel. At once many difficulties were encountered, and it was found that the sinking of the shaft had so disturbed the surrounding ground that it was impossible to start the full tunnel section at the shaft. Then it was decided to start a six-foot tube, which was enlarged in funnel shape as it advanced, ending in the full section, about nineteen feet in diameter, in a distance of thirty feet. From this point the two separate tunnels were started. Another great difficulty was in the use of the compressed air, little being known about it for this work at that time.

The method of tunnelling consisted in advancing the heading without any protection against caving except the air pressure against the wall of silt. The lining was composed at first entirely of brick, but so much difficulty was found in confining the air that Captain John F. Anderson suggested the use of flanged iron plates. Their purpose was to hold the air pressure until the brick lining could be built, and since their thickness was only one-fourth inch they were not relied upon except for the temporary construction purpose.

An improvement upon the unprotected heading method of driving the tubes was put into operation in 1880. This was the pilot system worked out by Captain Anderson, at that time superintendent of construction of the tunnel. This pilot consisted of a tube from 50 to 60 feet long, 6 feet in diameter, the forward end of which projected some feet into the silt in advance of the heading, while the rear end was held centrally in the completed position of the tunnel. It was made of interchangeable flange plates, the rear ones being advanced as the work went on. By this device it was possible to maintain the grade of the tunnel.

On July 21, 1880, there was a serious blow-out and twenty laborers were drowned. Two years later work was stopped because of financial difficulties. At that time about two thousand feet of the north tube on the New Jersey side had been finished, six hundred feet of the south tube on the same side of the river and about two hundred feet of the north tube on the New York side. For seven years the work stood idle, and then in August, 1889, S. Pearson & Sons, of England, took the contract, with Sir John Gowler and Sir Benjamin Baker as consulting engineers. The new builders substituted heavy cast iron flange plates for the masonary lining and discarded the pilot system, using the shield method instead. Lack of funds once more caused a delay in the building of the tunnel.

The Hudson Companies, with Charles M. Jacobs as chief engineer, took up the work in 1902 and carried it through. All the shield work put in by the English engineers had to be remodelled extensively, for much of the distance the shield was pushed through the silt without any excavation. The depth of the bottom of the tunnel below the surface of the Hudson River varies from sixty to ninety feet, while the distance from the bed of the river to the roof ranges from fifteen to forty feet.

The north tube was pierced on March 11, 1904. Wonderfully rapid work was done on the south tube, as much as sixty two feet being done in twenty-four hours and three hundred and forty-eight feet in a single week. When the rock was reached near the New York shore great difficulty was met. Clay was dumped into the river over the tunnels to act as a blanket, and successful use was also made of the scheme of heating the silt face of heading with torches to dry it out and bake it, so as to enable drilling and blasting to go on in the rock projecting into the lower part of the section.

The south tunnel is smaller in diameter than its twin, as its size was not fixed by an existing shield. The former is 15 feet 3 inches in diameter inside the lining. The south tunnel was "holed" through on September 30, 1905. Its entire length of about five thousand one hundred feet was excavated in three hundred and thirty-four actual working days. From the short time that the tubes have been in operation it has already been proven that ventilation is considerably better than in the city. The tubes are separated and the movement of trains in either compartment acts like a series of pistons in either direction. Thus a steady forward current of air is produced. Additional ventilation will be furnished by fans at several points of the system.

Subscribe for The Republican.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

Polly's Ruse.

A Washington Story

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1907, by Frank H. Sweet.

ONE blustering spring day in 1781 three young men were the only passengers in the northbound mail stage which ran three times a week between New York and Boston. Could Caleb, the jolly driver, have known the business of each of the travelers he would have had interesting gossip indeed for the people along his route.

The straitlaced appearance, spectacles and bookish air of the tallest of the trio marked him a parson. The second, whose hair was fiery red, appeared like some merchant's apprentice. Such might also be the third, though his clothing was homespun and his manner more like that of a country youth.

This last passenger during the first part of the journey through Connecticut remained inside the coach with the others. But after leaving Hartford he sat outside with the good natured driver, who was quite ready to reply to questions about the country.

The two inside threw off their reserve when the countrified looking youth forsook their company.

"My glasses hurt my eyes," said the seeming preacher, removing his spectacles. "Now that the bumpkin has left us you can tell me your errand. I was astounded to see you get aboard at New York, Crane."

"He whom you are pleased to call the 'bumpkin,' my sagacious friend," said the red haired Crane, "is none other than the special express of Mr. Washington with a message from headquarters."

"Surely you are jesting!" said the clerical looking man.

"But I am not," rejoined Crane. "Yesterday this precious rascal had a long conversation with his chief in his marquee and then prepared for the journey. I was ordered to follow this fellow and if possible learn his mission. Follow him I will, therefore, if it takes me a thousand leagues."

"I do not envy you your task," said the other, rubbing his eyes. "I was never made for this sort of business, but you were. I was very comfortable in camp when I received orders to deliver a letter in Boston."

Meantime Caleb, the driver, had given his agreeable questioner much information, and the two were fast friends when Springfield was reached, where Caleb was to stay till next day.

Caleb's off leader needed shoeing. The blacksmith shop was across the ferry on the west bank of the great river. Thus Caleb could say truthfully, "My good sir, no trouble at all," when his new acquaintance asked the way to the old Boatman's tavern, where lived young Mistress Polly Day, whom the courier said he wished to see.

In less time than it takes to tell it Washington's young subaltern had delivered into Miss Polly's shapely little hands the precious packet bearing the private seal of the commander in chief of the Continental army. This letter was not unexpected by Polly. Indeed, her brother, commonly called "Captain John," on leaving his home for Boston a few days earlier had explained at much length what was to be done in case such a package should be delivered to her.

"SURELY YOU ARE JESTING!" SAID THE CLERICAL LOOKING MAN.

"Any message the general may wish to send me," said Captain John, "he will embody in a letter written to you, Polly. I have told him how patriotic you are, and he is willing to trust much to your sagacity. You must find some safe means of getting the message quickly to me. Remember to send me the whole of the letter the general sends you. On that portion of it which is left white a secret message for me will be written in a peculiar ink, visible only when brushed over with a certain liquid."

"What liquid?" said Polly, who had her share of curiosity.

"Never mind, Polly. I have a vial of it. You should write me a good sisterly letter. Send the more important message in some safe hiding place or by some trusty hand to which you can casually allude. But make the reference so slight that it cannot be easily discovered if your letter should chance to fall into the enemy's hands. Address it to Uncle James Daggett's inn, Market square, Boston."

With that Captain John disappeared.

Washington's messenger, having partaken of some of the sparkling cider and incomparable gingerbread with which Polly's larder was always supplied, made his bow and departed to cross the river and return to his commander.

Then Polly fairly flew to her little room, where she read with eagerness the following letter:

Newburg, N. York, 24 March, 1781.

To Mistress P. Day:

In behalf of the Command of which yr. Brother Capt. Day is an esteemed Member, I beg to express the pleasure his Company has found in the frequent evidence of your Loyalty and Handiwork which have been sent to us. Hardly less than the warm blankets and the hose furnished by you and your Thoughtful Friends, your own most savory loaves of Gingerbread are worthy of special mention. Permit me to remark that those who aid in making the lot of my soldiers happier in their camp-life are conferring a special favor upon Yr. Most Obt. Hble. Servt., G. WASHINGTON, Com'ding.

At this time two strangers, one elderly, the other middle aged, were guests at the old river tavern where Polly lived with her Aunt Nancy.

When Washington's messenger arrived, they had been two weeks under Aunt Nancy's hospitable roof. They had announced an intention to go to Boston by the following morning's coach, and Polly's first thought was to ask one of them to carry her brother's message.

But the more she thought of it the more she distrusted the austere strangers.

"No, no," she said to herself, "it would not be safe. But I see Caleb's roan horse at the blacksmith's. I will get him to carry my little box of gingerbread to John in Boston."

She started through the garden gate, and there she met in the narrow path the elder of the two guests of the tavern.

"Mistress Polly," he said quickly, "I have sadly torn the sleeve of my topcoat. If I might make bold to ask your service, will you mend it for me before I go?"

"Certainly, good sir," she replied. "I shall be glad to do so as soon as I return from an errand to the blacksmith shop." And on she went.

"Caleb," she said with almost deference as if she were talking to Washington himself, "I want to send a box of gingerbread to my brother John in Boston by tomorrow's stage. If he cannot be found at Uncle James Daggett's inn on Market square, you may learn there where he is. You must put it into his hands yourself, remember."

Caleb gladly consented, and after a few minutes' chat Polly tripped back across the field.

His eyes were not the only pair that watched her as she went. Their entire conversation had been overheard by a young man with red hair who had come by the last stage from New York.

"Oh, if I only had more time to think what is best to be done!" thought poor Polly as she sat down to write to her brother.

Her face reflected the gravity of her thoughts as she fulfilled her promise of mending the torn topcoat in the twilight that evening. Both of the two strange guests were present, and so was Aunt Nancy. For some moments the elder guest watched her deft fingers in silence. Then, fixing his eyes upon her face, he said quietly:

"I hope the young man who came today brought you no bad tidings?"

"Oh, none at all!" said Polly quietly.

"I will tell you why I asked," he went on after a moment's pause. "Tonight from where I sit I have twice seen a young man about the same age of the one who called today approach the rear of the house as if looking for some one. Does he look for you?"

Polly started perceptibly. A response was on her lips when—crash! down came an earthen bowl in which a plant was blooming. It had been knocked from some upper window, and its fragments scattered close to the doorstep in the hard, smooth garden walk.

"Polly Day! Who's in your room?" cried Aunt Nancy.

The older guest started up the stairway and reached the upper landing just in time to see a slender young man half run, half slide, down the long sloping rear roof.

After the premises had been thoroughly examined and the still excited old lady had been led back to her seat Polly held up a small, square parcel which the intruder had dropped as he sprang from the roof.

"See!" said Polly, holding up the package. "The man only tried to get the box of gingerbread that I had all ready to send to Brother John by tomorrow's coach. Poor man! Perhaps he was hungry."

Caleb called bright and early the next day for his two passengers and the parcel. The neat little package for Captain John Day was stored carefully away in the leather stage box upon which the driver sat. The red headed man sat by Caleb on the box.

"Major, what think you of the outside passenger?" said the younger of the two guests.

"I did not o[illegible]

"He is Crane[illegible]

"What? C[illegible] are deceived[illegible] stand."

"What do y[illegible]

"It was he who [illegible] Polly's gingerbread."

* * * * * * * *

When Captain John Day received word from his uncle that a man with a parcel awaited him at the inn in Market square, Boston, he lost no time in appearing.

The face of Caleb was a rueful one as he handed the captain his sister's package. He had had, he said, a red headed young man on the box seat with him as far as Worcester, and then his passenger had unexpectedly departed. What had become of him he did not know. But after Worcester was passed he had discovered that the box of gingerbread had been tampered with.

Captain Day merely thanked Caleb for his pains and took the box.

He found within the torn wrappings only a few crumbs of gingerbread, but there were two written messages. One was scrawled on the torn wrapper of the box itself, and the other was Polly's letter, but there was no sign of any communication from General Washington.

"ZOUNDS! JAMES, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THAT?"

The scrawled note on the wrapping paper bore neither date nor signature and read as follows:

The Exigencies of War demanded that I should open your precious Box; and the cravings of Appetite constrained me to eat up the Uncommonly good Gingerbread baked by your most Charming sister, Mistress Polly. The least I can do is to send you her letter, since there is nothing in it I can use!

The idea of my taking several days' Journey into the Interior simply to learn the information that Mr. Washington had written a Note of thanks to a girl! But he was right about the Virtues of the Gingerbread! Never was there better! A thousand Thanks! A thousand Pardons! And Farewell!

Polly's letter was mainly a diary of small events at the tavern since her brother's departure. There was much unimportant information about the state of Aunt Nancy's health, and then Polly said:

There must be much Want in the country about, for a poor young man, half starved, no doubt, tried vainly last night to steal my box of Gingerbread, made for you. There have been two fine Gentlemen staying at the tavern, and that reminds me that you will have Pleasure in learning that your little sister is improving much in the Art of Needlework. I wish that you might see the nice Bit of Sewing that I had the Honour of doing upon the Top Coat of the Elder of these Two Gentlemen, who have both gone to Boston by this stage. It was in the Sleeve of his Top Coat, near the Shoulder; and he declared when it was Done that it was impossible to discern where the Rent had been.

If you should chance to meet this Gentleman, I trust that you will examine this piece of my Handiwork; and do not fail to send me by the Hand of Caleb any article of Apparel that you may wish me to mend against your Return.

Nothing in this innocent note had excited the smallest suspicion on the part of the wary spy. But when Captain John Day read it he made haste to ascertain where the two gentlemen were.

After a refreshing night's sleep and a hearty breakfast at the inn the two gentlemen, the major and his companion, prepared to stroll on Boston Common. As the weather was cold, the younger of the two, called James, brought down their topcoats.

His comrade, the major, unfolding his, uttered an exclamation of surprise and anger.

"Zounds! James, what do you think of that?" he said, pointing to a slit, evidently made by a sharp knife, in the topcoat near the shoulder.

The young man examined it closely. "I should say," said he, "that you had been completely outwitted and doubtlessly made a convenience of by the little maid at the tavern in Springfield. See! Here she sewed the rent you had in the garment, and the cut of this knife goes straight across it!"

"The minx had concealed some message in the sleeve!" said the other. "Her brother, the rebel captain, has been at this house."

"Without doubt, and his majesty's officer has been made the emissary of the rebel commander!"

Polly soon received from Newport a letter from her brother John containing these words:

Your Gingerbread, which I doubt not was very Good, never arrived. Only by the kindness of the Enemy's spy did your letter reach me at all. Your plan of sewing the General's message to me into the very clothing of a British officer in disguise and on parole was indeed a most Ingenious one. I managed to secure the Paper without other trouble than cutting the cloth. Your woman's Wit, I verily believe, did save your Brother's Life.

A small sealed packet, addressed "Mistress P. Day, Boatman's Tav at the Ferry, West Springfi Masstts.," arrived about a month later from New York. It contained a quaintly engraved locket bearing a miniature portrait of the donor, George Washington. The message with it read simply:

In token of the Commander's appreciation of a valuable Service, faithfully and successfully performed.

Happiness Is Not Dependent On Wealth.

By BRAND WHITLOCK, Mayor of Toledo, O., Reformer and Novelist.

IF A RICH MAN IS HAPPY, IT IS IN SPITE OF HIS RICHES, AND IF A POOR MAN IS HAPPY IT IS IN SPITE OF HIS POVERTY. I SUPPOSE THAT REAL HAPPINESS, IF THERE IS SUCH A THING, COMES FROM THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF HAVING A COMPLETE LIFE.

A great many people do not live at all; they merely move about like AUTOMATIC CORPSES. By that I mean that they have NO FUNDAMENTAL CONCEPTION OF LIFE—no conception of their relation to other people or to humanity as a whole.

Many persons miss life because they lead purely sensuous, not necessarily sensual, existences.

Of course the world is TOO OLD AND PERHAPS TOO WEARY and altogether too sophisticated for that happiness that might be supposed to come from a purely NATURAL existence, such as children live. We are altogether too self conscious for that.

TO ONE WHOSE EYES HAVE BEEN OPENED, TO ONE WHO HAS BECOME CONSCIOUS OF THE INEQUALITY AND EVEN ANARCHY OF PRESENT DAY CONDITIONS, HAPPINESS IS DIFFICULT, IF NOT IMPOSSIBLE, BECAUSE OF THE REFLECTION THAT THERE ARE MILLIONS OF OTHER SOULS IN THE WORLD JUST LIKE HIMSELF WHO CANNOT BE HAPPY. WE CANNOT HAVE LIFE OURSELVES AS LONG AS WE DENY LIFE TO OTHERS.

I presume that for a man to be really happy it would be necessary for him to bring himself into correct relations with those in the world about him. FEW PEOPLE HAVE THE COURAGE TO DO THIS. Tolstoi has tried it.

Co-operation Needed In Life Insurance.

By Ex-President CLEVELAND, Chairman of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

THE perils and trials that have overtaken life insurance and the AFFLICTIONS THAT STILL THREATEN IT not only admonish to more careful and scrupulous management, but they teach lessons that cannot be neglected without disregard of common worldly wisdom. Life insurance companies not accused of wrongdoing, but caught in the storm of VIRULENT AND INDISCRIMINATE ATTACK, have, as well as the guilty, failed to find friends in quarters where they should have found them, and their policy holders, who should have been their ALLIES AND DEFENDERS, have by thousands been quite willing to join the ranks of their enemies.

Unfortunately the business phase of life insurance has not been as universally understood as its SENTIMENTAL features. When the time came for the arraignment of life insurance before the people they saw stupendous lists of figures showing receipts and assets so ENORMOUS as to stagger their comprehension of legitimate accumulation.

ANOTHER THING WHICH, IT SEEMS TO ME, HAS BEEN ESPECIALLY SHOWN TO BE OF VERY GREAT IMPORTANCE TO LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IS THE CULTIVATION OF A CLOSER AND MORE INTIMATE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THEM AND THEIR POLICY HOLDERS. WITH FAIRNESS AND LIBERALITY ON THE PART OF THE COMPANIES AND AN EXACT UNDERSTANDING OF WHAT THE POLICIES MEAN ON THE PART OF THE ASSURED THEY OUGHT TO BE FRIENDS, WITH A MUTUAL INTEREST IN EVERYTHING THAT AFFECTS THE RIGHTS AND FAIR TREATMENT OF THE COMPANY.

This condition cannot exist if contracts of insurance are MISLEADING AND DISAPPOINTING, if solicitors of insurance are allowed to roam about the country misrepresenting the advantageous terms they are authorized to offer, if dividends and other reasonably anticipated beneficial incidents are not forthcoming or if policy holders are allowed to remain in SLOTHFUL INDIFFERENCE to the fact that unfairness to their companies is unfairness to them and that the unjust taking of money by legislation or otherwise from the funds which are held by their companies IN TRUST for them cannot be regarded otherwise than as a wrongful and unjust diminution of their INDIVIDUAL savings or possessions.

Difference Between American And European Banking.

By LESLIE M. SHAW, Former Secretary of the Treasury.

SO much has been said in favor of A LARGE CENTRAL BANK patterned after the Bank of England, the Imperial bank of Germany or the Bank of France that I am constrained to submit some observations with reference to such a plan.

These institutions DISCOUNT COMMERCIAL PAPER and issue their notes thereon. This commercial paper usually and well nigh always consists of drafts drawn against actual values by venders and accepted by vendees, to which is added the indorsement of one or more banks. Where in the United States can such commercial paper be obtained?

THE UNITED STATES IS NOT ONLY GREAT IN AREA AND IN RESOURCES, BUT ITS INDUSTRIES ARE DIVERSIFIED TO SUCH AN EXTENT THAT CURRENT BANKABLE PAPER IN ONE LOCALITY IS FREQUENTLY UNACCEPTABLE IN ANOTHER.

In New York city the best known BANKABLE PAPER is collateral notes secured by the hypothecation of well selected stock exchange securities. In some localities CATTLE PAPER is the only prime paper; in other localities grain. In other places bills of lading are current and considered PRIME. What help need a bank in the central west expect from a central bank authorized to issue its notes against commercial paper such as is acceptable by the central banks of Europe?

GAS PLANT OPERATION.

Lucien H. Tyng Compares Public and Private Ownership.

Lucien H. Tyng contributed to the August issue of Moody's Magazine a strong article on "Private versus Public Operation of Gas Companies," from which we take the following:

"Making money out of a gas plant is not like picking gold eagles out of the street, and a franchise to run the gas business in a community is no gold mine. It may be developed into a source of great profit, but only in conjunction with capital and business ability, especially the latter, which if not employed in the particular gas business in question might be securing greater returns in some other field.

"There is no more logic in the belief that the surplus earnings of a successful gas company over a certain percentage on the investment should go to the municipality than that a wholesale grocer should refund to his customer all profits over 6 per cent, say, on the capitalization of his company. The success of the gas company comes from the use of proper judgment, energy and business methods in the use and risk of capital invested, just as in any other business.

"That often the gas business is apparently a natural monopoly in a given community does not disprove the foregoing reasoning. The gas companies that are making the most money today are not those that are taking advantage of their franchise rights to exact high rates. They are the ones who by their own effort in educating the people are so increasing the per capita consumption of gas as to make a lower rate a business possibility and by their intelligent attention to operating cost and investment of large amounts of new capital when needed are able to reduce the cost of making gas sufficiently to secure a greater total profit out of selling a large amount of gas at a low rate than was before received when rates were higher and business less.

"But it is only by the most aggressive and intelligent business methods that a gas company can hope to succeed under such conditions. The ability to handle the business in this way is something that a municipality cannot buy at a salary. The opportunities in other lines of business are too great to those with the capacity that enables them to develop the highest earning power out of a gas company at a low margin of profit for the product."

PUBLIC BUSINESS NEGLECTED

No Private Enterprises Could Have Been So Badly Managed Without Collapse.

It is a stern but not a pleasant duty to call occasional attention to the way events continue to stultify the claims of the municipal ownership advocates that the public does its own business as well as or better than the individual does his.

Take three enterprises of present moment. No private individual or corporation constrained by a profit making purpose and upholstered by the taxing power would make such crazy and corrupt contracts for a building as those which investigation shows the state of Pennsylvania made for the Harrisburg capitol. No private enterprise would have so little to show for six years of work on a simple engineering problem as the municipality has in the Manhattan bridge. No individual able to keep out of the bankruptcy courts and the insane asylum would have spent, as Father Knickerbocker has spent, $7,000,000 for a hall of records, taken seven years to build it and then found that it would not hold his records.

The huge debt of the metropolis, its narrow borrowing power, the condition of its streets, docks and parks and the confusion of its tax system, all are explained and illuminated by these contemporary incidents.—Editorial in New York Mail and Express.

There Was a Reason.

Some of the forms of graft practiced in certain Indiana cities which have gone into the municipal ownership business may be peculiar to those towns. In one of them, which owns and runs its waterworks system, as Rochester does, the city waterworks were insured for $32,000. A cement water tank carried $26,000 insurance, though it could not be fired if a thousand incendiaries went to work at it. It happened that in that town one of the influential officials was agent for a fire insurance company which had "risks" on the water tank and other properties.—Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle.

Familiar Story From Portsmouth, O.

Portsmouth, O., was among the first to install its own electric light plant, which it operated until a street railway system was installed. At that time a contract was made with the street railway company by the terms of which it took charge of the lighting plant and furnished light to the city for a specified sum. This contract continued in force until about three years ago, when the practically worn-out and out of date equipment was sold to the street railway company because the city was unwilling to expend the money necessary properly to re-equip the plant.

In Chehalis, Wash.

According to the mayor of Chehalis, Wash., "the city owns the plant, which was leased some time ago to a private party. That party now owns nearly all the machinery connected with the plant. The city at the time it operated the plant did not make a financial success for the reason that the city was at that time very small and in dishonest hands, so the story goes."

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1908.

ONLY fifteen more working days left for our law-makers at Annapolis. Will they work, or will they continue to shirk?

THE Maryland Legislature, with its overwhelming Democratic majority, has legislated no good laws on to the statute books nor has it legislated any bad ones off. The session has been a farce from the start and indications point to the fact that it will stay in the rut unto the end.

HON. HENRY G. DAVIS, West Virginia's old-young democratic politician, may become a candidate for the democratic nomination for the governorship. He don't deny he is a candidate, and says he's considering it. Mr. Davis is a strong man, notwithstanding his age, and there's no telling what he might do if made the nominee of his party.

THE introduction of natural gas in Oakland contemplated by the West Virginia and Maryland Gas Company, should the bill now pending in the Legislature giving the corporation the right to condemn a right of way for its pipe line be favorably acted upon, will mean much for the town. Gas is the cheapest illuminant for all purposes now extant; as a fuel it stands far ahead of coal in point of economy as well as cleanliness; its introduction into Oakland will make it possible to establish industries that will employ every person, male and female, now residing here who desires work.

It has been reported and generally accredited that there exists in Oakland some opposition to the gas measure, but why, on one seems able to explain. We have no competing gas light companies in this section of the country, nor is there a probability of any being established, hence the accredited opposition to the measure is indeed far-fatched and the seal of disapproval should be stamped upon it by those of our residents who place the interests of the community ahead of selfish narrow-mindedness.

GOING AHEAD AS IF MARYLAND WERE NOW A ONE-PARTY STATE.

If the disfranchising amendment had received endorsement at the polls, had run the gauntlet of the United States Supreme Court, and Maryland were firmly established as a one-party State, with the Democratic party seated firmly in the saddle, we could understand readily enough the apparent determination at Annapolis to create, under the appearance of a good-roads commission, a political machine compared with which those that have gone before were but weak and futile instruments. Having the State under absolute control, the organization might do pretty much as it pleased without fear of overthrow. But the disfranchising amendment is not a law, and many Democrats—many leading Democrats—are waiting to see what the party under its new leadership proposes to do, what sort of rule it intends to set up, before they use their votes to commit the political destinies of the State to one party. It is bad policy to get anxious for spoils that appetite is not restrained, even though indulgence means danger.

It requires little knowledge of good-roads building in this country to learn that it has been a source of prolific waste. Millions upon millions of dollars have been expended with insignificant results—the main trouble being that politicians directed the expenditure of the funds. They steal some money, but the amount is small as compared with that which they waste and fritter away. There is no other public work in which so many opportunities for grafting and for shirking responsibilities exist. A contractor with a political "pull," overseers and foremen appointed for ability to hustle at election time instead of for their knowledge of road-building, can make money fly much faster than dirt.

And to make the prospect of the Benson bill with its paid commission and subordinate officials, look still more disconcerting, there is cause to believe that hostility to the Geological and Economic Survey's methods of building good roads comes from contractors who have had trouble with the commission's engineers. Certainly no good reason has been assigned for taking the work out of this commission's hands; and in investigating such complaints as have been brought against it, it is found that some of them at least are mitigated by contractors who do not like the engineers in charge of road work. It would be a nice state of affairs if contractors were allowed to frame up a scheme of good-roads building which was satisfactory to them and spend $5,000,000 of the State's money on it.

It is impossible to believe that this new salaried commission of seven members has been fixed upon because it offers the surest and best scheme for carrying out the plan of making improved highways. There are members of the Legislature who appreciate fully what it offers in the way of political patronage. When somebody suggested that the minority be given representation on the commission the idea was incontinently flouted with the statement that the Democratic party would spend the $5,000,000, build the roads and get all the credit for it.

Governor Crothers appears to see nothing wrong in putting aside a commission which has already spent several years in the work of constructing good roads and producing good results as far as it was given money and opportunity. The Governor seems to see no danger of political complications if a new commission composed entirely of Democrats selected from different sections of the State is created and given entire control of the expenditure of $5,000,000. In fact, Annapolis is so blind to dangers in the Benson bill that it looks as if it had determined not to see them.—Baltimore News.

TO PREVENT TRICK BALLOTS.

Nowhere in the country does such a condition exist as has long disgraced the political character of Maryland—the piecemeal ballot laws, with their wretched incentives to the perpetration of election outrages. At no time during the late campaign did the Democratic leaders express shame for the trick devices that were openly employed by that party in the Wilson law counties. There was some kind of promise made by the stump speakers that the party would amend the extra-session law in order to make the ballot practicable and prevent the counting out of a large percentage of votes. But the results of the election showed that if the narrow margin by which the Democrats, on the face of the returns, won is not to be wiped out, the complicated ballot and the Wilson law devices plus a restricted franchise must be employed. A party that depends upon chicanery and injustice certainly has no real claim upon the support of the people.

Mr. Pairo, the chairman of the Republican steering committee of the Senate and the House, has "put it up" to the Democrats to give proof of a desire to have fair elections by introducing a bill to eliminate the trick ballot and the fake candidate. The bill provides that the work of the supervisors of elections in preparing the ballot shall be public; that the lines between the names and the groups of names shall be of a prescribed form and color; that the arbitrary arrangement of names permitted under the Wilson law shall be discontinued and the order of the names be fixed with absolute fairness.

If the Democrats are susceptible to appeals for honest elections, let them give their support to this measure that will do away with election devices that defeat the will of the voter and bring disgrace to the state. But no one for a moment indulges the belief that the party in power will rise above considerations of a road bill with unlimited graft attached to it and pass such a measure as that of Mr. Pairo's. Yet its passage would purge the ballot laws of the iniquities that go far toward making elections in Maryland a farce.

TO DEPORT ANARCHISTS.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor Straus has issued a stringent order to all commissioners of immigration and immigrant inspectors to make every possible effort to gain information from the local police and from other sources for the identification of immigrants who are anarchists or criminals, with the view to their deportation. Recent anarchistic crimes and evidences of unusual activity by this class of aliens doubtless prompted this order. About two weeks ago a priest was shot and killed at his church altar, in Denver, Col., while celebrating the Holy Sacrament, by an anarchist who was kneeling with other communicants and who received the consecrated wafer from the man whom he assassinated. A fouler crime is rarely recorded.

On last Monday an attempt was made to assassinate Chief of Police Shippy, of Chicago, by an anarchist. The attempt failed but Mr. Shippy's 15-year-old son was shot and fatally wounded and his coachman seriously hurt by shots fired by the chief's assailant. Swift retribution followed the crime in this case, however, as, after a desperate struggle, Mr. Shippy secured a revolver and fired shot after shot into his assailant's body, killing him instantly.

The action of Secretary Straus deserves ample commendation by all law-abiding citizens. There should be no room in this country for men who believe that every man should be a law unto himself and who antagonize all government, even though it be based upon the consent of the great mass of the governed. Men who array themselves against law belong to the criminal classes and, though all anarchists may not be actual assassins, they are always ready to commit murder in the interest of their dangerous doctrines. Strenuous efforts should be made, therefore, to locate all foreigners who entertain anarchistic views and then send them out of the country. The order of Secretary Straus is a step in the right direction and it should not only be rigidly enforced, but be supplemented by such legislation as will make it most effective in ridding the country of the vicious element referred to.

SCHOOL BOARD PROCEEDINGS.

Three Normals Will Be Conducted During The Spring.

The Board of School Commissioners met Friday last and after disposing of routine business, the question of normals was thoroughly considered and the following conclusions arrived at:

The school buildings were awarded to the following persons in which to conduct an eight weeks' normal, to begin April 20 and close June 12:

Grantsville to P. E. King.

Accident to J. C. Beahm and H. W. Browning.

Oakland to U. G. Palmer and W. E. Bishoff.

These sessions will be devoted to a thorough drill in Arithmetic, Geographp, Grammar and the various other branches taught in the public schools in which teachers must be prepared in order to receive certificates.

At the close of the eight weeks' session the three normals will be merged into one school in Oakland for three weeks. This session will be devoted principally to Methods of Teaching and School Management.

Legislation now pending contemplates longer terms and higher salaries and necessitates better qualifications on the part of teachers. Our teachers must either go elsewhere to training schools or must be provided with the ablest instructors at home. To this end the School Board has engaged Miss L. E. Phoenix and Prof. T. L. Gibson for the three weeks' session.

Miss Phoenix is a graduate of the Mansfield, (Pa.) and the Oswego, (N. Y.) State Normal schools, Oberlin College and Emmerson School of Oratory and is now teaching her fourteenth year in the Oswego State Normal. She will present Methods in Reading, Numbers and Language, with one period to the entire school in Physical Culture.

Prof. T. L. Gibson, of the State Normal of Baltimore, who has so ably recommended himself to the teachers in his efforts at the county institutes, needs no further recommendation. He will have charge of the music, devoting two periods a day to it. He will also take up the work in English Grammer and composition in the highest grades.

The education bill now pending provides that all certificates in the State must be re-classified. Applications for certificates or re-classification without further examination by experienced teachers who attend the entire eleven weeks and whose work is satisfactory to the County Superintendent and the various instructors will be favorably considered by the Board without further examination.

A uniform rate of $5 tuition will be charged for the eight weeks sessiou and the three weeks will be free to all teachers and prospective teachers.

The faculty in the three weeks session will be Miss Lydia E. Phoenix, Prof. T. L. Gibson and the instructors of the different eight weeks' session.

GRANTSVILLE.

Rev. McCoy closed his series of meetings here with a communion service. The church has been awakened and nine taken in on probation.

Dr. Briscoe has purchased the very desirable property of Mr. Henry Bonig and will soon take possession.

Miss Ethel Broadwater, who has been visiting for some time in Frederick, also Baltimore and Annapolis, has returned home and reports a very enjoyable time.

Charles Beachy has returned home from the Pacific coast.

Mr. Clarence Miller is to be our new policeman. We believe Clarence is the right man in the right place.

Mr. Len Getty is home again.

Prof. Earl King, principal of the Grantsville school, has about recovered from an attack of grip. We are glad to say he is again able to use his vocal organs. He rendered a very beautiful and effective solo Sunday night in the M. E. church.

Mr. John Beachy made a flying visit to his mother here and other relatives and has now returned to his place of business in Wisconsin.

The farmers institute, we learn, was well attended and very instructive.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Ebersole nee Lizzie Hershberger, of Chicago, Ill., are visiting relatives here.

Trade Exhibition.

J. M. Davis & Sons have arranged for a big display of their leading specialties during the month of March commencing on the 9th and lasting until the 21st. Their plan is to show the various lines they are handling in actual operation. Their display promises to be very interesting to the public. There you will find many things worthy of your attention. The demonstrations will take place from ten to twelve in the morning and from two to four in the afternoon and from six to eight in the evening, each day. Remember the date, March 9th to March the 21st.

Call for Your Letters.

Miss Celia Curley, Mr. Peter H. Echard, Miss Alice Mal Hall, Miss Eva L. Lougridge, Mr. M. F. Powers, Mr. Steve Wilson.

FIRE AT THE BOND MILL.

Flames Destroyed Boarding House And Consumed $360 in Cash.

Last Sunday evening the boarding house at the lumbering plant of Messrs. DuBois & Bond Bros., at Bond, this county, was entirely consumed by fire along with much of its contents, including the boarding-house keeper's trunk, which contained his wearing apparel and currency amounting to $360.

The fire started about six o'clock when one of the domestics employed in the house attempted to light a lamp with a match the head of which became detached when she struck it and flew into a lace curtain nearby. From the curtain the flames communicated to the lining of the house, which was made of a paper substance and within a few moments the entire structure was a mass of flames.

Very little of the furniture on the first floor of the building was saved and none at all located on the second story. In a room on the second floor the manager of the boarding house, James Feuzy, had his trunk, which contained $360 in cash, his clothing and other valuables, all of which were consumed.

The loss to the building was $500, and a like amount on the furniture, with no insurance. Mr. Feuzy's loss falls particularly hard upon him. The building was owned by Messrs. DuBois and Bond Bros.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

On Tuesday the regular semi-monthly session of the Orphans' Court for Garrett county with all members of the Court present, was in session, when the following business was transacted:

The last will and testament of Jacob Wilson, late of Garrett county, was filed and probated, with the son of the testator, William H. Wilson, of Frostburg, executor.

Last will and testament of James Weir, late of District No. 11, was filed and probated, with his sons, Thomas and Walter Weir, executors.

D. E. Bolden, of Oakland, was appointed administrator of the personal estate of the late Henrietta Kamp, late of Garrett county, deceased.

William Bittner, of Rockwood, Pa., was appointed administrator of the late Miss Anna Boger, of Accident.

First and final account of Abel DeWitt, administrator of Ann DeWitt, filed and ratified.

BITTINGER.

The robin and blue-bird have made their appearance and there are other indication of the approach of spring.

Owners of sugar orchards are busy getting ready to gather the sugar water and transform it into sugar and syrup.

Charles Wilhelm, of Frostburg, was seen in this village last week.

William Broadwater, of New Germany, bought some fine beef cattle in this section last Monday.

J. L. Beachy, of Beechly, Pa. was calling on friends here last Saturday and Sunday.

Squire Wade H. Lohr, of Swanton, was helping his brother, J. Turner, of this place, to get his sugar camp open last week.

Miss Myrtle Wiley is spending a few days with her grandmother at Grantsville.

F. M. Bittinger was visiting at Accident last Sunday and his return home was delayed by high water.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Beachy were called to Deer Park last week by the serious illness of Mrs. B's father, Mr. J. W. Thomas.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Mortgage Paid Off.

In October, 1904, the proprietors of the Baltimore American executed a mortgage on the new American building, erected after the great fire, to secure a loan of $100,000. Saturday the mortgage was paid and released, which shows that there is money in a good newspaper.

Killed By Machinery.

James Carison, while in an intoxicated condition, walking through the pulp mill at Davis, W. Va., seeing the sights with several friends, walked too near the fast moving wheels and was fatally injured, dying shortly afterwards at the hospital. His face and head was torn and mangled in a horrible manner, the brains oozing out.

Surscribe for The Republican.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

A BAD BUNCH OF BOYS PINCHED.

Charged With Breaking Into And Entering Dwellings at Mountain Lake Park.

Last Thursday night two boys Thoburn Shipley and Orval Fike, commonly called "Rubber," Lish, the latter an adopted son of "Bud" Lish, were arrested at a house a mile or two south of Loch Lynn Heights by Deputy Sheriff Claude Brown, charged with having broken into and entered a number of houses at Mt. Lake Park and Loch Lynn Heights. The following day Harry Hanson, the third of the trio of youngsters implicated in the wholesale burglary, was arrested and the three are now in jail in default of bond for their appearance at the June Term of the Circuit Court.

As stated in THE REPUBLICAN last week some thirty houses had been entered at the Park during the past few months, the crime in many instances being laid at the door of a stranger who made his escape from the clutches of two young residents of the Park a few nights previous who had observed him coming from one of the vacant houses, but with the arrest of the three boys above alluded to it is believed that the right parties have been apprehended.

When Deputy Sheriff Brown went to the Park to arrest Shipley and Lish he had considerable trouble in locating them, they having evidently been given the "tip" that an officer was after them. They were followed, however, to the home of the late Lewis Hanson, two miles south of the Park. When the officer presented himself at the door to make the arrest he was met by Lish who pushed a large Colt't revolver into his face and demanded of him that he leave the premises. The Deputy was not bluffed and made his way into the dwelling where he found upon a table a large lot of ammunition for the gun in the hands of Lish, which had probably been taken from the chamber of the revolver just before the arrival of the officer. From under a bed in another part of the house Shiplew was dragged out and with the aid of Constable Maffett the two prisoners were brought to Oakland and on Friday a hearing was accorded them.

In making their statement to the justice young Hanson was implicated. This boy had been summoned as a witness and he was placed under arrest upon the evidence of Lish and Shipley.

A search of a vacant dwelling near Loch Lynn Heights which is owned by William Jones, the janitor at the First National Bank in Oakland, revealed veritable store house, in which was piled a considerable quantity of canned goods and other edibles. This building was used as the headquarters of the boys where they repaired nightly to feast and have a sociable time. The goods in this building were identified by Mr. H. E. Felty as having been taken from his store at the Park.

The revolvers found in possession of Shipley and Lish were taken from Miss Hardy's cottage and are now in possession of Sheriff Brown to be used as evidence against the boys when their trial takes place.

Since the arrest of these boys no houses at the Park have been entered and it is the general belief that the gang which has been committing depredations upon the property of the residents at that place has been rouned up.

Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of Yough River Oil and Gas Company of Garrett county will be held on Saturday, the 4th day of April, 1908, at the Court House, Oakland, Maryland, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of 12 Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Stockholders who cannot attend in person are requested to send their proxies.

J. M. BURNS, President,
N. S. HEINDEL, Secretary.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS; 50c. AND $1.00.

ENGLAND SAYS NO ALUM IN FOOD

and strictly prohibits the sale of alum baking powder—

So does France
So does Germany

The sale of alum foods has been made illegal in Washington and the District of Columbia, and alum baking powders are everywhere recognized as injurious.

To protect yourself against alum, when ordering baking powder,

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

and be very sure you get Royal.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar. It adds to the digestibility and wholesomeness of the food.

Typical March weather.

St. Patrick's day next Tuesday.

First week of Lent has passed.

Mr. Oliver Heyward, of Bond, was in the city this morning.

A good many unquenchable thirsts were in evidence Monday.

Mr. H. L. Daugherty, of Cumberland, was in the city a day or two this week.

Mr. A. M. Jeffers of Altamont, was in the city yesterday afternoon a few hours.

Mr. J. C. Philson, of Berlin, Pa., is here on a visit to his sister, Mrs. John M. Davis.

Mr. Alex. Sloan, of Lonaconing, was a witness in the Orphans' Court here on Tuesday.

Ex-Judge George B. McMillen, of the Orphans' Court, was in the city on business Tuesday.

Mrs. Nelson Thomasson, of Chicago, Ill., is here visiting her daughter, Mrs. C. Elwood Offutt.

Messrs. Edward J. Frantz and R. S. Jamison were in Washington, D. C., a day or two last week.

WANTED—A good team suitable for farm work. Apply to Wm. M. Kelley, Coketon, W. Va.

H. B. Lewis, of Mountain Lake Park, lumber inspector for the B. & O., is in town today.—Grafton Sentinel.

The West Virginia Legislature has adjourned and has again failed to change Groundhrg Day to the Fourth of July.

Attorney Sydney Sommerville returned today from Oakland, after spending several days with his family.—Grafton Republican.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bolden, of Myersdale, Pa., arrived in Oakland Saturday afternoon to remain a few days visiting their relatives.

Mr. Charles J. Newman, who recently sold his place near town to Mr. Zack Hendrickson, has moved with his family to Oakland.

Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Laughlin, of Kingwood, are at the Park where they will spend two weeks as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Laughlin.

Mr. John C. Mayer, of Terra Alta, was in Oakland Tuesday afternoon and evening as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Harland L. Jones.

Mrs. William R. Offutt and little daughter spent several days this week with Cumberland relatives, returning to Oakland yesterday.

Mr. J. H. Rodeheaver, the Terra Alta furniture man, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Mettie, was here Tuesday afternoon on business.

Mr. Roy H. Hamill, of the Upper Potomac Coal Company, spent Sunday in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill, at their home on Liberty street.

Dr. R. B. Ward returned to his home in Oakland Monday afternoon after a pastoral visit to a number of his appointments in West Virginia.

Mr. Harry Blocher, son of Mr. Henry Blocher, of District No. 9, was in Oakland on business Saturday, when he made this office a brief call.

Mr. E. J. Fringer, who spent several weeks with relatives in Carroll and other counties in Maryland, returned to his home in Oakland Friday night.

Mrs. Nancy Hamill-Rochold, of Baltimore, arrived here Tuesday afternoon to visit her sisters, the Misses Hamill, at their home on Liberty street.

Mr. E. H. Sincell, who was confined to his home nearly two weeks on account of a serious illness, has about recovered and is now attending to business.

Miss Annie Loewenstein went to Washington, D. C., Sunday afternoon to visit her sister, Mrs. Olia Kearney, who has been and still is quite ill.

Miss Sue Shirer, of Grafton, after spending Sunday in Oakland with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer, returned to Grafton Monday afternoon.

Mr. Harry Loewenstein, who has been engaged at work in Johnstown, Pa., for several years past, arrived here Sunday to remain indefinitely with his mother.

Dr. T. E. Bullard, of St. Johns, Nova Scotia, arrived here on Friday to visit his mother, Mrs. L. F. Bullard, and sister, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, for a short time.

"Spineless cactus" and "noiseless rifles" are all right, but the real patriot worth while will be the man who invents "pieless politics," if anybody ever does.

All kinds of blank books for sale at THE REPUBLICAN office, including Ledgers, Records, Journals, in all sizes and styles of binding. Telephone your orders or call.

Miss Corrinne Manges accompanied her father, Rev. E. Manges, to Deer Park, Sunday where the latter preached in the morning to the Lutheran congregation there.

Miss Agnes Bullard, who was in Oakland a few days last week visiting her mother, Mrs. L. F. Bullard, returned to her school at Chambersburg, Pa., Monday morning.

Mrs. Lou Thayer-Waters left Oakland Monday morning for a visit of two weeks to Washington and Baltimore. In the former city she joined her sister, Mrs. Virginia Johnson, and niece, Miss Virginia Johnson, who were returning from Florida, where they spent the winter.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

RECITAL BY MISS ANNA MANGES.

Will Be Given in The Basement of St Mark's Church Next Thursday Evening.

Miss Anna Manges, who has won much favorable comment for her clever work as a reader and impersonator, will give one of her delightful recitals in the basement of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church on Thursday evening, March 19th, beginning at 8:00 o'clock. The entertainment will consist of readings and impersonations in Miss Manges' own inimitable manner.

She will be assisted in the evening's entertainment by Dr. J. G. Robinson who will sing, and Miss Daisy Grant, pianist. The musical numbers of the program will be classical and with Miss Manges' strong personality will not fail to draw a splendid patronage.

The admission to the entertainment will be 25 cents.

On Friday last ex-County Treasurer E. A. Weimer sold a number of parcels of real estate for the non-payment of taxes. The county became the purchaser in the absence of other bidders.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Mealey and their son and daughter, who have been residing in Morgantown, West Va., during the past winter arrived in Oakland on Saturday and will resume their residence here.

Mr. Z. C. Gibson, of Loch Lynn Heights, who was seriously injured several weeks ago by falling from a ladder a distance of ten ten feet or more to the ground, was in Oakland Tuesday.

The high moral standing of this community is due to the fact that it has been permeated by Christian influence and education, such as have radiated from the various church organizations of our town.

"There is good stuff in the coming generation of Americans," says the Cleveland Leader. There is good stuff in the coming, present, going, and gone generations of Americans. Americans are all right, and always have been.

The thought that "no one cares and no one knows" blights many a bud of promise. Be it the young artist at the easel, the workman at his bench, the boy at his mathematical problems or your little girl at the piano, give what praise you can.

Mr. James Carey, Mr. Bradford Blocher and Mr. William H. Wilson, all of the vicinity of Frostburg, were in Oakland Monday on business before the Orphans' Court. This office acknowledges pleasant visits from the gentlemen while here.

Mr. Stephen G. Ashby, now of Bond, will move his family from that place to Oakland about April 1st and will occupy Sheriff Brown's residence on Second street. Mr. Ashby will embark in the wholesale lumber commission business here on the 15th inst.

Mr. Edwin E. Friend, Register of Wills for this county, is the latest acquisition to the Masonic lodge in Oakland, having been raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason at the regular communication of the lodge held Tuesday night of this week.

Mr. Arnold Scherr, of Eglon, was in Oakland Saturday, being accompanied home that afternoon by his sister, Miss Alma Scherr, who was here several days last week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger at their home on Liberty street.

Rev. E. Manges, who spent several days last week with relatives in York and Gettysburg, Pa., returned to Oakland Friday evening, accompanied by Rev. Miller, who went to Eglon Saturday where he preached on Sunday to the Lutheran congregation of that community.

Miss Rose Coddington, who spent a week with friends and relatives in and near Oakland, left here on Saturday for Lonaconing to visit her sister, Mrs. Abram Lawton. From that point she will leave within a week or two for Fayetteville, N. C., where she has a position with a millinery house.

County Commissioners Friend, Smith and Fike, after the adjournment of the meeting of the Board on last Thursday morning, went to a point near Bloomington where they inspected the site for a proposed new bridge spanning Savage River. Mr. Friend returned to Oakland Friday evening and the following morning left here for his home near Hoyes.

Mr. U. G. Palmer, of Hutton, who has been appointed by the School Board principal of the Oakland Normal, was in Oakland Tuesday on business connected with the school, which will open for a term of eleven weeks on April 20th. Mr. Palmer will be assisted in the management of the school by Mr. William E. Bishoff.

Few business men have more to contend with than an editor. The only means the editor has of making a living for himself and family is by selling space in the columns of his paper. His newspaper columns are the same to him as the shelves of dry goods are to the merchant. No one thinks of asking the merchant to give him dry the goods from his shelves, but few are they who hesitate to ask the editor ts give them a few columns free in his paper.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING FOR ORGANIZATION.

The committee appointed at a recent meeting of the citizens of Oakland to draft the constitution and by-laws for a Board of Trade to be organized for the town of Oakland and Garrett county, and authorized to call a meeting for the organization of the Board of Trade and the adoption of the constitution and by-laws for the government thereof, hereby give notice that a meeting to this end will be held on Monday, the 16th day of March, 1908, at 7.30 o'clock p. m., at the Opera House in the town of Oakland, and hereby invite all business men, farmers and others interested in the development and industrial progress and advancement of Oakland and Garrett county to meet on the above date and join with us for a permanent organization for the purposes as aforesaid.

SAMUEL LAWTON,
BENJ. H. SINCELL,
JNO. C. RENNINGER,
Committee.

If, perchance, a copy of this paper should fall into the hands of any who are in search of a new location—a place where church, school and social advantages are given emphasis, and where you can live out your allotted number of years without fear of pestilence or famine, we say, like one of old "Come thou with us and we will do thee good," without emphasis on the "do."

Prof. Rathbun, the superintendent of schools for Piedment school district and the principal of the Davis Public School was a delegate to the National Educational Society that met in the city of Washington last week. By the way, the patrons of the public school system are fortunate in securing the service of so efficient and competent an instructor.—Piedmont Correspondent, Cumberland News.

Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, has received a notice from the proper authorities of his nomination as a member of the National Legislative Council for Maryland and duly appointed by the National Committee on Medical Legislation as a member of the National Auxiliary Congressional Committee of the American Medical Association for the year 1908 or until his successor is appointed and qualified.

Farm for Sale—I offer my firm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six-room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. S. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13

A story comes from Brownsville, Pa., to the effect that an undertaker of that town has a mummy whose beard grows so fast that he has to be shaved every day. The story doesn't mention whether the mummy calls for bay rum or not or how the loquacity of the barber is affected by the uncanny scraping of the chin of an animated corpse. But it is gruesome enough as it is and sufficiently hair-raising to make us suspect that Joe Mulhatton, the lamented president of the club of forty liars, has risen from the dead to challenge the credulity of the living.

State Forester Besley, of Baltimore, who was here at the sessions of the Farmers' Institute on Saturday, called at THE Republican office and outlined the work already accomplished by the Forestry Board and the work mapped out but not yet executed. Mr. Besley is much interested in the preservation of the forests and wants one or more reliable men in each district of the county to be forest wardens. A number of wardens have already been appointed by the Forestry Board for this county but there are yet a number of vacancies.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

That man must have some place where he and his fellows may congregate for recreation and instruction, where toil and business cares may be cast aside for an evening of pleasure and social divertisement take their place, is a recognized fact. The lodge offers one of the best solutions of this question, as is evidenced by the many orders that have sprung up in this country in the last decade. Besides these are the numerous older and grander orders, all of which have in their rituals teachings that have been importnnt factors in the educational and moral development of the people.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT.
G. S. HAMILL, VICE P. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

TRADE DISPLAY AT DAVIS & SONS'

Labor Saving Devices Inspected By Large Crowds of Interested Residents.

The trades display inaugurated by Messrs. J. M. Davis & Sons, the Oakland hardware merchants, at their store building on Second street Monday of this week, which is to continue until the 21st inst., has been a source of much favorable comment by those who have inspected the great number of labor saving devices in actual operation displayed by the firm.

Both floors of the store have been given up to the display, the lower story containing many household utensils of merit. Demonstrations showing how easy it is to master the intricacies of cookery when one is supplied with the necessary utensils is a feature.

On the second floor a small gas engine of remarkable power, has been erected which drives a number of pieces of machinery, such as a churn, sewing machine, clothes washers, and by an ingenious device an attachment made to connect a cradle with an arm on a pulley successful rocks the baby (in this case an overgrown Teddy Bear) while the housewife is about other duties.

Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co., has in successful operation in connection with the Davis display a fully equipped bath room outfit and an acetylene gas lighting plant.

During the hours of display which are from 10 until 12 and 2 until 4 o'clock music is furnished and refreshments are served to the visitors.

A petition addressed to the Garrett county delegation at Annapolis, paying for the repeal of the obnoxious mortgage tax law, was numerously signed by the farmers at the institute held here on Saturday afternoon. The paper was forwarded to Senator Brown the same evening and has since been followed by other petitions and personal letters. The law as it stands is a detriment to the development of our county and the amount of money realized by the taxes imposed upon the income from the mortgages is a mere bagatelle. The law is bad and should be repealed and that speedily.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, of the Oakland bar, who spent several days in Annapolis last week, representing the liquor interest of Friendsville in proposed legislation having for its end the repeal of the law now on the statute books prohibiting the sale of liquor in Friendsville and the immediate community surrounding the town, returned to Oakland Saturday night. The bill to repeal the law above referred to was introduced in the House, at the instigation, we presume, of Mr. Hamill, by Mr. Maloy, one of the Baltimore City Delegates. When the proper time arrives the measure will repose peacefully, there is little doubt, in that grave already prepared for it.

This office received on Tuesday from Mr. Charles E. Hoye, of Legaspi, Philippine Islands, a copy of El Heraldo Bicol, a newspaper printed in Spanish and English in parallel columns, contains an account of a political convention held in Legaspi of which Mr. Hoye was secretary. The preamble and resolutions adopted by the convention pledged allegiance to the Government of the United States and commended the administration of President Roosevelt and pledged the support of the people of the district of Albay to Mr. Taft. Mr. Hoye also sent us a leaf of the manila raised in the Philippine, partly in its raw state and the balance showing the hemp after it was cleaned by the knife used for the purpose. To one unaccustomed to seeing this it is quite a curiosity and may be examined by calling at this office.

PRIME OF LIFE: WANTS EXERCISE.

Former Senator Davis, 85 Years Young, May Run For Governor.

The calcium operator will kindly again turn the spotlight on your Uncle Henry Gassaway Davis. Uncle Henry feels the need of strenuous exercise in the political arena. Being only 85 years old, he thinks a young man like himself should not allow himself to get rusty in politics by idleness. Therefore, he thinks of running for Governor of West Virginia this year.

"While I can't say that I am a full-fledged candidate at this time, still I am being urged by a large circle of friends to come out for the nomination, and to be frank, I'm seriously considering the proposition. The people are clamoring for the State to go our way the coming fall and I look for a sweeping victory for all of us."

That is what Senator Davis said to friends who called on him during a brief stay in the Capital City between trains yesterday. They declare that Uncle Henry is quite in earnest and that he is looking forward to making the race with no little pleasurable anticipation.

Young Men's Christian Association.

Subject for next Sunday afternoon's lecture, Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, lecturer, in the rooms of the Asociation, Mitchell building, Second street, to which all or cordially invited: "Jesus Heals a Man Born Blind."—John 9, 1-14.

Lecture.

Rev. C. W. Hudson will lecture in the Union church, Deer Park, Friday, March 13th at 7.30 p. m., on the "Ninth Wonder of the World." Admission free. Collection in aid of Woman's Missionary Society. All are invited.

A Case Of Destitution.

A peculiarly sad case of destitution in Oakland was brought to light a few days ago when Sheriff Brown, in the discharge of his duties as an officer laid a distress warrant on the property of a very unfortunate man in Oakland for arrearages in rent. In making a search of the premises he failed to find a vestige of food. The man is slowly dying of tuberculosis and has two children and his wife depending upom him for support. When the state of things as they exist in this household was brought to the attention of a few gentlemen Tuesday night a purse of a few dollars was quickly subscribed, but this will last only a short time. In the meantime it is incumbent upon the more fortunate residents of Oakland to see that the necessities of the family are provided. Relief funds will be thankfully received by Sheriff Brown or they may be left at this office.

Measles Prevalent.

Oakland is suffering from an epidemic of measles and many who have suffered from that disease before are again confined to their homes with the disease, regardless of the contention that a person can have the measles only once. Several physicians have cases on hands of persons who have had the measles before.

Married.

RODEHEAVER—DIEHL—At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Baumgartner, in Oakland, Saturday afternoon, March 7, by Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, Miss Bessie Diehl and Mr. Clark Rodeheaver, both of near Deer Park.

In The Bankrupt Court.

Referee in Bankruptcy A. A. Doub, of Cumberland, gives the required legal notice in THE REPUBLICAN today of the first meeting of creditors of Galusha A. Pritchard, of Oakland, and David H. Sanders, of near Oakland, who have applied to the United States Court for the District of Maryland, for the benefit of the bankrupt laws. The meetings will be held in the law offices of Mr. G. S. Hamill in Oakland on March 21st, 1908.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Captain Kidd's Two Loves.

By Carl Williams.

Copyright, 1907, by N. E. Daley.

Captain Kidd gave a sigh that shook his three feet four inches of stature and looked up at Juliet. Juliet, the elephant idol of circus goers, responded with a sympathetic pat that very nearly took the diminutive captain off his feet.

"It's too bad, Juliet," he said softly. "If Gretchen were here now to enjoy this, how happy we should be!" The captain's glance roamed over the gay crowd. It was the day of the children's parade at a seaside resort, and the throng of miniature men and women in their finery reminded Captain Kidd more than ever of his own tiny Gretchen. Tears stole down his furrowed cheeks, and Juliet in dumb sympathy placed her trunk caressingly around the captain's neck.

Perhaps she knew of what he was thinking. Perhaps it was only the instinct of a dumb brute, but the captain was comforted by her caress. For fifteen years he and Juliet had traveled through the world together, and there had sprung up between them a love that until the appearance of Gretchen had been full and complete. Juliet still lavished upon her trainer the wealth of her elephantine love, but the captain had divided his heart between the elephant and the dainty little woman whom he met in Paris just before he had sailed for America.

When the showman who paid him his salary had ordered him to go to the strange land, he had begged Gretchen to accompany him. She had been willing enough, but the director of the troupe of lilliputians would not give his consent to losing one of his most valuable little players. He had hired Gretchen from her mother.

When the dwarfs had parted in the big arena in Paris she had promised to always be true to him and had hinted that perhaps she might manage to come to him some time. He had given her his address, written on a scrap of programme, and the short, misspelled letters she had sent were tucked into the pocket of the gay uniform coat and brought comfort to him in the long nights when he lay in Juliet's stall studying them out by the aid of a lantern. Exhibition midgets get little schooling, and the captain did not realize his inamorata's shortcomings since his own education was even more sadly neglected than hers. He cared nothing except that each tiny missive reiterated the "Ich lieb dich," which bore comfort to his heart and gave him courage to face a strange land. He was at least more fortunate than Gretchen, because he had Juliet, the faithful.

JULIET HAD CAUGHT HER AROUND THE WAIST.

His love for Juliet antedated his love for Gretchen. Fifteen years he had played in the troupe with Gretchen; there had been a long stay in Paris, and he had grown attached to Juliet, the largest elephant of the herd. The proprietor, quick to see his opportunity, had shown the midget how to put the great beast through her few simple tricks.

Since then the captain and Juliet had not been separated for a single day. When they traveled by rail he slept in the car. On board ship or on land he slept in her stall. The elephant quarters were far sweeter and cleaner than some of the boarding houses at which he had been lodged, and the captain hated to be parted from Juliet even for a moment.

Thus there had grown up between them a love almost human in its intensity. The owner of the menagerie had finally permitted the captain to purchase the elephant out of his slender earnings and the tips he had received.

The captain had several hundred dollars saved up, but not enough to purchase Gretchen's release from her contract. In time he could manage to save up enough, so he tried to be content.

But here at the beach the sight of the children in their fancy dresses put him strongly in mind of the little troupe of which Gretchen was the star. The captain grieved and Juliet grieved in sympathy.

The two of them had come down from New York that morning to take part in a circus in the evening which was to close the day's festivities. It had been a long, tiring trip, and the captain felt depressed. Even the worn letters in his pocket failed to bring him comfort, and, though Juliet caressed him with her trunk, her efforts were of no avail, and the captain regarded the crowd of pleasure seekers through tear blinded eyes.

Then the manager of the entertainment came blustering up with the warning that the parade was ready to start. Juliet swung the captain up to her neck, and under the direction of his hook she moved off with stately tread to take her place at the head of the line.

As the great mass paced along between the lines of eager spectators the captain no longer watched the crowd. His thoughts were far away across the water with the little madchen.

Juliet proudly led the way, enjoying the surprise she excited and glad of the opportunity to parade. She did not need guidance when the way was so plainly marked, and, rejoicing in the fact that the children along the line were generous with their peanuts and candy, she kept a watchful eye on the crowd.

A cry of terror roused the captain from his day dreaming. Juliet was excitedly trying to force her way through the crowd, which broke and scattered before her. Captain used the hook on ears and trunk; but, though Juliet trumpeted shrilly in her pain, she obeyed neither hook nor voice. A dozen alert policemen sought to break her charge, but they hastily dodged aside at her approach. Then a cry of horror ran through the crowd.

A little girl, evidently one of the paraders on her way to the start, stood directly in the elephant's path. One of the policemen sprang to her rescue, but before he could reach her Juliet had caught her around the waist and had lifted her high in the air.

Strong men turned aside that they might not see the child dashed to earth again, while others stood fascinated by the sight. But instead of injuring the child Juliet swung her lightly back to the captain, who caught her in his arms with a cry of joy. Juliet then swung her huge hulk and docilely returned to the parade with the captain still holding Gretchen with one arm, while with the other he patted the trunk that was held up for a sugary reward.

"My impresario died," Gretchen was explaining. "I ran away and came over in the big ship, as we had planned. At the place where I sent your letters they told me you were here. I could not wait for your return, so I came, and Juliet saw me. I was looking for you. I knew you would be in the parade."

Captain Kidd slipped another lump of sugar to the insistent trunk.

"It frightened the people much," he said with a little laugh. "But I am glad that Juliet found you. Now I have my two loves, and we three shall live together always. A man came to me the other day and said that in vaudeville we can get much more than the $10 they pay me now. We shall be rich and very happy, my Gretchen."

"With you and Juliet," said the little woman, as she patted the upraised trunk. "I am sorry the children were frightened, but I could not wait another minute, my Wilhelm."

"Nor I," he answered simply, adding with true showman instinct: "It will be good for the business. It has made people talk, and they will want to see the three lovers."

Riding the South Sea Surf.

"I shall never forget the first big wave I caught out there in the deep water. I saw it coming, turned my back on it and paddled for dear life. Faster and faster my board went, until it seemed my arms would drop off. What was happening behind me I could not tell. One cannot look behind and paddle the windmill stroke. I heard the crest of the wave hissing and churning, and then my board was lifted and flung forward. I scarcely knew what happened the first half minute. Though I kept my eyes open, I could not see anything, for I was buried in the rushing white of the crest. But I did not mind. I was chiefly conscious of ecstatic bliss at having caught the wave. At the end of the half minute, however, I began to see things and to breathe. I saw that three feet of the nose of my board was clear out of water and riding on the air. I shifted my weight forward and made the nose come down. Then I lay, quite at rest in the midst of the wild movement, and watched the shore and the bathers on the beach grow distinct. I didn't cover quite a quarter of a mile on that wave, because to prevent the board from diving I shifted my weight back, but shifted it too far and fell down the rear slope of the wave." — Jack London in Woman's Home Companion.

How to Snub Bores.

A friend of mine returned the other day from an American tour and told me that he received a severe rebuke out of the mouth of a babe which cured him of expatiating on his experiences. He lunched with his brother soon after his return and was holding forth with a consciousness of brilliant descriptive emphasis when his eldest nephew, aged eight, toward the end of the meal laid down his spoon and fork and said piteously to his mother: "Mummy, I must talk. It does make me so tired to hear uncle going on like that." A still more effective rebuke was administered by a clever lady of my acquaintance to a cousin of hers, a young lady who had just returned from India and was very full of her experiences. The cousin had devoted herself during breakfast to giving a lively description of social life in India and was preparing to spend the morning in continuing her lecture when the elder lady slipped out of the room and returned with some sermon paper, a blotting book and a pen. "Maud," she said, "this is too good to be lost. You must write it all down, every word." The lesson was not thrown away.—Putnam's Magazine.

DREAMS BY GARDNER

Limekiln Club's President Announces a New Stock of Them.

HAVING A BULL CHASE YOU.

Sign That Things Have Dwindled Along Until They Have Finally Reached a Climax and Can't Be Put Off Any Longer.

[Copyright, 1907.]

"My frens," said Brother Gardner of the Limekiln club after the routine business at the last regular meeting had been disposed of, "we has been dreamin' old dreams and seein' old signs fur a long time past. I think de time has come fur sunthin' new. If de cull'd race am gwine to keep up wid de pursession, den old things must be dun away wid. What cull'd folks

"TO HAVE A BULL TAKE ARTER YOU."

dreamed of a hundred years ago don't count now. Darfore after a good deal of thought and figgerin' I desire to present you de follerin', which will stand until further notice as de only schedule issued and authorized by dis club:

"To dream dat you am walkin' along de seashore and find a diamond breast pin signerfies dat dar am gwine to be sickness in your family. If you hain't got no family, den your aunt or your uncle am gwine to be tooken down. If you hain't got a relative on airth, you'll be tooken yourself, and saltpeter won't save you.

"To dream dat you am a codfish sailin' along de briny deep is one of de best dreams I know of. It signerfies dat when de landlord comes to collect de next month's rent he am gwine to drop a ten dollar bill on de floh and not notice it.

"To dream dat you am a lobster and dat in attackin' a schoolma'am walkin' along de shore you have one of your claws knocked off am a dream dat soon brings results. De police am gwine to be watchin' in de alley fur you.

"To dream dat you am a whale and am swimmin' around and takin' up most of de Atlantic ocean signerfies dat when you go to your job in de mawnin' de boss am gwine to gib you de bounce. He's found a dago who will work 50 cents a day cheaper.

"To dream dat you am a giraffe signerfies dat you will be higher in de air very soon. It may mean dat you am gwine to climb a persimmon tree, and it may mean dat you am gwine to be 'lected to some office. While you am waitin' to see which don't work too hard.

"On three different occasions widin a year my old woman has dreamed dat she was a bunch of bananas and dat I was steppin' for'ds to pick one off. On each and ebery occashun she has found a nickel on de sidewalk next day.

"To dream dat you wandered out in de kentry and found a great big watermillyon and took it home and dat when you cut it de core was as red as blood and when you tasted it it seemed jit food fur de angels don't signerfy good luck onless you furder dream dat you got rid of de rinds befor' de police come around.

"To dream dat you am a pullet sittin' on de roost and dat de hand of a cull'd man am reachin' up to grab your leg and make you his signerfies dat you am gwine to win on de next hoss race. If you am in lub it signerfies marriage.

A Clothesline Dream.

"One night two months ago I dreamed dat I was a clothesline and dat de old woman was hangin' out de Monday washin' on my back. I woke up in a sweat. I jest felt dat I was in fur bad luck, but de werry next day de grocer weighed me out three pounds of butter fur two, and Sir Isaac Walpole, who had owed me a dollar fur six months, come along and paid it.

"If any of you have got de idea dat to dream of countin' money signerfies good luck you'd better drap it at once. De man next doah to me dreamed dat dream one night last month, and when he woke up in de mawnin' he found dat de hawgs had got in and rooted up all his taters.

"To dream dat you see a white hoss, a black cat, a yaller calf and a spotted cow chasin' each odder around a lot signerfies danger. You may fall off de roof of de house or de ole woman may go fur you wid de rollin' pin.

"To dream dat you am a wheelbarrer and dat a fat man am wheelin' you along de street signerfies dat you will visit a hospital very soon. You may go dar to see your brudder-in-law or you may go dar wid a broken head.

"Waydown Bebee tells me dat a few nights ago he dreamed dat he was a load of hay and was bein' drawn to market to be sold. He wanted to appeal to de farmer drivin' not to part him from his old associashuns, but befo' he could do so he woke up. He lay dar on his back wonderin' what sich a dream signerfied when his wife got up and would have gone through his pockets and taken ebery dollar he had but fur seein' dat his eyes was open.

"It am only ten nights since Samuel Shin Dreamed dat he was an airthquake. He was travelin' around shakin' down buildin's and scarin' folks to death when his landlord pounded on de doah and warned him to hustle up dat back rent or vacate. It was only about two minits between de dreamin' and de poundin'. It was only ten hours after de poundin' dat Samuel was sot out on de sidewalk.

"To dream dat you am a one horned cow looks on de face of it to be a bad thing, but it am jest de contrary. If you eber dream dat dream you am shore to find a wallet wid as much as $10 in it, and dar won't be a soul around when you pick it up.

"I knowed a man who went to bed arter fam'ly prayers and dreamed dat he was a smoked ham hangin' out in front of a butcher shop and dat a tall, slim cull'd man was lookin' at him wid eyes of love and affecshun. He tried to call out to de butcher to take notice or he would lose his ham, and in doin' so he woke himself up. He couldn't say what sich a dream signerfied, but he soon found out. His tracks was follered from a wood pile and he got sixty days on de island.

"I once dreamed dat I was a windmill and goin' round and round, and when I woke up and told de old woman she begin to weep. She said it meant sudden death widin a week, but she got left. I had an old mewl worth about $10. A preacher, who didn't know nuffin 'bout mewls, come along and offered me $30. Dream dat dream jest as often as you kin.

"If you see de moon ober a red hoss barn take care. Dat means blood and plenty of it.

To Hear a Crow Cawin'.

"If you hear a crow cawin' at midnight git right up and light de candle and look under de bed and see if your five dawgs am all dere. De sign means a loss of property.

"If de fust pusson you see on gettin up in de mawnin' am a cross eyed milkman go back into de house and put butter on your butes. Dar's trouble comin', and you want to slip out of it if you kin.

"If you am passin' a house and a black hen runs out and begins to crow at you bless her heart. Dat's a sign dat a legacy am comin' to you and dat widin a year you'll pass dat same house ridin' in your kerridge.

"If you am a young man and am gwine along de road to see your gal and a star falls and a dawg barks at de same time, turn right around and go home. Dat gal am deceivin' you. She has tooken your gumdrops and lubbed anodder at de same time.

"If de sun sets fiery red and you see it ober your left shoulder and at de same moment a widder woman leanin' on a crutch passes you by be on your guard fur de next few days. It may signify dat de butcher am on your trail wid an old bill or dat a cyclone am gettin' ready to break loose.

"If you am walkin' in de alley at night to git de fresh air and ruminate fur awhile and you suddenly think you smell chicken potple, git right out of dat on de gallop. It's a sign dat at least two white men am watchin' dat coop.

"To have a bull take arter you when you are makin' a short cut across a field is a sign dat things have dawdled along until dey have finally reached a climax and can't be put off any longer. If you reach de fence ahead of de bull it am a sign of industry on your part and mighty pore plannin' on his. If you fail to, den no furder sign will be of interest to you in dis world."

M. QUAD.

Speaking of His Relations.

Judge—What are your relations to the defendant?

Witness—I hope my relations are nothing to him. If they were, I'd disown all of them!—Yonkers Statesman.

To Solve the Servant Problem.

The combination pianola stove.—Punch.

Her Power.

She couldn't drive a nail in straight,
Not even on a stunt.
She couldn't throw a stone a rod
And hit an elephant.
She couldn't saw a board across
And make the angle right.
She wouldn't kill a mouse, although
It bothered her all night.
She wouldn't miss a gossip feast
For anything you'd pay.
She couldn't hear a secret but
She'd give it all away.
She couldn't hold her tongue an hour
Unless she were asleep.
She couldn't skip a bargain sale
Where everything was cheap.
She couldn't do a lot of things
That men can do with ease.
She couldn't knock a three base hit
Or shin up lofty trees.
But she can take a great big man,
Enslave him with a thrill
And twist him round her finger and Remold him to her will.

—Somerville Journal.

DOWNRIGHT ABUSE.

I've sure been called a lot of things
Since I've been fooling round on earth.
They've even called me names, b' jings,
That cast reflections on my birth.
They've called me "grafter," "snide" and "crook"—
Yea, they have named me worse than that.
But here comes some man with a book
That calls me "proletariat!"

Now, I have lived the best I could.
I've paid my debts when necessary.
I've been, I reckon, average good
For one so human and contrary.
But all my effort in the line
Of keeping straight and all of that
Is wasted, and my eyes run brine
If I'm a "proletariat!"

I don't know what the word can mean,
And, tell the truth, I'm scared to learn.
Far as I know I've never seen
A sample and don't care a durn
If I should waste the brief remains
Of what short time I have at bat
Without once getting through my brains
The sense of "proletariat."

Yet while I live and have my health
I'd have the whole world understand
That, though I've neither fame nor wealth,
There's none that dares to lift his hand
And swear that I, peace loving man
That tries to side step family spats,
Could e'er be listed with the clan
That's labeled "proletariats."

—Strickland W. Gillilan in Judge.

Pleasant Prospect.

A young fellow in Pittsburg intended to ask her father's consent the other evening, but changed his mind. He has decided to wait till the old gentleman is disabled from a fall on the ice or till something equally propitious turns up. It happened in this way:

When he reached the house, the girl met him at the door, pearly tears stealing down her fair cheeks.

"Oh, George," she whispered, "I am so glad you have come. Please go into the library and see if you can calm father; he is so excited and is raging about, knocking over the furniture and breaking things."

"Certainly," George said briskly. "What is the matter with the old gentleman?"

"I'm sure I don't know," she said. "He was all right, and I just began to tell him that you wanted to marry me."—Lippincott's.

On His Way to Take the Waters.

The first heavier than air flying machine.—Sketch.

A Wrong Tip.

A well known Chicago merchant was once asked to talk to the boys of a business school. He prefaced his address by a few extempore remarks.

"Boys," said he, "as I approached the entrance to this schoolroom I observed on the panel of the door a word most appropriate to an institution of this kind. That one word expresses the quality most useful to the average boy when he steps into the field of business. Can you tell me what it is?"

"Pull!" shouted several of the pupils, with a burst of laughter, while the horrified merchant recognized that he had taken his text from the wrong side of the door.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Revenging Himself on the Profession.

"Say," asked the wild eyed man limping into the chiropodist's office, "can you cure a bunion?"

"Yes, sir," answered the chiropodist.

"Can you do it in a short time?"

"Yes, sir."

"Permanently?"

"Sure! Take this chair."

"No, thanks," said the caller, whipping a notebook out of his pocket and making an entry in it. "I don't want anything done. I am merely making a collection of monumental liars. I have found another one, that's all. Good day."

Turning on his heel, he limped out.—Chicago Tribune.

Timely Aid.

"I see that Moneybags has come forward with a half million to help out in this financial trouble."

"Yes. But if he wished to relieve the trouble any why did he wait so long?"

"Well, you see, he wanted to be sure the tide was coming in before casting his bread on the waters."—Judge.

The Proper Term.

Knox—You and Dr. Jones are partners, are you not?

Dr. Smith—Oh, no. We often consult together and attend to each other's patients in case of absence, but we are in no sense partners.

Knox—I see. He is what might be termed your accomplice.—Detroit Tribune.

Gradations of Crime.

"That constable who followed a ten or about the stage with a warrant for breach of contract might have provoked the man to worse crime."

"I suppose you mean assault and battery?"

"No. But in his excitement the singer might have uttered a false note."—New York Times.

Saving Her Pelt.

"Look out!" cried the friendly walrus. "Here comes a hunter after you."

"I don't give a wrap," chortled the fur bearing seal, disappearing beneath the waves. — Catholic Standard and Times.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" should form part of the Programme. Much better than to physic, nothing sickening. Most [illegible] children—and thoroughly safe for. If you [illegible] chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, [illegible] Preventics. Promptness may also save [illegible] usual sickness. And don't forget [illegible] there is Seriatim, night of day. [illegible] ably the Preventics' greatest [illegible] 50 boxes for the pocket, also in the [illegible] Preventics. Insist on your druggist [illegible]

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, MD.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.37 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *3.29 p. m., Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m., local, *4.31 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *1.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.57 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.
COLLEGE PARK, MD.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction.
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance. Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SYLVESTER, Pres't.
College Park Md.

22 st

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others."

J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It Destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron. ¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Okland, Md.

Blaisdell's S. M. P. T.

By Gorham Bell.

Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

Blanche paused for a moment in the doorway and looked hopelessly about her. She hated the apartment with its shabby carpet, its stuffy atmosphere and the cheap small talk of the medium priced boarding house, but it was at least better than the cheerless little room that even her feminine ingenuity could not transform into the semblance of home.

Over at the piano the young woman who had charge of the millinery department of a big store picked out "Love Me and the World Is Mine" with one finger, the yellow keyed piano responding occasionally with the right note. A floorwalker from the same store looked adoringly down upon her, and Mrs. Castleton, the landlady, smiled approvingly upon both of them. Already they had told her that after the first of the year they should need the front room on the first floor instead of the rear hall rooms on the third and fourth floors.

IT WAS LATE WHEN THEY FINALLY STOOD ON THE STEPS.

Colonel McGregor was studying a chess problem over in one corner, and various little groups were formed about the room. Blanche had just decided that the hall room was preferable to the piano when Mrs. Castleton transferred her attention from the amorous pair at the piano to the newcomer.

"Oh, Miss Philbrick," she called. "May I speak with you a moment?"

Blanche came forward, wondering what Mrs. Castleton might have to say. Evidently from the fat smile that adorned the landlady's face she was about to ask a favor.

"Are you to be here for dinner Thursday?" went on Mrs. Castleton. "It's Thanksgiving," continued the matron, seeing from Blanche's face that she did not understand. "All the rest of the folks are going home for the day or will spend it with friends."

"I have no friends here in the city," said Blanche frankly, "and home is so dreadfully far away."

Home had never seemed so far away as at that moment. She had left her home when her father married again. There was no place she might call home, not even the little room upstairs.

Mrs. Castleton's face fell at the announcement. "I was thinking that if you was going out, too," she explained, "I might let the servants have the day out. Then we could have the turkey and things on Sunday," she added as proof that her motives were not mercenary.

Guy Blaisdell noted the girl's embarrassment and came to her relief. "You have left me out of this discussion," he cried gayly. "I'm one of the homeless too. I propose that Miss Philbrick join me in the formation of the Society For Making People Thankful."

Mrs. Castleton eyed Blaisdell apprehensively. She never was certain where his remarks would lead. Only that morning he had led her on in praise of the butter and had wound up by declaring it to be the strongest butter he had ever tasted. Blaisdell caught her glance and hastened to put her mind at rest.

"This is an admirable order," he ran on. "I know where there is a place where they give real old fashioned New England cooking. They are going to spread themselves Thursday. If Miss Philbrick will be my guest she will make me very thankful and at the same time she will make the servants thankful, too, by giving them a chance to go to the matinee instead of worrying over an elaborate dinner for two. Will you come, Miss Philbrick?"

For a moment Blanche hesitated. It was not that she did not want to go—her soul revolted at the very thought of Thanksgiving dinner in Mr. Castleton's gloomy dining room—but she had not yet accustomed herself to the informality of dinner with a comparatively unknown man without a chaperon.

She knew that chaperons were not considered necessary where girls earned their own living, still it seemed a little daring. But Blaisdell's eager face and Mrs. Castleton's appealing glance decided her. She turned to Blaisdell with a little nod.

"I shall be most happy to accept your invitation," she said, and Mrs. Castleton looked relieved. Thanksgiving and Christmas were her bugbears.

Once in her own room Blanche was amazed at her action. She had been in the city for eight months, and in all that time not once had she accepted any of the numerous offers of entertainment. She liked Blaisdell better than any of the others in the house. There was something fresh and wholesome about him, very different from the assumed sophistication of most of the men. He was past thirty, and a bald patch on the back of his head was already beginning to be in evidence, but he was still a boy at heart and from the first Blanche had been attracted to him.

The dinner was all that Blaisdell had promised. A New England girl who had sought to make her way in the city had persuaded her mother to come on and start a restaurant. Two floors in a good neighborhood were simply fitted up, and much of the New England atmosphere was preserved—except in the prices.

The rooms were crowded today, but Blaisdell had reserved a table, and Blanche thoroughly enjoyed a dinner that was so unlike the fare at the boarding house.

"I come over here very often," explained Blaisdell when at last the coffee and mince and pumpkin pies were served. "It's as near as a bachelor can get to home here in the city."

"It does taste like home," asserted Blanche. "I grow so tired of Mrs. Castleton's weekly routine."

"You will have to come here often then," said Blaisdell promptly. "It would be all the more pleasant for company. It's lonesome eating alone."

"I think it is more dreary to eat with a whole roomful of people with whom you have so little in common," said Blanche, with a sigh.

"It is so much more lonesome in the city with all the people you don't know than in the country where there are so few people whom you do know."

"I don't think that we are cut out for city folk," agreed Blaisdell, with a laugh. "Let's get over to the park for a little walk before the theater."

"You are going to the theater?" asked Blanche.

"We are going to the theater," he corrected. "Surely you do not want to spend the evening in Mrs. Castleton's stuffy parlor?"

"Heaven forbid!" cried Blanche. "But you don't know what a treat it will be."

Blaisdell looked as though perhaps he might guess. He knew that she did not go out in the evenings, and he knew what a hall bedroom was like, but he only smiled as he led the way to the cashier's desk.

It was late when they finally stood on the steps of the boarding house and Blanche gave a little sigh of contentment.

"It has been a perfect day," she said, "instead of a most miserable one. I don't know how to thank you enough."

"I am the one to give thanks," said Blaisdell, with a laugh. "Look here; it's only fair to tell you that I'm going to try my hardest to make you Mrs. Blaisdell before next Thanksgiving. This is not a proposal. It would not be polite to propose to you so soon, but I want you to know that I'm going to do my best to win you before another year passes."

Blanche wondered that her heart should beat so rapidly at the frank speech. She liked Blaisdell the better for his honesty, and for an instant her hand lay over the muscular one that was inserting the key in the lock.

"It will not be very hard," she whispered. "Have you not enrolled me in the Society For Making People Thankful?"

Reforming Her Vocabulary.

A young woman of Quaker descent, according to the New York Sun, is now making an attempt to eliminate from her vocabulary the forms of speech peculiar to that sect.

"All my life," she said, "I have used my 'thees' and 'thous' as my father and mother and my grandfathers and grandmothers did before me. I was so accustomed to those expressions that it never occurred to me that there could be any disadvantage in their peculiarity. But when I went to work in a dry goods store I was disillusioned. I found then that Quaker speech, especially behind the counter, makes a mark of the speaker. In our store I met other clerks with every imaginable kind of a foreign accent, but nobody pays any attention to them. It is only I—poor I—with my Quaker theeing and thouing that catches the ear of the multitude.

"'Why, you use the Quaker dialect, don't you? How funny!' says one person after another, with suddenly aroused interest.

"This curiosity concerning me and my 'dialect' has become very annoying, and I am trying to stick to straight English."

The Pitiless "Fohn."

On a winter's night of 1861 half the town of Glarus, in the Alps, went roaring up in flame to heaven, while the pitiless fohn raged and raged and mocked at the efforts of salvors summoned from half the cantons of Switzerland, and the glow of the burning town was seen a hundred miles away in the Black forest. The bells were rung for help till the ropes were burned away, and, most grewsome of all, the countless wooden crosses of the churchyard graves furnished almost the last fuel to revive the dying flames. The fohn is a hot south wind—a kind of Swiss khamseen—which was long supposed to originate in the Sahara and to cross the Mediterranean, finding no height to break upon till it came to the St. Gothard, where it was forced through the pass with concentrated violence. What really causes it is still a matter of doubt, but it can do great mischief still and could do more in the days of wooden houses.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods.

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department
Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞ For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

DECAY IN WOOD PREVENTED.

Considerable Money Can Be Saved and Less Material Needed.

It is estimated that a fence post, which under ordinary circumstances will last for perhaps two years, will, if given preservative treatment costing about 10 cents, last eighteen years. The service of other timbers, such as railroad ties, telephone poles, and mine props, can be doubled and often trebled by inexpensive treatment. Today, when the cost of wood is a big item to every farmer, every stockman, every railroad manager—to everyone, in fact, who must use timber where it is likely to decay—this is a fact which should be carefully considered.

It is easy to see that if the length of time timbers can be used is doubled, only half as much timber will be required as before and only one-half as much money will need to be spent in the purchase of timber. Moreover, many woods which were for a long time considered almost worthless can be treated and made to last as long as the scarcer and more expensive kinds.

Of the actual saving in dollars and cents through preservative treatment, a fence post such as was mentioned at the beginning might serve as one example. The post is of lablolly pine, and costs, untreated, about 8 cents, or, including the cost of setting, 14 cents. It lasts about two years. Compounding interest at 5 per cent, the annual charge of such a post is 7.53 cents; that is, it costs 7.53 cents a year to keep the post in service. Preservative treatment costing 10 cents will increase its length of life to about eighteen years. In this case the total cost of the post, set, is 24 cents, which compounded at 5 per cent. gives an annual charge of 2.04 cents. Thus the saving due to treatment is 5.49 cents a year. Assuming that there are 200 posts per mile, there is a saving each year for every mile of fence of a sum equivalent to the interest on $219.60

In the same way preservative treatment will increase the length of life of a lablolly pine railroad tie from five years to twelve years and will reduce the annual charge from 11.52 cents to 9.48 cents, which amounts to a saving of 8.75 per mile.

It is estimated that 150,000 acres are required each year to grow timber for the anthracite coal mines alone. The average life of an untreated mine prop is not more than three years. By proper preservative treatment it can be prolonged by many times this figure. Telephone and telegraph poles, which in ten or twelve years, or even less, decay so badly at the ground line that they have to be removed, can, by a simple treatment of their butts, be made to last twenty or twenty-five years. Sap shingles, which are almost valueless in their natural state, can easily be treated and made to outlast even painted shingles of the most decay-resistant woods. Thousands of dollars are lost every year by the so-called "bluing" of freshly sawed sapwood lumber. This can be prevented by proper treatment, and at a cost so small as to put it within the reach of the smallest operator.

In the South the cheap and abundant loblolly pine, one of the easiest of all woods to treat, can by proper preparation be made to take the place of the high-grade longleaf pine for many purposes. Black and tupelo gums and other little-used woods have a new and increasing importance because of the possibility of preserving them from decay at small cost. In the Northeastern and Lake States are tamarack, hemlock, beech, birch, and maple, and the red and black oaks, all of which by proper treatment may help to replace the fast-diminishing white oak and cedar. In the States of the Mississippi Valley the pressing fence-post problem may be greatly relieved by treating such species as cotton-wood, willow, and hackberry.

Circular 139 of the Forest Service, "A Primer of Wood Preservation," tells in simple terms what decay is and how it can be retarded, describes briefly certain preservatives and processes, gives examples of the saving in dollars and cents, and tells what wood preservation can do in the future. The circular can be had free upon application to the Forester, Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Diesolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership between George W. Cover and William J. Cover was dissolved on the 22nd day of February, 1908, so far as relates to the said George W. Cover. All debts due to said partnership are to be paid and those due from the same discharged at Salt Block, in Garrett county, Md., where the business will be continued by the said William J. Cover as William J. Cover.

GEORGE W. COVER & SON.
Friendsville, Md., Feb. 26, 1908.

Church Services.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Class meeting, at Mt. Lake Park at 10 a. m.; Sunday school, 2.30; Junior League, 3.30; Epworth League, 6.30, and preaching at 7.30 p. m.

Deer Park—Sunday School at 10 a.m.; preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League 6.30.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

SWANTON M. E. CIRCUIT.

In the absence of the pastor I will hold services as follows:

Saturday, Thayerville at 7.30 p. m.

Sunday, Armstead at 10.30 a. m.; Wilson at 3 p. m.

Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

A. F. GEORGE.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.

A special offering of $28 will be asked at the morning service.

Sunday school 2.15 p. m.

Epworth League, Monday, 7.30 p. m.

Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.

Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.

All are cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:

Preaching 10:30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.

Preaching at Crellin next Sunday at 2.30 p. m.

Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

Catechise Saturday at 2 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Preaching at Ferndale at 11 a. m.; Loch Lynn at 3 p. m. and at Deer Park at 7.30 p. m.

Protracted meetings will begin at Deep Creek church Monday, March 16, at 7:30 p. m.

Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Fleeing Prisoner Shot.

While fleeing from arrest at Grafton, W. Va., Saturday, Bernard Davis was shot on the leg by Constable John Dean. Davis was arrested on an old charge, that of stealing a dog at the Baltimore and Ohio depot at Grafton some time ago. David was removed to the hospital.

For Sale.

I offer for sale Military Lot No. 791, containing 50 acres, lying about five miles west of Frostburg, and near the old Blocher place in District No. 9 of Garrett county. The property will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Apply to W. E. Wilson, 107 Virginia Avenue, Cumberland, Md.

A Lesson in Advertising.

The Grand Rapids Press occasionally tells its readers points in advertising. Recently, under the title of "A Lesson in Advertising," it dealt cleverly on why mail order advertisements find success easily in fields where ordinary retailers find it difficult.

It might be suggested to the retailers that one of the most effective ways of solving the mail order problem—and it is a problem that must be solved to save the retail business in many localities—is to study the methods of the mail concerns and to take advantage of the lesson that the latter teach.

The success of the mail order houses lies in the fact that they tell the people what they have to sell and at what price. Thay advertise. This advertising informs the customer where he can get what he wants and at what cost Often, through illustrations, it suggests purchases that he had not thought of and causes him to feel he wants, that he did not know before. The result is the stimulation of staple business and the creation of new business.

The retail merchant, on the other hand, often keeps to himself what he has to sell. The customer has to go to his store to find what he has and at what price. The merchant holds out no tempting inducements. If the customer wants to come all the better, but the merchant makes no special attempt to get him.

Between a merchant operating on this plan and the mail order house, using advanced advertising methods, the mail order house has all the advantage. The local merchant may have on his shelves wares just as good or better than those of the mail order house and at a price as low or lower. Yet if he does not let the people know through the local newspaper they are apt to go right by his store in order to post a letter to some distant concern to order the same goods

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Subscribe for The Republican.

KEEP UP WORKERS' WAGES.

Tariff Tax on Printed Matter Shown to Be Good Thing.

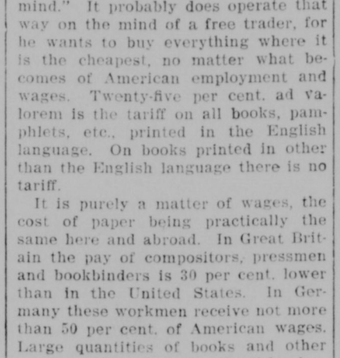
The Philadelphia Record complains of the tariff on books as "a tax on the mind." It probably does operate that way on the mind of a free trader, for he wants to buy everything where it is the cheapest, no matter what becomes of American employment and wages. Twenty-five per cent. ad valorem is the tariff on all books, pamphlets, etc., printed in the English language. On books printed in other than the English language there is no tariff.

It is purely a matter of wages, the cost of paper being practically the same here and abroad. In Great Britain the pay of compositors, pressmen and bookbinders is 30 per cent. lower than in the United States. In Germany these workmen receive not more than 50 per cent. of American wages. Large quantities of books and other printed matter in the English language are produced in Germany and shipped over to Great Britain, where no tariff bars this low priced competition.

But for our tariff of 25 per cent. Germany would do a big trade in printing for the United States. We are not sure but the Record itself would find it a saving to send over the "copy" for its Sunday supplements and have the composition and press work done in Germany. Certain it is that if the 25 per cent. tariff did not stand in the way many millions of pages of books, pamphlets, catalogues, etc., would be set up, printed and bound in the low wage printing houses of Europe that are now produced in this country and give employment to great numbers of American printers, pressmen and binders.

Considering the extraordinary abundance and cheapness of good literature in the United States, and also the economic value of maintaining the superior American wage scale, the criticism of that 25 per cent. tariff seems puerile indeed.

HARK! FROM THE TOMBS A DOLEFUL SOUND.



Massachusetts' Mugwump Nightmare.

The masses of both parties in Massachusetts know that Canadian reciprocity is resented by Canada; that our trade with Canada breaks all records—the past year, gaining more than English trade with Canada, and that under the Dingley tariff Massachusetts has advanced by leaps and bounds, while under the Wilson-Gorman tariff—the joint product of Whitneyism and of Fossism—Massachusetts cotton factories and shoe shops were distressed.

The masses want no more confusion of the trust problem with the tariff problem—they stand for federal regulation of the trusts and for tariff changes along protective lines, not when the country's business is bigger than it can handle, but when business is so bad that business would be promoted by the necessary disturbance of tariff schedules.

Between Democratic Douglas and Moran, bipartisan Guild and bipartisan Whitney, the student of American politics has data as adequate for the philosophy of the spoils system as for the psychology of opportunism, whether expressed in the limited concerns of the importer or in the trust system, awarding economic salvation only to those who are "organized," whether with Moran and George Fred or with Guild and Whitney, uniformly for the mugwump nightmare, but labeled as opposite "parties."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Substantial Part.

The substantial part of the concession to which this country has been committed is to be found in the regulations which have been issued from the treasury department for the guidance of the American officials upon whom the enforcement of the "deal" will devolve. If these regulations do not materially facilitate the sale in the American market of many more articles than those expressly mentioned in the agreement a number of German manufacturers are going to be sadly disappointed. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Has Been Taken Care Of.

"Few Americans will object to reciprocity that reciprocates so very much to our advantage. But how about the German manufacturer?—Brooklyn Eagle.

Don't worry about the German manufacturer. He has been well taken care of. The privilege of fixing an "export price" on goods shipped to this country will be worth to him anywhere from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year in lower duties paid.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

It Will Convene In Baltimore on May 6th.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which will convene in Baltimore on May 6th, will continue about a month, will be one of the most important ecclesiastical gatherings ever held in Maryland.

The growth has been particularly great since 1900. For that year there were 2,928,883 members, and for 1907 3,303,221, a gain of 374,338 for eight years. From 1906 to 1907 the gain was 68,697. There has been an increase of 2,293 in churches and a net increase, allowing for deaths, of 1,350 in ministers.

There will be more than 800 delegates in Baltimore to represent these millions of Methodists. Most of the delegates will have their wives and children wit them, running the number up to nearly 2,000.

The Baltimore Conference will convene in Hamlin Church, Washington, on April 1. Bishop Earl Cranston will preside. Rev. Charles E. Gutherie is pastor of Hamlin church. He was once a pastor at Bloomington.

Card of Thanks.

The membership of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, of Oakland, take this means of expressing their thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who so ably assisted them at their recent banquet.

COMMITTEE.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

Easter Bazaar and Supper.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church will, just prior to Easter, hold a bazaar when many fancy and domestic articles will be on sale; also, supper will be served. Notice of the exact date and the place will appear later.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

OWN A HOME.

No Matter where you live, we will build or buy you a home. You can pay for it in monthly payments, which will average less than rent. A positive guarantee, secured by first-class real estate, is given every subscriber. Every rent payer should send for our free booklet at once which fully explains the plan.

MUTUAL HOME UNION
53 Builder's Exchange Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
W. R. McCLANAHAN,
Piedmont, W. Va.
Agent for Western Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JOHN KITZMILLER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 13th day of February 1908.

WILLIAM CALLIS,
W. J. KITZMILLER,
Executors,
Hoyes, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
Lonaconing, Md.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF Valuable Coal
AND Mining Rights
AND SURFACE
In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in the Mortgage from Charles D. Gillespie and Minnie M. Gillespie, his wife, to The Lonaconing Savings Bank of Allegany County, dated the 13th day of August, 1907, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folios, 128 &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said Mortgage, the undersigned Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in said mortgage, will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,
The 14th Day of March,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock P. M., in front of the the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following described Coal and Mining rights, surface of land and other rights located in Election District No. 8 of Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, on the Western Maryland Railroad:

1. An undivided two-third interest in and to all the coal, and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of a tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract called "Mount Pisgah", and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", South 73 degrees West, 115 perches, North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone, North 53 degrees East, 220 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the tract called "Elk Garden", then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing Three Hundred and Fifteen Acres

2. An undivided two-third interest in and to all that part of the surface of the aforesaid tract of land called contained within the following metes and bounds, course and distances, to-wit:

"ELK GARDEN,"

Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah", and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", and running thence with part of the 12th line thereof, South 73 degrees West, 65¾ perches to a stone, thence North 37½ degrees West, 98 perches to a stone standing in the 8th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden", thence with part of said 14th line North 53 degrees East, 8 perches to a stone, standing at the end thereof, thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone-pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning.

Containing One Hundred Acres.

3. All the rights of the said mortgagors used in conjunction with Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, the water from a spring upon her land adjoining the above described part of said tract called "Elk Garden", and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ said water in business.

This property adjoins the mining property of the Davis Coal and Coke Company and is underlaid with the same veins of coal now being worked by said Company at its great plant at Henry, West Virginia, and is almost in sight of the latter point.

The improvements consist of a dwelling house and necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE, As prescribed by said Mortgage—Cash on day of sale. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
Attorney for the Mortgagee, named in Mortgage.

Notice of First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy

In the Matter of David E. Sanders, Bankrupt, In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of David E. Sanders of Oakland in the county of Garrett, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1908, the said Bankrupt was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held in Oakland, Maryland, at the office of G. S. Hamill on the 21st day of March, A. D., 1908, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time creditors may attend prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
March 5, 1908. Referee in Bankruptcy.

Notice of First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy

In the Matter of Galusha H. Pritchard, Bankrupt. In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Galusha H. Pritchard of Oakland in the County of Garrett and district aforesaid a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of February A. D., 1908, the said Bankrupt was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held in Oakland, Maryland, at the office of G. S. Hamill on the 21st day of March A. D., 1908, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other busines as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
March 5, 1908. Referee in Bankruptcy.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANDREW J. TEATS,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of August, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of February, 1908.

ANASTASIA TEATS,
Administratrix.
Oakland, Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator,
Swanton, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Somerset county, Pa., hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANNA BOGER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of September next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 12th day of March, 1908.

WILLIAM E. BITTNER,
Administrator.
Rockwood, Pa.

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office "Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1908. NUMBER 3

MAIN AIMS OF THE STATE DEMOCRATS.

sl To Make Record For Future Political Purposes.

MR. GORMAN'S GREAT AMBITION.

Low Tax Rate and No Glaring Extravagance to Help Along Disfranchising Amendment Next Year.

Democratic members of the Senate and House of Delegates and the Democratic leaders behind the members are apparently trying to make a reasonably good record. Two weeks of the session yet remain, and much may yet be done to blast anything thus far accomplished. For instance, the expenses of the General Assembly may exceed the appropriation of $170,000, and a deficiency bill may have to make its appearance during the closing days If the bill is kept within the appropriation there will not be much left.

The omnibus and other appropriation bills yet to appear and to pass may upset prearranged plans to avoid extravagance.

There is a purpose in the apparent efforts of the Democrats to win a decent record at Annapolis. There is politics in their plans. They are subordinating everything to the disfranchising amendment which will be submitted to the people next year. The party leaders realize that to carry through that amendment against heavy odds they must have fair wind and full sails.

If the amendment by some odd fate should be approved the Democrats can throw their present ideas of reasonable economy to the demnition bow-wows. They will be so completely in control of both branches of the General Assembly that they can snap their fingers at watchdogs of the treasury.

Another plan of the organization leaders is to substitute State Senator Gorman for Mr. Rayner in the United States Senate next year. The primary election plan for selection of a candidate for senator, originally proposed by Governor Warfield and amended to apply by city legislative districts and by counties, worked so well in bringing about the success of former Gov. John Walter Smith last fall that it will be perpetuated by law. Instead of the party candidate for senator being selected by a majority of party votes cast in the whole state, as advocated by Senator Rayner, the primary election bill on the slate to pass calls for a continuance of the Warfield-Lee plan. Under this Baltimore city's Democratic vote at the primary will amount only to the city's Democratic representation in the General Assembly. When Senator Lee proposed in the last Democratic state convention that successful Democratic candidates for the Senate and House should be obligated to vote for that candidate for the Senate indorsed in the districts and counties of the respective city districts and counties it was thought he had taken the life out of the popular primary plan, and yet Senator Lee's idea is the only one that can prevail in this state, because of the prepondering vote of Baltimore city.

Next year Baltimore will be a battleground between Mr. Rayner and Mr. Gorman. Already the indications are that the organization will be divided. In the counties the organization influence will be switched to Mr. Gorman as far as it will be possible to do so. If the Democratic preference for Senator could be indicated by a popular Democratic vote throughout the state Mr. Rayner's chances of success would be considerably improved. But the powers that prevail at Annapolis have decreed that the district and county plan shall prevail. The primary election bill will be on its passage route this week. Most of the counties do not want it, and many of them will ask to be exempted from its provisions, but there stands the party platform. Governor Crothers believes in adhering to party promises, and some kind of a law will be placed on the statute books.

Senator Gorman has suffered a few defeats at the hands of his own party, of which he is the leader in the Senate. These defeats do not seem, however, to lessen his prestige, nor do they dampen his ardor. He is the same in the hour of success as in the hour of defeat. One of his faults is that he does not know when he is defeated. Some of his adverses are due to his adhesion to his friends, and especially to Senator Biddison. This fact was illustrated last week, when he stood by his Baltimore county friend in an effort to have the Anti-Christian Science bill referred to the Judiciary Committee. He went down to defeat with Mr. Biddison with a smile.

The Democratic leaders are leaving no stone unturned to carry through the suffrage amendment and to bring about the election of Mr. Gorman to the United States Senate. They are preparing to pass a good roads bill by which their machine may be made to run with greater ease. The construction of roads with the state's money will be a powerful lever if properly handled, and the Democratic leaders are not novices.

A companion driving wheel of the machine will be the proposed state liquor license board. Think of the political power vested in three men, the power to grant or withhold liquor licenses in every county in the state. In counties in which this power has heretofore been vested in Republican circuit court judges it is transferred to this state board.

There are Democrats, however, who believe that their party is burdening itself with patronage and power.

The bill providing for an amendment to the charter of the town of Friendsville eliminating yearly elections on the question of the granting licenses to sell liquor within the limits of the town, is reposing peacefully, as was predicted in this paper last week, the temperance committee reporting the measure unfavorable last Friday, the House concurring in the action.

A bill providing for the incorporation of the Castleman River Coal and Coke Company of Garrett county, was introduced in the Senate by Senator Brown on last Friday. The Company, under the charter it seeks, is empowered to issue 2500 shares of stock at $50 per share, with the privilege of increasing the stock to $500,000. It can own 5000 acres of coal lands and mines in Garrett county and can build railways for the purpose of operating the mines. The directors named in the bill are Messrs. William M. Hall and Harry J. Graham, of Frostburg; Chauncey E. Ellithorpe and Thomas J. Johnson, of Garrett county; Roderic Clary and William A. Morgart, of Allegany county.

Senator Brown also introduced a bill to change the name of the Penn-Garrett Coal Company to that of the Western Maryland Coal Company and to give the new company the right to increase the capital stock of the original corporation.

In the Senate Monday night Senator Brown's bill appropriating $4,000 from the State Treasury for public school purposes for Garrett county, was passed and goes to the Governor for approval.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

An Oakland Woman Points to Some Things Needing Attention Locally.

To the Editor of The Republican:

In giving to Foreign and Home Missions has one ever thought that we have quite a field for work of this nature right in our own town and that every resident is in a measure responsible for the conditions that exist among the unfortunate of Oakland.

Have we no compulsory school law? If not, why not?

Children are running the streets who have never been in either the day school or the Sabbath school, and how can we expect from these our future "law abiding citizens?" This being the case, we are plainly neglecting our duty to God as well as to man.

If I should tell you of a few of the things or show you a picture in real life in even one of the homes in this town in which children are being reared to manhood and womanhood, you would blush with shame to think such conditions lie so near our own door.

The writer knows of large families crowded into one room, some without food and scarcely enough clothing to cover them. Have we not charity sufficient to assist these needy ones? Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye do it unto Me."

It is no disgrace to be poor, but it is a sin to be unclean, and there is no excuse for unsanitary conditions when soap and water may be had so cheap.

I think that if our school buildings were put into better sanitary conditions diseases would not be so prevalent every year as has been the case during the past two or three winters.

To better these conditions, why not have a general housecleaning time. Let the health board, the school authorities and the citizens generally all help clean up the town, and let our Christian influence go out to help those in need, teaching honesty, cleanliness and Godliness. Then we need not have any fear for the future of Oakland.

AN OAKLAND WOMAN.

Married.

KIMMELL—PAUGH—At the residence of the groom's father, Mr. Chauncey Kimmell, Mountain Lake Park, Tuesday, the 17th inst., by Rev. John M. Davis, of Oakland, in the presence of a few friends, Miss Emma I. Paugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Paugh, and Mr. Lambert Lloyd Kimmell. The attendants were Miss Maud Browning and Mr. Isaac Paugh, a brother of the bride. Following the ceremony a most elaborate dinner was served at the home of the groom.

If there is one thing in which churches, as a rule, need to be more careful, it is the matter of preachers' salaries. With an indifference and an insensibility which we cannot understand many churches seem to think that a contract between themselves and the minister is no contract at all. They promise him a definite salary then pay him whatever is convenient. The gas man, the coal man and even the sexton must be paid, but the debt owing the minister is looked upon as altogether righteous and proper.

DEATH OF AN ESTIMABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Percy Proctor Succumbs After a Short Illness.

Mrs. Percy Proctor departed this life on Saturday, March 14th, 1908, at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C. She had been slightly indisposed for about a week but neither she nor her husband considered her condition serious. Mr. and Mrs. Proctor arrived at Washington from Summerville, S. C., on Wednesday, the 11th inst., and upon their arrival at their hotel a physician was called who pronounced Mrs. Proctor's ailment to be a serious case of heart trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Proctor had been travelling leisurely for the past fifteen months or more and had spent time in the principal cities of the Pacific Coast and Denver, Hot Springs, Ark., and the past winter in South Carolina. At the time of Mrs. Proctor's unexpected death they were on their way to Atlantic City for a time and had planned to extend their trip to Canada spending the summer in the Adirondacks.

Several years ago Mr. Procter built a beautiful residence in Oakland when with his wife and boy, Percy, Jr., he spent his summers in elegant leisure. Mrs. Proctor was very much attached to Oakland and was held in high esteem by all our people.

Sometime after Mr. and Mrs. Procter were settled in their summer home "Surmount," their only child Percy, Jr., died suddenly whilst away at school. His untimely death was a great shock to the parents and Mrs. Procter never recovered her former spirits and cheerfulness. At the close of the season of 1906 Mr. Procter sold his home here and started on a long journey which had not ended at the time of Mrs. Procter's death. Oakland never seemed quite the same to them after the loss of their boy and but for that great sorrow which came into their lives they would doubtless be living here now. During her residence here Mrs. Procter was a communicant of St. Matthew's P. E. church and an active participant in all Parish work.

Mrs. Procter was a native of New York. Two brothers survive her, Messrs. Henry C. and Charles B. Meyer. She is survived also by three sisters, Mrs. Jeannette M. Thurbee, of New York; Mrs. Pauline M. Procter, Rome, Italy, and Mrs. Homer A. Wessel, Cincinnati.

I am sure I voice the sentiment of his numerous friends and acquaintances in Oakland in extending to the bereaved husband and father our sympathy and express our profound sorrow for the irreparable loss which he has sustained. "May our Heavenly Father temper the wind to the shorn lamb."

THOMAS J. PEDDICORD.

Oakland, Md., March 18, 1908.

DISQUALIFIES YOU.

A Request to Get on the Jury Makes You Incompetent.

So many people think that all they have to do get on the jury is to see the clerk of the circuit court or one of the judges, and make a request of that kind. Nothing could be further from the truth, as such a request disqualifies such a person from being a juryman

The above has come to be such a frequent occurrence that the court has taken the following from an opinion rendered by the late Judge McSherry and caused it to be made known through the office of the clerk of the court E. Z. Tower. The portion of the opinion of interest in the matter referred to is as follows:

"Obviously, then, persons whose names were recommended or suggested the sheriff was, by the Code of 1860, forbidden to summon; and persons whom the sheriff was forbidden by that Code to summon, are by the eleventh section of Art. 51 of the Code of 1888, expressly and absolutely disqualified to serve as jurors. In other words, the disqualification of a person arising from the fact that his name has been recommended or suggested still prevails; and as a consequence, it follows that such a person must be excluded from the jury."

Farm For Sale or Rent.

I have a farm 3 miles north of Oakland and 1½ miles west of Deer Park, containing 126 acres, with new eight-room house and good barn, which I offer for rent or sale.

D. M. DIXON.

Box Supper.

The Young Men's Christian Society will hold a box supper in the rooms of the Association on Tuesday, March 24, beginning at 7:30 o'clock p. m. A program of a literary and musical numbers for rendition on the above evening has also been prepared. All are cordially invited to be present.

DEATH CLAIMS GRAND OLD MAN OF MARYLAND

United States Senator William Pinkney Whyte Has Gone to His Reward.

A GREAT JURIST AND STATESMAN

Distinguished Scholar and Orator.—Served the State as Comptroller, Governor and Attorney General.—Successor of the Late Arthur P. Gorman.

BALTIMORE, March 17. — William Pinkney Whyte, United States Senator from Maryland, died tonight in his home here after an illness of a few days. He contracted a cold last Thursday in returning from Washington. Erysipelas developed. It was thought he would recover and plans were being made to take him to Atlantic City. This afternoon at five o'clock the disease descended to his throat and deprived him of speech, death resulting finally from heart failure.

Senator Whyte was born in Baltimore August 9, 1824. He was admitted to the bar in 1846 aad was elected to the Legislature in 1847, and elected Comptroller of the Treasury in 1852. He represented the Maryland Democracy in the national Democratic convention of 1868 and was appointed to succeed Reverdy Johnson as United States Senator in 1858. He was elected Governor of Maryland in 1871 and served till 1874, when he was elected United States Senator for the full term. In 1881 he retired from the Senate and was elected mayor of Baltimore the same year. He became Attorney General of Maryland in 1887, serving four years. He was appointed delegate to the Congress of American Nations by President Harrison in 1889, but declined because of the pressure of his duties as Attorney General. He became chairman of the Baltimore City Charter Commission in 1898, and in 1900 accepted the office of City Solicitor of Baltimore under Mayor Hayes, the last public office held by him until called upon to succeed the late Arthur P. Gorman in the United States Senate. He was appointed by Governor Warfield on June 8, 1906, to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Gorman, who died on June 4.

The appointment met with the general and instantaneous approval not only of Maryland, but wherever Senator Whyte was known. For some years he has been affectionately referred to by his friends as the "Grand Old Man" of Maryland. At the time of his appointment to succeed Senator Gorman the bitter feud that existed for many years between the two men was recalled. It was in 1880 that Senator Gorman succeeded in defeating Mr. Whyte for reelection to the Senate and first procured the place for himself. From that time until Senator Gorman's death both the personal and political relations between the two men were unfriendly, and in the memorable campaigns of 1895 and 1897, when the Gorman organization was overthrown and Mr. Gorman himself was defeated, Senator Whyte took an active part in the fight against him.

Prior to his defeat by Mr. Gorman for re-election to the Senate, it is said Senator Whyte was in control of the party organization almost as completely as Mr. Gorman not only gave to the latter the seat in the United States Senate, but likewise placed in his hands the leadership of the Democratic party in the state.

That twenty-six years after Mr. Gorman succeeded him in the Senate Senator Whyte, who in all those years had been politically opposed to Mr. Gorman, should succeed him in turn, is said to be an incident practically unprecedented in the political history of the country.

Although 82 years of age at the time he was appointed to succeed Mr. Gorman, Senator Whyte retained his mental faculties to a remarkable degree, and was as agile and energetic as many of the senators half his age. He retained his mental and physical strength up to the moment he was overtaken by the illness that caused his death.

Communicated.

OAKLAND, MD., Mar. 16, 1908.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Mr. C. E. Ellithorp, the outgoing member of the School Board, has been censured by Mr. Oliver Buckle and some of his friends for Mr. Buckle's failure to get a certificate at the last teachers' examination. The unfairness to Mr. Ellithorp has been circulating and growing worse for nearly a year, and I feel it my duty to set the complaint right. Mr. Ellithorp had nothing whatever to do with Mr. Buckle's failure, and was indeed surprised and disappointed when he learned of Mr. Buckle's failure. He expressed his regrets and said he believed Mr. Buckle would make a good teacher.

Mr. Buckle had not been teaching for a year and I think had been neglecting his studies. I account for his failure in this way, and like Mr. Ellithorp I felt sorry.

Dr. Bartlett and myself are entirely responsible for the grading of Mr. Buckle's manuscript, and not Mr. Ellithorp, and I hope that those who have censured Mr. Ellithorp will set themselves right when they have seen this explanation. I can assure Mr. Buckle that there was not then and is not now any other than kind feeling for him by the entire board.

Very truly,
E. A. BROWNING,
Co. Sup't.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

DIXON & KELSO

PRICE CURRENT FOR GROCERIES

2 bars Laundry Soap,	05
2 cakes Toilet Soap,	05
Good roasted Coffee,	12½
California Hams,	10
Best Side Meat,	10
Small Hams,	12½
Large Hams,	12
Fancy large Florida Oranges,	25
Fancy large Lemons,	25
Fancy large Apples per bu,	1 00
Tomatoes per can,	06
Corn per can,	08
Granulated Sugar,	05½
Brown Sugar,	05
Leggetts 2 lb. Premier Oats,	10
Fish,	05
Best Winter Flour, Bag,	65
Best Spring Flour, Bag,	75
Navy Beans,	05
Lima Beans,	08
Hominy,	03

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST
It Costs No More.

WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price, bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

KODAK SAFETY FILM

ANNUAL REPORT OF STATE MINE INSPECTOR.

An Interesting Resume By Thomas Murphy of Maryland Coal Operations.

Lonaconing, March 16.—(Special)—State Mine Inspector Thomas Murphy, of Midland, has just issued his annual report for the year from May 1, 1906, to May 1, 1907.

The report, at once concise and comprehensive is one of the best and most complete ever issued by a state mine inspector either in this or any other state.

In his review and recommendations Inspector Murphy gives the following figures concerning the industry in Maryland: "The year 1906 has been one of the most prosperous in the history of coal mining in the state, both in point of tons mined, and in number of fatal accidents. In 1906 there was mined in the state 4,880,620 long tons or 5,491,294 short tons; of this tonnage, 4,491,390 were mined by pick, and 381,236 tons were mined by the use of machine. Allegany county produced 4,181,658 tons pick mined, and all of the machine mined coal for the year. The increase in coal mined in Allegany was 218,521 tons and arrett, 11,210."

e states that Garrett is rapidly ing to the front as a coal pro- er and in a few years will come e to Allegany in total tonnage.

he number of persons employed in coal mining in the state is given as 6,201 miners, 4,412 drivers, 401 inside laborers, 628 outside laborers. This is a decrease from the figures of years ending May 1, 1906.

In the matter of recommendations for the passage of laws looking to the safeguarding of lives and persons of the men engaged in the business of getting out coal he says: "The safe-guarding of the lives and health of employees should be the paramount object and that form of government or law that comes nearest to that end is the one that we should all aim to reach." He further states: "I do not believe it should be necessary to have great calamities before we take the proper precautions."

He deprecates the fact that politicians sometimes befog the public mind in regard to mining laws and legislation.

Mr. Murphy goes into the subject of using powder and dynamite in the mines. He argues that no one, miner or company men should be permitted to use powder to blast the coal until the coal has first been prepared, that is mined and cut. This would give a more economical system of mining the coal. He also urges special provisions on the subject of ventilation, such as slowing down of fans when shot firing is being done.

The subject of the use of electricity in coal mining is also given considerable attention by the inspector, who is anxious to see the mining laws amended to meet this "comparatively new and highly dangerous improvement in mine methods." He also wants the coal operating companies to be required by law to file maps and tracings of their operations at the office of the mine inspector. He advocates the modification of that section of the law referring to the kind of oil to be used in the mines, bringing the law to conform to the Ohio mine law in that respect.

Provision should be made for the employment of and examination of fire bosses, as there are sevaral mines in the state where explosive gas is found in small quantities. The applicant for the office of mine inspector should be required to pass an examination because the duties of the office are becoming more and more exacting. Some more rigid system of determining the qualifications of mine foremen should be devised. A state system of licensing men for such work would be a yast improvement over the present system.

The mining law should be amended so as to require mine owners to fill out blanks provided by the inspector at the end of each year relative to statistics, acreage worked out, and unworked territory, tons produced, accidents, etc., and all other information not of a private nature.

Only one company refused to give these statistics to Mr. Murphy, but he got them from another source.

The subject of having an appropriation made to provide funds for the administration of the office received some consideration also.

In the matter of drainage Mr. Murphy has considerable to say. He tells of the great benefit the new drainage tunnel recently put into operation by the Consolidation Coal Company and after describing the workable coal measures of the George's Creek basin he advocates the building of a general tunnel by the state for the purpose of draining off the entire measure.

The following is Mr. Murphy's scheme:

A drainage tunnel could be driven from some point on Warrior Run near Cresaptown into the bottom of the Georges Creek Basin, that I believe would afford complete drainage for all the coal possessing any commercial value. It is doubtful if this tunnel would need to be more than three miles long, that is, the main drainage tunnel: of course it might require branch tunnels of short distances to reach some of the flat work in the bottom of the syncline. The plan that suggests itself to my mind in connection with this tunnel, would be that the state take it in hand. There is no better way that the state could spend about $1,000,000 than by paving the way for an easy development of the valuable coal seams in the western part of the state. Private corporations could not agree on doing a work like this that means so much economic value to the commonwealth. Some would be afraid that one company would derive more benefit from it than another, and this would no doubt be true. If the state would drive the tunnel it could be made a source of revenue for perhaps the next 50 years. Each operating company using it as an outlet for their water would be charged so much per ton, say one cent, assuming that a company would put water into the tunnel proportionately with the number of tons mined. The revenue thus derived from one seam of coal would more than double the cost of construction, and as a safety precaution, from accumulations of water and probable gas, it can hardly be estimated. The water itself could be utilized. It would be an everflowing and constant stream, and always increasing. Why not give it drop enough at the opening and wire the power thus furnished back to the mines or towns, and this would be the means of additional revenue to the state. Some may say that this is away in the future, but I do not agree to that. I think it is a live question and if found practicable could be worked out in the next few years. I trust this matter will be taken up by some people in the state and given the consideration I think it merits.

In order to keep scales at the mines in good condition the inspector thinks a set of test scales should be kept at every weigh office, then the scales could be tested at any time when thought to be untrue.

His chapter on accidents in British and in American coal mines is decidedly interesting. He compares the two countries in a thoroughly detailed manner and finds that although the industry is nearly two thousand years old in Britain and only a little more than one hundred years in America, the death rate in America compares very favorably with that of the British mines. And from the report is gleaned the fact that the British government exercises almost a military control over the mining industry. Following up this review Mr. Murphy gives a table showing the fatal accidents in Maryland during the year covered by the report and has only four to report from the coal mines and one from the fireclay mines, making a death rate of only 64 per 1000 men employed in the industry. This is a record that beats the world, 1,000,000 tons and more being mined for each fatal accident. Mr. Murphy has added a new column to his accident reports, that showing how many persons were dependent upon the ones killed in the mines.

For the year 1906 the number of dependents left was 34.

In the table showing the number of inspections, the total of which is 353 or just 12 less than one for each day of the year, not excluding Sundays. This is a greater number than one man should make, hence the law should be changed to require four visits per year instead of six as it now stands or else an assistant inspector should be provided for. There are about 50 coal mines in Allegany county and 15 in Garrett, and 3 fire clay mines in Allegany, making a total of 68 mines that are according to law to be visited and inspected once in two months or six times a year. One man cannot do this and attend to office work. It is a physicial impossibility.

In addition to the coal mining industry, there has been added since Mr. Murphy has been in the office the inspection of the fireclay mines, which had been ignored by previous inspectors.

Mr. Murphy predicts a great future for this branch of mining in the state.

The subject of mining is always a pertinent one. While a large area of the seam known as the Big Vein is worked out or said to be, considerable progress has been made in recent years in going after coal known to be yet unmined in the Big Vein, and in mines that have been abandoned as worked out. The Piedmont and Georges Creek Coal Company has done a great deal in this respect. The Consolidation Coal Company is doing considerable along this line.

In conclusion Mr. Murphy should be congratulated on his success as mine inspector, and all interested in the industry should feel proud that such a conscientious and careful man has had the office for the past four years. Mr. Murphy has been alike careful of the interests of employer and employe and has administered his office with one purpose, that of conscientious service to all concerned.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted—where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

AN EFFORT TO PROMOTE WORLD'S PEACE

Approval of the Principle That Adequate Armament Dispels Belligerency.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17.—There is no firmer friend of arbitration and universal peace than Mr. Hayne Davis, lawyer, formerly of North Carolina, now of New York. Mr. Davis attended the second Hague Peace conference and reported that important gathering for the Hearst News Service. He keeps thoroughly posted on the progress of the peace movement, the world over, and always may be depended upon to say something interesting. I met Mr. Davis the other day and he was vastly pleased with the peace movement in his old State.

He said. "The Wilmington, N. C., Chamber of Commerce, appointed delegates to the approaching annual meeting of the North Carolina Peace society, approved strong resolutions in favor of adequate armament and effective arbitration as corrective agencies for national security and international justice and at the same time made on appropriation [in aid of the Peace societies' work.

"A special meeting of the Peace society, called to take action upon holding an arbitration and peace congress on the approaching anniversary of the society, authorized the president to appoint the necessary committee and to invite Senator McCreary, Representative Bartholdt and Andrew Carnegie as the guests of honor at the congress.

"Major Chumm, of the United States army, in command of Fort Caswell, Captain Robertson, of the Wilmington Light Infantry, assisted at the meeting, the latter being one of the vice presidents of the society. J. Allen Tayloe, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided and declared that chambers of commerce ought to assist peace societies when they advocate peace through power on the right side, instead of peace at any cost.

"The society placed on the program of its approaching congress, the relations of arbitration and armament, declaring itself in principle for adequate armament and effective arbitration and instructed the president to give due place on the program of speakers to representatives of the army and navy, an especial invitation being extended to Admiral Dewey and Captain Hobson. This action by the North Carolina Peace society and by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, makes a new departure in peace propaganda and is heartily endorsed by leaders in the business, political and patriotic circles here.

"Mrs. McLean, of New York, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Henderson, of Mississippi, formerly president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, will address the North Carolina congress. A representative of the Confederate Veterans and of the G. A. R. will also be invited."

It is wonderful what a vast amount of political misinformation there is about Washington. Naturally every man one meets here is deeply interested in politics, most of them owe their bread and butter to the game. It seems to be a peculiarity of American politics that those interested know it all, or think they do anyway. They are especially well posted on the way things are going at home, to hear them tell it. As a matter of fact, outside the big men, Washington knows about as little of the trend of politics in the country as any city of half its size, and the man who depends on the general gossip of Washington to know how matters are going, is certainly leaning on a broken read. The men who know things in politics do not talk.

* * *

As a matter of fact, the general run of men who secure appointments at Washington are not strong men at home. Congressmen and senators can generally find places at home for the really strong men. Here they can be of use to their political sponsors. The men who are of little use in a hot campaign, men who may have influential relatives that must be placated get the Washington places and what they really don't know about the real situation at home is the sure enough thing.

* * *

I heard rather an amusing story the other day which illustrates tnis point. A certain Western senator was vigorously urging the appointment of a man from his district for a consulate in Africa. The man was notoriously an enemy of the senator, politically. He was not of any particular use as a friend but, he had a vitriolic kind of eloquence which made him decidedly unpleasant as an enemy. A friend of the senator's expressed some surprise at the activity of the statesman in behalf of his enemy.

"Why are you making so hard a fight to get Smith that place at Bungo Bungo," he asked the senator.

"Because I don't know of a vacancy further from home," was the prompt and candid reply.

* * *

An interesting figure in Washington recently was David Zephler, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, who is here with a delegation of his tribesmen, who have been trying to get several matters straightened out. Zephler is a quiet sort of a chap, speaks English like a well-educated man and attends to business. He was famous as an Indian scout in his younger days, having served under General Custer in the campaign which resulted in his death. Zephler was with Reno at the time of the massacre. He is said to be one of the most influential men in the councils of the Sioux and also has the full confidence of the officials of the Indian bureau. He will probably get what he comes for.

* * *

The old saying that a government official "rarely dies and never resigns" has been shown to be false in at least one case. For eleven years, Captain James H. Harris, of Indiana has been warden of the United States jail, but he will superintend the putting in of the crops on his farm near Noblesville, Ind., this year as a private citizen.

"I am getting to be an old man," seid Captain Harris, when asked why he resigned, "and I find the White river more alluring to me than the Potomac, that's all. I had rather watch the corn and cows during my remaining days than to supervise the rising up and setting down of the human wrecks who have come under my care for the past half score of years."

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

Diesolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership between George W. Cover and William J. Cover was dissolved on the 22nd day of February, 1908, so far as relates to the said George W. Cover. All debts due to said partnership are to be paid and those due from the same discharged at Salt Block, in Garrett county, Md., where the business will be continued by the said William J. Cover as William J. Cover.

GEORGE W. COVER & SON.
Friendsville, Md., Feb. 26, 1908.

WANTED—A good team suitable for farm work. Apply to Wm. M. Kelley, Coketon, W. Va.

WORLD'S AWAKENING SHOWS WAR OF THE FUTURE.

English Book Describes a Conflict Involving Four Great Nations.

JAPAN AS AN AGGRESSOR

Opening Fight in Australia, and Hostilities Spread to Phillippines.

The author of the famous "War of the Future," the late Jean de Bloch, insisted that an uprising of the Socialistic proletariat would bring the next great world-war to an inconclusive close. A book is published here which adopts that opinion, and is interesting in yet another sense because it illustrates the growing disillusionment of England with the too obtrusive success of her ally, Japan.

"The World's Awakening" purports to be a scientific military novel; it describes a war which breaks out in 1920 between England and Japan, and soon involves France, Germany and the United States. The anonymous author explains that the Anglo-Japanese alliance was not renewed in 1915 mainly owing to the opposition of Australia, which hates and dreads Japan, and threatens to "cut the painter" unless the alliance is at once dissolved.

It is Australia that brings on the Armageddon. During a courtesy visit of Japan's fleet to Sydney, the Australian mob shows its feeling toward the visitors by attacking their sailors and mobbing the local Japanese residents. The Japanese admiral opens fire on the town and occupies it. Negotiations ensue with England. Japan demands reparation, and makes the impossible demand that her immigrants shall be allowed free access, given the franchise, and placed on complete equality with the white man.

While negotiations are supposed to be proceeding, the Japanese admiral on the China station informs the British commander that "war was declared," and attacks and destroys the British fleet, Port Arthur fashion.

Japan scores everywhere. She incites Hindus to revolt, and intrigues an insurrestion in Cairo. A rebellion against American rule breaks out in the Philippines, which proves to be the result of a Japanese plot. Japan soon shows her hand, lands troops, defeats an American force, and makes no concealment of her determination to seize the islands and keep them.

Germany and France meantime come to blows, and Germany is discomfited.

America declares that she will prosecute hostilities with Japan at all costs, and will under no circumstances surrender the Philippines. The war continues indecisively.

But the proletariat of the world knows no indecision. The proletariat has decided that the war shall not continue. Anti-war strikes and riots begin in England, and make it impossible to continue the fight. Russia and Italy offer to intervene, and the war comes to a sudden end with an appeal to The Hague Tribunal.

"The World's Awakening" is only one of many books on future wars which have appeared in England during the past few years. But it is very significant that its author selects Japan as the great enemy of the world's peace. No Englishman who wanted a sale for his book would have made such a choice even a year ago. It is still more significant that the Armageddon should be ended by peace-loving proletariat on the lines laid down by De Bloch.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

When Margie Came to El Rosa.

By Ina Wright Hanson.

Copyright, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

The mustard had wedded California plain to plain, binding them with its golden bands, when Margie came to El Rosa.

"You had better go after her, Frank," said her aunt, Mrs. Graham, mistress of El Rosa. "You are the only one of us who can talk with fingers to the poor, afflicted child."

Having nothing to do but idle away my vacation, I very gladly took the ten mile drive from El Rosa, in the hills, to the little board station on the track where I was to meet Margie coming out of the north. As I drove along I reviewed the signs one uses in the deaf and dumb language, glad that I had learned them on a certain other idle vacation.

No child alighted from the long train, but a young, slender woman with hair colored like the fields of mustard through which I had passed. She came directly to me, somewhat timidly, but with no indication of nervousness. She caught up a tiny book fastened to her chatelaine and pencilled rapidly:

"Are you from El Rosa?"

Instantly my fingers went into commission, and the lighting up of her delicate face was well worth seeing.

"I am not a very rapid talker," I said when we were driving toward the hills. Fortunately the horses were fat and lazy and needed no particular attention, "but with practice I shall do better."

"You do beautifully," she flashed back. "I am so glad I do not have to do the writing; it is so slow. I have the proverbial woman's tongue, only multiplied by ten. That's dreadful, isn't it?"

"Terrible! I see my finish," I answered mournfully, or it would have been mournful if my fingers could have shown expression. "I wonder why I thought you were a child. I supposed you would bring your dollie with you."

Mary laughed. "You mean my Teddy bear. Dolls aren't fashionable nowadays. I suppose you thought I was a child by the way auntie talks about me. I get lots of petting everywhere I go, and honestly I like it.

"FRANK—I AM—LIKE"

She was very attractive, this silent Margie. Silent is not the word at all either, for she was anything but silent. She was the embodiment of motion, graceful, alluring motion. Her yellow hair blew gently in little rings about her delicate face, in which the color came and went incessantly; her eyes glowed and laughed and changed from gray to almost black with her changing thoughts; her pretty mouth, though denied the power of speech, could smile with a score of meanings, and her fluttering, slender fingers spoke grace itself. By the time we had driven through the mustard fields and wound around the sweet scented hills I was regarding this girl with strange feelings, considering the fact that I was a confirmed celibate, or thought I was.

How Margie loved flowers! The roses which gave the house its name, the pinks, nasturtiums, the red geraniums, which Californians are inclined to dub "common"—she reveled among them like a golden butterfly. But better, I think, did she love the wild things of the hills. When we came in from our horseback rides, fragrance of monardella and southern wood and "good medicine" mingled their sweetness and floated from her garments like incense from about some beautiful, golden crowned sun goddess.

We never saw that girl morbid. She was like a spirit from paradise with its brightness still touching her. One day I asked her how she could be so when she had been so cruelly afflicted.

"Nothing can work me damage except myself," she answered. "Some one has said that the harm we sustain we carry about with us and that we are never real sufferers except by our own fault."

"That doesn't prove up. Is it your fault that you are deprived of hearing beautiful words and making them?"

"Perhaps your idea of damage and mine are not quite the same," she spelled, and her eyes were very tender. "I have so much that otherwise I might have missed. I have learned so much. I have learned to be happy whether I am happy or not." Here she laughed. "Oh, that can be done; but, do you know, I have a little private theory that just around the corner there is waiting for me so great a happiness that I won't ever have to pretend any more. It will be so magnificent a happiness that unhappiness will be impossible. It's sure waiting just around the corner."

Another day we sat on the hillside idly watching birds and butterflies and creeping things at our feet.

"Are you going to stay here, as your aunt wishes?" I asked her.

"Oh, no!" The answer came quickly. "In a few days I am going to work. I am to teach in the school for deaf and dumb at Salem."

"Life would be pleasanter here for you and safer," I objected.

"What is life," she spelled quaintly, "but what I am thinking of all day? I had best be thinking of helping other people to be happy and useful, not to be just day dreaming. You are going into the world presently yourself."

"That is different. I am a man, and a man's place is in the busy world. You are only a dear little loving child, Margie, and you should be protected. Let me take care of you, Margie, and let me begin now. Will you be my wife, sweetheart? You know how I love you."

Margie shook her head regretfully, but with no show of yielding.

"If I were like other women, Frank, I would put my arms around your neck and say 'yes,' so happily—oh, so happily—but I should be a drawback to you always, boy. In after years you will thank me for hurting you now."

I pleaded, but pleading was no use with Margie. Back of the gentleness was a firmness of will which admitted no weakening. So in a few days Margie went to her work in Salem and I to mine in Los Angeles. She would write to me—she would grant me that consolation.

There came a day long months after El Rosa was only a memory when a northbound train was taking me with maddening slowness to Margie. I was not going as I had always planned that sometimes I should go—with happy thoughts and joyful anticipation. I was going to Margie "seriously hurt; will die."

"That's what the cold print of the morning paper had said, and, oh, the precious hours wasted when I did not know! She had been taking her weekly walk from the school to the city when, as she was passing the rock quarry, an explosion had occurred. "Seriously hurt; will die." How the diabolical words burned themselves into my aching eyes as the train crawled on!

After an eternity of misery I found myself at Margie's bed, but before I had reached her I had found the newspaper story was false in that she would not die—she would live! Something else was in the nurse's face to tell me, but I couldn't wait to hear it.

I bent over my darling, and my heart jumped as I saw the joy in her face at sight of me. Even as I noted that, a voice sweet as the gentle spirit of her came to my wondering ears:

"Frank—I am—like"—

The halting tongue was too slow, and the weak, eager fingers took up the sentence.

"I am as other women now, Frank. The explosion hurt me, but see what it did—I can hear you speak, and I can talk, though my hands are still. I told you that some day I should turn a corner"—

The little hands were forced to rest. My overpowering joy and the lump I was trying to swallow made me foolish.

"I've been standing around the corner all the time," reproached my silly tongue, "but you wouldn't open your eyes and see me."

She laughed, and her mouth formed a word, "Frank!" Oh, the sweetness of it! Then the little fluttering fingers again.

"You are very conceited, and some day I am going to rumple your hair dreadfully, but just now I want to go to sleep. When I wake up"—

The dear eyes closed, and the smiling nurse beckoned me away till she should wake up.

No Partiality.

The workings of justice as recorded by Major E. C. Johnson in his "Track of the Crescent" were a trifle erratic. An Englishman was traveling in a wild part of Hungary, and anxious to see the institutions of the country he made an application to a town magistrate, asking to hear how justice was conducted.

The magistrate, gorgeous in a magnificent Magyar costume, received him cordially and sent for any case which might be awaiting trial. A gigantic gendarme in an immense cocked hat ushered in a prisoner, a plaintiff and a witness. The prisoner was accused of stealing the plaintiff's goose.

"Well, sir," said the magistrate to the accuser, "what have you to say?"

"Please, your high mightiness, the prisoner stole my goose."

The magistrate turned to the witness.

"What have you to say?"

"Please, your high mightiness, I saw the prisoner steal the goose."

"Prisoner, what have you to say?"

"Please, your high mightiness, I did not steal the goose."

The magistrate then delivered the sentence.

"I give you [illegible]" he said to the [illegible] the goose.

"I give [illegible] not [illegible] turning [illegible] have [illegible] mind[illegible]

[illegible]

"But [illegible] said the [illegible] mother [illegible] you were [illegible]

"Yes'm," replied Willie, "but, you know, you told me not to believe everything I hear."—Houston Post.

BY THE LITTLE ONES.

Amusing Sayings Out of the Mouths of Babes.

Mrs. Neighbors—It's too bad of you, Mildred, to worry your mamma so.

Little Mildred—Huh, you don't know mamma! She worries me more than I worry her.

Mother—Harold, why did you take your little sister's candy this morning?

Small Harold—I don't know, mamma. Perhaps I'm a kleptomaniac.

Little Ethel (looking at picture books)—Elmer, where do you s'pose Adam got the names for all the animals?

Small Elmer—Why, from the dictionary, of course.

Little Irene—I found a four leaved clover today. That means good luck.

Small Elmer—Huh, I found a horseshoe! That means still better luck.

Little Irene—How do you know?

Small Elmer—'Cause I can sell it for 2 cents.

"Here is a picture of a thimble, Emerson," said the Boston teacher. "Now, can you tell me what a thimble is?"

"A thimble," answered small Emerson, "is a diminutive truncated cone, convex on its apex and semiperforated with symmetrical indentations."—Chicago News.

He Approved That Plan.

It was said in the Norton family that Uncle Hiram had no ear for music, as he failed to appreciate the vocal efforts of his niece Margaret. But if his ears were defective his pocketbook left nothing to be desired.

"We've been talking over Margaret's voice," said a dauntless and tactful relative who had been delegated to approach Uncle Hiram on the subject. "It really seems as if she ought to take lessons and practice regularly. Her mother talks of selling a little of her mining stock for Margaret's sake."

Uncle Hiram's keen old face wore a mutinous expression.

"Have to practice two, three hours a day, I suppose?" he said dully.

"Oh, yes," said the venturesome relative; then she had a sudden inspiration.

"It would be best of all if she could go abroad for two or three years," she murmured thoughtfully, "but of course that is out of the question—the expense"—

"Never you mind about the expense!" broke in Uncle Hiram joyfully. "If she can go abroad—a good long ways abroad—to take her lessons and do her practicing, I'll foot the expense."—Youth's Companion.

At the Minstrel Show.

"Mistah Bones," began the corpulent end man as he twirled his tambourine "my old father always told me to make money like hot cakes and the world would respect me."

"Hot cakes am too slow," yawned Mr. Bones. "If you wants de world to respect you dese days you hab to make money lak bananas."

"Lak bananas! How am dat?"

"In bunches, 'Mistah Tambo, in bunches."—Chicago News.

In the Clouds.

The Butler—We've got a burglar in the kitchen, sir.

The Professor (absently)—Ask him to come again. I'm busy just now.

Female Ignorance.

"John, they don't ever sell dress goods in Wall street, do they?"

"Gracious, child, what put such an absurd idea in your head?"

"Well, I'm sure I heard you the other day talking about wash sales."—Baltimore American.

Not Yet, but Soon.

"You seem to manage remarkably well on your housekeeping money."

"Yes. The tradespeople haven't sent in their bills yet."—New York Press.

Greaser Jose's Place.

You kin brag of city caffeys and their trout from streams and lakes,
Of their meals served a la carty and their mushrooms and their steaks,
But the grub at Greaser Jose's is the finest ever dealt,
Come, hombrey, and jest tuck a bowl of chile 'neath your belt!

The music's kind o' skimpin', and it don't go very far;
It's dealt out by a half breed and a mighty bad guitar.
But old Jose is a winner when it comes to mixin' dope,
And the first smell of his chile 'd give a dyin' hoss thief hope.

There is sometimes rough stunts doin' and p'raps some powder burnt,
For the men who eat at Jose's all the p'litest ways ain't learnt.
But good food is like to most things that are scarce and hard to get—
It's worth some risk in trailin' and a-makin' yours, you bet!

So jest come with me to Jose's, where there ain't no menu stunt,
Where the tablecloths is minus and a napkin's an affront,
And you'll get a bowl of chile that'll warm you through and through,
So come with me to Jose's, you tenderfoot—yes, you!

—Denver Republican.

If Christ Visited The World Today.

By the Rev. R. J. CAMPBELL, Prominent Preacher of London.

IF Jesus came to minister to us today and did not say who he was, do you think his own church would receive him GLADLY? I am perfectly sure it would not. It would regard him as a DANGEROUS REVOLUTIONARY engaged in upsetting order in the church and state.

If Jesus came to London today he would not go down to the poor east end and talk to the children dancing to the organ out in the street, say he was their big brother and give them something to eat. HE WOULD NOT THINK CHARITY WOULD MEET THE CASE, and if he did he would not have very much to give away. The east end of London would be TOO MUCH for him, and he would have to work a fresh miracle every day. If he did it would be very demoralizing.

JESUS WOULD STRIKE STRAIGHT AT THE CAUSES WHICH ARE MAKING FOR POVERTY AND DEGRADATION AND KEEPING THE RICH AND THE POOR AWAY FROM EACH OTHER IN THIS MODERN WORLD. HE WOULD EXPOSE THE WHOLE SYSTEM OF GIVING PEOPLE GOOD ADVICE, WHILE WE CONTINUE TO PROFIT BY THEIR MATERIAL DISADVANTAGES. HE WOULD PROBE THE THING TO THE BOTTOM AND WOULD MAKE US ASHAMED OF OURSELVES FOR NEVER HAVING FACED THE SITUATION BEFORE.

A short time ago an artist and his wife were found drowned in the Thames. They had chosen that end because the struggle to live had been too much for them. I suppose there are some people who would say these two poor things would go to hell. If so, IT CANNOT BE VERY MUCH WORSE THAN THE HELL THEY LEFT.

Who makes that hell? I make it. You make it. We all do our little to help to make it—NOT WILLINGLY, BUT THOUGHTLESSLY.

The Struggle Between Graft and Democracy.

By WILLIAM H. LANGDON, District Attorney of San Francisco.

THERE THEY STAND IN OPPOSITION TO EACH OTHER—DEMOCRACY AND GRAFT! ONE UPHOLDS THE HUMAN AND THE CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS OF ALL, THE OTHER WOULD BETRAY THEM TO THE CORRUPT FEW. ONE AFFIRMS AN EVERLASTING BELIEF THAT THE WHOLE PEOPLE MAY ULTIMATELY GOVERN WISELY AND JUSTLY, THE OTHER SNEERS AT THE IDEALISTIC FAITH OF MEN AND WOULD GIVE GOVERNMENT OVER TO THE UNSCRUPULOUS.

The struggle between them is on. ONE MUST GO DOWN. It is for you fellow citizens to decide whether the HEAVY INVESTMENT IN SUFFERING made for humanity by the common people through the long centuries of struggle for popular suffrage has been in vain! It is for you to determine whether the honor of democratic government IS WORTH FIGHTING FOR, whether the ancient sanctities of governmental righteousness are worth the combat or whether in the face of the enemy and under fire we shall commit the horrible TREASON of retreat!

IT IS PROBABLY TRUE THAT "WHAT DEMOCRACY NEEDS IS MORE DEMOCRACY." BUT IN THE REDEMPTION OF GOVERNMENT FROM GRAFT IT IS ALSO TRUE THAT THE FIRST GREAT NEED OF DEMOCRACY IS TALENTED AND SELF SACRIFICING LEADERSHIP. THE PEOPLE ARE HONEST, BUT LIKE ANY LARGE MASS, UNWIELDY. IT IS THE PRESENCE OF THE MAN OF DEVOTION, COURAGE AND INITIATIVE THAT INSURES GENERALSHIP TO THE POPULAR FORCES FOR GOOD IN THEIR STRUGGLE AGAINST THE ORGANIZED MACHINE.

The problems of our complicated civic life demand as splendid expressions of SELF SACRIFICE AND SELF RESTRAINT as any exploit of a barbarous military age. The need is always for a man who will stand up in the popular assemblies and point out the wrong and, having once stood, be strong enough to stand until the wrong is righted. Malice and vice will abuse him, social ostracism and personal isolation will make him suffer, business ruin and even the loss of personal life will be threatened, BUT HE MUST STAND! In the first uncertain days before he has proven his cause the people he would serve will disbelieve in him. In the last days of success this victory will bear with it the sense of having brought unhappiness to the women and the children and the friends of the men upon whom he has dutifully put the shame of proven crime. BUT, ABOVE EVERY PERSONAL SORROW AND ABOVE EVERY PERSONAL LOSS, HE MUST STAND FIRMLY. It was by the leadership of such men, standing in the face of all, that San Francisco was redeemed. It will be by the force of others like them that every city sooner or later will become clean.

Financial Troubles Due to Wastefulness.

By WILLIAM SHERER, Manager of the New York Clearing House.

CAUSES of the present financial difficulties are many and varied. WASTEFULNESS has been one. The war between Russia and Japan disturbed capital throughout the world. The great WASTE OF MATERIAL CAUSED BY A WAR takes years to restore. That war was preventable, but the earthquake and the subsequent fire at San Francisco, which ruined the accumulation of years, were important factors in the waste of capital. As we come nearer to the present time, looking back a very few years, we see how EXTRAVAGANT AND WASTEFUL this prosperous people have been.

THE MISUSE OF TRUST HAS LED THE SUSPICION BY MANY, AND THE CONSEQUENT LOSS OF CONFIDENCE HAS CAUSED THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE TO WITHDRAW THEIR MONEY FROM THE BANKS, HOARDING IT AND THUS KEEPING IT FROM THE CHANNELS OF TRADE, LIMITING NECESSARY PRODUCTION, THEREBY CAUSING A STOPPING OF WORK AND THE SUFFERING WHICH NATURALLY ENSUES THEREFROM.

THE AMERICAN IDEA.

Individualism the Keynote of Our National Success.

Charles L. Edgar and Walton Clark of the National Civic Federation Commission on Municipal Ownership Show Why American Institutions Should Not Be Abandoned at the Demand of Socialists and Municipalizers.

The efforts of the National Civic federation have resulted in a commission of Americans whose first interest in this investigation, as in all else, is to do what they may to preserve and continue the American idea and American institutions, believing that the high state of civilization and prosperity in America justifies the American idea and the American method and places the burden of proof heavily upon those who would say another idea and another method would result in improvement in the condition of the people.

Believing this to be the thought and intent of the membership of the commission and of the committee subordinate to it, we still believe that there are ills in the American body politic that may be remedied or cured. We believe that the remedy should be applied and the cure effected without any unnecessary departure from the American idea and the American system. We believe that the framework upon which may be built purity of administration and the highest possible good of the citizens is in existence with us and that it is not necessary in the effort to cure the ills from which the body politic may be suffering to destroy that body. We submit that, living in a land where peace and prosperity are the common lot, we must be very cautious of change. This does not mean that where abuses are found to exist, they should not be promptly and mercilessly eradicated, but it does mean that changes in system should be undertaken only after conclusive proof that such changes will result in bettering the condition of the individual. We had better bear the relatively few ills we have than subject ourselves to unknown conditions that may bring in their train greater ills of which we do not know.

Our investigation has determined with certainty many heretofore mooted questions. It indicates the probably correct answers to other mooted questions. Where the facts are clear and the conclusion evident our task has been to summarize and indicate. Where there is remaining uncertainty as to facts and conclusions are not evident we have made an effort to determine the probabilities. This has resulted in arguments based on such facts as our investigators have recorded and on our own experience as operators and observers.

We believe no intelligent reader of the voluminous record of this commission's work will fail to conclude that it clearly proves municipal ownership to be productive of many and serious ills, with little or no compensating good.

The writers of these chapters, agreeing, we believe, with the other members of the committee of twenty-one, that public service companies should reasonably be regulated and afforded the protection that comes with regulation and appreciating that the committee was not appointed or constituted to consider methods of regulation, nevertheless desire to record their opinion that some form of regulation of private companies should be adopted in each of the United States. What that form should be this commission is not prepared by any investigation or any study it has made to suggest.

Finally, we who stand in opposition to municipal ownership, speaking, we believe, for all individualists, arraign the arrogance of many of its advocates in assuming that they exclusively occupy the field of reform in dealing with the problems concerned and that they are the sole promoters of measures of economic improvement in municipal affairs. We assert that the opponents of municipal ownership and operation, firm and consistent supporters of justice, are the class seeking the public welfare intelligently and in accordance with American principles. On this point we do not yield to any body of men.

We seek, as a first principle, to insure every man his own. In doing so and in endeavoring to protect the public against oppression and error we find it our duty to demonstrate the errors in the schemes of municipalizers and Socialists and to warn against the oppression that they threaten. We are resisting efforts to put burdens on the backs of the American people. We cannot and will not remain silent while the attempt is made to thrust costly and impracticable projects upon customers of public service corporations and upon the public at large.

We know the truth will out. We are confident that ultimately the American people must appreciate at their value the unsoundness of the arguments of the municipal Socialists. We shall aid in hastening the day when our fellow citizens will know through discussion what the public of London have been taught by bitter experience. London has awakened to the perils of municipalization, as is evidenced by its verdict in the recent borough and county elections. In that great city the municipalizers have led their fellow citizens astray, and their dupes, finding it out, have administered to their false guides an overwhelming rebuke.

We individualists are not seeking to lead the people in strange paths. Our aim is to keep them in the paths they have heretofore trod—paths known, along which the American people have marched to heights of prosperity and civic development

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1908.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We shall during the ensuing ten days, mail to all subscribers who are more than a year in arrears, statements of their accounts. After April 1st no paper on which the subscription has not been paid, can be admitted to the mails under a recent ruling of the Department

THE TAFT BANDWAGON.

In the progressive contest for delegates to the Republican National Convention the combined opposition to Secretary Taft has demonstrated thus far a strength that falls far short of being impressive. Barring the fact that four states that will each cast a large vote in the selection of the presidential candidate are either actually or concededly committed to the support of a "favorite son," the entire opposition vote to the Ohio candidate is not only scattering, but of insignificant volume. And the signs of the weakness and insincerity of the favorite-son program are constantly multiplying and magnifying. For instance, Illinois is concededly for Speaker Cannon, and will send a delegation for Cannon to the convention. But it will be secondarily, as to three-fourths of its voting strength at least a Taft delegation. The Peoria county convention, which met last week, passed a Cannon resolution which, in the windup, is emphatically a Taft resolution.

As it is in Illinois, so it is in New York, Pennsylvania and even Indiana. The delegation from each of the states will be solid for the home candidate—the favorite son—as a courtesy. The logic of the existing situation is just as accurately gauged, however, in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois as it is in other states that are depended upon to supply Republican majorities in presidential elections and which are not being at the outset embarrassed by any "favorite-son" candidate. When New York breaks—and the break may come before the result of the first ballot is announced—there will be a rush for the Empire State representation to Taft. It is even now a pretty safe prophecy that there will be a strenuous race on the part of delegations from the favorite-son states to get into the Taft columns as early and as gracefully as the decencies of the situation will permit.

The Taft column, at the end of last week, still maintained the ratio of two votes to every one of the opposition. And the tabulating of 120 votes for Taft to 54 for the opposition is upon a counting that concedes to the opposition all the contested votes. This is, of course, too liberal by half. There may be a contesting delegation from every one of the Southern States—that, in fact, seems to be the predetermined plan of the forces that are opposing the Taft candidacy—but even if there should be and if such opposing delegations should be admitted to the convention, which latter is not at all likely, the nominating result will not be controlled thereby. The Republican presidential candidate will be made by those states which usually turn in Republican majorities at national elections, and by the combined vote of these states Mr. Taft will be nominated.

A NAVAL WORLD CRUISE.

Sailing with the sun, the battleship fleet is to circumnavigate the globe. To sail around the world is no longer a feat which dazzles the imagination, but even in this era of wonderful navigation achievements the spectacle of sixteen great floating fortresses moving over a course exceeding 30,000 miles and maintaining all the while their offensive and defensive equipments in a state of preparedness, as though anticipating an actual clash with a powerful foe, is calculated to fix world attention. None other of the great modern fleets has made a practice cruise like unto that.

There was, however, a battleship fleet that started out to circumnavigate the earth more than 330 years ago. In 1572 that bold English buccaneer, Francis Drake—known to fame variously as Admiral or Sir Francis Drake—landed at Panama, burned the town of Porto Bello, seized great spoils and before sailing away journeyed across the isthmus and took a look at the Pacific. His soul was thereupon seized with a longing to sail that great sea, and five years later, with five small ships, the greatest of which was of 100 tons burden, he set out again for the Spanish Main. He coursed down the southward slope of South America and sailed through the Strait of Magellan—that is, he got through with just one ship, the Pelican, afterward called the Golden Hind.

He battled with the winds and currents of Magellan for sixteen days, and one ship was lost and three turned back. But Drake with an 80-ton ship turned into the Pacific and up the South American Coast over the same route that has been covered by Admiral Evans. was a marauding expedition, and vast spoils were captured. But the main fact of interest is that he turned the prow of his small craft westward arrived at a Japan port on the 10th of March, 1580, and reached the English port of Plymouth on the 26th of September of the same year, having thus sailed with a part of his fleet entirely around the world.

For nerve and hazardous daring the round-the-world cruise of the great fleet under command of Admiral Evans is not to be compared with the earlier achievement of the Golden Hind. But what an impressive illustration of the progress that has been made since the era of Drake in the arts of shipbuilding and in the science of navigation is afforded by a comparison between the fleet under Drake that set out on the world-round voyage and that under the American commander 'bound on the same mission. The 80-ton Golden Hind could easily be loaded aboard any one of the battleships now at Magdalena Bay and carried as part of the cargo. After Drake left the English port in 1577 little was known of his adventurous enterprise until he sailed back into an English port in 1580 gave an account of himself. That thing of enchantment—wireless telegraphy—was not even a dream of the dreamers 300 years ago.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The Lemon Social held at Hayden hurst Saturday evening last was a pleasant social event to those in attendance. Over eight dollars were added to the treasury of the Ladies' Aid Society.

We may have been premature in announcing last week that Mr. W. C. Dunnington had leased the Chautauqua Hotel. We still hope that he may take the Chautauqua or Mountain Lake Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clayton were in the Park several days last week putting their cottage in order for the summer occupancy.

Mrs. Bussell and Miss Finnell are in the same cottage occupied by them last summer.

Mr. John D. Hayden has rented the Rathbun cottage on Oakland avenue.

Mr. Masden Biggs has moved from Loch Lynn to the Young cottage in the Park.

Mrs. H. O. Hamill, who has been quite ill for several weeks, is much better.

Mrs. Weimer has been confined to her room most of the winter. She is slowly recovering.

Superintendent Davis is at the Park most of his time now.

BITTINGER.

We learn that Chas. J. Sechler, formerly of this place, has purchased the David Bittinger farm located near Accident.

A. J. Oester, of this community, was called to the Cove last week by the serious illness of his aged mother.

C. E. Ellithorp made a business trip to Oakland last week.

Mrs. Frederick M. Bittinger returned to this place last week after spending a few weeks with her brother at Accident.

The Lutheran congregations of this place are arranging to paper the parsonage this spring. Ward Beachy, of Grantsville, will do the work.

Messrs. Asa Bittinger, C. Brenneman, Chas. Buckle, Leonard Stark and Claude Bittinger, who left here last November, returned to their homes at this place last week and report a pleasant winter spent in Orange county, Florida.

John Wiley, of Keyser, W. Va., was visiting his parents at this place last week.

Earnest Bittinger, of "Bear Hill" and Miss Nellie Pritts, of North Glade, were quietly married by Rev. Samuel Miller at Engles Mills one day last week.

Constable Peter Bickford, of Meadow Mountain, was seen in this section last Saturday.

Miss Jennie Wiland, of New Germany, is staying at the home of T. J. Lohr during the sugar season.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.

52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

WANTED—A good team suitable for farm work. Apply to Wm. M. Kelley, Coketon, W. Va.

Surscribe for The Republican.

MINERAL EXHIBIT SHOWS WHY MARYLAND IS RICH.

There Are Vast Stores of Ore And Stone In The Hills of The Old Line State.

There has been installed in the old Hall of Delegates in the Statehouse at Annapolis one of the most remarkable exhibits of a State's mineral resources that has ever been brought together in this country.

This collection contains not only beautiful minerals and remarkable remains of animal and plant forms that formerly inhabited the lands and waters of ancient Maryland during successive periods since the dawn of geological history, but also complete exhibits of the various economic products that today form the basis for many of the State's greatest industries.

A unique feature of this exhibit is to be seen in the manner in which these mineral products have been displayed. Both the raw materials and the manufactured products are shown, while the various processes connected with their mining and quarrying are presented. The public is thus given a clear insight into the occurrence and treatment of the various mineral substances derived from the rocks of Maryland.

The exhibits have been brought together under the direction of Prof. William Bullock Clark, who is at the head of the State Geological Survey and who originally collected the materials for the State's displays at the Buffalo, Charleston and St Louis expositions, where they attracted great attention and received the highest awards given to any State for its display of mineral wealth.

The carefully-thought-out plan and systematic arrangement of the materials so far surpassed that of any other State's display that the judges first awarded to the collection at Buffalo in 1901 the only gold medal given to any State for its collective exhibit of mineral resources. The following year, at Charleston, this exhibit, much enlarged, received more and higher awards than were given to any other State, while at St. Louis the exhibit as a whole received the grand prize, with numerous gold, silver and bronze medals.

At Jamestown last year the publications, maps and models, which were the only parts of the exhibit displayed, also received the only gold medal given to any similar organization for its exploitation of a State's mineral resources.

Few people, and particularly our own Maryland citizens, have any idea of the immense annual production of commercially valuable minerals in Maryland.

With the absence largely of ores of the precious metals, the public hears little of the great but solid industries built upon the coal, stone, clay and sand deposits that make up the chief production of Maryland's mineral and the rapid growth which these industries have made in recent years since the organization of the Maryland Geological Survey.

In 1896, when the survey was established, and for many years prior thereto the annual mineral production in Maryland amounted to a little over $5,000,000. Since 1898 this production has been gradually increasing, with the result that for several years past it has exceeded $10,000,000 annually.

The Annapolis exhibit is so arranged as to display fully the leading commercial products. There is conspicuously placed a pyramid showing the different types of Maryland coal contributed by the leading coal companies of the State, the pyramid being capped by a great block of Georges Creek coal furnished by the Consolidated Coal Company.

The production of Maryland coal in the past has come largely from the "Big Vein" of the George's Creek basin, but with its approaching exhaustion extensive development has already commenced on the smaller veins which the State Geological Survey has studied in detail and plotted on maps of large scale, showing that far more small-vein coal exists than was ever contained in the "Big Vein."

The elaborate report issued by the survey and employed by the present and prospective coal companies is in the hands of all of the leading coal-mining engineers.

The display of Maryland building and decorative stones is particularly elaborate. Near the center of the room is a large pyramid, capped with a polished cone of the beautiful variegated marble quarried near Washington Junction, on which every type of building and decorative stone is represented by cubes.

At its four corners are beautiful, polished shafts of Guilford gray granite, Beaver Dam white marble, Seneca red sandstone and Cardiff serpentine. This pyramid formed a very conspicuous feature in the exhibit at Charleston and St. Louis. There are also several monuments, slabs and blocks showing effectively some of the more beautiful of Maryland's decorative stones.

A large booth is covered with the famous Peachbottom slate of Northern Harford county, a slate that has been shown by careful tests to surpass that produced anywhere else in the country, and which the survey has pointed out could be much more extensively exploited than has ever yet been done.

The collection of clays and clay products is very exhaustive, a series of exhibition jars containing leading types of brick, terra cotta, sewer pipe, pottery and fire clays, on which are based some of the most important industries of the State.

Maryland fire brick and other refractory products are known throughout the country and have been extensively exported. The pottery also is well known and the collection contains a splendid display of all of the various kinds of products manufactured in Maryland from these different types of clays. The most noticeable features are a large brick booth covered with tiling made in Baltimore, and a large case contains beautiful examples of pottery made by the two leading pottery works of Baltimore.

The one table shows the gold, copper, chrome and iron ores of Maryland, from none of which today any large production comes, although the chrome, copper and iron deposits afforded at one time the most important source of Maryland's mineral products. The iron ores were known early in Colonial days, the formation of the Principio Company in 1722 marking the beginning of an important industrial epoch in eastern North America.

This company and others formed in Maryland not long thereafter furnished guns and projectiles to the Continental Army.

Chrome-ore mining afforded an important industry in Maryland from the discovery of chrome ore in the serpentine of the Bare Hills in 1827 down to 1860, when the much larger deposits found elsewhere in the world caused the practical cessation of the enterprise, although Baltimore retained afterward a prominent position as a center for the manufacture of chromium salts.

Copper also was extensively mined at one time, particularly in Baltimore and Frederick counties, the copper used on the roof of the original dome of the Capitol in Washington coming from Maryland deposits. Within the last few years there has been some revival both in the production of copper and iron, and it is possible that in the near future, with modern and economical methods, they may again become important industries.

A special feature has been made of the lime and comet products, which have for many years been the basis of important industries and which will be soon much more exploited since the survey has pointed out the value of the limestones for the manufacture of portland cement, which is now brought in large quantities to the Baltimore and Southern markets from the Lehigh district of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Maryland limestones and shales have been shown to be practical in character and in every way well adapted for the manufacture of the highest grades of portland cement, the use for which has been increasing with such great rapidity within recent years.

The exhibit also contains displays of many other products furnished by the Maryland rocks which, combined, have a considerable annual production. Large blocks of feldspar and flint have been secured from Baltimore, Harford and Cecil counties, which furnish some of the best products of this kind found anywhere in the United Strtes. There are also collections of soapstone, talc, barytes, asbestos and silica (diatomaceous earth).

The highway exhibit is one of the most striking in the collection. On the wall to the right of the entrance are six cases, each 20 feet long, with glass fronts and tops. Five of these cases contain full-sized cross-sections of different kinds of roads as built according to the best modern practice by the Geological Survey. The sixth case shows in a very realistic way a cross-section of a road as built under the old-fashioned method of simply spreading roughly broken stone on an unprepared roadbed with the unsatisfactory conditions resulting.

The five sections also show the different types of materials used in road construction in Maryland, one of them at the same time indicating the most approved methods of under-draining. A large table is covered with photographs and specimens showing the methods of testing road and street materials followed by the Geological Survey, while a large revolving frame shows views of Maryland roads before and after improvement.

The walls are covered with maps and illustrations, while in the windows are hung beautiful transparencies, showing the characteristic scenery in different sections of the State. The county maps, being made by the State Geological Survey on the scale of one mile to one inch, show the roads, streams, public and private buildings, and also the relief of the land, the latter feature being brought out by a series of contour lines which represent throughout the eastern counties changes of 10 feet in elevation, and throughout the central and western counties changes of 20 feet in elevation.

These maps are proving of great value in the industrial development of the State, as well as for all municipal, military and mining purposes. They are being made in co-operation with the national Government and constitute one of the most important phases of the work of the State administration.

Other maps showing the whole State on a large scale afford a detailed representation of the distribution of the geologicnl formations, the drainage basins and the physiographic provinces, and are of much educational value to those who may be seeking information regarding the physical features of the State.

The survey has been engaged in the making of agricultural maps of the State, the different soils being platted in great detail on the large scale maps. Samples of soils are displayed in the exhibit with several of the maps. This work when completed will furnish those seeking residence in Maryland an accurate statement regarding the various soils of the State and their agricultural possibilities.

For this work the survey has secured the aid of the United States Department of Agriculture, and is also closely co-operating with the State agricultural bureaus. Since the soils are simply the disintegrated surfaces of the geological formations, their classification is closely related to the geological mapping on which the survey is engaged.

Some of the illustrations represent other phases of the survey's work, including the determination of the magnetic declination throughout the State for the aid of the county surveyors, charts show the variation in the waterpower and water supply of many of the Maryland streams, and also the distribution of the various commerical types of timber, a survey which this bureau started and in which it is now co-operating with the newly organized State Bureau of Forestry.

Maryland possesses a remarkable representation of the geological formations which make up the earth's crust.

The most ancient rocks as well as those still in the process of deposition are found within the borders of the State, while between these wide limits there is hardly an important geological epoch which is not represented. It is doubtful whether any other State in the Union contains a more complete history of the earth's past.

These features are clearly brought out in a very complete, systematic collection of rocks, minerals and fossils which are beautifully displayed in a series of plate-glass cases placed on the walls between the two entrances to the exhibit hall. The remarkable specimens of ancient animal and plant life, bones of huge reptiles, the skulls of curious whales and the teeth of former indigenous elephants are among many unique things here shown.

The educational value of such an exhibition of the mineral wealth of the State cannot be overestimated, and the collection should be made a source of great value to the public schools if excursions to it would be made from time to time under suitable guidance.

The survey has printed a guide to the State mineral exhibit, a handsomely illustrated little pamphlet of 64 pages, which is distributed free in the exhibition room. A perusal of this pamphlet gives one a very complete exposition of this remarkable collection.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

22222 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of Yough River Oil and Gas Company of Garrett county will be held on Saturday, the 4th day of April, 1908, at the Court House, Oakland, Maryland, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing a Board of 12 Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Stockholders who cannot attend in person are requested to send their proxies.

J. M. BURNS, President,
N. S. HEINDEL, Secretary.

Farm for Sale—I offer my firm, located near Herrington Manor school house, for sale; contains 52 acres 35 clear; good six-room dwelling; small barn; well watered; young orchard. Address J. S. Hardesty, Oakland, Md. 50-13

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

Where the finest biscuit, cake, hot-breads, crusts or puddings are required Royal is indispensable.

ROYAL
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

Not only for rich or fine food or for special times or service. Royal is equally valuable in the preparation of plain, substantial, every-day foods, for all occasions. It makes the food more tasty, nutritious and wholesome.

Mr. William C. Kidd, of Baltimore, was in the city yesterday.

Mr. D. Y. Morris, of Kingwood, spent Sunday with relatives in Oakland.

Mr. G. S. Hamill went to Cumberland Tuesday morning on prosessional business.

Mr. George D. Browning, of Swallow Falls, was a business visitor in Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, was in Oakland Tuesday and yesterday on business.

Mr. Louis Littman, of Swanton, and his son Leo, of Hiorra, West Va., spent Sunday in Oakland.

Mrs. E. Z. Tower and little son left Oakland yesterday afternoon for a few days' visit to Wheeling friends.

Mr. Elisha Harvey, of District No. 8, and Mr. Thomas Moon, of District No. 10, were in the city Tuesday.

Mr. Albert Clary, accompanied by Prof. Leonard Bassett, spent Sunday with Deer Park friends and relativer.

Dr. W. W. Davis, who spent Sunday in Phillippi, West Va., where he preached that day, returned to Oakland Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Fred. J. Schroeder and little son went to Lonaconing Tuesday morning where they will be guests this week of relatives and friends.

We regret to note the extreme illness of Mr. George P. White, one of the residents of Loch Lynn Heights, who has been suffering for several months with tuberculosis.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Claggett and little daughter, of Hagerstown, who spent a day or two this week in Oakland with relatives, returned to Hagerstown Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Austin Brown went to Clarksburg, West Va., Tuesday afternoon on business connected with the Clarksburg Casket Company, of which he is one of the stockholders and directors.

Miss Lorena Fringer, of Oakland, who went to Baltimore two or three weeks ago, left that city Monday morning for Talbotton, Georgia, where she will be engaged this spring in the milinery business.

Mr. Charles Beachy, who recently returned to his old home at Grantsville from a visit to the Pacific Coast, passed through Oakland on train No. 55 Tuesday afternoon en route to Cincinnati, Ohio.

A letter received Monday by the family in Oakland, conveys the news of the safe arrival at Port Antonio, Jamaica, of Messrs. Harry and George Loar, who sailed from New York for that point a week or ten days ago.

Mr. Harry L. McComas and his college chum, Mr. Bennett, of North Dakota, who came here from Mercersburg, Pa., last Wednesday to remain a week with Dr. and Mrs. H. W. McComas, returned to school yesterday morning.

Mr. John Ault, who returned to his home near Oakland a week or two ago owing to the illness of members of his family, left on Sunday night for Pittsburg, accompanied by his little daughter Norienne, who will visit relatives in that city for a week or two.

To be sure the department stores tell you that if their goods are not satisfactory you can return them. Sure! But you have to pay express or freight both ways and you decide to keep them. If your home merchants' goods are not satisfactory you take them back and it costs you nothing.

Mr. J. N. Robinson and family, until a few days ago occupants of the Anderson property on Alder street, are now residing in the Episcopal Rectory, having moved into that property on Saturday last. Mrs. Anderson and family will return to Oakland about April 1st and occupy their residence here.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

Mr. Paul Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Mitchell, of Oakland, was taken suddenly ill Monday night with an attack of the heart and he has since been confined to his bed. The young man is a great favorite with many of the people of Oakland and the news of his illness will be learned with deep regret.

Mr. H. Byrne Hamill, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hamill, of Oakland, has, we are glad to state, been appointed regimental clerk by Secretary Taft, of the War Department, with the pay and rank of second lieuteuant. Mr. Hamill enlisted in the army a month or two ago, and was attached to the Fourth Regiment Inf., stationed at Fort Thomas, Kentucky. From that point the regiment was transferred to San Francisco from which port the command embarked for the Philippines and is now at Honolulu, where ten days will be spent before resuming the long journey to the Far East. Mr. Hamill is followed in his voyage by the good wishes of his many friends left behind.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 THE SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

LIGHTNING STRUCK DWELLING.

The Roof of Mr. D. M. Dixon's Residence Damaged Yesterday Morning.

Yesterday morning between eight and nine o'clock a very severe electrical storm accompanied by a heavy rain of a few minutes' duration, passed over Oakland, which did considerable damage to property.

One bolt of lightning struck the tower on Mr. D. M. Dixon's residence, located on Oak street opposite the parsonage of St. Paul's M. E. church, which tore two holes in the roof and damaged the supportiag timbers to some extent. At the time one of Mr. Dixon's children was in a room directly beneath the tower, but he felt no ill-effect of the lightning's close proximity.

About thirty telephone lines running into the Garrett County Telephone Company's office in Oakland were put out of business by the storm.

The ladies of the Aid Society of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will conduct a bazaar in the basement of the church on next Thursday afternoon and evening when they will have for sale, aprons and other wearing apparel, fancy articles, etc. Lunch will also be served both afternoon and evening. All are cordially invited.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

The recital to be given this evening by Miss Anna Manges in the basement of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, promises to be well patronized judging from the advance sale of tickets made up to the hour of going to press today. Miss Manges is an accomplished reader and entertainer. She will be assisted by Dr. J. G. Robinson and Miss Daisy Grant, who will conduct the musical numbers of the program.

Mr. Thomas A. Gonder, son of Justice and Mrs. A. B. Gonder, who has for several months been the efficient manager of the Oakland Pharmacy, purchased from Dr. J. W. Laughlin on last Friday the Mountain Lake Park Pharmacy and will assume charge about April 1st. Mr. Gonder is a most excellent young man, quite an expert prescription clerk and accommodating. He has the best wishes of many Oakland friends for success at the Park.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, vice president of the Kendall Lumber Company of Crellin, returned to Oakland Tuesday morning from a four or five weeks' visit to the far West, where he inspected the holdings and workings of the Kendall interests located in Oregon and other western states. From Oakland Mr. Kendall went over to Crellin where he spent the day with his brother, Judge U. S. Kendall, who is manager and superintendent of the plant at that point.

It does not pay to advertise say some merchants who have done but little of it and that without keeping it up. The incident of the boy and the pump illustrates the matter very well. The boy was sent after a pail of water. He poured in the priming and poured out as much as he poured in. Then he stopped to rest and the priming ran down. After some time of alternate pumping and resting he concluded it did not pay to pump and quit in disgust. The merchant who doos not believe in advertising does it like the boy did the pumping. He advertised a few weeks, then stopped a while and allowed the people to forget him and his business before he advertised again and then concluded advertising didn't pay.

Last Saturday night a gang of drunks congregated in one of the saloons of Oakland where trouble was started. Later the proprietor of the place fired them and they then met on the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company near the water station where the trouble was renewed and a free-for-all fight ensued in which ballast was used in lieu of more effective weapons. The noise became so great that passers-by on Oak street noticed it and Sheriff Brown was notified. He hurriedly dressed and went to the track where he succeeded in arresting four of the dozen or more men engaged in the conflict, the rest departing by various ways, some swimming the Little Yough, others by wading through the slimy waters of the dead pond and yet others by sprinting eastward up the railway track. The four men arrested were given a hearing by Justice Gonder Monday afternoon, three of them being fined and one discharged. At the trial it developed that the men concerned in the riot hailed from Mountain Lake Park, Swanton and Terra Alta, the majority of them being employed in various capacities by the Baltimore and Ohio.

Young Men's Christian Society.

Subject for next Sunday afternoon's lecture, Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, lecturer, in the rooms of the Asoociation, Mitchell building, Second street, to which all or cordially invited: First Quarterly Review.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.

Directors Chosen For First Year and Officers Flected by Board.

Monday night according to the printed notice appearing in the columns of THE REPUBLICAN last Thursday, the meeting of the residents and business men for the purpose of organizing a Board of Trade for Oakland, was held, being attended by about forty of the leading business and professional men of the town, when the constitution as drafted by the committee was submitted and adopted unanimously.

The constitution of the Board provides for the election of a board of directors consisting of ten members, which in turn elects the president and vice president of the Board of Trade, its secretary and treasurer.

At the meeting Monday the board of directors chosen is composed of Messrs. D. E. Bolden, D. M. Mason, D. M. Dixon, Joseph E. Harned, G. Semmes Hamill, Scott T. Jones, D. E. Offutt, Jr., Truman West, and Drs. H. W. McComas and John E. Legge. The directors, under the constitution adopted, met Tuesday evening when the following officers of the Board of Trade were elected:

President, G. Semmes Hamill; vice president, D. M. Mason; secretary, Samuel Lawton; treasurer, Joseph E. Harned.

The next meeting of the Board will be held upon call of the president, at which time the various committees provided for by the constitution will be announced and the work of getting our advantages before the public will be gotten into some definite shape.

THE DEATH RECORD.

REV. W. C. STOUDENMIRE.

Rev. William C. Stoudenmire, pastor of Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran church, Baltimore and Robinson streets, which he organized by making a canvass of the neighborhood about two and one-half years ago, died Saturday at his home, Baltimore, of typhoid-pneumonia.

He was taken ill about five weeks ago, and for three weeks suffered from grip. After apparently recovering he felt traces of the disease, and Sunday morning while in the pulpit his strength almost gave way.

He continued to the end of his discourse without giving any indication of the strain, but immediately after he was taken home and he sank rapidly.

Born in South Carolina 55 years ago, he was educated in the South, and filled several small charges in that section. He was then made pastor at Oakland. While in Chicago he studied medicine, and decided to take his degree and then go to heathen lands as a medical missionary.

About this time, however, he received a call, but before taking charge of it he came to Baltimore and married Miss Jodie Cowles, a daughter of the late Henry M. Cowles, who was secretary of the School Board until the time of his death.

For nine years Rev. Mr. Stoudenmire was general agent for the Prisoners' Aid Society, and gave that time to study of the problems of prisoners and to preaching in penal and other institutions.

He resigned in the early part of 1905 to accept a call in the West, but was away from the city only a few months when Mr. Cowles became so ill that his daughter was required at his bedside, and Rev. Mr. Stoudenmire returned to the city with no particular work in view.

Besides his widow he leaves five children—Anna, Laurence Cowles, Jay William H., Charlotta and Beatrice Stoudenmire. A brother, Rev. Henry Stoudenmire, who is a Baptist minister in North Carolina, also survives him.

MRS. PERCY PROCTER.

This most estimable lady died very suddenly in Washington, D. C., last Saturday, at the New Willard Hotel, of heart disease. Mr. Procter, in company with Mrs. Procter, arrived in that city a few days previous to her demise, intending to resume their journey northward and to spend a short time at Atlantic City, and thence on to Canada. In another colnmn of THE REPUBLICAN today Mr. Thomas J. Peddicord, who probably stood closer to Mr. Procter than anyone else in Oakland, pays a deserved tribute to the memory of the deceased lady.

Operation For Appendicitis.

Monday afternoon Lester Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Martin, who reside south of Oakland, was operated upon for appendicitis at the Home Sanitarium, which was recently opened bo Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh. The operation was successful and this morning the condition of the patient is promising.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

Subscribe for The Republican.

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

CAPITAL, - - - - - - - - - $50,000.
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, - - - 35,000.

DIRECTORS.

D. E. OFFUTT, JOHN M. DAVIS, G. S. HAMILL.
GEORGE W. LEGGE, JOHN T. MITCHELL, S. T. JONES.

This Bank is pleased to place at the disposal of of its customers the facilities gained during nineteen years of continuous service and growth.

D. E. OFFUTT, PRESIDENT
G. S. HAMILL, VICE P. S. T. JONES, CASHIER
G. A. FRALEY, ASSISTANT CASHIER

FIRE DESTROYED HOME.

Mrs. Samuel Wolf, Widow of Soldier, Lost Her All in Flames Tuesday.

Tuesday afternoon the little home of Mrs. Samuel Wolf, widow of a deceased soldier of the Union army, located in the East end of town, was entirely consumed by fire which originated in the kitchen from an overheated stove. While the members of the family were in another portion of the house the entire building, which was constructed of lumber and lined with building paper, seemingly burst into flames, the fire making such rapid headway as to preclude the possibility of saving anything from the structure, even the pension papers of Mrs. Wolf, besides her last quarterly payment of pension money, received a day or two ago, in addition to her clothing, that of her four grandchildren, daughter and son-in-law Rudolph Wilson, all being consumed.

Mrs Wolf owned the little home and carried insurance on it amounting to $300, which will not cover the loss but will very materially aid her in erecting a new building.

A Pitiable Case.

On last Friday Mr. C. C. Michaels, who was a resident of Oakland for more than forty years prior to 1900, was brought here from Allegany City, Pa., by his son John, of near the Park, and placed in the hospital ward of the county jail where he is receiving treatment for a mental disorder of the most distressing character, his mind having given away under repeated recurrences of epilepsy until now it is almost a blank. As Mr. Micnaels is an old soldier he will be transferred to the Government Hospital for the Insane near Washington, D. C., as soon as the required papers for his admission to the institution are properly filled out and forwarded.

Accompanying Mr. Michaels to Oakland was his daughter, Bertha, whose affliction is similar to that of her father. She is being cared for by her brother, and her mother, the latter arriving here Tuesday night from Allegany City, where she resided for two or three years.

HOYES.

Large numbers of wild geese have been seen quite lately flying to their northern home, which signifies that spring is near and we will all most cordially welcome it.

Messrs. George E. Bishoff and son have taken advantage of the sugar making weather and have manufactured quite a lot of maple syrup and sugar that is hard to excel.

Misses Sudie and Sadie Friend returned to their home last Friday after spending several pleasant weeks with relatives at Keyser and Mt. Lake.

Messrs. Norris Welch and Burns Lowdermilk, teachers of the Deer Park and Loch Lynn schools spent Saturday and Sunday with their parents.

Mr. Seymore and family of Friendsville, have moved to Hoyes and are now occupying several rooms of the Chase house.

Will Glotfelty of near Crellin, was a guest of his uncle F. D. Dewitt, one day last week.

S. T. Cunningham, traveling salesman for Cumberland Dry Goods Co., was in Hoyes Monday night this week.

Miss Mamie Dewitt attended revival services at Sang Run Sunday night.

Miss Bernadette Mattingly had Miss Pearl Bishoff as her guest last Monday evening.

Miss Ethel Dewitt left this place for Landstreet, Pa., last week where she will visit her sister Mrs. Friend, for an indefinite period.

Prof. Beahm and Dr. Boyer, of Accident, were callers in Hoyes a few hours last Sunday.

Eddie Wilburn left this place last week for Kalona, Iowa, where he will visit his friends John and George Kitzmiller.

Mr. John Dewitt returned to his home this week after spending a few days with his daughter Mrs. Thayer, who has been quite ill.

NON-JURY TERM CIRCUIT COURT.

Was In Session Here Monday Morning With Judge Henderson Presiding.

The March non-jury term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county was in session Monday morning, the term being extremely short lasting from ten o'clock until noon, with Judge Robert R. Henderson, of Cumberland, presiding.

The only business transacted by the Court was that of calling over the docket and entering judgments in uncontested cases, of which there were only three or four.

Judge Henderson returned to Cumberland Monday afternoon.

Church Services.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Pleasant Valley—Sunday school at 2 p. m.; preaching at 3 p. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Preaching 10:30 a. m.
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Catechise Saturday at 2 p. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.
Preaching at Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 7.30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Class meeting, at Mt. Lake Park at 10 a. m.; Sunday school, 2.30; Junior League, 3.30; Epworth League, 6.30, and preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Deer Park—Sunday School at 10 a.m.; preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League 6.30.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

GORTNER.

The weather during the past week has been excellent and many farmers were busy with their plows.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Wotring, of Brookside, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Schlossnagle, this week.

Chas. Wamsley contemplates having a slate roof put on his house in the near future.

Messrs. Royal and Corsa Spaid and Lee Gortner left for Stanford, Ill., Monday where they have secured employment for the spring and summer.

L. J. Swartzentruber was engaged in moving a house for D. E. Orendarf last week.

Carl Eckles, who was visiting his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smouse, returned to his home at Fairmont last Saturday.

Miss Lizzie Lichty who has been spending a few months at Grantsville, this county, returned to her home Thursday last.

Prof. Will Althers, of Salisbury, Pa., is doing some painting for S. J. Slabach.

WILLIE.

For Sale.

I offer for sale Military Lot No. 791, containing 50 acres, lying about five miles west of Frostburg, and near the old Blocher place in District No. 9 of Garrett county. The property will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Apply to W. E. Wilson, 107 Virginia Avenue, Cumberland, Md.

Diesolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership between George W. Cover and William J. Cover was dissolved on the 22nd day of February, 1908, so far as relates to the said George W. Cover. All debts due to said partnership are to be paid and those due from the same discharged at Salt Block, in Garrett county, Md., where the business will be continued by the said William J. Cover as William J. Cover.

GEORGE W. COVER
Friendsville, Md., Feb. 29

DREADNOUGHT TYPE TRIALS HURTFUL TO CREWS.

Concussion of Great Guns Works More Havoc Than Would Enemy's Shells.

NERVES OF MEN AFFECTED.

Large Minority of the British Officers Again Plan for More Big Ships.

London, March 16—As has been already cabled to America, a certain section of British naval experts is strongly opposing the further building of Dreadnoughts, and even goes so far as to condemn the type as a ponderous and pretentious sham.

So far as open comment goes, the type is still unanimously accepted and acclaimed as "the battleship of the future." That is the official view. But a minority of officers, whom discipline keeps from "speaking out," condemn the type, and predict that it will prove absolutely worthless in a real naval engagement.

The craze for Dreadnoughts is strongest among their designers. The feeling against them is confined to officers who have gone to sea in them. These officers prophesy that it will be absolutely impossible to work ten or twelve 12-inch guns simultaneously in battle. In accuracy and weight of metal discharged, the recent Dreadnought trials were a triumph. The result looked well on paper. But no public report has been issued concerning the price paid for the triumph.

It is a fact that during the firing trials men were carried below utterly incapacitated through vertigo—stunned, and even insensible. As long as a few big guns were fired the effects were not felt. But the first attempt to keep up a rapid fusillade from all twelve guns produced what was described to me as a "storm" which played worse havoc among the crew than a possible enemy's shells.

Even men who were not incapicitated complained that their nerves and vision were so badly affected that it was useless to continue firing.

If this experience is repeated with other ships of the Dreadnought type, they will be able to use only part of their primary batteries, and as they have no secondary batteries they will be in the same position as the battleships of the old style.

The Russo-Japanese war showed that secondary batteries play a tremendous role. The only damage that Rojestvensky inflicted on Togo at the battle of Tsushima came from the Russian 8-inch and 6-inch guns. The Japanese did havoc with their secondary batteries. It was shells from their smaller guns which set the Russian ships on fire. The Russian Captain Semenoff, who was on the flagship, declared that it was "the uninterrupted thick rain of six and eight inch shells which effected our ruin," and he adds that the occasional shots from the big Japanese guns were comparatively harmless.

As no Dreadnought is armed with a secondary battery, it is plain that if she is compelled to use only a few of her big guns she will be unable to stand up against a ship of the older type.

This reasoning has evidently been adopted by Japan. Her two new supposed Dreadnoughts, the Aki and Satsuma, are in reality the antithesis of the English Dreadnought type. They carry four 12-inch guns mounted in pairs in bow and stern barbettes, and twelve 10-inch guns mounted in pairs in broadside barbettes.

The broadside barbettes constitute the secondary battery. These guns weigh 28 tons, as opposed to the 50 tons of the 12-inch guns, their shells weight only 450 as opposed to 850. The their powder charge and their muzzle velocity are only half of those of the guns in the 12-inch barbettes. The real Dreadnoughts have big guns all of the same calibre, which could be brought into action at the same moment, whereas the Japanese secondary battery could be used only at a much closer range than the four big guns.

The two 22,000-ton battleships which Japan is building at home, and the third which is under construction on the Clyde, are also not Dreadnought. Each will have a secondary battery of ten eight-inch guns mounted in pairs. It is declared, however, that the main armament will consist of no less than twelve 12-inch guns. If that is so they would suffer from "storms" as badly as the British Dreadnoughts, but they would have a secondary battery to fall back upon.

It is a curious fact that the Dreadnought's gunners never suffered from the discharge of the guns in their own barbettes. The shock from which they suffered was caused by heavy simultaneous firing of guns in other positions.

Apart from the shock problem, Japan's insistence on a secondary battery is causing much comment. But taken together with the stories of the effect of firing on the Dreadnought's crew, it has the effect of raising the very momentous question: Is the Dreadnought the irresistible monster she is boasted to be, or is she an over-armed, unworkable type, which will be rejected by the navies of the future?

COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOLS.

A Three Weeks' Teachers' Training School to be Held in Oakland.

The Board of School Commissioners met Friday last and after disposing of routine business, the question of normals was thoroughly considered and the following conclusions arrived at—the school buildings were awarded to the following persons in which to conduct an eight weeks' normal, to begin April 29 and close June 12:

Grantsville to P. E. King.

Accident to J. C. Beahm and H. W. Browning.

Oakland to U. G. Palmer and W. E. Bishoff.

These sessions will be devoted to a thorough drill in Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar and the various other branches taught in the public schools in which teachers must be prepared in order to receive certificates.

At the close of the eight weeks' session the three normals will be merged into one school in Oakland for three weeks. This session will be devoted principally to Methods of Teaching and School Management. Legislation now pending contemplates longer terms and higher salaries and necessitates better qualifications on the part of teachers. Our teachers must either go elsewhere to training schools or we must provide the ablest instructors at home. To this end the School Board has engaged Miss L. E. Phoenix and Prof. T. L. Gibson for the three weeks' session.

Miss Phoenix is a graduate of the Mansfield, (Pa.) and the Oswego, (N. Y.) State Normal schools, Oberlin College and Emmerson School of Oratory and is now teaching her fourteenth year in the Oswego State Normal. She will present Methods in reading, numbers and language, with one period to the entire school in physical culture.

Prof. T. L. Gibson, of the State Normal of Baltimore, who has so ably recommended himself to our teachers in his efforts at our County Institutes, needs no further recommendation. He will have charge of the music, devoting two periods a day to it. He will also take up the work in English Grammar and composition in the higher grades.

The education bill now pending provides that all certificates in the State must be re-classified. Applications for certificates or re-classification without further examination by experienced teachers who attend the entire eleven weeks and whose work is satisfactory to the County Superintendent and the various instructors will be favorably considered by the Board without further examination. A uniform rate of $5 tuition will be charged for the eight weeks session and the three weeks will be free to all teachers and prospective teachers.

The faculty in the three weeks session will be Miss Lydia E. Phoenix, Prof. T. L. Gibson and the instructors of the different eight weeks' session.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

SALTWATER CURE PROVES REMEDY OF ANCIENTS

Paris Physician Using Old-New Prescription With Successful results.

SOME OF THE GREATEST CURES.

Methods of Hippocrates and Pliney Revived in the "Plasma de Quinton."

The assertion that the ancients knew more about medicine than the best modern physicians is brilliantly confirmed by the "salt-water cure" discovered by a young French scientist, M. Rene Quinton, who is proving that some of the most serious ailments can be rapidly cured by the mere injection into the blood of ordinary sea-water.

By merely going back to Hippocrates and Pliny, M. Quinton is today curing diseases hitherto practically incurable.

Paris has now two dispensaries where "piqures" of sea-water are administered. Nearly all skin diseases, infantile ailments, and various forms of consumption are amenable to the treatment.

The "plasma de Yuinton," as it is called, is merely very pure sea-water taken at Arcachon some forty feet below the surface, where the water is absolutely clear. The water, already free from sediment and organic matter is sterilized and used for injection under the skin. Last April 268 injections were made, in 15 per cent of the cases cure immediately followed the first injection; in 70 per cent cure followed after the sixth injection.

Gastro-enteritis, which carries off 70,000 French children every year, is easily cured by the "piqure."

Children admitted into the dispensary in the Rue d'Quesant in the last stages of pulmonary tuberculosis have shown improvement after the first injection. Some of these children were living skeletons, weighing less than at birth and unable to retain any food. The first injection gave them a healthy appetite, and the improvement continued with each successive "pique."

Sea-water injection has no painful reaction, and in addition to curing specific diseases, leaves the human organism healthier and brisker than before. Each piqure costs only ten cents.

French ladies of high birth are promoting the cure. Among them is the Marechan Macmahon, the Comtesse de la Rochefoucauld, and a score of the best names in France, who nurses the patients themselves.

The fundamental idea of the sea-water cure is that salt water is the basis of all organic life. All organisms existed originally in the sea, and blood is itself nothing but a modified sea water.

A human being, says M. Quinton, is "a veritable marine saquarium," and one-fourth of his total weight consists of blood-serum which is in essence notirg but the sea water in which his ancestors the monera and amoebae lived.

More than a million injections of "plasma de Quinton" have been administered in France during the last four years. The cures number thousands, and there is no recorded case of a patient's disease being aggravated by the treatment.

Subscribe for the Republican.

Trade Exhibition.

J. M. Davis & Sons have arranged for a big display of their leading specialties during the month of March commencing on the 9th and lasting until the 21st. Their plan is to show the various lines they are handling in actual operation. Their display promises to be very interesting to the public. There you will find many things worthy of your attention. The demonstrations will take place from ten to twelve in the morning and from two to four in the afternoon and from six to eight in the evening, each day. Remember the date, March 9th to March the 21st.

Surscribe for The Republican.

BOWSER'S LATEST.

Tries to Solve Problem What Becomes of Crickets In Winter.

POLICE INTERRUPT HIS WORK

Queer Actions Result In His Arrest, and He Has to Give Up His Investigations—Taken Home by an Officer Under Protest.

[Copyright, 1907, by T. C. McClure.]

When Mr. Bowser rose up from the dinner table the other evening, he passed through the kitchen into the back yard, and after three or four minutes the cook came in to Mrs. Bowser and asked:

"And can you tell me what's going to happen now, ma'am?"

"How do you mean?"

"Why, Mr. Bowser is looking for something in the grass out there and lighting a match now and then. If the gas meter is to be blown up or the water pipes bursted, I want to get out of here."

She was assured that nothing in the line of tragedy was likely to happen, and when Mr. Bowser came in he was asked if he had been hunting for a lost pocketknife.

"It was just a preliminary investigation," he replied.

"Investigation of what? I wish you wouldn't be upsetting the girl with your mysterious actions. You keep her on the ragged edge all the time."

"Mrs. Bowser, if the men who have been delving into the sciences for the last 200 years had paid attention to the whims of a red headed servant girl, where would we have been now?

FLASHING THE LIGHT OVER THE GRASS.

"Then you are delving, are you?"

"I am. If I can contribute anything to the general knowledge of the world by a little effort on my part I feel it my duty to do so. I have spent very little time in investigating, and yet it has not been entirely thrown away. What would we have known of natural history if hundreds of men had not delved? But for the fact that Rev. Mr. Long, the naturalist, has spent years and years in the forest, would we know that when children are lost a wolf takes it upon himself to lead them home? Would we have learned that when a bird breaks its leg it acts as its own surgeon by tying splints around it?"

"And you were helping along the cause by looking among the bones, bottles and cans in the back yard?" suggested Mrs. Bowser.

Mr. Bowser didn't reply for five minutes. It took him all that time to flush red and white and keep from yelling out at her. When he had finally got a hold with his toes on the floor he replied:

"If you want to know what I was out there for I can tell you. There were some gentlemen belonging to the Naturalist club in the office today, and the question came up as to how crickets passed the winter. They contended that they burrowed in the earth below the frost line to reappear in May and I contended that they died of hunger and cold and that the crickets of next year would be born of eggs deposited in the grass. I stepped out into the back yard to make a preliminary investigation."

"But what do you care whether crickets die off or not?"

"What did the world care whether Stevenson invented his locomotive or not? I am not caring so much for myself, but for the generations that are to come after me. The evenings have grown cold. We have had frosts. If the crickets burrow they are burrowing now. If they turn up their toes it ought to be easy to find their dead bodies in the grass."

"Shan't we run into Green's a little while tonight?" she asked to change the subject.

"Not tonight. We can run into Green's any time. It is a still night, with a touch of frost in the air. There couldn't be a better night to investigate the cricket problem. If I solve it in the manner I expect to, I want to write out my discovery and send it to the daily papers. I am now going to take a little walk and may not be back for an hour or two."

"Very well," replied Mrs. Bowser in resigned tones, realizing that any objections were useless.

Mr. Bowser put on his fall overcoat and hat and took up his cane and left the house. As soon as he got outside the gate he tried to look like a naturalist who was on the eve of a great discovery, but he didn't make much of a success at it. An old woman came along and stopped him and asked for a nickel to buy tea with, and when he refused it she stepped back and said:

"It is such brewers as you with the big stomachs on them that are driving the poor people to revolution."

Heard a Cricket.

Mr. Bowser walked on for half a mile and then reached the suburbs. He had no sooner struck vacant property than the voice of a cricket reached him. It was a plaintive voice. It seemed to say that the watermelon season was over, mince pies had become the fashion again and that the world had no longer any use for crickets. Matches in plenty had been brought along, and the amateur naturalist was soon down on his knees and flashing the light over the grass. After five minutes he came face to face with a cricket. It was an old shell-back, who had been hopping about and singing all summer and now had a tired and dusty look. He even looked into Mr. Bowser's eyes with what seemed to be an appeal. He didn't want money, but he certainly had cold feet and was thinking of feather beds. He hadn't burrowed and he hadn't frozen to death, and the discovery didn't solve the problem. The insect had just taken a stiff hoppetytehop when a gruff voice at Mr. Bowser's elbow demanded:

"Now, then, what sort of a racket is this? What have you lost here on my lots that you are lighting matches to see by?"

"My friend, I am looking for crickets," replied Mr. Bowser as he rose up.

"W-h-a-t!"

"Looking for crickets, I said."

"Then you'd better have the keeper of an idiot asylum looking for you! What in the devil do you want of crickets?"

"Do you know whether crickets burrow in the earth at this time of year or simply die of the cold?"

"Do I know? Do I know?" shouted the man as he began to swing his arms about. "You must think I'm a lunatic to ask me such a question as that. I'm the owner of that saloon up there, and I have no time to be around bug hunting. By what right do you come on my property without saying a word to me?"

"Why, if you are so mighty particular about it"—

"Well, I am that, and you get off. You may be hunting for crickets, and you may be hunting for geese, and you can't go too soon to please me."

Mr. Bowser went. He realized that a row in the neighborhood would disturb all the crickets for a mile around. He continued his walk for half a mile and then turned aside from the street again. There was no saloon in sight, and the nearest house was forty rods away. He now caught the voices of at least six crickets, and he paused to interpret them. As near as he could make out, half of them wanted hot beef tea and woolen blankets, and the other half wanted to borrow spades and pickaxes to do their burrowing with. He got down and lighted more matches, and he was carefully pawing over the cold and brittle grass when he heard a horse coming on a gallop. He had hardly straightened himself up when a mounted policeman halted beside him and asked:

"Who are you and what are you doing here?"

"My name's Bowser, and I was looking for crickets."

"Don't try to guy me, old man. I wasn't born yesterday."

"Perhaps you never heard of a cricket for all that."

Arrested by Policeman.

"Oh, yes, I have. I know a cricket from an old vag the minute I set eyes on him. You are coming along with me. You are one of the fellers that kept the crime wave going last summer."

Mr. Bowser fell back on his dignity. No go. Then he tried bluff. Worse yet. Then he accompanied the officer back to the saloon and identified himself and stated his object in such a manner that the cop was finally constrained to say:

"Well, I wouldn't have believed there was a man fool enough to go hunting crickets at night, but perhaps you are all right except being a little cracked in the head. I'll see you home, and if your wife has good sense she'll keep you off the streets o' nights after this."

"Aye, she'll have to," added the saloonist. "I'm sure the old cock was after my flock of geese, no matter what he says, and if he comes again I'll jump him seven feet high with a charge of buckshot."

Mr. Bowser wanted to go home alone, but the officer was taking no chances. He accompanied him clear to the gate, advising and warning him all the way, and he sat his horse until the door opened and closed again.

"Well," said Mrs. Bowser as she looked up from her book, "have you found out whether crickets burrow or freeze?"

"We'll see our respective lawyers about the divorce in the morning," he quietly replied as he fell into a chair with a sigh of relief. M. QUAD.

Not Quite the Same Thing.

"Simpleton seems to have a fortune in his mine."

"Er—no! The fortune's only in his mind."

Stop That Cold

To check easily colds or Grippe with "Preventics" would save untold misery. Preventics will prevent colds if taken in time. If not, they will break up the cold in a few hours. To be sure, Preventics will break even a deeply seated cold, if taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, drink Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your children, if there is feverishness, night or day. Remarkably like Preventics' greatest efficiency. 25 cents, 50 boxes for the pocket, also in 50c boxes. Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

"ALL DEALERS"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT, DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST, OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND

GILMOR S. HAMILL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m., local, *5.30 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

3 Thoroughbred Jersey Cows.

An excellent opportunity to purchase a good family cow.

1 Dark Bay Yearling Colt.

1 Five Year Old Bay Mare;

Hamiltonian; $250.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

THE MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

COLLEGE PARK, MD.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to professional degree of "P. S."
Agricultural. Mechanical. Scientific.
Horticural. Civil Engineering Chemical.
Trains for a life's work.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter upon life's work.

Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—Bathrooms, Steam Heat and Electricity.

New Buildings with modern improvements.

Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Laundry, Board, Medical attention, Annual Deposit, Chemical and Athletic fees All included in an annual charge of $200 payable quarterly in advance.

Daily visit by Physician in charge. Sanitarium for isolation of any patient with contagious diseases.

Catalog giving full particulars sent on application.

Attention is called to Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture.

Write for particulars.

Term commences September 19th, 1907.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, Pres't.
College Park Md.

22-8t

A Comparison.

"Some years ago, I used

Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint

on my home, at the same time, several other houses near me were painted with other paints. There is a big contrast today between the appearance of my house and others." J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va.

If you compare adulterated paint with Davis 100 per cent Pure, you will readily know why my house painted with Davis looks well and wears well.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Agents.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It Destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery

Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,

Okland, Md.

MONEY SYSTEMS OF THE COUNTRY

Brief History of the Old United States Banks.

WAS OPPOSED BY JACKSON

Who Vetoed Renewal of Its Charter. The First Appearance of the Green-Back—Local Currency of the Past Regarding Finances.

An idea has come to my mind that a comprehensive statement of a historic character, in regard to the paper systems, and banking institutions of olden times would be interesting and useful information, and reading to many persons of practical minds. To formulate that idea this paper has been carefully prepared avoiding length or prolixity.

Even in our colonial condition and in revolutionary times there was such a thing as continental money or notes. It had an uncertain basis but it served for urgent purposes and in after years was redeemed.

Nearly all persons know that the government under which we live and prosper went into life in 1789, with Washington as president and Alexander Hamilton as Secretary of the Treasury. He was by instinct a financier. It was easy for him to see the people of the new government of 13 states as consolidated needed a national uniform paper currency.

The need was found in a United States bank, which was chartered by Congress in 1791 for a term of 20 years with a capital of $20,000,000. This charter by its own provisions, expired in 1811. One year before the war with England. Attempts were made to have it rechartered, but the opposition was too strong an the part of those holding the old state rights doctrines. The efforts were continued, and in 1816 in the last year of President Madison administration, the second U. S. bank was chartered for another 20 years, with a capital stock of $35,000,000. This the last charter expired in 1836. However, in 1832, Congress by a clever majority granted a third U. S. Bank charter with a capital of $50,000,000 for the like term of 20 years. The bill thus passed was laid before President Jackson on the 4th of July that year. Six days later he returned it to Congress with a full veto message with all the facts and arguments he knew of. The two hodses made strenuous efforts to pass the bill over his veto, but he was then of almost supreme power.

So the old bank met almost a violent death.

The old U. S. Bank always had its strong friends and bitter enemies. If did not, however, have difficulty in having its stock taken. In 1816 when the stock was being taken under the second charter, at a propitious time Gerard subscribed for all the remaining stock $3,100,000. He was the money king for many years. In 1812 he started his Gerard Bank in Philadelphia with a capital of $1,200,000. At his death in 1831, it had reached the great sum of $4,000,000. His estate was estimated at $12,000,000. He was the first millionaire in this country. The next was John Jacob Astor, who died in 1849, the richest man up to his death in the country.

Our great country had no paper national money or currency after the decease of the second bank of the U. S. in 1836, till 1862 when the U. S. notes, commonly called "green backs" were issued by the authority of an act of Congress passed at that time.

This was really a war measure or necessity. It served that purpose well; not only that, but civil affairs also. It was a favorite money, far more acceptable than the notes of the local or State banks. The following year, 1863, the national bank system was put into life by an act of Congress. This was also in some sense a war measure, but it came readily, and acceptably, and it can now be said, to stay, welcomely. The last report of the Secretary of the Treasury down to the 30th of June, 1907, show that there were then in existence 6,586 national banks, and on the increase since the act of Congress in 1900, putting the minimum capital of a bank at $25,000. It can be stated, that 1,822 national banks have gone out of existence, on account of different reasons or causes.

No objections now exist to the greenback or national bank notes, good and weal, comes everywhere in our wide country, and were outside of it. And now that emergency money is so much needed and talked about, why not the government issue a hundred million dollars in U. S. notes, greenbacks or more is necessary. The people as a mass, would be glad to have them as a source of relief. They would be in the nature of a debt, but a non-interest bearing one, with the certainty of much of it, to be lost, destroyed or never to be presented for redemption, such would be clear gain to the government.

According to the last report of the Secretary of the Treasury June 30 last there were in circulation of the $243,254,753. The largest amount ever in circulation at one time was about $400,000,000. The same report puts the national banks notes in circulation at $505,123,866. Now if our country during the Civil war troubles, with less than one-third of our present population, and one-tenth of the wealth of the present day, could safely issue, and maintain as good money three or four hundred millions of U. S. notes or greenbacks can we not, now in all safety and propriety issue at least $1,000,000 of the same money when there is a sure profit in it? This ought to be clear to all thoughtful minds.

It is a wonder now to many people how business could be conducted in those times, with nothing but local paper currency without a reserve or security for redemption. Persons were naturally suspicious of the currency of those times, Many deals were made with special contracts or understanding as to the kind of money to be paid. Hard money, mostly silver, would buy articles or commodities much lower than paper money.

Before closing this paper, it might be stated, that in addition to the paper money mentioned, the same report states there were $677,295,909 of gold certificates and $464,349,568 silver certificates in existence as money. Gold coin $574,459,086. Standard silver dollars $88,822,929. Subsidiary silver coins, $147,461,229. total monies of all kinds $2,876,368,696. About $32 per capita or that amount for each living person in the United States.

March 13, 1908. J. B.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

JUST RECEIVED Eight Car Loads of

Farm Wagons, Road Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carriages, Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters, Cultivators, Mowers, Binders, Grain Drills, Grass Seeders, Spray Pumps, Roofing, Fertilizers and everything in the Farm Implement line. :: :: :: Call and get our prices.

IF YOU BUY FROM US YOU GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY A. D. Naylor & Co.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt. or Sincell Bldg.

WHAT FORESTRY HAS DONE.

Some of the Things Accomplished In France and Other Countnies.

Many people in this country think that forestry has never been tried until the Government began to practice it upon the National Forests. Yet forestry is practiced by every civilized country in the world except China and Turkey. It gets results which can be got in no other way, and which are necessary to the general welfare.

What forestry has done abroad is the strongest proof of what it can accomplish here. The remarkable success of forest management in the civilized countries of Europe and Asia is the most forcible argument which can be brought in support of wise forest use in the United States.

The more advanced and progressive countries arrived first and go farthest in forestry as they do in other things. Indeed, we might almost take forests as a yardstick with which to measure the height of a civilization. On the one hand, the nations which follow forestry most widely and systematically would be found to be the most enlightened nations. On the other hand, when we applied our yardstick to such countries as are without forestry, we could say with a good deal of assurance, by this test alone, "Here is a backward nation."

The countries of Europe and Asia, taken together, have passed through all the stages of forest history and applied all the known principles of forestry. They are rich in forest experience. The lessons of forestry were brought home to them by hard knocks. Their forest systems were built up gradually as the result of hardship. They did not first spin fine theories and then apply those theories by main force. On the contrary, they began by facing disagreeable facts. Every step of the way toward wise forest use, the world over, has been made at the sharp spur of want, suffering, or loss. As a result, the science of forestry in one of the most practical and most directly useful of all the sciences. It is a serious work, undertaken as a measure of relief, and continued as a safeguard against future calamity.

The United States, then, in attacking the problem of how best to use its great forest resources, is not in the position of a pioneer in the field. It has the experience of the other countries to go upon. There is no need for years of experiment with untried theories. The forest principles which hundreds of years of actual practice have proved right are at its command. The only question is, How should these be modified or extended to meet American conditions? In the management of the National Forests the Government is not working in the dark. Nor is it slavishly copying European countries. It is putting into practice, in America, and for Americans, principles tried and found correct, which will insure to all the people alike the fullest and best use of all forest resources.

Take the case of Germany. Starting with forests which were in as bad shape as many of our own which have been recklessly cut over, it raised the average yield of wood per acre from 20 cubic feet in 1830 to 65 cubic feet in 1904. During the same period of time it trebled the proportion of saw timber got from the average cut, which means, in other words, that through the practice of forestry the timberlands of Germany of three times better quality today than when no system was used. And in fifty-four years it increased the money returns from an average acre of forest sevenfold.

In France forestry has decreased the dangers from floods, which threaten to destroy vast areas of fertile farms, and in doing so has added many millions of dollars to the National wealth in new forests. It has removed the danger from sand dunes and in their place has created a property worth many millions of dollars. Applied to the State forests, which are small in comparison with the National Forests of this country, it causes them to yield each year a net revenue of more than $4,700,000, though the sum spent on each for management is over 100 times greater than that spent on the forests of the United States.

France and Germany together have a population of 100,000,000, in round numbers, against our probable 85,000,000, and State forests of 15,500,000 acres against our 160,000,000 acres of National Forests; but France and Germany spend on their forests $11,000,000 a year and get from them in net returns $30,000,000 a year, while the United States spent on the National Forests last year $1,400,000 and secured a net return of less than $130,000.

In Switzerland, where every foot of agricultural land is of the greatest value, forestry has made it possible for the people to farm all land fit for crops, and so has assisted the country to support a large population, and one that is more prosperous, than would be the case if the valleys were subject to destructive floods. In a country as small as Switzerland, and one which contains so many high and rugged mountains, this is a service the benefits of which can not be measured in dollars. It is [illegible] in the Sihlwald, [illegible] beyond con- consistently for a number of years.

A circular entitled "What Forestry Has Done," just published by the Forest Service, and obtainable upon application to the Forester, Washinington, D. C., reviews the forest work of the leading foreign countries. The chief lessons which may be learned from them are summarized as followed:

What forestry has done in other countries shows, first of all, that forestry pays, and that it pays best where the most money is expended in applying it. The United States is enormously behindhand in its expenditure for the management of the National Forests, but nevertheless returns have already increased with increased expenditure for management.

A second lesson, clearly brought home by foreign forestry, is the need of timely action, since forest waste can be repaired only at great cost.

Third, private initiative does not suffice by itself wasteful forest use. England, it is true, has so far consistently followed a let-alone policy. However, England has been depending upon foreign supplies of wood. Now that all Europe is running behind every year in the production of wood (2,620,000 tons), and there are unmistakable signs that countries which lead as exporters of wood will have to curtail their wood exports, England is at last feeling her dependence and is speculating uneasily as to where she can certainly secure what wood she needs in the future.

Fourth, when the forest countries are compared as to wood imports and exports, and when it is realized that a number of the countries which practice forestry are now on the wood-importing list, the need of forestry in the export countries is doubly enforced.

Russia, Sweden, Austria-Hungary, and Canada, for instance, are making good the wood deficit of a large part of the world. Sweden cuts much more wood (106,000,000 cubic feet) than she produces; Russia, in spite of her enormous forest resources, has probably entered the same road; and England, the leading importer of wood, must count more and more on Canada. But the United States consumes every year from three to four times the wood which its forests produce, and in due time will doubtless take all the wood that Canada can spare. In other words, unless the counties of the western hemisphere apply forestry promptly and thoroughly, they will one day assuredly be held responsible for a world-wide timber famine.

Fifth, in comparison with foreign countries the prospects for forestry in the United States are particularly bright, for the following reasons:

(1) We start with the assurance that success can certainly be attained.

(2) We have few of the handicaps which have trammeled other countries. We have no ancient forest rights and usages with which to contend, or troublesome property questions to settle.

(3) The results which other lands have achieved by long struggle, often with bitter costs, are free to us to use as we wish. We have, it is true, our purely National and local forest questions, but the key to many of them is somewhere in the keeping of the countries which have achieved forestry.

(4) In variety combined with value our forests are without a parallel in the world. They produce timber adapted to the greatest vareity of uses, so that, except to meet shortage, importations of wood are unnecessary. Furthermore, transportation facilitins enable us to make every forest region available. Thus, by specializing our forest management, each kind of forest may be made to yield the kind of material for which it if best adapted, and the wastes due to compulsory use of local supplies may be practically eliminated.

FIRE LOSS PROMPTLY PAID.

Messrs. Mathews & Hamill Complimented For Their Promptness.

BOND, Md., Jan. 1st, 1908.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL, Oakland, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 31st, enclosing me a draft for two hundred dollars in payment of my recent loss by fire. This draft arrived just fifteen days after the happening of the fire, and I desire to thank you for your promptness in paying the claim. Your promptness in paying losses is to me the best possible evidence that you represent companies which are able to pay their losses, and have no desire to take advantage of those who insure with you. It will give me pleasure to recommend you to those who may desire to insure their properties against loss by fire.

Very truly yours,
E. E. BROWN,
Supt. Bond Mill.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Bray's Dessert.

By W. F. BRYAN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by M. M. Cunningham.

Dolly dimpled with smiles as a sudden turn in the wooded roadway brought them in sight of the tidal river. The November sun glinted coldly on the ripples formed by the current as it raced toward the sea. The tide was just at the turn, and the water rippled over the shallows in a million gleaming points of light. The pines that surrounded the estuary were still green, and but for the brilliant tints of the scrub oaks Dolly could almost imagine that it was still summer.

"Isn't it glorious!" she cried as Seaton Bray followed her through the trees. "It was positively an inspiration to open the cottage for a week in the fall."

"It is very pleasant," agreed Bray. "It was still more good of you to have me down. I regretted my inability to come down this summer."

"Let's hurry up," said Dolly. "It's horrid when the tide goes out. Even in the channel the water is so low that there is no fun rowing."

Tht girl observed with satisfaction that Bray obeyed her injunction promptly. Something in his tone had added that he regretted the lost opportunity of the summer because he had meant to propose to her then. She was not minded to give him that opportunity now. For more than a year Bray and Tommy Gordon had struggled for her hand, and not yet had she been able to decide her preference.

She had skillfully evaded a direct proposal from either, but she was beginning to feel hopelessly that she would die a spinster, since choice still seemed impossible. She admired Gordon's vivacity and life, and she also admired Bray's grave reserve. No girl wants for a husband a man who is always a jester, and, on the other hand, Bray sometimes frightened her by his gravity and earnestness.

THE NEXT INSTANT HE FELT THE SHOCK OF COLD WATER.

Nothing ever seemed to upset him. His clothes were always as trimly neat as though he had just left his dressing room, and Gordon had gained a laugh on his rival when he had declared that Bray selected his clothes to match his temper. Both were lacking in violent contrasts. "Peter Perfection" they had all come to call him, and as for Dolly Tatum she was afraid that she could not measure up to his standards.

She watched him as he busied himself with the light skiff, noting the precision of his movements rather than the unhurried speed with which he prepared for the trip. The business suit he had worn down from the city was scarcely a boating costume, and he looked out of place, indeed, as he got the boat ready for the launching. As he helped Dolly to her place in the stern and prepared to shove off the girl leaned back against the seat and gave a sigh of content.

"I love the river," she said as Bray took up the oars. "I could not go back without one more trip. I was on the water every day last summer. It's a shame to drag you out to row."

"I was only too glad to come," said Bray calmly. "In view of the fact that this is the first time in months I have not had to share your society with others I consider myself fortunate indeed."

Dolly's fingers closed over the side of the boat. She had trusted to her skill to avoid personalities, and yet the first speech had led to an opening. There was a dogged look in Bray's face which told that he would not be put off.

"I have been trying to get at this for some time," he went on quietly, not pausing in the strong, even strokes that were carrying them rapidly toward the channel. "I have been seeking an opportunity for putting my fate to the test. You must know that I love you, Dolly. I am not very successful in masking my feelings where you are concerned. Do you think that you could learn to care for me, dear—care for me enough to marry me? I know that I am not as lively as Gordon, but I love you very dearly. Perhaps that should be argued as a point in my favor, though how could I help loving you—I or any other man?"

Dolly's face grew grave, and the tender little mouth took on a droop that made Bray long to kiss it. She did not speak for a few minutes, but looked past the oarsman with eyes that did not see the glorious autumnal panorama. The banks turned a blur of green and yellow and red through the tears that had come unbidden.

Presently she stretched out her hand with a little appealing gesture. "Please don't ask an answer now," she said gently. "Don't spoil the morning—my last row. Perhaps tonight"—

Bray bowed gravely and bent to the oars, finding in the work a vent for the tension within. He fancied that he had already received an answer and as he bent his back to the oars so also he bent his head to defeat. Almost before they realized it the boat had reached the head of the inlet and had grated gently on the sand.

"Let's drift back," proposed Dolly. "It will give you a chance to rest."

Obediently Bray pulled back into the channel and unshipped the oars. Then he moved forward one seat, and as they floated with the tide he tried to set Dolly at her ease with small talk. So engrossed did they become in their conversation that they never noticed that they were drifting into trouble until with a bump the boat settled against the railroad bridge that spanned the water. A sharp wind was blowing, and it had forced them out of their course.

Bray sprang for an oar to pole back into the channel. In his excitement he was less careful than usual. When he gave a lunge for the oar, he felt his footing shift as the flat bottomed boat tipped to one side. The next instant he felt the shock of cold water.

Dolly gave a shriek as he went overboard, but the next instant her terror was turned to mirth at the sight of Bray sitting in two feet of water with an expression of startled wonder on his face.

It was only for a second that the tableau was posed; then Bray scrambled to his feet and climbed back into the boat. His trousers clung wetly to his legs, and the bedraggled edges of his coat dripped against the seat, while with chattering teeth he got out the oars and began to row for the shore. Try as she would Dolly could not restrain her mirth at the sorry spectacle he presented, and Bray good naturedly joined in her merriment.

But it was less of a joke when the house was reached. The men of the family had all removed their clothing to town when the cottage had been closed for the summer. Bray, down for the day, had brought no bags, and there was nothing left but to seek the shelter of the blankets while his clothes underwent the slow process of drying before the kitchen fire.

Between the blankets Bray groaned miserably as he recalled the incidents of the morning. Whatever chance he might have had to win Dolly's hand had been lost when his plight excited her ridicule. The single misstep had cost him Dolly's "Yes," if indeed he had ever had a chance to win it. In his mind's eye he could see himself again, sprawling in the icy water, then climbing aboard in his mudstained, dripping garments, with Dolly in the stern seat in as ecstasy of glee. It was a bitter hour for Bray, and he welcomed the arrival of the cook with a tray.

"Miss Dolly, she say eat this and you kin have a nice dessert," advised Aunt Mandy. "She say you doan get the dessert till you eated all the dinner."

There was a dish of pudding on the tray, and, lost in wonder as to what the other dessert might be, Bray rapidly cleaned his plate. Then Mandy entered bearing a covered dish. Only an envelope lay under the cover, and Bray's heart beat fast as he read the few lines.

"You dear boy," Dolly wrote. "My answer is 'Yes.' I think I have always liked you best, but I was afraid of your very perfection. I thought that I could never attain your high standard, but you looked so deliciously human in the water that I knew at that instant that I loved you. As soon as your clothes are dry (and they are drying fast), you may come down and receive a verification in person."

Just Found a Soul.

"Talking of Jekyll and Hyde effects," said a chronic bachelor at the club, "I got the surprise of my life the other night. Met a woman, the wife of a friend who married her a year or so ago. Knew her before marriage and always thought she was too homely ever to find a husband—one of the sort that polite writers call 'uncompromisingly plain.'

"Well, sir, when I entered her home last night she had the same old face—made me feel sorry for her husband, really. Then she got to talking about some charitable work she is engaged in for crippled children—and, presto, she suddenly became beautiful! Never saw such a transformation in all my life, really—not the same woman somehow.

"The deuce of it is I couldn't dissect the change, but I guess the eyes had more to do with it than any other feature. I had an idea of advising her husband to confine her conversation to that particular charity, but I'm afraid he'd regard it as a bit personal."—New York Globe.

How One Reads.

The average person believes that in reading a newspaper paragraph he reads the whole of each type's impression, while, in fact, he only notices the upper half of each letter. Cover the upper half of a line with a sheet of paper, being careful to hold the paper exactly in the middle of the letter, and you will not, without difficulty, decipher a word. Then place the paper over the lower half of the line. It can be read without the slightest trouble.

ORDER NISI.

James E. Lish et al. vs Tecmpson Lish et al. No. 1496 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 18th day of March, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Julius C. Renninger and William R. Offutt, trustees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of April, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three sucessive weeks before the 11th day of April, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $425.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Order of Publication.

Ada A. V. Halterman vs Henry H. Halterman.

No. 1529 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree, divorcing the plaintiff, Ada A. V. Halterman, a vinculo matrimonii, from the defendant, Henry H. Halterman.

The bill states that on the 29th day of May, 1875, the plaintiff was married to the defendant at Garrett county, Maryland, where they continued to reside together as husband and wife until the 11th day of February, 1905, and that, although the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband, the said Henry H. Halterman, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant has without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted her, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation, and that five children were born to the plaintiff and defendant as the result of said marriage, all of whom are dead, except one son, Lawrason H. Halterman, who is above the age of twenty-one years and resides in Page county, Virginia, and the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, Maryland, and that the defendant resides in Tucker county, West Virginia, and is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays that the plaintiff may be divorced a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, for general relief and an order of publication.

It is thereupon, this 14th day of March, 1908, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 18th day of April, 1908, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 4th day of May next to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Convenience,
Protection,
Economy,

are all combined in Telephone Service. We offer you the many facilities of an efficiently operated and extensively developed system of telephones.

The rates are very low.

THE C. & P. TELEPHONE CO.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JOHN KITZMILLER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 13th day of February 1908.

WILLIAM CALLIS,
W. J. KITZMILLER,
Executors.
Hoyes, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

CHRISTIAN KLOTZ,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of August next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1908.

LEWIS KLOTZ,
R. F. D. No. 1, Accident, Md.

Notice of First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy

In the Matter of David E. Sanders, Bankrupt, In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of David E. Sanders of Oakland in the county of Garrett, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1908, the said Bankrupt was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held in Oakland, Maryland, at the office of G. S. Hamill on the 21st day of March, A. D., 1908, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time creditors may attend prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
March 5, 1908. Referee in Bankruptcy.

Notice of First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy

In the Matter of Galusha H. Pritchard, Bankrupt. In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Galusha H. Pritchard of Oakland in the County of Garrett and district aforesaid a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of February A. D., 1908, the said Bankrupt was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held in Oakland, Maryland, at the office of G. S. Hamill on the 21st day of March A. D., 1908, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other busines as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
March 5, 1908. Referee in Bankruptcy.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANDREW J. TEATS,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of August, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of February, 1908.

ANASTASIA TEATS,
Administratrix.
Oakland, Md.

Administrator's Notiec.

THIS is to give notice, that the subscriber of Garrett County, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administrtion on the personal estate of

LEVI SWEITZER,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of July next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of January, 1908.

JOSEPH R. GLASS,
Administrator.
Swanton, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Somerset county, Pa., hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

ANNA BOGER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 12th day of March, 1908.

WILLIAM E. BITTNER,
Administrator.
Rockwood, Pa.

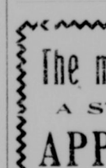
GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building."
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies



J. B. WILLIAMS CO
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

MATTHEWS & HAMILL,
Successors to Charles A. Tower,
General Fire Insurance,
OAKLAND, MD.

We offer the best possible protection.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1908. NUMBER 4

LEGISLATORS DEFY THE UNITED STATES SENATE

Named John Walter Smith to Succeed The Late Senator Whyte.

JOINT BALLOT TAKEN TUESDAY.

Republicans With One Exception Took No Hand in The Matter,—Important Local Legislation, Including An Interurban Traction Franchise.

ANNAPOLIS, March 24—The House and Senate, voting separately at noon Tuesday named Ex-Gov. John Walter Smith to fill out the term of the late William Pinkney Whyte in the United States Senate, which would have ended on March 4, 1909. The vote was as follows:

In the House—John Walter Smith 68; William H. Jackson, 1.

In the Senate—John Walter Smith, 18.

The Republican members of the Legislature decided at a caucus held today not to participate in the election of a United States Senator, taking the ground that any other course would be in violation of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Mr. Brown of Washington wanted the Republicans to pick a candidate and he was prepared to urge the claims of Congressman William H. Jackson of Salisbury.

Messrs. Pairo, Metzerott and Godwin of the House and Baker (Harford) and Lancaster of the Senate took the stand that no action should be taken, and this view was sustained by the great majority of those present.

Mr. Gray of Charles was the Republican who voted for Mr. Jackson. He bolted his party's caucus in order to do so. Mr. Gray said that he could not agree with his Republican associates in their stand on the Senatorship.

In compliance with the law the House Senate will meet jointly at noon tomorrow and record their votes as one body. John Walter Smith will then be formally declared Maryland's choice for the remainder of Senator Whyte's term. His certificate of election has been made out in blank, and just as soon as the ballot has been concluded it will be filled and forwarded to Washington.

As the names of the Republican members were called, all except Mr. Gray asked to be excused from voting.

Senator Smith's was the only name mentioned at last night's Democratic caucus. When the selection had been made Mr. McComas of Harford offered a message to the Senate inviting it to proceed with the House at noon today in selecting a Senator, Mr. Metzerott of Prince George's objected.

"By some pecular process of reasoning," said he, "the Attorney General has decided that the first Tuesday after a formal notice of a vacancy is really the second Tuesday, and as the chairman of the Elections Committee of the Federal Senate has let it be known unofficially that the first Tuesday is not in reality the second Tuesday, it would, I think, be just as well to let this message to the Senate rest where it is."

"While I cannot say," said Mr. Stanford of Somerset, "that I agree with the Astorney General, still he is the official adviser of the General Assembly, and it would be rather unusual if the Legislators were to ignore his advice. The responsibility rests with him."

The message was adopted, although there was quite a chorus of "Nays" on the viva voce vote.

The Maryland Legislature will have to pass a deficiency bill in order to meet its expenses. The $170,000 appropriated for that purpose has all been spent, and the Committee on Claims gave notice last week that no more certificates would be issued after March 20, which meant that the money would be all gone by that date.

As the Legislature's expenses exceed $2000 a day, it can be seen that more than $20,000 will have to be carried in a deficiency bill. It probable that the expense, in addition to the original appropriation, will run to $25,000, so that the total bill will be in the neighborhood of $195,000.

State Senator Gorman said: "The expenses of the Legislature have not increased in proportion to the increase in expenses of the other departments of the State government. Neither have they increased in proportion to the revenues of the State."

The Senate corporations committee reported favorably Senator Shannon's bill granting a charter to the Frostburg and Salisbury Electric Railway Company, which expects to build a line from in front of the Hotel Gladstone, Frostburg, where it connects with the Cumberland and Westernport system, via Finzel and Pocahontas, to Salisbury, Pa., a distance of twenty miles. At Salisbury, connection would be made with the Meyersdale and Salisbury system. The incorporators named in the bill are Charles J. Harrison and Ernest O. Koozer, Somerset county, Pa.; Patrick E. Finzel and Thomas J. Johnson, Garrett county; William A. Morgart, Roderick Clary and Harry A. Colborn, of Allegany county. The capital is $100,000 with privilege to increase to $200,000.

Mr. Meyers of Garrett county, introduced a compromise bill cutting out in incorporated towns in Garrett county the feature of the law recently passed requiring seven signers worth $2,000 each to an application for liquor license. If the compromise bill passes, applications will be made under provisions of the old law.

The Western Maryland Gas Company bill, which has been the subject of a big fight in the Corporations Committee of the Senate, will be reported favorably, with several amendments that will almost kill it. This company, which pipes natural gas from West Virginia into Allegany county, Maryland, seeks entrance into Washington county, and particularly Hagerstown. One of the amendments that it is undersood the Corporations Committee will adopt shuts the company entirely out of Washington county and gives it corporate rights in Allegany and Garrett county only. Other amendments will greatly restrict the company in its operations, and limit the price charged for gas.

The bill has been before the Committee for weeks, and the most powerful lobby of the session has been working against it. The Hagerstown gas interests have brought great pressure to bear in order to kill or cripple the bill, and it is reported that they have been secretly aided by certain powerful financial interests in Baltimore, which fear the introduction of cheaper gas into this state. The pressure exerted by this lobby has caused much unfavorable comment here. The natural gas people have no hesitancy in saying that their fight has only begun, and that if they are refused what they believe to be their just rights they will keep up their contest until the next legislature meets. The natural gas people do not lack capital, and they assert that the people of Washington county want natural gas, and have let the Corporations Committee of the Senate know it.

Tuesday Senator Brown's bill appropriating $4,000 for forest reserve fund, passed the Senate; also the bill amending the charter of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company.

THE NEGRO AS WE SEE HIM.

A Virginia Gentleman Writes of The Negro and Educational Advantages For Him.

To the Editor of The Republican:

What, Mr. Editor, fairly speaking and rationally thinking, is the probable outlook for this race of men of about fifteen millions forging its way for place and spread among a white race of more than eighty-five millions, not unlike the Gulf stream into the Atlantic.

Official publications point to the future of the negro tribe as curious, if not ominous, and invite far more and better consideration than we can either outline or suggest. In certain states these publications give a negro death-rate of twenty-eight and a fraction to the thousand, over the same area, and a white death-rate of seventeen and a fraction to the thousand. This shows the negro mortality to be almost twice as great as the white mortality in the same section or state. And, the astonishing fact is given, that the negro birth-rate per thousand is far below the white birth-rate.

Opportunity upon equal terms with white men at the polls has proved the negro, in the estimate of those acquainted with the facts, a lamentable failure, and wherever he is a factor at the ballot box Legislature enactments restrict him to a minority. In the strides of more than a generation educational advancements liberally extended to him do not appear to have improved him as an intelligent voter nor to have elevated him above vicious proclivities once attributed to his servitide in bondage. In fact as a criminal he has been painfully on the increase in the generation's test of educational betterment.

But these conclusions, we are glad to say, do not apply with even exactness in all the states where the negro is most populous.

This scribbler is a Virginian who has been in many of the Southern states and is taught by his experience that the Virginia negro is the very best and most trustworthy product of that race.

Maryland has twenty-four counties, and Virginia more than a hundred counties, with a powerful negro population living upon terms of amity with the white people, causing but little more infractions of law than an equal number of white citizens. Virginia does not send her black man to Congress nor promote him to any station in which he would be a public mockery, but she does not treat him harshly and provides wisely for him as an element within her borders. Within the last few weeks her Legislature at Richmond appropriated twenty thousand dollars for the erection of an institution purely in the interest of her blind and deal negro children with an annual stipend to defray the cost of the asylum.

As a Virginian, I confess to a tinge of state pride in seeing the "Old Dominion" thus caring for her more unfortunate and dependent children.

RELLIM.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Lizzie Collins, Mr. G. H. Cook, W. J. Liller, Mrs. Tom Mayle, Mr. Tom Nines.

HOW FORESTS PROTECT THE DOMESTIC WATER SUPPLY

State Forester Besley Interested Not Only In Forests But Also Water Supply for Towns.

To the Editor of The Republican:

DEAR SIR: The question of a town water supply I found to be one that is being agitated in Oakland and I am sending you a copy of an article recently prepared on this subject and dealing with the question in a general way as it applies to the towns and cities adjacent to the mountain region. I feel that you will be able to use this article to good advantage. If so, I shall be glad to have you make use of it.

Very sincerely,
F. W. BESLEY,
State Forester.

The fact that a forest cover is the best purifyer of water known has been generally accepted for a long time. That more cities and towns adjacent to a mountain region do not profit by this fact and and acquire mountain water from forested slopes is a serious reflection upon the light regard with which the public health is held. Thousands of lives are needlessly sacrified every year in this state by typhoid germs carried in the domestic water supply. A forest covered watershed would not in itself fully guarantee the water free of typhoid germs, but in would help immensely and at the same time it would clarify the water so that it would be delivered to the consumer clear and pure and not 15 or 20 percent sediment as is often the case in the spring when the streams are high.

The effect of the forest on the movement of water in the country is being demanded for this alone and is the prime reason why the Government has created large national forests in the mountains of the west. The same reasons apply in the east and there is now a bill before Congress for creating National Forests in the Appalachian and White Mountains in which the protection and regulations of stream flow is of equal importance with the maintenance of a supply of timber. The forest is the greatest natural reservoir known. The roots of the trees penetrating the soil make it porous and bind it together. The litter and leaves falling on the ground form a mulch which, with added accumulation, makes deep humus whose water absorbing capacity is equal to 3 or 4 times its own weight. This same mulch, with the shades of the trees themselves, retards evaporation so that every drop of water that falls is quickly taken into the mulch and soil and thence allowed to percolate gradually to the stream absolutely free from sediment. The small streams flowing through the forest have their banks and beds protected by the tree roots and rocks so there is no chance for the water to get muddy or polluted. Such a condition furnishes an ideal water supply. Local conditions will determine the course to persue but the following outline will serve in a general way.

The first consideration is to locate watersheds as near the city or town as possible where the following conditions prevail. (1) The watersheds should be at the head of a stream or streams and largely protected by a forest cover, especially the steeper slopes. (2) The flow of water even during dry seasons must be sufficient to supply the needs. One or more storage reservoirs would care for a share of the surplus and so supplement the supply in dry periods as to increase the capacity for growing needs. (3) The watershed should be under the control of the city or town and regularly patrolled to guard against any dangers of pollution from residents or transients and to protect the forest cover from fire or trespass. The second consideration is the financial one and this too often comes first. After looking over the ground and determining the probable cost the question will arise "Can we afford it?" In answering this question the first consideration should be the public health. The cases of typhoid in Washington, D. C., and Cumberland, Md., two cities depending wholly upon Potomac River water are unusually high. There have been notable typhoid epidemics traceable to the water supply. One at Cumberland in the first six months of 1890, produced 485 cases and resulted in 97 deaths. In Washington the water is filtered after being taken from the river which clears it of most of the sediment but does not remove all of the infectious germs. In addition to the dangers of typhoid infection there are large quantities of sewerage and refuse that pollute the Potomac waters and render them unfit for domestic use and a serious menance to the public health. In acquiring a mountain water supply the cost of pipe and reservoirs bring up the initial cost to a high figure but such an arrangement will do away with the necessity of a pumping plant and give sufficient pressure to aid greatly in the matter of fire protection. Colorado Springs, Colorado, which probably has the best water of any city in the United States gets its supply from the mountains and in the descent of the water to the city enough electric power is developed to light the city and to run the street cars, and other machinery and still have power to spare.

Mountain land is usually cheap, and in many cases, aside from the control which it gives over the water supply, it is a good financial investment when wisely managed for the production of timber and as a city park. Many of the water supply companies in New England have bought up large tracts of land surrounding their reservoirs and on the watepshed of their reservoir systems not only for the purpose of protecting the purity of the water supply, but they are actually securing financial returns from this land that more than pay for its maintenance.

When it comes to our supply of water—a commodity that we must have in abundance—we should not be satisfied with anything less than the best because the best is the cheapest in the long run.

Arbor Day Likely Will Be April 17.

Arbor and Bird Day will probably be celebrated on April 17, although the Governor, as is customary, will set the date. A program, consisting of songs, readings, recitations etc., has been arranged by Dr. M. Bates Stephens, state superintendent of education. The program, which will be followed in part or in whole in the public schools, is as follows: Song, "Maryland, My Maryland;" reading of Scripture selection; roll call, with appropriate quotations; reading of President Roosevelt's letter; singing, "Song of Arbor Day;" exercise, "Why We Keep Arbor Day," by seven pupils; recitation, "The schoolhouse Yard;" recitation, "If I Were a Sunbeam," by a primary pupil; short poems; song, "Arbor Day March;" planting exercises; closing exercises.

The program is contained in the Maryland Teachers' Year Book, and is followed by the words of the songs to be sung; a selection from the Scriptures; President Roosevelt's letter, in full, to the schoolchildren; planting suggestions; history of the liberty tree, standing on the campus of St. John's College, Annapolis, and many selections for readings and recitations.

A Correction.

In the account of the arrest of several young men at Mountain Lake Park recently who are changad with having broken open and entered a number of buildings at that place it was stated in THE REPUBLICAN that numerous articles were found in the unoccupied home of William Jones which had been taken from the store of Felty & Co., at the Park. This report, it seems, was erroneous, as nothing was found in the Jones house which had been pilfered from other properties.

EX-ASSEMBLYMAN HOWARD ARRESTED AND JAILED

He Stands Charged With Having Materially Altered Commercial Note.

MAKING IT FORGERY UNDER LAW

Place of Payment Changed On Paper After Endorsement Had Been Secured Also Charged With Securin Money Fraudulently.

Last Saturday R. A. Cookman Howard, of Bloomington, this county, who four years ago represented Garrett county in the Maryland legislature as member of the House of Delegates, was arrested at Kitzmillerville by Deputy Sheriff Claude Brown an two warrants, one charging him with having secured money under false pretenses and another with having materially altered a bankable note after the endorsement had been properly made thereon.

The note, so it is alleged, whereby Howard obtained the money, was drawn payable to the order of Sheriff Austin Brown, who became the endorser, in the amount of $235, payable at the First National Bank of Oakland. The note was dated sometime during the month of October last and was presented to the bank here by Howard to be discounted. At the request of the endorser the bank officials refused to discount the paper, Mr. Brown having ascertained that Howard who represented to him when he secured his endorsement, had purchased some real estate at Kitzmillerville, had made a false statement. After failing to secure the money at the bank in Oakland a change was made in the paper, making it payable at the First National Bank of Kitzmillerville, where the note was discounted and when it became due it was protested for non-payment.

It is said that Howard used the money secured on the note to pay off claims which various people held against him, some of the funds going toward making good a number of worthless checks he had issued to parties at Bloomington, one being to Merchant George Warnick, of that place.

The warrant for Howard's arrest on the charge of having materially altered the note in question was sworn out by Sheriff Brown. The law, covering cases wherein a material alteration of a security has been made, is very plain and in effect makes it forgery, which is punishable by confinement in the penitentiary for a term of years.

Howard took his arrest very coolly and was brought to Oakland overland by the Deputy. At the office of Justice Gonder where he was taken for a preliminary hearing, he made no defense and was sent to jail until bond in the sum of $800 is furnished for his appearance at the June Term of the Circuit Court.

DIXON & KELSO

WILL OFFER THE FOLLOWING GOODS

FOR 30 DAYS

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES:

MATTINGS.

15c	quality for	12½c.	yard
25c	" "	20c.	"
30c	" "	25c.	"
35c	" "	28c.	"

LACE CURTAINS.

65c	quality for	49c	pair
90c	" "	75c.	"
$1.15	" "	90c.	"
$1.25	" "	$1.00	"
$2.00	" "	$1.69	"
$2.50	" "	$1.99	"

Also 5000 rods American Woven Fence in heights ranging from 26 to 58 inches. Oliver Chilled Plows. Timothy and Clover Seed. Seed Oats. Fertilizer. Cement. Brick. Lime, &c., at Best Possible Prices

Yours to Please,

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

WEAR THE BEST

It Costs No More.

WHEN Buying Shoes it pays to get the best, not necessarily the highest in price. Bnt Shoes made of good solid leather by people who know how. This is the kind I sell. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

HEARST'S LEAGUE CAUSES WOE AMONG BRYAN FOLLOWERS.

Also It Is a Sort of a Bugaboo For The "Allied Forces" That Are Against Taft.

TAFT'S FRIENDS NOT WORRIED.

Interesting Epitome of Political Gossip Erom The Seat of The United States Government.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—There is no woe in Republican breasts because of Hearst's intentions to nominate an independent Republican ticket this year. The ones who worry are the Democrats, who really want Bryan and the Democrats who are casting about vainly for some one who can put Bryan out of the running. The sudden pushing forward of Johnson, the Minnesota wonder, did not annoy the Bryanites near as much as the intimation that Hearst and his fantastc Independence League would put forth a ticket fixed to draw support from the unhappy ones—the cranky extremists of all parties. The Hearst spectre haunts the Bryan temples more than Johnson and his uncertain strength in Scandinavian states of the Northwest. The mere suggestion of the Hearst flatters that La Follette of Wisconsin would be a very big part of the Hearst ticket, caused chills and chattering among the Johnson enthusiasts.

The chief argument for Johnson has been his popularity in the Northwest and we have heard from Republicans like Kellogg and McCreary of Minnesota that they fear the placing of Johnson at either end of any ticket. They knew his "pull" in the "Gopher State," and knew it would be as clever in all states having a large Scandinavin population. Neither Kellogg or McCreary dreamed of the Hearst scheme to offset the Johnson movement by enlarging that prince of trouble makers, La Follette, and it adds to the woeful for boding of both parties that the Hearst-La Follette conspiracy does not plan alone a campaign among the Swedes and Norwegians of the Northwest.

Hearst promises to look after the East if La Follette will keep busy in the Wisconsin and Minnesota regions. Very craftily the Hearst chaps have planned to make New York and Indiana the battle field, with the Northwest thrown in for good measure.

It is an old political story that to win a presidential election the winning party must carry New York and Indiana and not all the pacious arguments of Charles Henry Grosvenor, the Ohio politi-l prophet, has convinced the managers of either party that an election can be won without the two states named. We can all recall how New York and Indiana turned the election cost to both sides. To concentrate the fight in these states this year means much expense and the whimper is already heard that it will be hard to finance this coming campaign on either side. It must be discouraging to the Johnson boosters that the Hearst shadow loomel up the very week set for a very vigorous launching of the Johnson boom. The only ones happy over the Hearst intention are the backers of Taft, while a less degree of joy pervades the pectorol muscles of those who favor either Republican candidates.

This is the reason that Hearst will enlist the support of Democrats more than Republicans, although in the big cities many Republican voters in the labor organizations will incline to Hearst and his fanciful theories.

Nothing has given the Taft men so much joy as the prospect of a Hearst ticket. There is even the awful suspicion among anti-Taft men that malefactors of great wealth will cheerfully aid in financing the Hearst scheme so that Taft may feel easy about election, once he is nominated at Chicago.

You find in the east even among Wall Street men who do not like Taft, a curious fear of his luck. They liken it to the wonderful luck that attended the rise of Grover Cleveland and more than one astute financier whom I met in New York this week, men not generally superstitious, remaked that there was no use fighting the Taft luck.

You do not find in the east any especial interest in the factional fight going on in Ohio. The recent state convention there was little talked about in New York and by common consent the state is given to Taft. While this is disputed by Ohio men, who came to New York, the eastern politician sniffs the air and talks about something else—generally about the demands of the hour for a more conservative man in the White House and the danger of Bryanism. Taft made no sensation during his New York visit this week, but he made a good impression and in the quiet of his brother's home he had cheerful talks with New York leaders who assured him that Taft sentiment was growing despite the Hughes endeavor for a solid delegation.

James Francis Burke, the eloquent young congressman from Pittsburg, made a great hit at "The Friends of Ireland" banquet in New York this week. We all know him here as a polished orator and his name alone is one to conjure with among the Sons of Erin. Back of the Burke appearance in New York is a story. A few weeks ago he received a letter from Colonel O'Brien, the head of the "Friends of Ireland" society, inviting the congressman to be the chief orator of the St. Patrick's day banquet. Burke was pleased, so pleased in fact, that he wrote a letter in his own hand, accepting the invitation and telling when he would arrive. There was joyful response from the O'Brien pen and Burke, despite his arduous duties as congressman and as manager for Knox, prepared an eloquent address. On Monday Burke appeared at the Waldorf. He asked for mail. There was none and then he waited for the grasp of some glad Irish hand belonging to a reception committee. None came and Burke did not remember when the banquet was to be held. He met Homer Davenport and he too, was in the dark as to where the feast was spread. Finally they found out and Burke hooked up by wire with the chief mogul of the occasion. That gent was delighted to see Burke, but declared, "You wrote you could not come and we have not placed you on the program."

"But I wrote that I would come," protested Burke.

"Oh, on, here is your letter saying 'nay.'" A letter was flashed on Burke, who gasped a minute and then explained.

The letter was rubber stamped, signed and in polite language, and related that owing to another engagement, etc., etc., the invitation had to be declined.

Burke pointed out that a blundering secretary was the cause of the mistake and then was told that he would be an honored guest just the same.

Burke in his talk aroused much enthusiasm and threatened to dismiss the secretary who had mixed things up. This did not seem to please the banqueters, and Burke remarked that as St. Patrick was a forgiving soul, his example would be followed and then the applause was both frequent and extended. Burke made a great hit and kept his auditors lively until the morning hours.

Talk about luck. A few weeks ago John Hinkston Edwards, assistant secretary of the treasury, was suddenly informed that the White House had given his job to L. A. Coolidge, a newspaper man of Washington and Boston.

The shock rather unnerved Edwards, as he had hoped to continue in the treasury at least until the end of the Roosevelt term. There were explanations of course, but explanations do not provide places paying $5,000 a year and much honor.

A few weeks before Edwards had declined invitations to be a bank president, and his sudden throught was the harder to bear. Suddenly he was called into the Cortelyou office and told that he was appointed receiver for the New Amsterdam bank, which recently failed in New York. This was a characteristic action by Cortelyou. He is ever alert to aid young men and reward the virtuous. Edwards will receive $20,000 a year for his work as receiver and no doubt he will graduate into a bank president in the great financial district of the east.

Edwards began here as a congressman's secretary and is little past 30, so that his rise has been rapid. He comes from South Charleston, Ohio, and he owes some of his promition and rise to the friendship of Elmer Dover.

PROBE INTO MINE DISASTERS.

Bills Before Congress Providing for Bureau of Mining Technology.

Among measures already introduced into the present Congress is a joint resolution to provide for a mining technology branch in the Geological Survey, which would merely continue and definitely authorize what is already being done by the survey, and then there are several bills providing for the establishment of a bureau of mining technology under the Department of the Interior. The object of this bureau is to make technologic investigations, reports on methods of mining and extracting and utilization of the mineral substances of the United States and its non-contiguous territory, with a view toward the betterment of the mining industry, the improvement of mining conditions and the prevention of accidents and the waste of materials. These bills merely change the present technologic branch of the Geological Survey into a separate bureau.

Special attention has been given recently by the federal government to the causes of severe explosions in the coal mines. The American Mining Congress is backing the bill introduced by Senator Hemenway, of Indiana, the object of which is "to make technologic investigations and reports on the mining, extracting and utilization of the mineral products substances of the United States and its non-contiguous territory, with a view of the prevention of mine accidents, lessening the waste of materials, the improvement of the mine conditions, the betterment of the mining industry and the investigation of materials of construction, fuels and other mining materials belonging to or for the use of the government of the United States, with a view to their efficient use."

As the Hemenway bill carries no appropriation it is believed that it has a chance of adoption. It would make the technologic branch of the Geological Survey a bureau of mining technology with a distinct legal status.

The director of the Geological survey has submitted to Congress estimates for the use of the technologic branch for the coming year amounting to $200,000. Sixty thousand dollars is added "for the investigation of mine accidents and their prevention and the improvement of mine conditions to be immediately available."

The current number of "Mine and Minerals" heartily supports a request from the director for $20,000 for investigating methods of preventing waste in the mining, extraction and utilization of ores and mineral substances other than fuels, saying "whatever else Congress may or may not do this appropriation should certainly pass, since the technologic branch has already shown that there is a field for its work in this country, and any failure to continue work already begun and looking toward the further investigation of the safety of mining conditions will be considered in view of the recent disasters a shirking of what is the plain duty of Congress."

IN WESTERN MARYLAND.

Observations. Historical and Agricultural. By a Hudson River Valley Farmer.

Up from the meadows rich with corn,
Clear in the cool September morn,
The clustered spires of Frederick stand
Green walled by the hills of Maryland.

Thus wrote the Quaker poet in his familiar poem of "Barbara Frietchie." I have just left the old town, so rich in associations as well as in real wealth, and made notable by Whittier's poem. Since the day "when Lee marched over the mountain down" it has grown from a quaint old town of 3,000 or 4,000 people to a thriving city of 10,000. Set in the midst of rich meadows, corn and grain fields, the Catoctin and Blue Ridge mountains lie to the west and north, on whose slopes the "orchards sweep, apple and peach trees, fruited deep," in their season. It is claimed that Frederick County, although a Benjamin as compared with some of the counties of large area in other states, is one of the richest agriculturally in the United States. Her farms are large, and for the most part well tilled. There is, however, too much tenant farming for the ultimate good of the land. On these farms are old, substantial houses and great barns, the lower story of stone, and the upper one extending toward the south, lengthwise several feet beyond the stable below, with the space between for a shelter for the cattle and the manure. These farms bring, when put on the market, from $100 to $125 an acre.

A little way from the town one can see a substantial stone house, the birthplace of Admiral Schley, who won laurels for himself and his country in that memorable Sunday in July off Santiago, in spite of the attempts of his enemies to detract from them. Just within the gates of the beautiful rural cemetery is a fine statue of one of Maryland's sons, Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner." It is an interesting coincidence that just across the river, on the other side of the town, within the brick walls of the little cemetery of the German Reformed church, is the grave of Barbara Frietchie, made immortal by her love for that same banner of which Key wrote and for which Schley fought. As I looked on her grave I was glad that I lived in the day that Whittier hoped for, when the "flag of freedom and union" waves not only over "Stonewall" Jackson's and Barbara Frietchie's graves, but over "the land of the free and the home of the brave" even to the isles of the Pacific.

I was interested to learn if possible the true story of Barbara Frietchie and her flag, and was so fortunate as to find an old neighbor of hers, by the name of Nixdorph, who keeps a bookstore just across the street from where she lived. He has written a little sketch of her life and the story of her flag. Briefly told, the facts are there. Mrs. Frietchie was a widow, living in Frederick. Her house was an old-fashioned, gabled roofed house, with dormer windows over the street. From one of these she always kept the Stars and Stripes flying. She was intensely loyal, and she was often seen standing in front of her house, leaning on her cane, looking almost in worship at the old flag, "in her attic window." At the time when Lee's army marched, not "from the mountains winding down," but north from Winchester, the loyal city of Frederick was taken completely by surprise and her citizens fled in terror. "Stonewall" Jackson did not "ride ahead." He having gone to call on a friend, a Presbyterian clergyman in the town, a subordinate officer led the troops. It was early in the morning when the march through Frederick street began. Mr. Nixdorph said he was very sure Mrs. Frietchie's flag was not flying that early, nor did any such demonstration as the poet describes take place, but a little way up the street a woman stood on her porch with a small flag in her hand, waving it and vehemently speaking words of intense loyalty and patriotism to a mounted Confederate officer. Later in the day the little flag lay trampled in the dust by the "marching feet."

Mrs. Southworth, visiting the city, heard of "Dame Barbara," her loyalty and her flag, and doubtless also the incident of the lady and the little flag. She told the story to Whittier, who wove from it the tale and poem, with a good bit of "poetical license." The bookseller further told me that when General Reno passed through Frederick, he called on Mrs. Frietchie, having heard of her and her flag. She presented him with it, and it was carried at the head of his troops, into the battle of South Mountain, where the general was killed. His body was wrapped in this flag and taken to his home in Boston. Mr. Nixdorph showed me a letter from General Reno's son, saying he still had the flag, with some bullet holes in it.

South Mountain is only a little way from the city. Except the stone erected to General Reno, on the crest of the hill, there is nothing to indicate the stirring scenes and slaughter that took place there, and some of the sons of those who fought, in peace and plenty till the fields and watch "the kine wend lowing o'er the lea."

I am writing from Hagerstown, a thriving city of fifteen thousand, on the west of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Pennsylvania is a few miles to the north, and West Virginia twenty-three to the south, just across the Potomac. Travelling in that direction one passes through the battlefield of Antietam, with its many monuments, full of historic interest; but I forbear to write farther of such events, least I tread unduly in the fields of history and romance, rather than in those of agriculture, in which my feet have ever walked.

This is one of the best fruit regions of this state; in fact, the valley between the Blue Ridge and Cumberland Mountains, extending from above Gettysburg, down to the valley of the Shenandoah, in Virginia, is a veritable "garden of the Lord." Fine productive orchards are on the hillsides, "the valleys are also covered over with corn." As noted in a former article, here are some of the finest peach orchards. Mr. Arthur Towson of Smithville, has some twenty-five acres of this fruit. One-fifth of them have not come into bearing. Last season from ten acres of fore-year-old trees and and a like number of nine-year-olds, he sold $6,500 worth of peaches, $5,000 being net. Some of the older trees yielded $500 an acre. His most profitable variety is the Alberta, but he finds it very susceptible to leaf curl. Champion and Chan's Choice are both favorites. He has many Salway, but they come into competition with earlier and finer looking peaches from further south, and on that account he is not planting largely of them. He, like all the orchardists, has the San Jose scale, but in the main they are holding it in check. Lime and sulphur have been and are most generally used, but I find the prepared oils in good repute; on apples, giving rather better results than the lime and sulphur. In speaking of lime for spraying, Mr. Towson says he finds lime burned with wood makes a much better spray material than that burned with coal. He gave me the address of the Potomac Valley Lime Company, of Hagerstown, Md., as a firm supplying rich lime at a cost to him of 20 cents a bushel of eighty pounds.

Between Cherry Run and Hancock, north of the Potomac, there are being plated immense orchards, largely apples. A company of gentlemen all in one way or another practically interested in land, fruit or its care, have already put in over $75,000. The enterprise has been under way some six years, and annually they extend their planting. Much of it is land grown up in bushes, which are fired and cleaned up by Angora goats. After some fitting of the land the trees are planted. Last fall there were set over forty thousand apples. Several of the men have been eminently successful as individual fruit growers and business men. They purpose to do everything just as it should be done, and in a wholesale way, and expect to make a fortune. The soil, climate and location are all that may be desired, with fine railroad facilities, being on the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio, not very far from Washington, Baltimore and New York. Theoretically "every prospect pleases," and yet—experience has shown that the "little farm (or orchard) well tilled" has been the one that has made the greatest amount of real profit.

In Southwestern Allegany county there is another company planting largely of peaches. Certain it is that these slopes are particularly adapted to the peach and certain variety of apples. Of the latter York Imperial is doubtless the most profitable.—Edward Alstine in New York Farmer.

IN HONOR OF AN EMINENT SURGEON

B. & O. R. R. Formulating Plans to Found "Trimble Lectureship."

A movement has been started to create a suitable memorial to Dr. Isaac Ridgeway Trimble, who was Surgeon-in-Chief of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and a prominent citizen of Baltimore. Dr. Trimble died recently from blood poison, having received the infection while performing a surgical operation a short time before.

The plan is to establish a fund by voluntary subscription and present it to the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland for the purpose of founding the "Trimble Lectureship." A committee th organized this movement and h charge of it consists of Mr. Oscar G. Murray, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad; Mr. Alexander Brown, Mr. Lawrason Riggs, Doctors L. McLane Tiffany, Hiram Woods, Frank Martin, W. S. Thayer, Charles O'Donovan, John C. Davis and John Ruhraw. The Committee has issued an announcement that it is the desire to perpetuate the memory of Dr. Trimble in this way Dr. S. R. Barr, superintendent of the Relief Department of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, has sent out a circular letter to all surgeons and medical examiners of the company with a copy of the committee's explanation of the plan and expressing belief that all would contribute to the fund and adding that no amount will be considered too small. In his letter Dr. Barr says that "Dr. Trimble was so well and favorably known in the B. & O. service and had done so much for the men that there must be a large number who would be glad of an opportunity to aid in the establishment of the Lectureship and I am specially anxious that the B. & O. should make a good showing in this work."

The plan is to have the lectures delivered before the Chirurgical Faculty at its annual meeting each year or some other time to be agreed upon. An effort will be made to make the endowment sufficient to yield a sum that will make it possible to invite, as lecturers, men of distinction from all parts of the world. It is believed that the plan purposed is the one which would be most pleasing Dr. Trimble if his wishes coul made known. Messrs. Alexander Brown & Sons, bankers of Baltimore, are treasurers of the fund.

A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. It's a pity that sick ones continue to drug the Stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves, not the organs themselves, need this help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has, and is promptly helping so many sick ones. It goes direct to the cause of these diseases. Test this vital truth, and see. All dealers.

The Perfect Man

By TROY ALLISON.

Copyrighted, 1908, by E. C. Parcells.

"I am getting frightfully cynical," Elberta said dolefully, arranging the cushions on the box couch so the becoming red one would be nearest her face, "and I don't like it. My dislike is not founded so much upon moral grounds as from a regard for my complexion."

"Eh?" remarked Mr. Terhune helplessly. "Your conversation, my dear Elberta, often seems involved. Your remarks are sometimes not as lucid—that is, as intelligible—as one might desire."

"Perhaps I am forgetting that the young or very feeble are fed on specially prepared food. John, and the rule probably applies as much to the mental as to the physical," she said, with mock petulance.

"SHE HAS THE DAINTIEST LITTLE NOSE I EVER SAW."

"Now, my dear girl, don't fly off into a psychological discussion, for either nature defrauded me or they left out something in my college course, I don't know which. The only thing I want to know is—why being cynical should affect your complexion."

"That's easily explained. It takes the sparkle out of my eyes, it draws my mouth down at the corners and destroys my dimple, and to cap the climax it makes me wonder if there is a living, breathing man worth marceling my hair for. So when I get in a cynical mood I go around straight haired, thin lipped, with a listless expression that makes me positively homely."

"But, my dear child," protested Mr. Terhune, "I could run in almost any time to admire the marceled hair, and if I didn't happen to come at the psychological moment you could phone me at any minute, and I would be delighted—dee-light-ed—to rush to admire—just count on me for any old time," he added graciously.

"John, you are at intervals positively foolish," she said severely, trying to select from the box in her lap a chocolate that contained a nut. "I am tired of being admired by plain, everyday men."

"Like me?" he suggested amiably.

"I didn't say I was rude or impolite enough to call you names. I merely said I was cynical," she demurred.

"Oh, call me a plain, everyday man if you like," he conceded graciously—"if it makes you feel one tiny bit better to work off your cynicism on me, Lady Fair. 'Tis sweet to die for—er—I'm not strong in poetry, Elberta, but I'm willing to help you out all I can. So you want the marcel to be admired by some wonderful being. Elberta, my child, don't you think a perfect man would let his thoughts run upon—er—scientific lines—and not undulations in—hair lines?"

"He wouldn't, I'm sure, labor under the impression that he could make puns," she sniffed disdainfully.

"Even if he didn't make puns he might be disagreeable in other respects," suggested Mr. Terhune hopefully. "His very perfections, my dear girl, would make him clear sighted enough to see the imperfections of others. Now, I think you are perfect, but he probably would not take to you at all on account of your imperfections."

"Indeed? Would you enumerate them?" The tone struck Mr. Terhune as being slightly icy, but, however foolish, he evidently was not lacking in bravery.

"If you will for once let me assume that I, even I, am a perfect man, perhaps I can give you a few of the ideas he might entertain."

"Pray do. It cannot fail to be interesting," freezingly.

"That reminds me. I met Miss Deland on the street this afternoon, and I never in my life saw so perfect a profile. She is the exact type that would make a suitable mate for your perfect man. And I think she has the daintiest little nose I ever saw," reminiscently.

Elberta reddened slightly. She had always wondered if her nose were not a trifle large, and her fingers unconsciously flew to her face to be passed furtively over the suspected member.

"And she always makes herself so entirely charming—she doesn't seem to be moody—one could not imagine her ever being—er—rude. She is an ideal feminine character, a perfectly womanly woman—she would give her husband just the proper amount of adoration necessary to stimulate him to success—she wouldn't expect the perfect man to waste time in admiring a mere woman—a frail, impulsive, whimsical woman. The perfect man, my dear, would probably—at least possibly—be the center of attraction himself. I can imagine that his wife would occupy the subordinate position of second fiddle."

Elberta sat quietly stroking her nose with her finger, evidently deeply absorbed in thought.

"John—do you think my nose is—very large?" she asked timidly, almost humbly.

"Oh, I have seen a few larger," declared Mr. Terhune airily.

It is hard to have one's sensitive point so negligently handled, and the girl looked at him in grieved surprise. "I had no idea you were so disagreeably critical. Of course I never thought I was a beauty, but I can't help the size of my nose."

"Of course you can't," consolingly. "Nobody can blame you for it," he declared piously. "We should not blame people for their misfortunes. We should sympathize."

She looked at him a second, tears of mortification in her eyes. "You are—cruel," she said in muffled tones from the depth of the red pillow where she buried her face.

Mr. Terhune without her eyes upon him permitted a look of satisfaction to creep over his face.

"Wouldn't it be awful to live in the same house with a man so perfect himself that he never noticed your eyes or hair, who perhaps had so perfect a nose that he would make disagreeable comparisons of your own—er—features?" he suggested wickedly.

A slight sob from the red cushion and an unhappy tapping on the floor by the small slippered foot nearest him was the only response.

"Wouldn't you rather have a—well, just a plain everyday man who thought you altogether charming?" He dared to put his hand on the mass of fluffy hair that showed off well on the red cushion. He had never been so daring before, and the sobs stopped in amazement.

"He—he might like Miss Deland's type too. I haven't a profile like hers," came the muffled tones.

"Pshaw!" said Mr. Terhune, with a fine flow of scorn. "She is always so exactly the same that she would soon grow monotonous." And he deftly lifted the bowed head to his shoulder.

"But is my nose—so very large?" came a whisper from his shoulder.

"You dear," said the plain, everyday man enthusiastically, "there's not in the whole world a more charming feature."

Story of a Black Cap.

A court martial was being held on board the Hibernia at Malta for the trial of a gunner who had been drinking not wisely, but too well. The evidence had been taken, the finding decided on and the court cleared to consider the sentence. The court was reopened and the prisoner ushered in. Hardly had he crossed the threshold when, to the astonishment of the members of the court, he threw himself face downward, uttered a wild shriek and pleaded piteously for mercy. Every one looked at the president, and the reason for the prisoner's strange behavior at once dawned on their perplexed minds. The president's hair on top was conspicuous by its absence, and in private life he invariably wore a black skullcap. Now, the Hibernia was one of the draftiest ships in the navy, and the deliberations had been somewhat long, so in the prisoner's absence the president had covered his head with its usual protector, but on the man's re-entry quite forgot to hide it by putting on his cocked hat. The unfortunate gunner, whose nerves were somewhat unstrung as a result of his recent debauch, jumped at the conclusion that the wearing of the black cap by the president signified that he was to be hanged for his offense, instead of which his punishment turned out ot be a few days in the cells.—London P. T. O.

Robbing the Mail.

General Post Office, Dec. 17, 1796.—The Post-boy, carrying the North Mail from Warrington to Chester, was stopped on Monday evening, the 5th inst., between 7 and 8 o'clock, within a mile of Chester, by a Man on foot, who took from him the Mail, containing the Manchester, Warrington, and Frodsham bags of letters. The Robber was dressed in a blue jacket and White Trousers, and had an oil case cover to his hat. Whoever shall apprehend and convict, or cause to be apprehended and convicted, the person who committed this robbery, will be entitled to a reward of Two Hundred Pounds over and above the reward given by Act of Parliament for apprehending of highwaymen; and if any accomplice in the robbery, or knowing thereof, shall surrender himself and make discovery, whereby the person who committed the same may be apprehended and brought to justice, such discoverer will be entitled to the said reward of Two Hundred Pounds, and will also receive his Majesty's most gracious pardon. By command of the Postmaster-General.

ANTH. TODD, Secretary.

—An Old English Advertisement.

Kindly Meant.

"You'll have a fit when I get through with you!" cried the first.

"Just try it on!" promptly retorted the other.

No, gentle reader, they were not quarreling. The first speaker was a dressmaker and the other her patron.

A MYSTERY.

How Mother's Questioning Struck Her Son William Junior.

William junior had been cautioned by his mother not to do a number of things, too many for brief mention, but all very dear to him, and he had promised. However, after dinner his mother, happening to look out of an upstairs window, saw him in the midst of a transgression and reserved the matter in her memory.

That evening she detained William by her knee and questioned, as mothers do.

"Have you been a good boy all day, Willie?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Real good?"

"Y-yes, ma'am."

"And not done any of those things that mother told you not to do?"

"Y-y-yes, ma'am."

"Not a single one?"

William looked at her sharply, his mouth open.

"Are you me?" he demanded.

"Why, no."

"Are you God, then?"

"Certainly not."

"Then how did you know I was slidin' down that board?"—Lippincott's.

May and December.

"Yes, madam, I am going to marry Watkins."

"Why, he is old enough to be your father!"

"I know he is, but unfortunately he doesn't seem to care for mother!"—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Cultivating the Power of Observation.

"How many seed compartments are there in an apple?" he asked. No one answered. "And yet," continued the school inspector, "all of you eat many an apple in the course of a year and see the fruit every day probably. You must learn to notice the little things in nature."

The talk of the inspector impressed the children, and at recess the teacher overheard them discussing it. A little girl, getting her companions around her, gravely said:

"Now, children, just suppose I am Mr. Robinson. You've got to know more about common things. If you don't, you'll all grow up to be fools. Now, tell me, Maggie," she continued, looking sternly at a playmate, "how many feathers are there on a hen?"—Woman's Home Companion.

The Force Accounted For.

"Where's the editor?"

"Runnin' a race with the sheriff to git warm."

"And the foreman?"

"Tryin' to git the stove red hot with rejected poetry."

"Well, where's the office boy?"

"Tryin' to mortgage the paper to buy a snow shovel."—Atlanta Constitution.

Always Forget.

"I am in favor of the 'open door' policy," said the starch salesman as he opened his samples.

"Then, by heck, yeou are like those loafers behind the cannon stove," drawled the old storekeeper. "Every one of them leave the door open every time they come in."—Chicago News.

The Reason.

"Why were the old time writers so much more delicate and lucid in their styles of expression than those of the present?"

"Because there were no such things as fountain pens and typewriters to get out of order and worry them."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Diminishing.

"Mrs. Gadder has such a way of attacking people without saying anything outright."

"Yes. I was just a-sayin' the other day that she always was ready with a diminuendo against somebody."—Baltimore American.

Consolation.

Stout Customer (in the chair)—Confound your blundering clumsiness! You have cut my chin.

Barber (soothingly)—Don't git agitated, sah; don't git agitated! Yo' all's got two mo' chins dat I ain't cut none yit, sah.—Puck.

By Willie.

When my papa's in the room
And Thomas calls on sis,
Pose dignified, they both assume

For Tom sits here
And sis sits like this

But when pa's gone, then Tom and Sue
They always move quite near,
And one chair does the work of two,

For Tom and Susan sits here sis sits this —Bohemian.

Our Navy Is Equal to Any In the World.

By Secretary of the Navy METCALF.

FAIR criticism of the navy is always acceptable. As a matter of fact, however, there is much that goes under the name of criticism of the navy that is MERELY A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION among people who are qualified to speak. But the criticism that seeks to BELITTLE the navy needs no comment.

JUST BEFORE REAR ADMIRAL EVANS SAILED FOR THE PACIFIC I ASKED THE OPINION OF HIMSELF AND REAR ADMIRAL BROWNSON ON THE SEVERAL CRITICISMS THAT HAVE BEEN MADE. AS THE RESULT OF THEIR OPINIONS AND OF THE NAVAL BOARDS AND EXPERTS I AM SATISFIED THAT, SHIP FOR SHIP, THE NAVY OF THE UNITED STATES IS THE EQUAL OF ANY IN THE WORLD.

It is common knowledge that the navy has been assailed vigorously. Much of the criticism has been directed at the disposition of the armor, and this certainly HAS BEEN DISCUSSED FROM ALL STANDPOINTS ever since the armorclad became a part of the navy. Sometimes it is said there is too great a thickness below the water line and sometimes the reverse. In one case we had a seventeen inch thickness, but that was unnecessarily great.

* * *

The distribution of armor is for naval EXPERTS to determine. It cannot be accurately decided by CIVILIANS. The board of naval construction is composed of OFFICERS WHO ARE THOROUGHLY QUALIFIED FOR THE WORK. The president is Rear Admiral Converse, retired, whose judgment is accepted by all naval men as authoritative. The question of armor belt was one which occupied the attention of the board for MANY MONTHS. The opinions of naval officers were regarded and the protests of line officers in active service who were not at first in accord with the views of the board were given due weight. Opportunity was afforded them to present their convictions, and many did so.

The decision of the board was unanimous and the line officers who had been opposed to the manner of distribution of armor plate accepted finally the conclusion as WISE AND EXPEDIENT.

IT IS EVIDENT THAT THE RECENT CRITICISMS ARE APPLIED TO SHIPS OF THE OLDER TYPE. IT IS NO FAULT OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT THAT TYPES KEEP CHANGING AND THAT BETTER DESIGNS ARE PRODUCED FROM YEAR TO YEAR. IN FACT, THAT IS THE ONLY WAY WE CAN PROGRESS.

We Lead In Material Products, Not In Brains.

By OWEN WISTER, Novelist and Historian.

NOT many days ago the report of the secretary of agriculture for 1907 came into my hands. The report tells us that the grand total of our crop for 1907, in spite of a hard winter, a hot March, a cold April and May and a labor famine, in spite of almost every hindrance that could exist, exceeds by nearly $1,000,000 the greatest crop we have ever had before, giving us a balance of trade of $444,000,000. From this native harvest of the SOIL, from this huge output of vital force, we turn to the native HARVEST OF THE INTELLECT. How much food of that sort did we export in 1907? Which way is the balance of trade there?

Who sits teaching something at Harvard, at Johns Hopkins, at Yale, at Columbia, at Princeton, at Pennsylvania and at other of our colleges and universities? Who, in short, sits in some American academic chair to whose feet the students of the whole world come as to the SUPREME AUTHORITY in his chosen subject?

NO AMERICAN UNIVERSITY POSSESSES ONE SINGLE TEACHER OF UNDISPUTED PRE-EMINENCE. BALANCE OF TRADE IN FOOD PRODUCTS FOR THE YEAR 1907, $444,000,000; BALANCE OF TRADE IN SCHOLARSHIP, MINUS 100 PER CENT. BY SCHOLARSHIP IS MEANT PROFICIENCY IN ALL KNOWLEDGE ACQUIRED BY STUDY.

Let us contemplate this for awhile. Let us draw from it no humiliation, no sourness, no despondency, to wet blanket our faith. Let us draw from it only a clear lesson and a CHALLENGE TO OUR PATRIOTISM. We must not scold. But neither must we give ourselves fair words.

IN THE DOMAIN OF INTELLECTUAL ACQUISITION AND PRODUCTIVENESS WE ARE NOT A FIRST RATE COUNTRY.

Dreamers Wanted as Well as Workers.

By President WOODROW WILSON of Princeton University.

THE great body of our young people must be made mechanics, either of the hand or mind. They must be trained, that is, to A SKILLED CAPACITY FOR ACCOMPLISHING CERTAIN DEFINITE AND NARROW TASKS. A technical education prepares one to be an artisan of the mind. Count heads and this sort of training is precisely what this AGE OF TRAINED SPECIALISTS needs. But in education we don't count heads—that is, we don't count the outside of them. And that is why this age needs men of liberal education MORE than minds trained to technical pursuits.

For if ever an age stood in sore need of those who see the invisible this does; if ever age needed STATESMANSHIP OF THE MIND this age needs it.

LET THERE BE AN ARMY OF WORKERS WITH THEIR GAZE CONCENTRATED ON THEIR OWN LITTLE TASKS, WITH NO ONE TO DREAM DREAMS FOR THEM, NONE TO SEE VISIONS, NO GENERALS OF THE MIND TO ORGANIZE OUR GREAT COMBINATIONS OF EFFORT, AND IT WILL NOT BE LONG BEFORE WE STUMBLE UPON DISASTER.

I don't mean to tell you that information is not a part of education, but I do say that BRUTE INFORMATION—mere gross bodies of fact—DOES NOT EDUCATE. Information, so far from accelerating the powers of the mind, may even clog them. Unless it disciplines it impedes.

TRANSFERRED.

'Twas Sergeant O'Malley and Sergeant McNally,
Two soldiers both valiant and true.
O'Malley served under the old English flag,
McNally, the red, white and blue.
The two were alike as peas in a pod,
And both hailed from Limerick, on Ireland's old sod,
But one common failing would land them in "quod,"
A peg one to many or few.

O'Malley, the pride of the queen's fusileers,
Was ordered to "Gib" from the highlands—
McNally, a cavalryman, it appears,
On a transport en route to the islands.
With anchors both down at the "Rock" the same day,
They met just by chance—in the usual way—
And promptly proceeded to squander their pay
On a brand of cold bottles marked "Wellands."

Said Sergeant O'Malley, the gay fusileer,
To Sergeant McNally, the Yankee,
"'Tis the fine inspiration I find in the beer—
Try another wan?" "Sure I will—thank'e."
"The point is just this: Av we aich exchange clothes
'Tis a bob to a tanner no wan iver knows!"
"Phat a broth av a joke," said McNally; "it goes,
Although be th' shift ye will rank me."

McNally awoke in the fortress next day
In the clothes that O'Malley was owning;
O'Malley was far on the way to Cathay
In the brig of a transport, bemoaning.
Explanations erratic did nothing avail—
The rank only smiled when they heard the wild tale.
"Sure there's wan consolation—McNally's in jail,"
Said O'Malley by way of atoning.

Now, Terrence McNally bethought him at last
And wrote a brief line to O'Malley:
"Av ye anny respict for th' days av th' past?
Be a soldier—an' stand to the tally."
McNally, they say, made a fine fusileer,
While O'Malley stood fast by our flag over here,
'Tis a tale that is told when there's plenty of—cheer,
And the truth? You may question O'Malley.

—Army and Navy Life.

A Willing Sufferer.

He—Good heavens! Oh, my poor wife, how you must suffer!

She—Yes, but think what a small waist I shall have afterward.

Satan Terrified.

There is as great genius displayed in advertising as in the higher branches of literature. No problem daunts the modern advertising man.

In the window of a little book store in Eighth avenue, New York, was recently heaped a great pile of Bibles, marked very low. Never before were Bibles offered at such a bargain, and above them all, in big letters, was the inscription:

Satan trembles when he sees
Bibles sold as low as these.

—Woman's Home Companion.

Not a Music Lover.

"What did you think of the opera?"

"I'm not quite clear about it," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I can't make up my mind whether I couldn't appreciate it because I had a headache or whether I got a headache trying to appreciate it."—Washington Star.

An Early Riser.

Borem—I think I hear your father's step on the stairs, so perhaps I had better bid you good night.

Miss Hitts (yawning)—Oh, it can't be father. He's a late sleeper. Perhaps it's the hired girl coming down to prepare breakfast.—Detroit Tribune.

The Difference.

"Grafton calls himself a 'professional man,' and yet he takes no part in anything but politics. Is politics a profession or a business?"

"Well, when his side is in power it's a business; otherwise it's merely a profession."—Philadelphia Press.

Certainly Would.

City Man (to villager)—Wouldn't it open your eyes if you were to look across at that lot there and see one of our city skyscrapers covering it?

Village Man—Waal, I guess I would, seein' as I've got twenty head o' cattle grazin' there.—Bohemian.

The Same Old Signs.

"I see the depot signs are more hopeful," observed Mr. Citiman.

"Mebbe so," replied Farmer Fields. "But the only ones I saw said 'Beware of Grip Thieves.'"—Kansas City Times.

A Fortunate Breakdown.

"Did you see the Alps?"

"Oh, yes! Our car broke down right opposite them, and do you know I'm almost glad it did. I found them so charming and interesting."—Puck.

Wanted—A Diamond.

A box of roses every day!
Their meaning well I know;
Such interest in botany
But one intent can show.

Well, botany is nice, I grant,
And yet, it seems to me,
It's really time we had a course
In mineralogy!

—New Broadway

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1908.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We shall during the ensuing ten days, mail to all subscribers who are more than a year in arrears, statements of their accounts. After April 1st no paper on which the subscription has not been paid, can be admitted to the mails under a recent ruling of the Department

CALL FOR PRIMARIES AND COUNTY CONVENTION.

Pursuant to a resolution passed at the meeting of the Republican Committee of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland February 26th, 1908, the qualified Republican voters of Garrett County, Maryland, are hereby requested to assemble in primary meetings in their respective Election Districts, at the usual places of holding the polls for the elections in said districts, on Saturday, April 4th, 1908.

at the hour of two o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing five Delegates from their respective Election Districts to attend a County Convention to be held in the Court house in the town of Oakland, on Tudsday, April 7th, 1908.

at the hour of one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing three Delegates to represent Garrett County in the Congressional Convention to be held in the City of Hagerstown, Maryland, on Thursday, April 16th, 1908.

to nominate a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland, and two Delegates and two Alternates to attend the National Republican Convention, and for the nomination, subject to the approval of the State Convention, of a Presidential Elector from the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland; also a member of the Board of Appeals. And further, for the purpose of electing Delegates to attend the State Convention at Baltimore, to be held to elect four Delegates- and four Alternates-at-Large to the National Republican Convention to meet at Chicago, Ill., June 16th, 1908, and for the nomination of eight Republican candidates for Electors for President and Vice President of the United States.

Thursday, April 30th, 1908.

A. G. STURGISS,
Chairman.

A. F. GEORGE,
HARVEY J. SPEICHER,
Republican Committee for Garrett Co.

It is reported that in their despair over the tariff situation, the Democrats purpose to adopt some sort of prohibition plank with the hope of absorbing the Prohibition party, as they absorbed the Populist party in 1896. Considering the acute indigestion which Miss Democracy has suffered ever since she swallowed the "Pops," we should suppose she would be chary of adopting a diet to which Democrats are as unaccustomed as they are to prohibition.

THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY.

When ex-Governor Bradley next year takes his seat in the United States senate as the representative of the Republican party from Kentucky that body will contain 63 Republicans and 29 Democrats, which gives over two-thirds Republican majority. The Republican membership of the upper house of Congress has been swelling ever since the turn in the tide of affairs set in in 1896 with the nomination of Bryan by the Democrats. Since that evil day for the Democracy the Republicans have gained nearly thirty seats in the senate. In 1895 the Repablicans were in the minority. To-day the party is so intrenched in power in the senate that it will require many years of disaster to it for the Democrats to come anyways near outvoting it.

An analysis of this strength will give some idea of the complete independence of the Republican party in matters connected with the functions of the senate. It is now in a position to ratify any treaty without the aid of the votes of any other party. When the Spanish treaty was before the senate the aid of a few Democratic votes was required to secure its ratification.

Another and equally important feature of the change that has taken place in the political complexion of the senate is, that no more will the Democrats be able to even indulge in their characteristic tactics of the obstruction of legislation, for the Republican membership may be split into two factions, but each wing would be able to outvote the combined strength of the Democrats.

FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

Several distinguished Republican Senators say they don't like the Aldrich bill, but that they will vote for it. Perhaps that is what ails our banking and currency system, too many lawmakers have been voting for measures that they do not approve and only give them their support, because they are party measures. But that doesn't appear like the best of reasons for supporting a measure. If the proposed law is not good for the country in the opinions of those who object to it, how can it be a good thing for the party?

A great many of the lawmakers are of the opinion that our banking and currency systems are inferior to those of other countries. We ought to have the best in the world and it is the duty of congress to give it to us. Why stick a patch here and one there upon the banking system, if the system is wrong? Why not replace it with a new system that is right? Patches will not secure the reform which we should have if the system itself is wrong as many of the financiers in and out of congress aver. If our banking system is a war measure, adopted for the main purpose of stimulating the market for government bonds, which were hard to sell at that time, and financiers agree that this was its main purpose, it has accomplished the purpose for which it was created, and we ought to have a new up to date system. Business conditions are not so bad but we can wait till a measure is framed and passed that will meet the approval of the financiers of congress and of the country. Instead of another patch upon a system that may have outlived its purpose, let congress take its time and give us a system better than the best to be found in any other country.

BRYAN. THE INEVITABLE.

No other living man has posed more tirelessly as the expounder or Jeffersonian Democracy than William Jennings Bryan. On each successive birthday of the Montecello sage Mr. Bryan has been accustomed to explain not only what Thomas Jefferson stood for in his day and generation, but the Nebraska statesman has solved, to his own satisfaction at least, just how Jefferson would have adopted his precepts and formulas to the condition of this day. There is not the least difficulty in knowing what Jefferson would do, if he were now on earth, if only the seeker after light on this particular subject is willing to take Mr. Bryan's word for it.

The news is, therefore, bewildering that the National Democratic Club, an organization having its base in New York city, but which is supposed to represent Democratic sentiment and aspiration prevalent over a wide Eastern area has ignored Bryan and invited instead Gov. John Johnson, of Minnesota, to expound Jeffersonian ideals on the approaching anniversary of the founder of the faith. It is all the more bewildering when regarded in conjunction with the fact that the developing signs are all pointing to the Nebraska apostle as the inevitable third-time standard-bearer of the Democracy in the approaching presidential race. There is small room for doubt at this time that Mr. Bryan is to be the presidential nominee of his party at the Denver convention, and the New York snub does not lose, but rather gains, in significance in view of this fact.

It means that the conservative Eastern element of the Democracy is not for Bryan, and will not be for him, even though he should be nominated next July with a rush and a hurrah. The New York World has persistently been urging upon the Nebraska candidate the question, "What states could you carry in 1908 that you failed to carry in 1900?" The query as a test of availability is not an altogether fair one. If Mr. Bryan should answer frankly and honestly, he must acknowledge that there is not a single state which he lost in 1900 which he could probably carry in 1908—that is, he must answer thus if his superabundant egotism did not get the better of his judgment. The unfairness of the test when directed against Bryan exclusively consists in the fact that it applies just as pertinently to every other one of the Democratic possibilities whose name has been mentioned in connection with the candidacy for the presidency.

In 1904 the Eastern wing of the Democracy had an inning in the nomination of Judge Parker, and the popular majority against the candidate of the so-called Cleveland Democracy in the entire vote was 2,545,000, whereas it was only 849,000 against Bryan in 1900. It is argued in some quarters that Governor John Johnson, of Minnesota, would carry his own state if he should be nominated as the Democratic standard-bearer. This is assumed because he was elected governor in 1906 by a plurality of 76,000. But, as offsetting this, Minnesota went Republican in the presidential year of 1904 by a pluralty of 161,000. Local reasons played a part in the gubernatorial election, which would not aid the Governor as a presidential candidate. The Democracy has searched in vain for an answer to that other troublesome query, "If not Bryan—who?" There is none other in the reckoning. The finger of destiny points inevitably to the "Peerless One."

LAST DAYS OF THE SESSION.

The Maryland legislature is in its last week of a monotonous session, which does promise to grow more exciting as its end draws near. Not a single bill of far-reaching importance to the whole state has yet been enacted. There has been a great amount of legislation which may benefit the Democratic party, including the disfranchising amendment, which must yet be approved at the polls, and the cessation of publication of sample ballots in the Wilson counties. Two counties have been "Wilsonized," if such a term can be employed—namely, Dorcester and Queen Anne's. The Democrats, who have had substantial working majorities in both houses, have had but a single purpose in view throughout the session—the enactment of such legislation as will aid them in securing approval of their disfranchising amendment, an issue which the party inherited from the late United States Senator Gorman. The Good Roads Bill is a part of the machinery to be operated for the benefit of the suffrage plans. A reassessment of all the property in the state outside Baltimore city is another spoke in the wheel. The passage of the increased city representation bill through the House was not a recoguition of the claims of the city to more senators and delegates, but was planned to provide means by which the ballot next year will be complicated with amendments to the Constitution, thus making more difficult, if not impossible, the task of thousands of uneducated Marylanders, white and colored, to save their greatest privilege to vote. The Senate will let the increased representation slumber and then die in the room of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments. The same fate awaits Mr. Lehmayer's bill, which has passed and which gives judges of elections greater latitude in counting ballots on which the arms of crossmarks extend beyond the designated squares.

The injurious legislation already enacted and yet to be enacted has been political rather than general with few exceptions. The state tax rate will be fixed at the present figure, though the school fund may suffer by the lopping off of two cents, the revenue to be derived from these two cents to be diverted to the good-roads fund.

The Democrats have carried through their corrupt practices act, but they are finding it hard to rally their forces to a primary election bill because of the expense attached to the proposition. They are committed by their state platform to a primary election law by which candidates for United States senator are to be selected make the whole scheme farcical, since it is to apply locally, as was the case last year, instead of to the whole state. County Democrats fear that if the law were general in its operation, Baltimore city might exercise too great power in the vote. It is a violation of what the Democrats claim to be their cardinal principle—the rule of the majority—to place this ban upon the city.

GRANTSVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Englehart and family, who have been spending the winter in the South and are now on their way home to Accident, stopped off in Grantsville to visit Mr. and Mrs. Augustine, the parents of Mrs. Englehart.

Miss Maggie Brown, who has been spending the winter away, has returned to her home here, we are glad to note.

Mr. Erven Blougher is paying his mother and sisters a visit. We are glad to see Erven home.

Mr. Gus Zelers, of Frostburg, has been visiting some very dear friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole have gone to the county to spend a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Elisha Durst, who has been very seriously ill, we are glad to say is very much better and we hope to see her well again soon.

Rev. Hershberger made a flying visit to Mr. and Mrs. William Tressler, who are caring for his little son.

Quality Hill is about to loose one of its good neighbors, Mr. Louis Gingerich, who moves on the farm Mr. Lloyd Miller vacates. Mr. Miller is moving to Chestnut Springs.

Rev. McCoy is holding a series of meetings at Savage.

Mr. Ward Beachy and his helper Jonas Johnson, have gone to the Forks to Mr. John Hetricks to paint and paper.

M'HENRY.

As I have not seen any news from our little village for a long time I will try and pen a few items.

Hunting wild duck is the order of the day now.

Mr. Albert Bowman is working for John O. Thayer at the present time.

Mrs. Tracy and Miss Cora Sloan were the guests at C. E. Bowman's Sunday last.

Mieses Kate, Hilda, and Grace Weimer were visitors at John Edgar's last Sunday; also Misses Hazel Thayer and Mable Browning.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brant and daughters, Ruth, Marie, Susie, and Myrtle were the guests of Bird Bittinger Sunday last.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Mable Thayer.

SELDOM SEEN.

Mill Resumes.

The Crellin mill which was wrecked two or three weeks ago by the carriage going wild, has been repaired and operations were resumed Monday of this week.

WAS KILLED AT PIEDMONT. W. VA.

Renzie McCrobie, a Section Hand Found Dead. Body Mutilated

The body of a man found Saturday night near the coal tipple at the west end of the B. & O. yards at Piedmont was identified Sunday as that of Renzie McCrobie, a B. & O. section hand, who resided at Wilson's store on the Seventeen Mile Grade. Just how the man came to his death is unknown, except that all surrounding circumstances point to the fact that he must have been run down by a train. The body was terribly mutilated when found by several of the B. & O. employes. The man's clothing was almost torn from his body, both feet had been cut off, and one arm was missing. $2.73 was found in the pockets of the man's clothing. An Ingersoll watch was also found in one pocket and the timepiece was still running.

The railroad men who found the body were of the opinion that the man while walking on one of the tracks, had been run down by a train and was dragged some distance after the limbs had been severed, when the several sections of the remains were dropped where found. No one at Piedmont could identify the body, and it was held at the Fredlock undertaking establishment until Sunday when persons who knew the man well reached Piedmont.

It seems there is no information as to what train struck the man. It evidently occurred after dark Saturday, or the train crew would have discovered the terrible accident.

NORTH GLADE.

The roads are in a terrible shape.

Farmers busy with their work and are anticipating an early spring.

Cleve Obrien has quite the mines at Chaffee and has moved back home.

Our school is still doing well under the management of Miss Wilson.

Gilbert Moon has just returned from a pleasant trip to Oakland and Sang Run.

They say that C. T. Rhodes wears a stove pipe hat, now. It is a new boy.

C. S. Harvey and wife have been visiting their parents at Ryans Glade.

Steve Rhodes, who had his foot badly cut recently is rapidly improving.

Prof. Groves still comes around this way. Boys, can't we have another singing class here?

A. R. Bernard is preparing to shut his grist mill down at Swanton and return to his farm.

Judge Fitzwater has been ill for several days, but we are glad to learn he is better. He and Mrs. Fitzwater went to Oakland Tuesday.

Dr. Lee has been quite busy the past winter. He is now having a number of cases of measles in his own family.

Squire McRobie is after the "kids" or idiots who have been causing trouble whistling and blowing over the telephone. We hope he can stop this nuisance.

In the absence of our pastor Rev. Engle, Rev. A. F. George preached for us Sunday evening. We are always to have Mr. George with us.

Quartely meeting will be held here Saturday and Sunday the 28th and 29th of this month. We expect Dr. Ward with us and this ought to insure a large attendance.

Good morals being the basis of good government, we wish to commend the attitude of THE REPUBLICAN in this direction. Good, observing citizens must distinguished the difference between THE REPUBLICAN and some other papers familiar to its readers.

OCCASIONAL.

FIKE.

At this writing it is snowing some, but we have been having considerable rain with thunder during the past week.

The farmers have gotten some plowing done.

There is considerable sickness in this community, Mr. Franklin Fike being one of those ill.

Mrs. Hiram Fike was visiting her sister who resides a short distance from here who is sick and the doctor pronounces the trouble to be appendicitis.

Mr. Jasper Fike was out with his camera taking pictures of the school at this place.

Wm. L. Thomas, one of the public school teachers of this county, who closed his school last February on account of having the appendicitis and was sent to the hospital in Pittsburg, Pa., for operation, returned to his home a few days ago, and is now suffering with a sore throat, caused by contracting a cold on his return home.

Mr. Singleton Chrise met with a misfortune one night a short time ago by having his store burned down. We all sympathize with him in his loss.

Mr. S. K. Fike, of Braddock, Pa., was in this vicinity a couple of days last week.

Mr. Lloyd K. Fike is preparing to have an entertainment on the last day of his school.

FOR SALE.

Berkshire pigs (thoroughbred); young boars and sows; six months old. Apply to Forman, Brookside Dairy Farms, Brookside, W. Va. 4-26t

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

DRY VICTORY IN MARYLAND.

Prohibition Now Prevails in Every County on the Eastern Shore.

Worcester county, the home of United States Senator-elect John Walter Smith, head of the Democratic organization in Maryland, at a special election on Saturday went "dry" by a vote of 2901 for prohibition and 846 against.

Prohibition now prevails in every county on the Eastern Shore and the entire peninsula from the Pennsylvania border to the Virginia border is dry.

Ocean City, in Worcester county, Maryland's principal seaside resort may be exempted if a bill pending in the legislature is passed. By the result of the vote, however, the resort will go "dry" if the bill does not become a law.

A dispatch from Fairmont, W. Va., says:

While it was not unexpected, yet there were a good many surprised when the results of the municipal election here Saturday, was made known Saturday night and it was discovered that the temperance people had won. Out of a total of 1,861 votes cast the temperance element carried the day by a majority of 49.

The municipal ticket elected Saturday will be headed by W. M. Neeley, a Democrat, who received a total of 978 votes to 928 received by the Republican candidate, J. O. McNeeley. The prohibition candidate, U. A. Clayton, received 104 votes. It is claimed that on account of a technicality, the election an be invalidated as far as the liquor question is concerned.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Should Read $1 Instead of $100.

Tothe Editor of The Republican:

A worthy citizen of Accident visited the School Board office a day or two ago and in a minute the secretary corrected the erroneous charge circulated in that vicinity against the trustees and teacher of the Accident school.

The state report shows an expenditure of $100 for repairs. On the copy kept in the office the item is $1. The mistake in the amount (a difference of $99) is typographical, made by the printer of the state report.

This is published to relieve the office of that school of the charge of extravagance brought against them.

D.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

WANTED—A good team suitable for farm work. Apply to Wm. M. Kelley, Coketon, W. Va.

Grippe is sweeping the country. Stop it with Preventics, before it gets deeply seated. To check early colds with these little Candy Cold Tablets is surely sensible and safe. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh or sickening. Pneumonia would never appear if early colds were promptly broken. Also good for feverish children. Large box, 48 tablets, 25 cents. Vest pocket boxes 5 cents. Sold by all dealers.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

Where the finest biscuit, cake, hot-breads, crusts or puddings are required Royal is indispensable.

ROYAL
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

Not only for rich or fine food or for special times or service. Royal is equally valuable in the preparation of plain, substantial, every-day foods, for all occasions. It makes the food more tasty, nutritious and wholesome.

St. John XXI:3.

Spring weather today.

House cleaning time is at hand.

Automobile fever is on in Oakland.

The days, too, are getting longer and less ugly.

Mr. B C. Feather made a business trip to Rowlesburg this morning.

Mr. Edward J. Frantz left Oakland yesterday on a business trip East.

Attend the church supper at St. Mark's Lutheran church this evening.

Mrs. C. W. Beamer spent a few days recently in Cumberland with relatives.

Mr. Charles S. May, of Hagerstown, was in Oakland a day or two this week.

Time for "spring opening" of milinery stores and also papa's pocketbook.

Mrs. Olin F. Durst, of Lonaconing, spent Tuesday with Oakland relatives.

There is a good deal of cheer on life's journey if it be made with a contented heart.

Mr. John A. Wilt, of near Swanton, was one of our early morning visitors Monday.

Judge F. M. Reynolds, of Keyser, was in Oakland Monday afternoon on business.

Mrs. George Mead, of Pittsburg, is here visiting her sister, Mrs. Louis Littman.

You can't afford to miss the temperance lecture Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m., in the Y. M. C. S. rooms.

John "Dugan" Reynolds is having a new metal roof placed on the Manhattan Hotel, of which he is the proprietor.

Mr. W. V. Sanders, foreman of the Brookside Dairy Farms, was in the city Monday and made this office a brief business visit.

Mr. Roy C. Hamill, of Upper Potomac, W. Va., spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill.

Mr. Wallace Mason, of the Buckhannon University, spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Mason.

County Commissioners' meeting April 14th, at which time the levy for 1908 will be made, as per notice elsewhere in this paper today.

Messrs. Paul Naylor and Wellington Crane, students of the West Virginia University, Morgantown, spent a few days this week in Oakland.

Mrs. F. J. Schroeder and little son, who spent a week with Lonaconing relatives, returned to their home in Oakland Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, came up to Oakland Saturday and left here that evening for New York City, where he went on business.

We are pleased to note that Miss Olivette Shartzer, who has been extremely ill for several weeks, is in a somewhat improved condition.

Miss Annie Leary, who took a course in the training department of a Hagerstown hospital, has returned to her home in Oakland for a short vacation.

Dr. W. W. Davis, who came up to the Park from Baltimore yesterday morning, will remain here until this evening, when he will return east.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, of Meyersdale, Pa., who spent a portion of last week in Oakland and at Crellin, left for his home at Meyersdale Friday evening.

Mr. Louis Bush, who recently purchased the Procter property in Oakland, is having the upper floor finished which will be used for sleeping apartments.

Mrs. M. L. Scott and Miss Bickers, who were in Baltimore and Philadelphia recently selecting spring stock for the Baltimore Store, have returned to Oakland.

The detailed program of the Mountain Chautauqua is being arranged by Dr. Davidson and will soon be issued. Some excellent features are booked for the year.

Miss Effie Mealey, who was the guest of relatives in Baltimore several days last week, has returned to Oakland and is the guest of the Misses Littman at their home here.

Mr. Oliver Heyward, of Bond, was in Oakland Monday and has secured the residence of Mr. H. A. Loraditch on Liberty street into which he will move with his family about April 1st.

Miss Mame Hart and the children of Mr. Thomas T. Nelson, who were visiting relatives and friends at Pittsburg and Meyersdale, Pa., for a month, returned to Oakland last Thursday afternoon.

Mr. E. J. Hamill, cashier of the Kitzmillerville bank, was in Oakland an hour or two Saturday evening, going from here to Cumberland and returning to his home from that city Sunday afternoon.

Messrs. Harry and George Loar, after a vacation of several weeks spent in New York and other cities and a cruise to the Island of Jamaica, returned to Oakland Tuesday, both gentlemen being very much benefited.

Messrs. Austin Brown, Samuel Lawton, E. J. Frantz and Dr. W. Ravenscroft, who went to Annapolis last Thursday morning in the interest of proposed and pending legislation affecting local conditions, returned to Oakland Saturday morning.

CAPITAL 50,0 0,.00 THE SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

MISS MANGES' RECITAL.

An Appreciative Audience Highly Entertained by An Oakland Lady.

Those who failed to hear Miss Anna Manges at the Lutheran church on last Thursday night in her excellent entertainment, missed a rare treat. She can hardly be surpassed in elocution. Her portrayal of the characters she impersonates is so natural that it is a hard undertaking to tell just where the young lady losses her own personality Her ease and naturalness in speaking has been most favorably commented upon and is indeed a strong point in favor of many of the most widely known platform artists.

Oakland can well boast of having such an adept in the art of entertaining as Miss Manges.

Miss Grant played in her most excellent manner, and Dr. Robinson's vocal solos were as always, of the highest class.

We are only sorry that we have so few of such classical entertainments to occur in Oakland.

Messrs. Henry Glover and O. C. Crane, two of Terra Alta's leading business men were in Oakland Monday afternoon attending a meeting of the board of directors of the Garrett Leather Company which was held at the First National Bank.

Mr. Ralph Thayer, who came home from Morgantown University several weeks ago suffering with what was feared at the time to be a very dangerous case of blood poisoning in his foot, has entirely recovered and returned to his school Tuesday morning.

The ladies of the Aid Society of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, will serve supper and sell fancy and other articles in the basement of the church this evening. The supper, in part, will consist of hot rolls, oysters, salads, ice cream, etc. All are very cordially invited to be present.

Stop that tickling Cough! Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure will surely stop it, and with perfect safety. It is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even with very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Take no other. All dealers.

Messrs. J. L. Snyder, of Wellsboro, Pa., William O'Conner, of Tioga, Pa., and J. O. Thomas, of Clarksburg, W. Va., three of the four new owners of the tannery plant at Hutton, which was sold on Tuesday of this week by the Garrett Leather Company, were registered at the Frantz Hotel in Oakland yesterday.

Houses are scarce in our city and hardly a week passes but what there are applicants for a number of tenant houses. The town loses a number of good families each year who would like to locate here if they could find the houses. Those who have the means to do so would find the erection of a number of tenant houses a good paying investment.

Rev. E. J. Westfall, of Mountain Lake Park, was in Oakland Saturday afternoon and called at this office on business. In aid of the building fund for the parsonage to be erected by the Mountain Lake Park congregation of which Rev. Westfall is pastor, a cook book for family use is contemplated by the pastor, which will be compiled of useful and tried recipes and which, if printed, will be sold at a nominal price.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. All dealers.

